Albert I. Gordon is chairman of the Rhode Island Society of Fellows. David Meyers is chairman of patrons and Bertram L. Bernhardt is treasurer.

Police Intensify Search For Arab Terrorist

LONDON: Police say they are intensifying the search for a certain "Carlos Martinez" suspected of being an Arab terrorist operating in London and Paris. Scotland Yard's Detective Inspector Lionel Stapley has been put in charge of the investigation.

But the police are doubtful whether Martinez is still in England. They said he is believed to have left the country on one of his regular trips to Paris where he was apparently also known under the name of "Carlos Martinez."

Paris shoot-out

A group of French detectives and security men arrived here from Paris to examine the findings of the British police and coordinate the hunt for the escaped terrorist involved in a Paris shoot-out in which two counter-espionage agents and their prisoner, a Lebanese known as Michel Moukarbel, possibly the founder of an Arab terrorist organization, were killed.

A cache of arms and explosives,

Israeli Government Stands Firm On Terms

TEL AVIV: The Israeli Government stood firm on its terms for an American-mediated interim agreement with Egypt and decided to continue negotiations and seek clarification without haste.

The decisions were made at the end of a four-hour Cabinet session at which Premier Yitzhak Rabin reported on his meeting in Bonn with Secretary of State Kissinger. Mr. Rabin told his ministers that the Egyptians had modified their terms for a Sinai settlement somewhat but not sufficiently.

Upon his return from Bonn, he together with the names and addresses of prominent British personalities in the fields of business and entertainment, were discovered in a top floor flat in Bayswater, the West London district in which many Arabs and other foreign nationals reside.

A black address book found in the flat contained the names of several members of the Sieff family, Lord and Lady Sainsbury, the Jewish impresario Sir Bernard Delfont, the opposition deputy leader Sir Keith Joseph, Yehudi Menuhin, playwright John Osborne (who has been attacking left-wing revolutionaries in recent years) and his wife, actress Jill Bennett. Also found in the flat were newspaper clippings, most of them from the Jewish Chronicle.

The arms were said to have been left by a South American known as Carlos Martinez. Also discovered in the flat was a Chilean passport in the name of Adolfo Jose Bernal, and stamps that could be used for placing British entry certificates in passports. On the back of one of the stamps was writing in Arabic. Arms, various identity documents and forged passport stamps were also found at Carlos Martinez's Paris flat raided by the police.

(Meanwhile, French police have indicated that Martinez may have been responsible for the bombings of three newspapers last August. The targets were L'Arche, a Jewish monthly, L'Aurore and Minute. The latter two publications have taken pro-Israeli or pro-Jewish positions. Police investigating a second hideout apartment used by Martinez in his escape, discovered files containing maps and plans of apartment and office buildings in Paris, including the three publications. They also found a large stock of arms and printing material for faking identity papers.)

Knesset Approves 8 Bills Implementing Tax Reforms

JERUSALEM: The Knesset has overwhelmingly approved eight bills implementing the government's controversial tax reform measures, retroactively from July 1. The most important bill, putting the reforms into effect, was adopted with a majority of 76 votes. Only the two Rakah Communist MKs voted against the reforms, and Meir Payil of the leftist Moked faction abstained.

The strong support for the measure indicated that both the government and parliament consider the reforms urgent for Israel's economic well-being and are resolute in their stand despite opposition from various sectors of the economy. The government now faces the task of convincing large numbers of wage earners and

Award Contract To Donatelli For Home For Aged Building

The contract to build the new Home for the Aged has been awarded to the Donatelli Building Company, Inc., it has been announced by Max Alperin, president and general chairman. Construction on the building will begin immediately after the groundbreaking ceremony scheduled to be held at the home on Wednesday, August 6. The completion date for the new building is now estimated for November 6, 1976.

The groundbreaking ceremonies will start at 5:30 p.m. and the dinner will follow at 6:30 p.m.

According to Mr. Alpert, "This is a great moment in the lives of the Jewish community which is the culmination of many years of planning and preparation. We are sure that the Rhode Island Jewish community will be justifiably proud of this modern facility that will encompass a comprehensive program for the aged. Every effort will be made to keep the aged in the community whenever it is possible. There will be an expanded day-care center at the Home to enable the aged in the community to spend the days in constructive activity at the Home and return to their families every night."

Harold Levitt and Alexander Rumpler, cochairmen of the building committee, said that the Donatelli Building Company, Inc., is experienced in constructing nurse and health facilities. The architects are Robinson Green Beretta Company.

