ALGERIAN PRESIDENT AHMED Ben Bella again offered last week to put his army at the service of his Arab "Brothers" in war against Israel. Addressing a rally in Algiers celebrating the 10th anniversary of the beginning of the revolt against the French, Ben Bella told his audience that, if necessary, the Algerian army would fight Israel "to liberate Palestine." He also pledged to use his military establishment to fight against the rule of Moise Tshombe in the Congo. He reiterated an old canard, repeatedly discredited, to the effect that 1,500 Israelis were "fighting for Tshombe."

APPLICATIONS FOR PARDON were denied in The Hague by Queen Juliana to four German war criminals still incarcerated for life terms at Breda Prison, in Amsterdam. The four, who are the last of wartime Nazis still in prison are Willy Lages, wartime chief of the Central Office for Jewish Deportation, in Amsterdam, responsible for the deportation of 70,000 Dutch Jews to their death; his deputy, Fritz Ausderfuenten; Fritz Fischer, who had been convicted of deporting 13,000 Jews from The Hague; and Josef Kotaella, commander of the Amersfoort concentration camp. All had originally been sentenced to death, when they were tried after the war. However, they had their sentences commuted to life imprisonment on appeals in 1951 and 1952.

ISRAEL'S SUPREME COURT REVERSED last week a ruling of the Rabbinical High Court which had ordered a woman to accept a divorce from her husband. Under Israel law, the rabbinical courts have exclusive jurisdiction in matters of marriage and divorce involving Jews. The Supreme Court took jurisdiction on the basis of the rabbinical finding that the woman, Mrs. Eva Bassan, was not Jewish. The secular court held that if this was correct, the rabbinical courts had no jurisdiction. Mrs. Bassan had originally applied to the rabbinical court for conversion to Judaism, stating that her mother was a Catholic. However, according to the findings, she did not complete conversion and was married by a rabbi without informing him that she had not been officially converted. Holding that she was not Jewish, the rabbinical court ordered her to accept her husband's divorce petition. She appealed to the secular court.

THE ASSOCIATION OF JEWISH communities in Hungary has announced plans to honor 16 Italians who, during the Second World War, risked their own lives to save thousands of Hungarian Jews from certain death. It was reported from Budapest. The 16 Italians had organized a rescue operation to aid Jews fleeing from trains bound for the Auschwitz death camp. The group is credited with saving 3,000 Jews from death at the hands of the Nazis. The Hungarian Jewish leaders have expressed the hope that the Italian heroes will be able to go to Budapest and participate in ceremonies in their honor.

ISRAEL HAS LODGED A SHARP protest with the chairman of the latest and largest block of United Nations members, the so-called "Group of 77" of developing countries, for being excluded from a meeting of the group recently and for unworthy stratagems and manipulations which were employed to keep Israel out of the group. The protest was sent in a letter from Michael Comay, Israel's permanent representative at the United Nations, to Syed Amjad Ali of Pakistan, chairman of the Group of Developing Countries. The Afro-Asian delegations include Arab and Latin American states.

RABBI JACOB HANDLER

To Install Rabbi Jacob Handler As Beth Israel Spiritual Leader

By CELIA ZUCKERBERG

Rabbi Jacob Handler will be installed as the new spiritual leader of Rhode Island's oldest conservative synagogue, Temple Beth Israel, at ceremonies to be held at the temple on Sunday, starting at 8 P.M. Rabbi Handler will occupy the pulpit left vacant this summer by Rabbi Robert Layman.

The ceremonies will open with a procession in which the new rabbi will be conducted to the pulpit by an Escort of Honor which will include local rabbis, past presidents of the temple, as well as officers and trustees of the congregation.

The major address will be delivered by Rabbi William G. Braude of Temple Beth El. Rabbi Pesach Krauss of Congregation B'nai Israel of Woonsocket and president of the Rhode Island Rabbinical Association, will assist in the installation ceremony. Also assisting will be Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen of Temple Emanu-El and Rabbi Saul Leeman of the Cranston Jewish Center. Greetings will be brought by Dr. Wayne Artis, executive director of the Rhode Island Council of Churches. David Yanover, president of the temple, will participate in the installation exercises.

A musical interlude of vocal and instrumental numbers under the direction of Cantor Arthur Yolkoff will be presented. A reception for Rabbi and Mrs. Handler will follow.

Charles Coken and Coleman Zimmerman are co-chairmen of the affair.

Rabbi Handler, who has found Providence "very congenial, very friendly, a nice community," came here from Temple Israel in Manchester, N.H., where he had been the spiritual leader since 1959.

A graduate of Yeshiva University and ordained in 1941 at the Jewish Theological Seminary, Rabbi Handler received his teacher's training at the Teacher's College of Vermont where he received his B.Sc. and B.E. His master's degree in Political Science was gained at the University of New Hampshire, and his Ph.D.

in Political Science was acquired from Burton College in Colorado in 1962. He was married in 1941 to the former Gertrude Stockholm of New York City.

Things were a little hectic in the Handler household when the family was interviewed. It was Oct. 31 - Halloween night. Most importantly, it was also the birthday of Martha who had just turned nine. Besides this Honi, 11, and Martha were getting ready to go out on the Ricks or Treats route with the other children in the neighborhood. The Handler's son, Hershel, who is 18 and a student at Yeshiva University in New York, had purposely come home for the weekend for his sister's birthday.

Another sister, Zipporah, who is 20, was not at home at the time, and Dina (Mrs. Sumner Kaye) lives with her husband in Brighton, Mass.

Also, temporarily living in a small apartment, accommodations were sort of tight. However, Mr. and Mrs. Handler happily discussed the fact that they had just bought a home on Warrington

Egyptian Press Claims Israeli Spies Terrorize Scientists

CAIRO—Reports of a "secret war" between Israeli and Egyptian intelligence forces over the activities of German scientists in Egypt have been given prominence in the Cairo press.

Hassanein Heikal, editor of the newspaper "Al Ahram," has spoken of "frequent incidents of kidnapping, of murder by shooting and poisoning, not to mention bribery, blackmail and enticement with sex and beauty."

"Israeli intelligence did not scruple to place a time bomb aboard one of the aircraft of a European airline merely because one of these German passengers was going to board it on a flight between Germany and Switzerland. The bomb exploded and all passengers died. German intelligence discovered that the intended German scientist stayed behind at the last moment," Heikal claimed.

Booby-Traps Heikal's newspaper claimed that Israeli intelligence changed its tactics and had been mailing booby-trap letters to German scientists in Egypt from Cairo instead of foreign cities. Heikal listed many factors making for Israeli frustration, among them the issue of the scientists, the unfavorable resolution adopted by the conference of non-aligned nations in Cairo, the establishment of a unified Arab command, the formation of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Peres Interview In Tel Aviv, Shimon Peres, Israeli deputy defense minister, returning from a tour of European capitals' said European nations are generally aware of Nasser's hostile intentions toward Israel, while they regard the Jewish State as a stable influence in the Middle East with peaceful goals.

In an interview with Maariv, Peres said he and Prime Minister Eshkol were advised by a French leader in Paris not to complain to the world about Arab threats, but to carry the torch of Israel's aid to Asian-African underdeveloped nations and of Israel's internal achievements.

Desalination Cost $190,000,000 Says Charles MacGowan

NEW YORK — The cost of constructing a nuclear powered water desalination installation in Israel, as envisaged in preliminary joint planning between the United States and Israel governments, is $190,000,000, it was revealed last week by Charles F. MacGowan, director of the Office of Saline Water of the Department of the Interior.

MacGowan's figure was the first given publicly since President Lyndon B. Johnson and Israel's Prime Minister Levi Eshkol agreed on the joint project in Washington last June.

Since then, joint U.S. and Israeli teams have agreed on further details of the project, which will involve the building in Israel of an atom-powered desalination plant capable of producing up to 200 megawatts of electric power and furnishing, at the same time, 125,000,000 gallons of fresh water for Israel's use.

The Department of the Interior official made his announcement in an address to the seventh annual conference on science and technology in Israel, conducted here by the American Technion Society.

The group provides technical and financial aid to Technion, the Israel Institute of Technology, in Haifa.

At the concluding session, the formation of a "scientific peace corps" for Israel was urged after an address by Dr. Alex Keynan, chairman of Israel's National Council of Research and Development.

He told the 600 delegates at the session that "the bottleneck holding back Israel's accelerated scientific development is the acute shortage of qualified scientists in many disciplines."

He pointed out that the total enrollment in all of Israel's institutions of higher learning, on both the undergraduate and graduate levels, is no more than about 18,000 students.

B. Summer Gruzen, of Maplewood, N.J., an architect who is president of the American Technion Society, told the conference that despite the acute shortage of trained technical personnel in Israel, Technion has had to turn down nearly 900 students applicants, this year "owing to lack of facilities."

The student enrollment, he said, has been growing annually, reaching this year a total of 2,800 undergraduates and 800 graduate students.

Dr. Sydney Goldstein, Harvard mathematician and expert in aerodynamics, told the conference that he is conducting a nationwide effort to find suitable faculty members who would teach in various engineering faculties at Technion.

Eight-Man Posse Apprehends Vandal

PHILADELPHIA—An eight man posse formed by the Men's Club of Beth David Reform Congregation last week apprehended a man accused of vandalizing nearly 500 cars. Joseph Hoffman, 58, is accused of slashing tires and convertible tops and spraying auto bodies with paint.

Hoffman, described by the police and the posse as a mentally sick man suffering with a deep persecution complex, was caught by the eight-man squad from Beth David. Jerome B. Apfel, 34, former assistant district attorney, said the posse was broken down into two-man teams, planted in four automobiles and keeping in constant touch by means of two-way radios supplied by another member, Jules Samitz, operator of a summer camp.

Hoffman told police he continued his acts because he still was not accomplishing what he wanted—that was to retaliate against "the people who are persecuting me." Hoffman was a former businessman who lost money in Florida investments.

Hoffman walked to a convertible parked two cars ahead of the auto in which Apfel and Gross were slouched in. They saw him reach over the top, bring his hand down with a sweeping motion. They heard the rip of canvas.

Hoffman then nonchalantly left the scene and walked toward the synagogue. Hoffman told police that he had been doing the same thing for the past month. He would slash the cars, then walk to the synagogue and wait for the crowd to come out. He would then gloat as the auto owners came out of services and saw their cars vandalized.

A large contingent of police, mostly in civilian clothes, were staked out in the neighborhood for 11 days, seeking the person or persons responsible for the rash of auto attacks.

Police and the posse grabbed Hoffman in front of the synagogue. He scuffled with them before he was arrested.

Hoffman had in his possession a screw driver, a penknife, pliers, nail clippers, and a fingernail file with a blade on one end. A search of his home uncovered a can of red spray paint. A bullet was fired through a window of the Congregation Ezzath Israel Synagogue.

Bar-Ilan University In Israel
Starts Campaign For $10 Million

NEW YORK — A campaign for $10 million has been started in this country and overseas to expand Bar-Ilan University in Israel, one of that nation's major institutions of higher learning.

Details of the drive were disclosed by Philip Stollman, chairman of the American Committee for Bar-Ilan, at the closing session of the university's board of governors at the Craydon Hotel.

At the same time, Rabbi Joseph H. Lookstein, acting president of Bar-Ilan, appealed to American educators and scientists to join the faculty for one year to give courses such as American civilization, economic theory, modern scientific developments and the humanities.

American scholars, Rabbi Lookstein said could "provide Israelis with a fuller and more insightful understanding of the basic features of the American experiment in freedom," and provide them with a "grasp of the technological genius of American industrial and scientific operations."

32 Buildings Planned
Mr. Stollman said the money derived from the campaign would be utilized over a period of six years for the construction of 32 buildings, which will include a library, administration building, sports center, secondary school, additional dormitories, faculty housing and lecture halls.

The expansion project he added, will enable the university to accept a student enrollment of 4,000 in contrast to the current 1,500. As a result of the increase in the student body, more than 1,000 gifted American students will be afforded an opportunity to study at the university, he said.

Mr. Stollman said the university would make its facilities available "for several hundred more European, South American, Far Eastern and African students."

Religious American Jews established Bar-Ilan 10 years ago with a student body of 75. The university is recognized by the Board of Regents of the Department of Education of New York State, having obtained a charter in 1963. The university combines traditional Jewish values with modern secular areas of inquiry.

In the last 10 years, American Jews have contributed more than $5 million toward the maintenance of the university. Recently, the university established a John F. Kennedy Chair in American Civilization. Rabbi Lookstein is prominently identified with American Orthodox Judaism.

Orthodox Scholar Proposes Solution
To Marriage Of Cohen And Divorcee

JERUSALEM — A novel solution to the problem of the cohen who wishes to marry a divorcee is proposed by an Orthodox scholar in "Deot," quarterly organ of religious academics.

The author, Dr. Je'ev Falk, Legal Advisor of the Ministry of Interior, explains that this object is to heal the widening break between the Orthodox and non-Orthodox in Israel.

Probe Questioned
He questions whether it is the duty of the Rabbinate to investigate whether a prospective groom is a cohen. It is sufficient, Dr. Falk argues, for the rabbi to mention before the ceremony that there is a ban on a cohen's marrying a divorcee, leaving the responsibility to the groom.

But where the groom's name indicates that he is a cohen this procedure, of course, could not be followed. In such cases Dr. Falk proposes the creation of a marriage ceremony based not on the law of kiddushin, but on the law of pillagshut (concubinage).

No Ring
In such a ceremony, the rabbi would instruct the groom to say to the bride, "Harei at meyhudedet li." (You are hereby set aside for me), instead of the customary formula, "Harei at mekudeshet li." ("You are hereby sanctified to me"). There would be no ring and no ketuba.

Under civil law, the author says, the women would be considered the man's wife in every respect, while in the eyes of the Halacha she would be his concubine. It is better to give such a couple some kind of legal status than to leave them in a state of illegality, Dr. Falk declares.

Reconstructionist
In New York, the Reconstructionist magazine said that orthodox extremism in Israel was set back when the Israel Supreme Court ordered the registration of a marriage which had taken place without "benefit of clergy." A cohen wished to marry a divorcee. The Rabbis obviously would not perform such a marriage. The couple did not wish to leave the country to have their marriage solemnized by the secular courts of another nation. The man, in the presence of witnesses, recited the "Harei at mekudeshet . . ." gave the bride a ring and went to register the marriage at the Rabbinical Court. When the Rabbis refused, he sued—and won. The Reconstructionist commented, "a breach has been made in the wall of Rabbinical monopoly in Israel. Civil marriage will have to be introduced; and the Orthodox will have no one to thank but their intransigence."

Pastor Conducts
Lecture Tour
Through Britain

LONDON — A Danish pastor who played a leading role in saving many Jews during World War II is conducting a British lecture tour in support of Jewish-Christian understanding.

He is 67-year-old Poul Borchsenius, a Lutheran, who is lecturing under the auspices of B'nai B'rith. During the war he won the nickname of the "Shooting Pastor" because of his work with the Danish resistance. In this capacity he played a major role in assuring the escape of many hundreds of Jews into Sweden.

Pastor Borchsenius said in his lectures that he wanted to bring about a greater realization that Jews and Christians could and should respect each other. He blamed the church for anti-Semitism, saying: "We, as Christians, must repent for what we have done."

Jewish Services Spend Over One-Third Of Billion

NEW YORK — More than one-third of a billion dollars was spent during 1963 to operate Jewish health, family welfare, child care, and services to aged in the United States and Canada. It was revealed in the 1964 Yearbook of Jewish Social Services, published this week by the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds.

Of this vast sum, direct payments for these services accounted for 69.5 per cent of all income received by 207 reporting agencies. Jewish federations and welfare funds supplied 6.5 per cent — or $21,795,000 — to help maintain and expand these institutional services.

The remainder of the institutional income came from a variety of sources, including 5.3 per cent from membership dues and contributions; 2.4 per cent from public tax funds, and 4.2 per cent from investments and other sources. These proportions varied greatly among the different fields of service.

The Yearbook disclosed that 1963 was marked by three continuing developments:

- A moderate overall increase in the volume of service.
- Greater specialization and coordination of services within the community.
- Increases in public tax funds allocated to help maintain some categories of service.

Homes for the Aged — The volume of institutional services reported by Jewish Homes for the Aged has been increasing since 1960 at an annual rate of about two per cent.

The Yearbook reports an expansion and strengthening of services through increased bed capacity and intensified services for the care of sick, feeble and senile older persons.

At the same time, increased emphasis on coordination of programs with Jewish and other hospitals has resulted in upgraded medical and rehabilitation services.

Paralleling this, a number of Homes have been developing day center and short-term convalescent care programs for the aged who are able to remain within the community.

In a few cities, apartment house projects also have been built for the elderly who do not require institutional care. These projects are sponsored by Homes for the Aged, or by federations with the cooperation of the Homes.