THE JEWISH HOME FOR THE AGED has a tradition of personal warmth, care and respect for its residents. With the modern new building, the Home will have the facilities to match the caliber of its staff and its programs.

expense accounts, car and telephone expenses paid by employers, which were hitherto exempt, remain that way. The Israeli Journalists Union has threatened a 48-hour strike if its members expenses are taxed.

The measures were based on tax reform recommendations made by a select committee headed by Haim Ben Shahar, a leading economist and president of Tel Aviv University, who was assigned the task by Finance Minister Yehoshua Rabinowitz.

They embody two main principles; a reduction in the rate of taxation whereby a majority of tax payers will not be paying more than 45 percent of their taxable income, and the elimination of most exemptions. The latter provision has raised considerable controversy which the government will try to overcome. Many businessmen and professionals are demanding that

UJ APPEAL

MEMPHIS: Irving Bernstein, executive vice-chairman of the United Jewish Appeal, told 50 editors attending the annual convention of the American Jewish Press Association here that 1975 will be the second best year in the history of the UJA, with a total of $550 million expected, compared with $675 million last year.

Bernstein said cash collections were 30 percent ahead of those of last year at the same period in the campaign, even though 1975 pledges to date were 12 percent behind those of last year at the same time. He said the results were an indication of the way American Jewry views the seriousness of the present economic situation in Israel.

Your Money's Worth

By Sylvia Porter

Can the Poor Afford to Eat?

The "poverty line" set by the US government today is an annual income of $5,050 for a non-farm family of four.

Can the poor afford to eat on that? No!

In 1955 — a full two decades ago — a federal survey revealed that poor people spent 30 per cent of their after-tax incomes for food. Based on this finding, the poverty line was "invented" and fixed by federal statisticians at slightly over three times the cost of an "adequate" diet.

But the poverty line was, and is, an inaccurate measure of poverty. The diet chosen as standard was and is the Department of Agriculture's "Economy Food Plan," which is for "temporary or emergency" use only, not for regular use. Also, because the line is updated yearly only by using increases in the cost of living index, the ratio of three to one has been lost. (In February 1975, using the 3:1 formula, the line should have been about $5,800.) Moreover, the yearly update creates a major time lag in an era of inflation.

On top of this, the data in the '55 survey was based on income after taxes — a fact which the creators of the poverty line neglected to include. But a poor family does have to pay state, local, sales and, in some cases, federal taxes.

Finally, the official price index does not reflect the key fact that food, shelter and utilities consume a vastly greater proportion of the poor person's expenses than of the non-poor.

How, then, does the impoverished family manage?

It could insure itself a nutritionally adequate diet and use the remaining money for other needs. But that's impossible. A family must pay its rent or be evicted; pay its utility bills or live in darkness; meet other expenses essential to survival.

In reality, it is food which is expendable in a budget demanding the most filling foods pennies can buy. Middle income families may trade down to cheaper foods, but a poor family has nowhere to go. Little decent housing is available at rates (including utilities) the poor can afford. Many go without medical care, especially preventive medical care, are forced into debt, default on payments. They cash in what assets they have, slashing their chances of ever getting the education or skills needed to upgrade their incomes or accumulating the capital to help them break out of their "prisons."

Yes, the poor are eligible for food stamps. A family of four now gets $162 of food stamps a month for which it must pay about 25 or 30 per cent of its net income. But often, the poor cannot afford to buy the whole amount of food stamps after meeting fixed expenses.

And even if the poor family could afford the price of food stamps, the benefits — now the source of nutrition assistance for almost 20 million Americans — are based on that inadequate Economy Food Plan.

The New York based public interest organization, Food Research and Action Center (FRAC) recently won a lawsuit it had been litigating for more than three years which challenged the nutritional adequacy of the food stamp program. The US Court of Appeals found that the food stamp coupon allotments provided less than the "nutritionally adequate diet" the law demands. The unanimous appeals court decision instructed USDA to issue new coupon allotments within four months so that recipients would be assured a nutritionally adequate diet.

This should mean significant relief for Americans with incomes and resources low enough to qualify for food stamps. The 20 million now depending on food stamps are indeed a cause for deep alarm in the US — but not because they are using food stamps. Rather, the threat lies in the fact that — they need to.

NOTE: You may have seen some ads recently offering food stamp explanatory materials at $3.50 a package. There is no reason to pay for this information! Contact your state or local food stamp office for free information or get "FRAC's Guide to the Food Stamp Program" by writing FRAC, 25 West 43 Street, New York, New York 10036. Cost: 50¢, or free if you are unable to pay.

FEWER EMISSARIES

NEW YORK: A reduction in the number of Israeli "schlichim" (emissaries) in the United States is underway as a result of the sharp decline in aliya from this country to Israel and budget difficulties. Other measures of austerity will include closing offices throughout the US and a reduction to one emissary in many communities that presently have two or more. "All these measures do not mean that we are going to cut our activities on behalf of aliya," Yehoshua Yadlin, director of the Israel Aliya Center in North America said. He added aliya here will be encouraged through new means that will seek to involve members of local Jewish communities and Jewish organizations here in work for aliya.

NAMED COORDINATOR

CINCINNATI, O. Dr. Eugene Mihaly, Professor of Rabbinic Literature and Homiletics at Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, has been appointed as the Academic Coordinator of the Institution's four schools in this city, New York, Los Angeles and Jerusalem.

THE ODYSSEY OF THE SS ST. LOUIS

by DR. JAY N. FISHBEIN

Although of immigrant descent, many Americans were convinced, as a result of this endless propaganda, that they also were of "pure Aryan stock." This wave of hysteria was further inflamed by the Sunday anti-Semitic radio speeches of Father Charles Coughlin. We also had the counterpart of General Brown in the State Department which was filled with its share of prejudiced men. Then, as now, the public was informed that Jews controlled the government and should be eliminated from all positions of power.

President Roosevelt was vilified in the numerous Nazi publications as "Rosenfeld the Jew." Contrary to this picture they presented, Roosevelt, the "liberal" president, was more concerned with the oncoming election for an unprecedented third term. He pacified the concerned Jews who approached him with vague promises and appointed committees that were presided over either by incompetents or individuals not overly sympathetic to the Jews. Europe, concerned with Hitler's growing power had little interest in the Jewish problem. It was a time of appeasement with the hope of securing "peace in our time."

As the St. Louis was proceeding toward its destination, Goebbels spared no effort in stirring up anti-Semitic feeling on the island. Newspapers and radio spewed forth their propaganda daily about this "sub-human" element that was about to invade and sully Cuban soil. The Nazis were determined to demonstrate to the world that no country was willing to defile herself with this worthless scum.

This virulent propaganda extended to South America, South Africa, Australia, the Middle East and the European countries. The Nazi news broadcasts shrilled that while Germany was being condemned for expelling the Jews, no other country was willing to accept them.

In Cuba the Nazi agents concentrated on the St. Louis passengers with their propaganda, by radio and in print.

"Against this invasion we must react with the same energy as have other peoples of the globe. Otherwise we will be absorbed, and the day will come when the blood of our martyrs and heroes shall have served solely to enable the Jews to enjoy a country conquered by our ancestors."

On Saturday, May 27th at 3 a.m. the St. Louis arrived in Havana and was anchored in the roadstead, by the pilot. The passengers were awakened for breakfast. They entered the dining room in high spirits, happy that the trip was over and they would soon meet their friends and relatives. They rushed through breakfast in order to be first in line for the medical inspection. A series of unexplained delays occurred while the passengers waited impatiently, their baggage lined up on deck, ready to disembark. Ashore, the Jewish Relief Committee was working feverishly to obtain clearance for the passengers and arrange accommodations and transportation as they disembarked. They encountered unexpected problems which no one could explain.

Relatives and friends waiting ashore puzzled by the delay, hired boats to take them out to the ship. On singling out the people they had come to meet, standing at the rail, they waved, calling out greetings and encouragement. The din was unimaginable as they tried to make themselves heard. Tears of joy were shed freely on the decks as well as on the boats. Adding to the confusion were the cries of fruit peddlers who called out their wares. Bananas, pineapples, coconuts and other fruits were hauled up in baskets as sales were made. Small boys dived for the coins that were tossed down.

Police launches drew close to keep anyone from going aboard or from leaving the ship. A number of police came aboard, but no one could explain the delay. Rumors were rife. The ship's papers were not in order. They were waiting for tugs to bring the ship to dock. The passengers were to be taken off in tenders, which were soon to arrive. As the hours dragged on it became apparent that the delay would be a long one. Lunch was announced but the passengers seemed to be without appetite.