From 1960 through 1963, the operating budgets of Homes for the Aged increased substantially — in some instances by 20 to 30 per cent.

Hospitals — Jewish hospitals continued to develop comprehensive medical care programs, and increased their emphasis on coordination of services with other local health and welfare agencies.

The number of people treated during the year — including in-patients and out-patients — increased slightly, while the proportion of non-Jewish patients remained constant at about four-fifths of those served. The proportion of ward beds in general hospitals also increased, with one-fifth of all patient care provided free.

During the year, 67 reporting hospitals served 571,462 patients, and provided 6,386,836 days of care.

Child Care — The number of children under care increased by slightly more than two per cent during the reporting year — with care and treatment equally divided between foster homes, service in their own homes, or in institutions operated by the agencies themselves.

During 1963, Jewish communities continued to strengthen and expand child care programs through coordination of services and by developing special facilities for emotionally-disturbed children.

These specialized programs — which involve intensive use of professional staff — include residential treatment centers (now available in only a few large cities), small group care facilities, and special day programs for children living in their own homes.

The continuing decline in the use of regular foster homes may be offset, according to the Yearbook, by specialized small group homes for emotionally disturbed youngsters. These homes, unlike regular foster homes, are staffed by agency-employed foster parents. In addition, more children are receiving family-focused treatment in their own homes.

The growing costs of increased specialization, which have been reflected in operational budgets of specialized Jewish children's agencies, jumped 20 per cent in the three-year period between 1960-63.

Family Welfare — Eighty-six Jewish family service agencies reported a six per cent increase in volume of service.

To meet increasingly complex demands, the agencies provided more family group counseling and expanded community-based programs to help larger numbers of older people remain outside institutions.

ABSENTEE BALLOTS
TEL AVIV — 500 American citizens in Israel cast their ballots for the Nov. 3 U.S. presidential election, via absentee vote.

SEEK VANDALS
BONN — A reward of $250 has been offered by Frankfurt police for information leading to the capture of vandals who desecrated a Jewish graveyard.

The vandals toppled 11 tombstones and painted a swastika in oil on the entrance of a Roman-Catholic church.

ASK REGISTRATION
JERUSALEM — "The Arab-nationalist organization "El-Ard" is harmful, dangerous and subversive and I am surprised that it had the audacity to apply to the High Court of Justice for an injunction ordering the Government to register it as a society," stated Attorney-General, Moshe Ben Ze'ev.

El Ard is seeking the order as a result of the refusal of the Haifa District Commissioner to register them as a society.

WHAT ANTI-POVERTY LAW ISN'T

Now that the election is over and this column can't be called "political," I'll say it: the $784.2 million Economic Opportunity Act of 1965 — the anti-poverty law — has been one of the most woefully mis-advertised, mis-labeled pieces of legislation in memory. It is not, as its boosters have claimed, a cure for poverty or an all-out war on poverty and it will not "break the cycle of poverty" or make "taxpayers out of taxpayers."

It also is not, as its critics have claimed, a "hastily assembled package of odd legislative retreats and rejects, interspersed with a sprinkling of old, unsuccessful experiments" and it will not turn out to be "all promise and no progress . . . all mouth and no muscle."

Just what is in the anti-poverty package and what isn't? Actually, it's easier to begin with what the package "isn't" — and this list comes directly from the Office of Economic Opportunity, whose staff members are as eager as I to clarify the act's goals.

Most of the package is not unique or even new. All the law's major programs have been tried — either experimentally or on a limited scale at federal, state or local levels.

The package is not "comprehensive." It makes no provisions for aid to basic education, teacher training, broad health programs, direct assistance to needy children of the very poor.

It is not, in any sense of the word, compact. Its contents range from non-specified "community action programs" to aid small business, child care centers for migrant workers, and adult education.

It is not a "full employment" bill. In itself, the Economic Opportunity Act can provide only a modest number of jobs and opportunities to the nation's millions of unemployed and unfortunate.

It is not a crash program. Congress didn't appropriate the funds for the program until the closing days of the session. Sargent Shriver, director of the program, couldn't even begin recruiting personnel until late October. As Shriver remarked last week, "Without any money I couldn't fill a single position."

It is certainly not a "cure" for poverty. Appropriations for the whole program work out to $22.40 for each of the nation's 35 million citizens classified as "poor." The anti-poverty law is a poverty-stricken operation indeed — compared to the vast range of federal-state-private anti-poverty activities.

Federal-state expenditures for public welfare alone amount to more than $5 billion a year. Total expenditures for 42 federal anti-poverty programs — ranging from Social Security benefits and urban renewal to child welfare services and school lunches — amount to more than $32 billion annually. Add state, local and private anti-poverty spending and the national "war" effort amounts to more than $100 billion a year.

Against this, the appropriations of $784.2 million for the highly publicized 1964 act seem to shrink to insignificance.

What, then, is the poverty package?

It is, more than anything, a symbolic national commitment to tackle the paradox of widespread poverty and pools of long-term joblessness at a time of unprecedented prosperity in the U.S.

"We cannot possibly reach the 35 million who are poor," says a spokesman for the program. "What we are really trying to do is to get 192,000,000 citizens of the nation thinking about this group — the vast majority of them not even slightly touched by the problem of poverty and unable to believe the problem exists."

Being a national commitment, the law holds an implicit promise of an accelerating effort to educate, train and re-train our illiterate, unemployed and impoverished so they will be able to lift themselves out of their plight.

In hard economic terms, the promise can be translated into $14 billion extra spending power a year — if each of the families now classified as poor could earn just $1,000 more annually.

WHAT ANTI-POVERTY LAW IS

Exactly what is it? Although the package contains provisions ranging from help to migrant workers to loans for small businesses, there are five key programs:

(1) The Community Action Program will allot funds to local communities to combat poverty at the local level.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

It Is A Great Mitzvah

By Beryl Segal

Before me on my desk are the slogans and the mottoes of the United Fund:

Count Your Blessings.
 Pledge Your Fair Share.
 Give the United Way.
 Be Your Brother's Keeper.
 And other admonishing and prudent sayings. All of them are designed to give the idea of the United Fund in as few words as possible, and at the same time to win the human heart for the United Fund.

It seems to me that the best way to win human hearts and to open their pockets is the way of my father. He used to say when we asked him why give, by answering:

"Because it is a Mitzvah." You do not ask any questions why give and why solicit, when what you do is a Mitzvah.

I remember the Parnoses Anym in our little town on the Ukraine. Our father was the president, the treasurer, the solicitor and the distributor for the organization. Every Friday morning we, the children, would go from house to house to collect the money set aside for Parnoses Anym. We just came to the door and said the magic word, or we did not have to say anything. The housewife knew us already. A box was emptied into our pockets and we went to the next house.

Thus was a fund provided for those who needed it. They came to our house, the poor, the widow, the downtrodden and father would give each one according to the need.

When we protested: why did we have to go collecting? Other children played outside on the one day when we were free from Heder, father would say:

"But you have a Mitzvah." And that was that. On summer days when all the children were by the river bathing, and on winter days when no one dared to go outdoors, we were told that it is a Mitzvah to go collecting.

Other people receive their reward for their giving, but we have the additional merit. We do a great Mitzvah by collecting. Different lands. Different people. Different settings. But how basically the same. It is a great Mitzvah to give, to collect, to persuade people to contribute.

The poor are hungry in summer and in winter, my father would say. We say Count Your Blessings and give thanks that you are not hungry, says the United Fund. God will reward you for giving to the poor, they would say in the little town on the Ukraine. Pledge your Fair Share, we say, and keep the United Fund going, says the solicitor for the United Fund.

Man cannot live alone, we used to say. Be Your Brother's Keeper, the United Fund says to us now.

The men and women who solicit, who give, who volunteer for all kinds of work, they are the children who gave up their free mornings on Fridays to collect for the Sustenance of the Poor. Twenty-one thousand of them volunteered last year. There are probably more this year. We must stand in awe before them, not only for their contributions to the United Fund, but for their soliciting. It is not so easy, goodness knows. It is easier by far to open your own pocket book, than to open somebody else's heart. Whenever a drive for the United Fund comes around, I ask myself: What makes them work so hard? What makes the President, the trustees of the fund, the committee members, and the volunteers put in weeks of strenuous work? Can it be that my father's answer still holds?

"It is a great Mitzvah," he used to say to us, and the same can be said to them and of them. We are asked to give more this year than last year. When the solicitor in my place of work spoke to me about my contribution, he asked whether I will give more this year than last because the need is greater. I, like many like me, hesitated. Then he said to me:

"You got a raise this year, didn't you?"
 And that did it. I gave more. I say to all of you:
 "You got a raise this year, therefore give more. And, in the words of my father, it is a Great Mitzvah."