The refugees finally learned that the landing permits they carried were valid only for tourists making a brief visit, which would not apply to them. Most of the passengers had American visas but would have to wait until their quota number was reached. The high hopes they had on arising that morning were shattered.

Since Benitez who had sold the landing permits had failed to share his profits with Cuban President Frederico Bru and the army Chief of Staff, Fulgencio Batista, these gentlemen were inclined to help him out of his dilemma, even if it was innocent refugees that suffered. Telegrams were sent to President Bru and to Washington, without reply. An appeal was made to the wife of President Bru as well, explaining their plight. The heat was intolerable and the passengers sweltered.

To assist the local Relief Committee, the American Joint Distribution Committee in New York flew in by seaplane, two able members, Lawrence Berenson, an attorney, and Cecilia Razovsky. As the news media sensed the developing drama, more and more reporters and radio crews were dispatched to Havana.

While telegrams were exchanged and conferences held by the Relief Committee and local government officials, one of the passengers, Max Loewe, who had been in a concentration camp, entered a lavatory, slashed his wrists and jumped overboard. A seaman dived after him. While Loewe tried to fight him off, screaming "let me die!" a police launch drew up and pulled him in. The ship's siren caused consternation along the waterfront where several thousand friends and relatives were keeping a wary watch, terrified that the siren signaled its departure. Newsmen came aboard and questioned some eyewitnesses. On returning to shore they radioed of "the ship that shamed the world."

While Goebbels Propaganda Ministry was busily disseminating anti-Semitic propaganda in Havana and the question of the passengers landing still very much in doubt, the British government chose this unpropitious time to publish its long awaited "White Paper" on Palestine which set stringent limits on the number of Jews to be admitted. While no country offered to accept these refugees, all were ready to suggest some other haven. Among these were British Guiana, the Philippine province of Mindanao, Uganda, Angola, and the jungles of Brazil.

Telegrams began to flood the office of the American Consul General in Cuba on behalf of the St. Louis passengers, but he was advised that Undersecretary of State Sumner Wells was "distinctly making representations" to the Cuban authorities. The union leader, John H. Lewis, cabled Batista asking that "in the name of humanity the refugees be permitted to land." Other Americans added their protests but their appeals were also ignored. Their voices were not strong enough to stir either the Roosevelt administration or any humanitarian organization to action. If the world cannot be accused of complicity in the destruction of the Jews, they were certainly guilty of indifference.

Lawrence Berenson continued to have confidence that money would be the deciding factor. The question was simply to whom it should be offered and how much it would take. Manuel Benitez who had deluded and bilked the passengers with his fraudulent landing permits, declared that he wanted two million dollars to "guarantee" the passengers' freedom.

Berenson made a determined effort to contact President Bru but was informed by the secretary that his engagement calendar was full "for the foreseeable future." He then attempted to arrange a meeting with Batista through an official he had met in the states.

Commander of Israel's Navy Says It Is Now More Capable

TEL AVIV: The commander of Israel's navy said that it was capable of operations far from Israel's shores and could handle a situation such as arose during the Yom Kippur War when Egypt blockaded the Straits of Bab el Mandeb that connect the Red Sea with the Indian Ocean.

Addressing military correspondents on the eve of Navy Day which Israel celebrated June 12, Admiral Benjamin Telem would not say how the navy would respond in the event the straits were again closed to Israeli shipping but observed that "We now have better, much better capabilities to do so." Admiral Telem also revealed that a Soviet spy ship was stationed in international waters off Israel, monitoring all Israeli cables, radio-telephone calls and broadcasts.

FINED $1000

NEW YORK: Russel Kelner, national coordinator of the Jewish Defense League, was fined $1000 and put on four years probation for threatening to kill Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasir Arafat last November. Federal Judge Richard Owens, who also gave Kelner a one-year suspended jail sentence, said he was giving the JDL official the benefit of the doubt, because he did not mean to carry out the threat. Kelner made the threat during a televised news conference just prior to Arafat's appearance at the United Nations. He was convicted last month by a Manhattan federal court jury. The maximum penalty is five years in prison and a $1000 fine.

Hussein Plans To Stop Israel If War Leads Through Jordan

Jordan as a sanctuary.

King Hussein appeared to be seeking to restore his position in the Arab world by presenting Jordan as a bastion against Israel and a supporter of Palestinian aspirations to recover their homeland.

Reconciliation Reported

The interview coincided with a front-page article in a pro-Palestinian newspaper, Al Moharrer, reporting that Syrian mediation had produced a reconciliation formula between Jordan and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

According to this report, which was partly confirmed by Arab diplomatic sources, the guerrillas would be allowed to establish bases near Irbid, Salt and the Jordan River Valley "provided they do not carry out any activity against Israel."

The report said the guerrillas would be under the command of the Palestine Liberation Army, which has a unit of about 5,000 men stationed in Jordan under the command of the Jordanian Army. It has been inactive against Israel.

The Al Moharrer report implied that the Palestinian guerrillas would be permitted into Jordan under tight control as a purely defensive force, to act in coordination with the Jordanian military against any Israeli attack.

King Hussein gave a different interpretation, however, to what Palestinian guerrilla activity could be. He said:

"The point of difference between us and the P.L.O. lies in the concept of revolutionary action. We believe that the revolution should be within occupied territory. But for them to enter, carry out operations and then return would bring dangers, the most important of which is allowing Israel to choose the time and place for the battle. If, however, they want to enter (occupied areas) and stay, there is something no one rejects or wants to stop."

Buying Modern Weapons

King Hussein said that his armed forces were being modernized, largely with United States equipment. He referred to a purchase of a United States made Hawk missile system to provide air defense and the acquisition of 60 F-5 jet fighters equipped with missiles.

King Hussein said he was also buying helicopter troop carriers, and was increasing the mobility of his armored forces. A new Middle East war, he said, would not be one of trenches but of mobility.

King Hussein, who has developed close contacts lately with President Hafez al Assad of Syria, said that in a new war Israel might try to encircle Syria by a thrust to the east through northern Jordan.

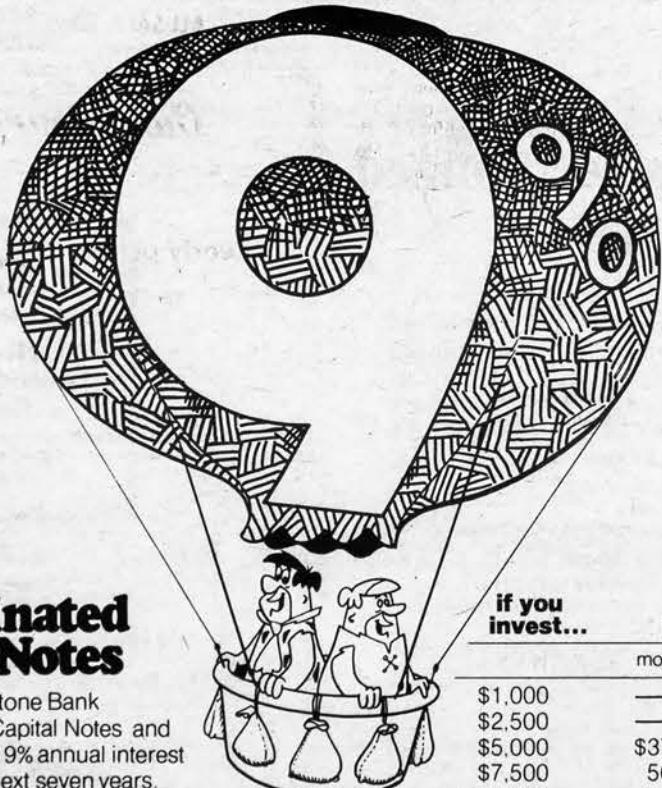

He also said the Israelis might try to reach the Moslem holy cities of Mecca and Medina in Saudi Arabia to use them for bargaining over Jerusalem. Arab oil fields in Saudi Arabia and Kuwait might also be a target, he said.

Any such attacks, which would have to pass through Jordan, would be met with "a quick, firm and strong retaliation" by the Jordanian armed forces, the King said.

ATTEMPT COMPULSION

TEL AVIV: Egypt's warning on terms for renewal of the mandate of the United Nations force was seen here as an attempt to compel Israel to accept Egypt's terms for a disengagement agreement. There was no immediate official reaction in Jerusalem, but it was recalled that Premier Rabin said recently that Israel would not negotiate under the pressure of deadlines such as the expiration of the mandate for the United Nations Emergency Force. Israel sent a message to Secretary General Waldheim proposing a six-month extension of the mandate.

By Robert E. Starr

In a No Trump contract especially, Declarers always are aware of possible ducking plays or usually the opening leader is leading from his long suit trying to establish tricks. The same might be true for the Defenders in certain cases but, unfortunately too often they are not alert to their problem and thus allow a contract to be made even though they had made the killing lead. Today's hand is a fine example of how the leader failed to follow through and let the Declarer not only make his game but with overtricks. He should have set the hand.