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

T.S. Elliot attended a London party given by Sidney Bernstein, head of the Granada TV network. Charles Chaplin also attended the party. Elliot stepped forward, with pen and paper, and asked Chaplin for an autograph. Chaplin said he found it embarrassing — giving his autograph to the Nobel Prize winning poet — but he signed his name.

Cassius Clay, in Boston to defend his title against Liston, will be given a reception by the Harvard Lampoon. The stunt was arranged by the fighter's press agent, Hal Conrad . . . Gower Champton, who directed "Hello, Dolly!" for David Merrick, will be signed by him to stage the musical version of "Breakfast at Tiffany's" . . . The Arirang Korean dancers wound up their U.S. tour last Sunday, at Hunter College. Of the 50 members of the troupe, 21 are named Kim.

Lyndon Johnson's closest friend and adviser here is Ed Weisl, the N. Y. lawyer. He was at the big Democratic rally held at the Garden, the rally organized by publisher Jerry Finklestein . . . A politician who saw Johnson embrace Weisl asked the lawyer to intercede for him. Weisl refused. The man said: "But you have influence with him" . . . "No, I don't," Weisl replied. "I just love him."

At the San Francisco premiere of "My Fair Lady," Audrey Hepburn's mother watched the star being mobbed by fans and busily signing autographs. She said: "I'm so thrilled that I taught her to write" . . . The Show-of-the-Month Club bought 17 full-houses of "Ben Franklin in Paris" for January and February. It's a $100,000 deal . . . Pearl Buck will be guest of honor at the annual Medal Ball of Arthur Murray's Dance Studio. The proceeds will go to her charity foundation.

In the Stork Club last week a new album of Al Johnson's songs was played over its hi-fi system. The proprietor, Sherman Billingsley, told the story of the night Johnson returned from a USO tour of the war fronts and entered the club. Billingsley gave Johnson the top table, Table 50, and tore up the card bearing the name of the U.S. Senator for whom it had been reserved — Missouri's Sen. Harry S. Truman.

Cecil King, the British publisher who got up a trust to assure the future of the magazine Encounter, has named Arthur Schlesinger Jr., as a trustee . . . Saxe, Bacon & O'Shea, the N.Y. law firm headed by Roy Cohn, has been dissolved. The new firm will be Saxe, Bacon & Bolan, with Cohn as counsel . . . Frank Capra, the veteran prize-winning film director, and Danny Thomas are collaborating on a religious film, "Joseph and Mary."

Ken Strong, the Giants' kicking coach, has been up at Baker Field giving lessons to Archie Roberts, Columbia's great quarterback . . . At one of these sessions Strong was asked why the dropkick has become obsolete. Is it because of the revised shape of the football? . . . "Nonsense," said Strong; then he sent a 40-yard dropkick through the goalposts.

Luther Adler attended last Wednesday's performance of the musical, "Golden Boy." It was the 27th anniversary of the N.Y. premiere of Clifford Odets' play, in which Adler played the role now portrayed by Sammy Davis . . . Alistair Cooke will be in Stockholm for the Nobel Prize presentation. He's doing a TV special about the awards . . . One of France's most famous painters has just turned down an invitation to join the Institute there.

H. L. Hunt, the fabulously wealthy Texan, announced that he intended to vote for Barry Goldwater. This isn't the first time Hunt opposed Johnson. When LBJ ran for the Senate in '54, a comparative unknown ran against him for the nomination. The man had unlimited funds for broadcast time and billboard space. The man later told LBJ his backer was Hunt — who'd asked if he'd like to become a Senator and added that LBJ was a Red.

When Hunt finally met Sen. Johnson, he said: "Hell, you don't look like a Red," and offered his hand.

Jeremy Geldt, who came here with "The Establishment," and is a director of the New Theater, has been signed for a role in "Alfie." His contract exempted him from rehearsals Nov. 5, so that he could attend the Anti-Defamation League luncheon for Joe Levine, the patron of the New Theater . . . Charles Clore flew a planeload of notables from London to Israel for the inaugural of the Clore Building at the Weizman Institute. It will house the new students there.

Frank Sinatra and Audrey Hepburn will star in "Lydia." The screen play will be by Harry Kurnitz, and direction by David Miller. Marlon Brando's next movie will be made in Dublin for producer Milo Frank. It will be titled "The O'Houlihan's."

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor dined at the Colony the other night. We exchanged greetings and then I asked if the Duke had returned here to cast his vote in the election. "Oh, no," replied the former King of England. "I can't vote here, y'know."

Compares Ben-Gurion, Eshkol
As Leaders Of State Of Israel

JERUSALEM — It would be difficult to find two men, comrades in arms in the arena of political warfare, working together for a common cause over a lifetime, who are more different than David Ben Gurion and his successor as Prime Minister and Minister of Defense in Israel, Levi Eshkol, according to Rabbi L. I. Rabinowitz, Director of the Institute of Jewish Studies of the Yad Ha-Rav Maimon.

Writing in the South Africa Jewish Times, Dr. Rabinowitz asserted that, "Ben Gurion distinguishes himself by his strong and unswerving adherence to principles, be they right or wrong; Levi Eshkol is the man of appeasement and compromise. Once Ben Gurion takes up a stand in a matter, he maintains it fanatically (most people say, to an unreasoning extreme)." Dr. Rabinowitz's article continues in part: It is more than unfortunate that, with the short memory which is possessed by the public, and the notorious ingratitude which is the lot of every public figure, this feature of Ben Gurion's character is pushing into the background, and even into a certain oblivion, his solid and historic achievements which made him the idol of the Jewish people and a Man of Destiny.

Name Diminishes
The association of ideas which his name conjures up is no longer that of the man who dared to proclaim the State in face of the hesitations and even the opposition of his colleagues, or who declared Jerusalem the capital despite the veto of the Great Powers. It is not the daring spirit behind the Sinai Campaign which the mention of his name evokes, but the question: who is going to be the victim of his next assault?

It would mask the essential method employed by Eshkol — that of compromise, appeasement, smoothing out of differences. Only with regard to the first has his attitude and statement been an uncompromising one which leaves no room for misunderstanding.

Great Conciliator
Possessing none of those striking qualities of dynamic, aggressive leadership which are possessed by Ben Gurion — which shows itself in the brusque sweeping away of opposition — Eshkol is emerging more and more in the role of the Great Conciliator.

It seems that he is destined to have an honored place in the history of Modern Israel as the disciple of Aaron, the Great Conciliator of Jewish tradition, who "loved peace and pursued peace, loved his fellow men and brought them near" — if not to the Torah, at least to national unity.

Ben Gurion threatened to remove his name from the list of candidates in the forthcoming Knesset elections and to quit all Mapal activities if Eshkol proceeded with negotiations for a merger with Achdut Avodah. Ben Gurion made public his "dossier" on the Lavon Affair to show that the former Defense Minister, was responsible for the Cairo 1955 security mishap.

Moshe Dayan Resigns As Agriculture Minister

JERUSALEM — Moshe Dayan resigned on Nov. 24, as Agriculture Minister as a result of political differences with Premier Levi Eshkol.

The timing of the resignation of the former commander of Israel's defense forces came as a surprise although it had been clear for some time that Mr. Dayan was not happy in the Eshkol Cabinet.

Mr. Dayan called on the Premier in the morning to submit his resignation, which was accepted by Mr. Eshkol. The two conferred for 20 minutes in the Premier's office.

Afterward, Mr. Dayan said that he had resigned because of a lack of "identification," which he said should exist between a minister and the chief of government.

Mr. Eshkol expressed regret that Mr. Dayan could not find any possibility of continuing in the Cabinet.

Mr. Dayan, one of Israel's more colorful and independent-minded political personalities, became Agriculture Minister in December, 1959, in the Cabinet of former Premier David Ben-Gurion. He had served as military Chief of Staff from 1953 to 1958.

An official in the Premier's office expressed the opinion that Mr. Dayan's resignation had been motivated by a combination of government and party considerations and personal political ambitions.

Premiership Held Goal

Mr. Dayan has been mentioned as one of the "young Turks" in Mapai, Israel's dominant Labor party, who might one day rise to the premiership. He is considered a political disciple of Mr. Ben-Gurion.

Sources close to Mr. Dayan said that the disagreements between him and the Premier were not essentially due to divergent policy aims but to Mr. Dayan's belief that the Premier had failed to implement agreed policy forcefully enough.