South was Dealer, all vulnerable, with this bidding:

2♦	P	3NT	End

The bidding was very normal, North having made his mind up after he heard South open that he was going to be in game whether in Spades or No Trump depending on whether or not his partner had four Spades. He found out he didn't when he used the Stayman Two Club Convention. As the cards happen to be, four Spades can always be made no matter what the defenders do whereas three No Trump can be set. However, no pair played the hand in Spades and almost every Declarer made his contract.

West, for lack of anything better, despite having no entry to cash his long suit after getting them established, nevertheless led a small Diamond. Every East won with his King and returned his 10 covered by South with either of his two honors. Here is the key to the whole defense. I followed this hand around the room and watched as every West but one couldn't resist winning that trick with his Ace and now the Defense was hopeless. West did play a third Diamond which did set up the rest of them but all that did was give the Declarer an anxious moment when he knocked out the Heart Ace.

Before the contract could be made, at least one Heart had to be cashed for all Declarer could count for sure were eight, four Spades, three Clubs and the Diamond now taken. If West had that Ace it would be too bad, he would win it and take his Diamonds but if East had it that was a different story. He had no more Diamonds to lead back. If Declarer had tried to cash his four Clubs hoping they would break and provide the ninth trick right there, as some did, East would now cash his good Club and hold Declarer to nine tricks but if the Heart Ace were dislodged first, ten tricks would be cashed for an overtrick.

Regardless, the contract would be made. But watch what happens if West realizes the situation and does not play his Ace at trick two. South will make his Diamond trick then but he is entitled to one trick in that suit anyhow. But now when he tries to get his Heart tricks, East will win the Ace and still have a Diamond which he will play and West will cash his three others. If the fourth Club can be cashed too, that will be gravy for the Defense. West, with no entries, should do this. With the Heart Ace, nothing matters.

Moral: Defenders should duck for the same reason as Declarers do, to maintain communication.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

DAVID R. SARGENT

Dividend Reinvestment: Painless & Practical

Q: What do you think about United Telecommunications (NYSE)? Do they offer a dividend reinvestment plan? If so, would you recommend that I enter such a plan since there are no broker's fees involved? E.M.

A: United Telecommunications operates the nation's third largest phone system, extending over sections of 21 states. Aided by lower borrowing costs, rate relief and the recent pickup in service area growth, 1975 results should reach another new high of about $1.70 a share. Also, dividends will likely be boosted for the 17th consecutive year and may again be wholly non-taxable as income. A new dividend reinvestment plan has been approved by the company. Since this program will be administered by the company, shareholders will be able to acquire new shares without paying any fees or commissions. I would certainly recommend taking advantage of this program.

Q: Is it possible to trace down a corporation one has not heard from in 21 years? I purchased stock in a company named Texas & Louisiana Oil & Gas, formed in 1953 and incorporated in Delaware. J.C.

A: Yes, it is possible to determine what has happened to a company over the years — in fact, you have several options. First, you should write to the Secretary of State of Delaware to ascertain whether or not the company has forfeited its charter and if so, in what year. If it has, then you need go no farther since you have established that the stock is valueless. You are allowed to claim the loss for income tax purposes in the year the stock becomes worthless. An amended return may be filed for seven years after the fact.

Another source of information on defunct and obsolete securities is R.M. Smythe & Company, 170 Broadway, New York, New York 10038. This firm specializes in tracing and appraising securities of old or defunct companies. There is, of course, a small fee for this service. ## Manischewitz Sets Product Price Cuts

The B. Manischewitz Company has announced a reduction in price on a variety of their matzo products.

These reductions were made possible by the recent drop in the cost of raw materials, particularly on flour, and Manischewitz is passing this saving on to the consumer.

The products covered by the reductions, which range approximately from 7 to 10%, include Matzos, Matzo Thins, Thin Salted Matzos, Thin Tea Matzos, Egg 'n' Onion Matzo, American Matzo, Veggie-Matzo and Honey and Spice Matzo.

Marilyn W. Friedman and Elizabeth A. Sepe were recently named officers of the Old Stone Bank, it has been announced by Old Stone president Robert G. Stevens.