APPROVES BUDGET

JERUSALEM — Israel's Cabinet has approved an additional state budget, calling for expenditures totaling $80,000,000.

The most recent issue that divided the two men was the Premier's efforts to achieve a political alignment for next year's elections between Mapai and another labor party, Ahdut Avodah, which is a member of the present Government coalition.

Mr. Eshkol's plan would imply at least a temporary abandonment of a wide-ranging electoral reform favored by Mr. Dayan and Mr. Ben-Gurion.

Gunfire Breaks Out Again On Syrian Border

JERUSALEM — Gunfire broke out on the Syrian-Israeli border last week for the second consecutive day.

Israeli officials said the Syrians opened light arms fire on an Israeli tractor working near the area where the Jordan River flows into the Sea of Galilee.

As in the shooting the day before, the Government said there were no Israeli casualties but Israel filed a complaint with the United Nations.

Work continued without incident on a dirt road at Dan, 30 miles north, where a gunbattle was fought yesterday.

Stephen Rosenfeld To Head News Bureau In Russia

Stephen S. Rosenfeld, who has specialized on Russian and Communist affairs for The Washington (D.C.) Post for the past two years, left this week to be the resident correspondent in a bureau opened by the Post in Moscow.

Mr. Rosenfeld, his wife, the former Barbara Bromson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Bromson of 32 Kearsarge Drive, Cranston, and their four month old son will join the small corps of resident American newsmen in Moscow. The Washington Post will be the sixth American newspaper to be represented in that city.

STEPHEN S. ROSENFELD

It was in Moscow in 1962 when Mr. Rosenfeld was working as a guide at a United States Information Agency exhibition, and Mr. Rosenfeld was on a reporting assignment for the Post that they met. Both speak Russian.

A member of the staff of the Washington Post since 1959, Mr. Rosenfeld has been an editorial writer and reporter on Communist affairs since 1962.

He was graduated from Harvard where he studied European and American history and literature. He served two years in the Marine Corps as an intelligence and communications officer and then returned to his native Pittsfield, Mass., to report for the Berkshire Eagle.

He studied Soviet affairs at Columbia University's Russian Institute from 1957 to 1959, acquiring a master's degree in Russian history and a knowledge of the Russian language.

His first visit to Moscow was in 1959 as assistant to the manager of the New York Philharmonic orchestra on its Russian tour.

Mrs. Rosenfeld, a graduate of Smith College, with a master's degree in Russian from Radcliffe, went to Russia originally as part of the Experiment in International Living. While there the group she was with traveled around the country, living in camps, visiting the work camps and meeting Russian students. It was the following year that she went back to Russia to act as a guide at the United State exhibit.

The Rosenfelds might consider the assignment in Russia as somewhat in the nature of an anniversary gift — they were married two years ago on Oct. 28.

Suggests Tickets For Chanukah

Dear Editor,

I have read with great interest the detailed description of the JCC Children's Theatre program in last week's Herald.

These programs, which have been presented for the past few years with such great success, are truly the answer to an ever increasing problem. To a youngster confronted with schools, public, religious and Sunday, and a variety of lessons in various fields, a program such as the Children's Theatre introduces a refreshing and unencumbered activity.

The four plays to be presented this fall and winter are aimed at relaxing a child and stimulating his imagination, thus relieving him of certain pressures that generally engulf his everyday activities. Too bad that this exhilarating program is limited to four programs only.

Providence is one of few cities its size fortunate enough in having these children's plays brought here, and it will surprise me, indeed, if the program is not a complete sellout. The Committee in charge is to be congratulated for its efforts in presenting these wholesome and entertaining plays.

With Chanukah almost upon us, I think it would be a splendid idea to present a child with a Chanukah gift of a season ticket, especially so, when the admission price is only 3 dollars for all four performances. This idea should appeal to many adults who are faced, every year, with the dilemma of what to give for Chanukah. Season tickets should also make very attractive birthday presents, or they may be given simply to give a child several hours of stimulating and entertaining make-believe.

Sincerely yours,

Harry Albert

AJC To Argue Three Cases Of Conscientious Objectors Before U.S. Supreme Court

NEW YORK — Does the Constitution give Congress the power to define God?

"No," said the American Jewish Congress in a friend-of-the-court brief filed yesterday with the U.S. Supreme Court.

The American Jewish Congress "amicus curiae" brief covered three conscientious-objector cases that will be argued before the high court during the week of Nov. 16.

The cases are considered significant tests of church-state separation and religious liberty under the U.S. Constitution.

Two of the cases involve New Yorkers; the other concerns a Californian. All three were men of draft age who claimed exemption from military service as conscientious objectors on religious grounds, but who denied belief in a "Supreme Being."

A subscription to the Herald is a good gift for the person who "has everything" else.

In the New York cases, Daniel Andrew Seeger and Arno Sascha Jakobson were convicted for refusing to be inducted into military service when the draftboards rejected their requests for exemption as conscientious objectors. Their convictions were reversed by the Second Circuit Court of Appeals. In California, the Ninth Circuit Court upheld the conviction of Forest Britt Peter under similar circumstances.

Requiring belief in God as a condition for exemption from military service, the American Jewish Congress brief declared, "constitutes preferential treatment of certain religions over others. In violation of the First Amendment."

Leo Pfeffer, Special Counsel of the Congress who wrote the brief, argued:

"Religion and belief in God are not synonymous. There are ancient well-recognized religions that are not theistic — religions such as Buddhism, Taoism and Confucianism."

"Administration of a law requiring belief in a Supreme Being would impose upon draft boards" the responsibility of making "theological determinations which the First Amendment excludes from the competence of civil authorities," the brief declared.

The American Jewish Congress argument cited the Supreme Court's 1871 decision in Watson v. Jones that "the law knows no heresy and is committed to the support of no dogma."

If the U.S. Congress were to arrive at a definition of a Supreme Being, "such a statutory definition, no matter how broadly phrased, would violate the mandate of the First Amendment," the brief continued, adding:

"Can there be any law more clearly an establishment of religion than one which establishes a definition of the Deity?"

"If the Congress is constitutionally incompetent to make such a definition, can it effect this end by delegating the responsibility to thousands of local draft boards throughout the nation, particularly with no guides of any kind to assist them in discharging this awesome responsibility?"

The brief also cited the 1961 Supreme Court decision in Torcaso v. Watkins, in which the high court ruled that a State could not constitutionally bar from public office persons unwilling to affirm a belief in God.

Hopes Brezhnev Takes More Favorable Attitude

PARIS—Jews have no reason to regret Nikita Khrushchev's dismissal, and there are hopes that Leonid Brezhnev, his successor as first secretary of the Communist Party in the Soviet Union, will take a more favorable attitude to the problem of Soviet treatment of her three million Jews.

This optimistic assessment of the future was given in an interview by Andre Blumel, the former president of the French Zionist Federation and president of the France-U.S.S.R. Association.

Blumel, who has paid many visits to Russia and met many Russian leaders, revealed to the Jewish Chronicle News Service the details of talks he had with Alexis Adzhubet, Khrushchev's son-in-law, at that time editor of "Izvestia," official Soviet newspaper, on the subject of the Jews in Russia.

Up to now, Blumel has steadfastly refused to disclose what was said in the talks, in the hope that secrecy would add a solution to the problem of Soviet anti-Semitism.

"When I began speaking of the remedies I considered necessary to ameliorate the situation, he avoided answering," leaders and Soviet prisoners of war, Hausner said, reveals that the reaction of the great majority of the nazi victims was of disbelief and a numbing horror that almost paralyzed them in the face of nazi extermination.

Nobody Rebelled

Speaking of over a million and a quarter Russian prisoners of war, "the flower of Soviet youth," who were annihilated by direct shooting, Hausner said, "Yet with the exception of one sad and pathetic report of resistance by 48 disabled soldiers, not one of them used the shovel with which he was told to dig his own grave to assault the SS guards."

But it occurred to nobody to attribute cowardice to them, or the will for self-destruction, until the publication of books recently on the subject of the lack of anti-nazi resistance and alleged collaboration of Ghetto councils, Hausner said.

Speaking about Jewish resistance, Hausner reported that the evidence shows that there were hundreds of nests of spontaneous Jewish underground activity, which flared up in communities all over occupied Europe.

Without benefit of advice from governments-in-exile to give them a central command, the only group so leaderless, these Jewish resistance pockets were the only ones who "went into open and over-all action when there were no relieving armies in sight," he said.