KIBBUTZIM

CAMP PENDLETON, CALIFORNIA: The former Vice Premier of South Vietnam, Nguyen Ky, said that he intends to found a collective farming settlement in Texas, modeled after the Israeli kibbutzim, for 1000 Vietnamese refugees. He declared . . . that those who fled from Vietnam will be much happier as farmers than as city dwellers. Ky is among those refugees temporarily quartered at a military base in California. He further asserted that the Vietnamese refugees will not want to adopt the hectic lifestyle of the Americans and will be much happier in collective settlements, where life is more tranquil. Ky also said that he had only ten dollars to his name. However, his wife, who is now in Washington, is said to possess between twenty to thirty thousand dollars.

a $5,000 New York City General Obligation bond due in 1986 and carrying a 3.75% interest rate. What risk is involved in owning these bonds?

A: The creation in June of the Municipal Assistance Corporation, an instrumentality of the state, has improved the outlook for holders of the various NYC bonds. The corporation was formed to assist the city in meeting the expenses and debt service on its obligations. Although the A rating on New York City general obligations was temporarily suspended by Standard & Poor's, prior to the creation of "Big Mac," Moody's maintained its A rating. Both services have accorded an A to the $1 billion serial bond offering by the Municipal Assistance Corporation. This was the largest municipal offering ever floated and it will be followed up by another $2 billion in bonds. As confidence in the city's ability to meet its obligations is restored, your bond should move up from its deeply depressed level.

Q: We are 63 and 59 years old and have accumulated $40,000 toward retirement. Would we be better off in time certificates or with stocks? You have mentioned Abbott Laboratories (NYSE). Does this pay quarterly dividends? What percent does a broker charge? We would hate to make a mistake and lose our savings. M.K.

A: At this juncture with a few years to go toward retirement, I would advise putting a portion of your funds in common stocks and Abbott Labs is an excellent choice as a starter. The company has an JERUSALEM: Striking workers of the Elat-Ashkelon oil pipeline company clashed with police in Ashkelon on precipitating a general strike at both ends of the pipeline. The strikers accused the police of firing on workers during a bizarre boat-ramming incident in Ashkelon harbor. Police said they fired into the air to warn off strikers who they claimed were trying to sink a police boat. The management of the pipeline company announced the suspension of all operations until tempers are calmer.

News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

KICK-BOXING: The definition in the dictionary for sportsmanship reads: "Skill in or devotion to sports, especially conduct becoming to a sportsman, involving honest rivalry and graceful acceptance of results." And so, what has become of sportsmanship? A good question when we read and hear of a court case concerning an injury in a hockey game and when we see that fighting has become more than an isolated incident in baseball. Graceful acceptance of results, eh? Sportsmanship? Bah! And now we come to "kick-boxing" as seen recently on television.

WHAT'S THE POINT? Are the games becoming drab without some sort of physical belligerency, mayhem? True magazine features a story on "America's Dirtiest Fighter" and it refers to James "Jimmy John" Johnson of the US Navy, from Pascagoula, Mississippi, who is heavyweight champion in Japanese Kick-Boxing. It's an ugly game with rules (or maybe no rules) that allow a wide variety of methods of attack. Punching, kicking, wrestling and either kicking or punching while an opponent is down. It's an interesting story in the August issue.

NOT POPULAR: There was an old game in France involving a kicking contest in a ring similar to a boxing ring. (I'll take a chance on this.) It was called, I think, "Sabot." Contestants were very clever while boxing with their feet, nimbly jumping to land a footblow on an opponent's chin but not being allowed to use their hands. (If anyone knows about it, I'd be glad to learn.) The game never became too popular. But this kick-boxing! The magazine story vividly describes Johnson's championship fight with Tenshin Saito. A sample: "Saito bulls in, grapples with Johnson, tries to throw him down." "Johnson tries a head-on kick but Saito lashes back with his left foot. The American tries a high left kick but misses and crashes to the canvas and Saito swarms in to 'knee' the champion while he is down." "Saito with a flurry of kicks, most of which lash the champion's legs raising ugly red welts." And, "Saito, his mouth a bloody mess . . . catches the champion on the ear with an elbow . . . Johnson's ear begins to bleed . . . he reels back and snaps a left kick to Saito's groin." Had enough?