"Their only possible gain was the saving of Jewish honor. They all faced a tragic and fateful decision, since their going into action automatically carried with it the immediate wiping out of a whole community."

"So they postponed their open revolt until the last moment. The Warsaw Ghetto revolt was the crowning symbol of this movement, but historically, it was certainly only one of many inspired rebellions," Hausner said.

Are They To Blame? Stating that Jewish masses, as well as other groups of doomed people, refused to believe that they were doomed, as they were told by inspired underground leaders, Hausner asked, "Who can blame them for refusing to believe in the return of the jungle?"

In summing up the matter of Jewish resistance, Hausner said, "The records prove that the doomed Jews of Europe have nothing of which to be ashamed. There was often close cooperation between the oft-besmirched ghetto councils and the Jewish resistance leaders."

"There were over a million and a quarter Jews in the armed camps that fought Hitler. Jews took an active part in the general resistance movement, when they were allowed to participate."

"And the ghetto rebellions were exclusively Jewish. There is evidence of unbelievable acts of bravery on the part of Jewish individuals and groups in the ghettos and the extermination camps."

'Numb Horror, Incredulous Disbelief' Reaction To Mass Murder Of Jews

NEW YORK — "Numb horror and incredulous disbelief" was the general reaction of the great masses of Eastern and Central Europeans, both Jewish and non-Jewish, to the mass murders of the nazi annihilation program during World War II, according to Gideon Hausner, former Attorney General of Israel, who was the chief prosecutor at the Eichmann trial.

Speaking at the Herzl Institute last week, Hausner was bitter in his attack on "some vicious originality seeking authors" who attributed cowardice or the urge for self-destruction to those nazi victims who did not organize resistance against the nazis.

Though he didn't mention Hannah Arendt by name, Hausner apparently referred to the author of "Eichmann in Jerusalem: A Report on the Banality of Evil."

WHAT WAS YOUR GRANDPA? — FIND OUT WHEN YOU RETIRE

Have you given any thought to the idea of tracking down your fifth cousins as a project for your retirement?

A man in the Northwest has, an apparently is having a great adventure.

He is Carl B. Neal of Olympia, Wash. (3324 Hoadly Rd.). He retired in 1953 as a supervisor in the U.S. Forest Service, and has devoted most of his retirement to compiling the saga of his family — Scotch Irish Presbyterians who migrated from Ireland to Beaver Pond, Va., in 1718. He is now up to his fifth cousins and to Great-Grandpa Zachariah Neal.

Mr. Neal was born in a one-room sod house on a homestead in Western Nebraska in 1887. His father, Joseph King Neal, breaking away from the Virginia base, had attended Masonic Institute in Mountain City, Tenn., and then gone on to Nebraska. His mother, Sallie Wills, whose family had migrated from Western Europe to Lancaster, Penn., had grown up in Johnson County, Tenn., and then attended Martha Washington Seminary in Abingdon, Va.

Carl Neal's family gave up Nebraska for Eugene, Ore. in 1903. Carl graduated from the University of Oregon and Yale Forest School, and entered the U.S. Forest Service in 1910. Most of his service was in Washington and Oregon.

Since his retirement he had made three trips through the South in search of family records. He has relied largely on information he has dug from Court House files in counties where the family lived and in U. S. Census reports. "I have, or have had, geneologists working for me in nine Court Houses in South Central Virginia, in three counties in North Carolina, and in State Libraries in Virginia, North Carolina, and Georgia," he says. He would like to wind up his research, "but there is no place to stop."

Mr. Neal explains that in 1955 he thought he would write a 20-page record of his mother's family, and the same of his father's family. However, by 1960 he had 466 pages on his mother's family alone. He mimeographed and bound the story.

Among family facts uncovered by Mr. Neal: one ancestor became a militia captain in the Revolution; one moved from Prince Edward County, Va., (this was Zachariah Neal) to Caswell County, N.C., where he married Rebecca Rice. Their descendants still live there. What Mr. Neal refers to as "The Laurel" in Johnson County, Tenn., figures largely in the history of his mother's family, beginning in 1797.

And the saga goes on. One of Mr. Neal's daughters, Mrs. Pat Arnold, now lives in Madera, Calif. Another, Mrs. Preston Phipps, lives in Portland, Ore.

The young have no time for family history, it seems. Only those who are retired have the time, and the sense of history, to start digging. And when they do they preserve for future generations of their families some priceless information that otherwise will be lost.

One community may need a remedial reading course for high school students; another may decide on pre-school courses for slum children. Plans will be drawn up by the community's business, labor, educational and welfare leaders and the poor themselves. The emphasis will be on coordinating and accelerating existing programs, trying to reach those who have remained untouched by other programs - in short, on "breaking the cycle of poverty rather than simply making it more bearable"

(2) The Job Corps will offer work, training and a new environment to 40,000 boys and girls in 1965, to 10,000 in 1966 - particularly slum dropouts and illiterates.

The corpsmen will live, learn skills (and, in some cases, basic ABCs), work at special camps and draw $50 a month plus pocket money. Emphasis will be on individual attention - with one staff member for every five corpsmen. Camps will include rehabilitated Army sites and VA hospitals, national parks and forest facilities, be as removed as possible from the original slum environment.

(3) Youth work-training programs for about 200,000 boys and girls will be similar to the Job Corps, but aimed at keeping potential dropouts in school.

These youngsters will work in federal, state, city and private agencies, according to their individual interests and to job openings. They will earn enough to stay in school or will acquire necessary skills if they insist on dropping out.

(4) Work-study programs will give 140,000 college students part-time jobs and vacation work in labs, kitchens, libraries, etc., with the cost shared by the U.S. Government and the university. These programs will allow poor students to stay in college or will permit those who couldn't afford to enroll to do so.

(5) Volunteers in Service to America, dubbed the "domestic Peace Corps," will consist of

3,000 volunteers who will tour, counsel and offer personal service to local "communities of the poor." Each volunteer will get $50 a month.

Grandiose as they may seem, the programs can only nibble at the problems of the illiterate, unemployed poor. The Job Corps, for instance, can accommodate only 140,000 of the estimated 1,000,000 boys and girls now out of school and out of work. The work-training program will cover only 200,000 of this year's estimated 1,000,000 potential new dropouts.

The volunteers, trained for just one month apiece, obviously cannot do much to alleviate today's critical scarcity of trained social workers, teachers, etc. The Community Action program must face the fact that there are 11 million adults with less than six years of schooling.

But the heart of the anti-poverty act is that it is a symbolic national commitment to tackle our problem of poverty in the midst of unprecedented prosperity. It is a promise that we will fight poverty via education, training and re-training - and these are the weapons with which we will win.

French Leaders Appeal To New Soviet Group On Treatment Of Jews

PARIS—A conference on the situation of Soviet Jewry attended by French progressive and left-wing leaders chosen for their known friendliness to the Soviet Union, appealed this week to the new Soviet leadership to "revert to true Leninist principles" of equal treatment for all, without racial or religious distinctions.

The conference opened with a message from Lord Bertrand Russell who called particularly on the left-wing movements to make their voices heard on "the intolerable persecutions reserved to Soviet Jews." Lord Russell twice appealed to Nikita Khrushchev when he was Premier on behalf of Russian Jewry.

"Treatment of Jews in the Soviet Union causes great worries," the British philosopher said in his cable. "It is intolerable that Communist party publications in a number of different Soviet Republics should contain anti-Semitic material comparable to that of Der Sturmer," the worst Jew-baiting publication of the Nazi era in Germany.

Jacques Nanted, the rapporteur of the conference, then reported on a new Soviet publication which he said openly incited to hatred. He said it represented Jews as "the hereditary enemies" of the Ukrainians. He also described a short story, published in Oct. 1963, in "Dniepro," the organ of the Ukrainian Young Communist movement, which overtly and directly portrayed Jews as hating and despising their non-Jewish fellow-citizens "in the same way" according to a review "as the thief hates and despises his victim."

The rapporteur proceeded to describe a somber picture of cultural and educational discrimination affecting Russian Jews. He warned that some of the anti-Semitic innuendos which have appeared recently in the Soviet press were similar to the charges emanating from the "Doctors' Trial" staged during the Stalin regime.

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. - On the same bill with Roberta Sherwood at the Cocoanut Grove, Negro comedian Kirby Stone said he asked Sammy Davis, Jr., how Sammy managed to get into better restaurants and hotels. "Join the Jewish faith as I did," suggested Sammy. Kirby replied, "You have more heart than me, Sammy. I can't afford to be segregated twice."

MICKEY KATZ the Beverly Hills Friars musical director who has recovered after a long and serious illness, said that his celebrated son Joel, 32, is still starring in "Stop the World, I Want To Get Off" at the Mineola Playhouse, Long Island. "My older son, Ron, skipped showbiz for legitimate biz," said Mickey, adding, "Dahnken Gott!"

A READER asked, "Is Walter Winchell Jewish?" He is . . . Congratulations to Sidney P. Solow, President of Consolidated Film Industries, for the recognition handed him by the American Cinema Editors for his many industry contributions. Which explains why Solow now feels so high.

WHILE PLAYING for an Academy Awards show, music director Manny Harmon overheard two stars talking. Said one, "It's my stupid agent's fault that I never got a part worthy of an Oscar. When I die I hope they cremate me and throw ten percent of the ashes in my agent's face."

IN HER role as a prostitute in "Rage to Live" with Ben Gazzara, Myrna Ross told Ben to make it look real by actually beating her. "I came out of that scene with bruises," said the young Jewish actress, "but I can take it. I used to be a dirty street fighter."

WHILE MAKING "War Lord" for Universal in Claremont, Calif., Sammy Ross, Baltimore's famous 41-year-old famous Jewish dwarf, was approached by a youngster who asked, "Are you a big midget?" Sammy replied, "No, I'm a little giant." A miniature Goliath maybe who can lick an oversized David? This could set the Bible back a thousand years.

OUR aforementioned comedy favorite George Kirby said that Harry Belafonte got chased off an Indian reservation when he started singing, "This Land Is Mine."

DOZENS of beautiful and smartly attired young ladies seen in Warner's "My Fair Lady" received plenty of glamorous screen exposure but not much money - only $33 per day. Their job wasn't easy either. Heavy hats proved difficult to wear and caused headaches. White makeup became uncomfortable and created problems with skin. And the young ladies were weary throughout the long shooting days because their tight dresses prevented them from sitting.

So, young ladies in Boston, Memphis, Winnipeg, Baltimore and wherever you are, if you're interested in coming to Hollywood to bid for fame and fortune, better stay home and be comfortable.

VETERAN actor Baruch Lumer, now appearing in CBS-TV's "Slattery's People," is best known for his dramatic successes at New York's world-famous Yiddish Art Theater, where he appeared with Yiddish greats including Paul Muni and Luther and Stella Adler.

His son, Sidney Lumer, is a celebrated actor and director in his own right.

IF EDDIE Fisher had accepted Mike Todd's invitation to join him in that fateful 1958 flight, Eddie never would have married Liz Taylor and Liz wouldn't have met and married Richard Burton and life would have been uneventful for the rest of us.

Ship-Owners Cancel Trade With Israel;
43 Removed From Arabs' Blacklist

LONDON—The owners of 43 ships that had previously dealt with Israel have decided to cancel such trade and have been, for that reason, removed from the Arab blacklist, according to an announcement received here from the Arab Central Boycott office at Damascus.

The 43 freighters, according to Mohammed Nahgoub, commissioner general of the Boycott Office, include one flying the American flag. The others fly the flag of Britain, Greece, Burma, Liberia, Sweden, Norway, Panama, Italy, Finland, West Germany, Holland and Yugoslavia.

These freighters, said Nahgoub, formed one-third of the total of ships blacklisted, and the ban against them has been lifted "after their owners complied with boycott regulations and ended all dealings with Israel."

The ban, he said, has also been lifted on the "Five Star" shipping line of Burma "because Israeli shares in that company have been nationalized." If Nahgoub's figures, as reported from Damascus, are accurate, there were a total of 123 foreign ships on the Arab blacklist, and 86 are still being blacklisted for trading with Israel.

OFFERS TO HELP ARABS
PARIS — Algerian President Ahmed Ben Bella again has offered to put his army at the service of his Arab "brothers" in war against Israel. Addressing a rally in Algiers, celebrating the 10th anniversary of beginning of the revolt against the French, Ben Bella said "If necessary," the Algerian army would fight against Israel "to liberate Palestine." He also pledged to fight against the rule of Moïse Tshombe in the Congo. He reiterated an old canard, that 1,500 Israelis were "fighting for Tshombe."

ADDRESSES D-DAY VOLUNTEERS — Robert A. Riesman, general chairman of the 1964 General Jewish Committee campaign, is shown addressing part of the group of more than 300 volunteer workers who came out for D-Day solicitations last Sunday. Approximately 1,500 cards were assigned to workers on the one-day house-to-house canvass. Samuel M. Gerstein, D-Day chairman, said that many persons were not at home, and their cards have been reassigned for coverage.

Jerusalem Post Editor Krivine Says Official Circles Have No Measures In View To Deflate Israeli Boom

JERUSALEM — Official circles do not appear to have any radical measures in view for deflating Israel's economic boom, writes the Jerusalem Post economic editor, David Krivine.

While there is prosperity, and the level of economic activity is as high as ever, some soft spots have appeared which appear to be putting breaks to the boom. There are the rising costs and diminishing profits in industry and agriculture. There is some hesitance on the part of investors. There is the slump in real estate. There is the tumbling stock market. Of late there have been signs of receding liquidity, and interest rates in the private bill market have slightly risen, the Jerusalem Post economic expert wrote.

Boom Popular
 Who wants the boom to end? What people want is Government intervention to perpetuate the boom by neutralizing the monetary effects of the trade deficit. The Treasury is asked to step up public spending to provide cheap credit; to reverse its open market policy so as to provide support to the flagging private demand for equities; to rescind some of the curbs that have been imposed on foreign borrowing and investments; etc.

Foreign investments in Israel this year will total an estimated $80m., as against $100m. last year. This decline is not due to any sag in the pressure of applications, but to greater selectivity in granting "approved" status. Dr. Zvi Dinstein, head of the Investment Authority, told The Jerusalem Post.

Since further tax increases on luxuries are unlikely to yield much revenue, because at today's high prices demand is becoming inelastic, attention is being turned in official circles to the possibilities of economizing in Government budgeting. Among the lines of action under study are:

To increase selectivity further in promoting investments. A company receives approved status on condition that it exports 50 per cent of its output.

Cuts should be made in public construction, which means postponing slum clearance, and reducing the road building program. Halt should be made in the erection of less-than-essential public buildings.

Ministers should be coaxed into moderating their budget requests. Credit needs to be "squeezed," which includes bringing to a stop the "import of purchasing power" caused through taking short and medium-term loans from overseas.

During the last sixteen years, Israel's population tripled with virtually no unemployment, and a steadily increasing rate of productivity per worker. Industrial production has grown eight times and industrial exports are up 25 times. Israel's gross national product has increased at an average annual rate of ten per cent, and industrial production has risen by 13 per cent annually.

Hold Commemorative Ceremonies For 8,000 Jews Deported From Italy

ROME—Commemorative ceremonies on the 20th anniversary of the Italian resistance to the Nazi occupation were held last week in memory of the 8,000 Jews deported from Italy. Only 600 returned.

The ceremony was held at the Portico Ottaviano in the heart of the Rome Ghetto where a marble memorial stone was unveiled at the spot where, on October 16, 1943, three German trucks were stationed for the loading of Jewish victims bound for the Nazi death camps.

S. Azzarita, president of the Italian Federation of Resistance Fighters, told the gathering that those tragic events should serve as a warning for youth who too often accept chauvinistic theories. He reminded the audience that 2,000 Jewish resistance fighters—a considerable percentage of the tiny community of 30,000 souls—had fought for the liberation of Italy from Nazi tyranny.

Mayor Petrucci of Rome said at the ceremonies that the deportation of Italian Jews in October 1943 was one of the events that awakened Italians to reality and made it clear to them that the enemy had to be fought.

Home Minister Taviani, representing the Italian Government, presented a decoration to the Union of Italian Jewish Communities for the Jewish heroism and sacrifice during the Nazi occupation. In handing the decoration to Judge S. Piperno, president of the Union, Mr. Taviani cited the organization for its continued aid to persecuted Jews and resistance fighters during the Nazi occupation and for its role in the reconstruction of the Jewish communities after the war.

To Install Rabbi Jacob Handler As Beth Israel Spiritual Leader

 Street into which they would soon be moving.
 Rabbi Handler has spent a good deal of his time in the northern part of the United States. Before serving in Manchester, he had been in Rutland, Vt., where he had been president of the Vermont Jewish Council — a group which attempted to organize the Jewish people throughout the state into one, affiliating the small groups.
 Previous to this Rabbi Handler had been in Glen Falls, N. Y., where he was executive director of the Jewish Community Center and served as spiritual leader of Congregation Shaare Tfiloh. He also was a professor of Human Relations at Skidmore College.
 Rabbi Handler feels that the way to "bring back the old glory of Temple Beth Israel" (which right now is maintaining with difficulty its status quo because of the loss of Jewish population in the neighborhood) "is through the new generation." He feels that it is necessary "to give people self-pride in this great temple which fulfills the wants and needs of our neighborhood."

 He has several plans in mind, but the most important he feels is to strengthen religious education. The daily morning services, two services on Saturdays, courses in adult education (the reception of the present courses he feels has been exceptional) in the "Prophets" and in Hebrew education all help toward this end.
 He is hoping as time goes on to be able to meet every member of the temple under all circumstances.
 The first function at which Rabbi Handler has been invited to preside, took place this past Wednesday when he was the speaker at the Memorial Services which the Rhode Island Selfhelp holds annually at the Jewish Home for the Aged for those Jews killed by the Nazis.

Very active in the National Conference of Christians and Jews, he was the one who originated the Youth Leadership Camp, where 150 youth would take over Camp Tel Noar the last week in August for seminars in racial problems. He received the Council's Brotherhood Award.
 In 1954, he was sent to Israel by the Zionist Organization of America to study the conditions in the country. He is the author of a booklet called the "Place of Ethics in Judaism" of which thousands of copies were distributed in New England. In Vermont, he also, with two other clergymen of other faiths, had an office where he served as a Marriage Counselor.

When asked how his children have taken this constant moving around which seems to be the fate of most younger rabbis, he replied that they have adjusted quite well to each place (the younger ones seemed well-adjusted for only two month's stay), and that he had told them that as a rabbi's family, they simply would have to learn to move constantly.
 And as Rabbi Handler works on the problems of the congregation, Mrs. Handler had her own problems as she asked about upholsterers, and draperies and the thousand and one things necessary to get a new home ready for living.

Israel To Hold Maccabiah Games

NEW YORK — Israel, "a country of miracles and imponderables," will stage the quadrennial Maccabiah Games next Aug. 23 to 31, the international chairman of the games said here.
 "We are looking for neither miracles nor imponderables in holding the games," said Pierre Gildesgame, the chairman, a Briton. "We hope they give a boost to Israeli athletics, as well as continue to promote international cooperation." He spoke at a news conference.
 The competition, first held in Palestine in 1932, will bring together more than 1,000 athletes from 32 countries. It is usually staged the year after the Olympics.
 Some of the finest athletes in the world have competed in the games, Gildesgame said and "have helped to give Israel needed sports values."

A United States team of about 170 is expected to be among the largest entries. Such Olympians as Larry Brown (basketball), Al Rosenberg (rowing), Isaac Berger (weightlifting) and Jerry Ashworth (track and field) will compete for the United States.
 The Maccabees, after whom the games are named, were a small, well-trained band that used guerrilla tactics to defend Israel almost 2,000 years ago.
 Contributions to help finance the United States team's trip should be sent to the United States Committee, Sports for Israel, 147 West 42nd Street, New York, N. Y.

Egyptian Press

 ser's finances and leaving his country poverty-stricken, said Peres. Egypt is mired in Yemen with 46,000 troops pinned down, already having suffered 10,000 dead. Peres said Nasser has been charged by authoritative sources of using poison gas in the Yemen war.
 Peres said the Cairo conference reaffirmed that the Arab states are united only on hating Israel, but otherwise fear Nasser's aims of swallowing up the Arab world, and are wary of his plots. The Defense official warned, however, that Israel's security problem is as serious as ever.
 Asked if Israel should continue to aid the Asian-African countries after they had joined in an anti-Israel resolution at Cairo, Peres replied Israel's relationships with the underdeveloped nations are cast on a long-term basis and should be unaffected by the Cairo incident.

250,000 Immigrants Enter Israel Over Past Four Years

JERUSALEM — A call to American UJA leaders at the National Conference in New York Dec. 10-13 to hammer out the 1965 nation wide goal of the United Jewish Appeal "to set the largest dollar goal possible for the program of the Jewish Agency and the Joint Distribution Committee" was issued by the UJA's 10th Annual Study Mission.

The resolution lauded Israel's achievements of receiving 250,000 immigrant newcomers over the past four years and noted that their entry in such large numbers and at such a rapid pace, had a tremendous imbalance in Israel's social structure.

Bigger Target
A goal greater in amount than in 1964 would, therefore, be needed to fully cover the regular absorption budgets of the Jewish Agency for housing, education and rehabilitation and to provide the facilities needed for other services vital to the integration of all the newcomers, in the economic and social life of the country, said the Jerusalem Post.

Wide DISPERSION
The once familiar sight of bewildered newcomers wandering open-mouthed along Tel Aviv's Allenby Road, is a rarity. This is largely due to the policy of immigrant dispersion, under which the newcomers are taken straight from the boat to their new homes, which in the majority of cases are in development areas, said the Jewish Observer and Middle East Review. During these four years only about one third of the immigrants settled in the over-populated coastal strip near Tel Aviv.

Most of the remainder went to development towns, some of which grew fantastically. Ashdod had a population of 3,400 on Jan. 1, 1960 and numbered 13,865 on the same date in 1964; Beersheba absorbed 13,958 immigrants during those four years and Jerusalem, the only major city considered a development area, took in 12,000.

Full Employment
The biggest achievement is that unemployment has not grown. Most of the immigrants able to work have found work. The overwhelmingly majority of the newcomers have been given permanent homes, many of them on the day of arrival.

Mass immigration means the evacuation of entire communities, complete with their sick, their old and their social cases. In 1960, nearly 20 per cent of the immigrants were over 55. In 1962, 36 per cent were handicapped—blind, mentally deficient crippled, etc.

Over the last four years more than a quarter of the immigrants have been in need of social assistance.

From preliminary indications of refugee, relief and resettlement aid requirements during the next year, the 1965 UJA goal predictable will exceed the $105,- 000,000 total sought in 1964 to assist 751,000 Jews in need the world over.

2,395 from Britain, 6,612 from the United States and Canada and 9,393 from Latin America settled here since 1960.

South America

Recommend Polish Graves Be Permanently Supervised

LONDON—A committee appointed by the Jewish Cultural and Social Association of Poland to look after the graves and tombs of the ancient Jewish cemetery on Gensiza Street in Warsaw, has recommended that the monuments be permanently supervised to save them from decay. It was reported here from the Polish capital.

Among the famous Jewish personalities whose tombstones were reported to be in good condition were Prof. Meir Balaban and Prof. Simon Ashkenazi, noted historians; Dr. Ludwig Zamenhof, the originator of Esperanto; Chaim Zelig Słonimski, founder and editor of the first Hebrew daily, Hatzfira; Gershon Sirota, the famous cantor; J. L. Peretz, S. Ansky and Jacob Dnenson, the three famed writers who share a mausoleum, and Ether Rachel Kaminska, the actress.

The committee will report on the graves of other Jewish personalities when further inventories are made at the cemetery within the next few weeks. The committee was appointed when it was discovered that a number of the tombstones of the cemetery in which many famous Jewish writers, scholars and leaders are buried, and are now fading and others are crumbling.

The Jewish Cultural and Social Association of Poland is the central body of Polish Jewry which promotes Jewish cultural life in the country by maintaining Jewish schools, publishing books by Jewish authors and developing cultural clubs for Jewish adults.

Should Parents Choose Teenager's Friends?

By C. D. Smith

THE WEEK'S LETTER: "I am fourteen years old. I make excellent grades in school, people tell me that I am above-average in intelligence, talent and looks. But I wonder. The reason is that I just don't understand my parents. They object to some of my friends: not all of them, just a few. I ask them to explain their objections, and I get no answer, only "We just prefer that you be friends with Susan or Sally"—no explanation as to why they object to a girl—and in some cases, a boy, that I like very much. Don't you think, if they object to some of my friends, they owe me an explanation of some kind or another?"

OUR REPLY: Your parents owe you no explanation and, if you are as smart as your friends think you are, you will realize that your parents are simply living up to their responsibility when they exercise some opinion and control over your friendships.

You are, after all, only fourteen years of age. Your parents have lived a few years longer than that. And, if they are the kind of parents we assume them to be, and we have no doubt they are, they have very good reasons when they suggest that some boy or girl is not the one you should choose for a friend. And, you can bet that their objection is based on something much more than a personality conflict.

Your parents are interested in one thing—your future. Rather than expecting them to give you "explanations," you should be happy that they really care about you.