WHAT ARE WE COMING TO? Karate! Jiu Jitsu! How is all this going to affect a growing generation? Will it be safe to walk on any street if such contests are glorified? Must we have fights and efforts at injuring a contestant in any game? Tim O'Neil, the great baseball man, always preached and practiced, "Win if you can, lose if you must, but keep smiling and be a good sportsman at all times regardless of the score in a game." If there must be fighting and the inflicting of personal injury in a sport, what is the purpose of it all? The fields of sport are supposed to be fields of friendly strife, teaching lessons that can be applied in the more serious game of life itself. It's something to think about, this trend toward violence.

I WONDER? How would "The Greatest," Muhammad Ali, fare in a kick-boxing contest? And how would Champion Bruno Sammartino of the wrestling world compete with "Uncle Sam's Dirtiest Fighter," as True Magazine calls James "Jimmy John" Johnson? Would Sammartino grab Jimmy John by the leg, after an attempted kick, and toss him over his shoulder? Would he get a

The Working Woman In Israel

You meet the working woman on your way to Israel — stewardesses aboard planes and on the ground (the supervisor in the airport's control tower is also likely to be a woman). Often, a policewoman will be the one to stamp your passport, and a pert young woman will greet you at the reception desk of your hotel.

Women are to be found in the swiftly growing electronics plants at the assembly lines and in foremen's positions. In the laboratories they work alongside the men, constructing modern computers or working in the pure sciences.

In the planning and construction office they fill almost every rank and post — draftswomen, architects and engineers in charge of building bridges, intricate intersections and major structures.

Israel is very proud of its exporting branches, and much of the work in this field is being done by women. They are the most dexterous in packing orange crates or strawberry baskets, and they are most expeditious in packaging colorful flowers to meet the fastidious demands of the European customers, and they take part in growing them.

Many women are working in the diamond industry — recently even in the internationally known Diamond Exchange — in textiles and fashions women are to be found on every level and in every position, as designers of haute couture, models, knitters and weavers, and at the assembly line in scores of textile factories.

The involvement of the Israeli woman in the work scene is the result of many years of arduous struggle. Throughout the years, the struggle has gone on for the right of the Israeli woman of equal work and pay on the one hand and, on the other, for recognition of the circumstances which distinguish the woman who works outside her home and still has to fulfill the functions of wife, mother and homemaker.

Sen. Perry Warns United Nations

WASHINGTON: Senator Charles H. Percy has warned the Arab nations if they attempt to suspend Israel from the United Nations General Assembly they would "fracture the chances for peace in the Middle East."

Percy, addressing a dinner sponsored by the United Nations Association, stated that "the one great danger that hangs like a black cloud over the UN is an anticipation that the Third World nations, having suspended South Africa last year from participation in the 29th General Assembly, will move in the 30th to suspend Israel."

He predicted, however, that if the Arab nations oppose the attempt the Third World nations will not move to suspend Israel. Percy asserted that the "sheer hostility" involved in the suspension of Israel "would make it virtually impossible for the Israeli government to make these adjustments of policy which peace requires."

CROPS DAMAGED

BEERSHEBA: A severe hamsin that hit the Negev resulted in serious damage to the crops estimated at millions of pounds.

Mrs. Nathan I. Shapiro

Miss Barbara Joan Buckler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Buckler of 87 Paine Avenue, Cranston, became the bride of Nathan Irving Shapiro, son of Sidney Shapiro of 29 Annual Drive, Cranston, on Sunday, July 20 at Temple Beth Torah. Rabbi Jacob Handler, Cantor Karl Kritz and Cantor Jack Smith officiated at the 6 p.m. ceremony which was followed by a reception at the temple.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white silk organza gown styled with a high lace neckline, embroidered bishop sleeves and an empire waist. The bodice and Watteau train were applied in reembroidered Alencon lace and pearl clusters. Her fingertip silk illusion veil fell from a matching Camelot cap. She carried a bouquet of white gardenias with yellow Sweetheart roses.

Miss Patti Nulman, maid of honor, was dressed in a pale yellow semi-halter gown fashioned with a long sleeved fishnet jacket and a dirndl waist. She carried a bouquet of Belinda roses and baby's breath and wore a matching picture hat. Bridesmaids were Elaine Shapiro, sister-in-law of the bridegroom; Miss Marlene Greenberg and Miss Beverly Lazaroff. Their gowns were similar to that of the maid of honor but in mint green.

Steven Shapiro served as best man for his brother. Ushers were Bruce Buckler, brother of the bride; Joseph Shapiro, brother of the bridegroom, and Steven Brown.

Following a wedding trip to California and Hawaii, the couple will live in Cranston.

Mrs. Alan G. Cole

The wedding of Harriet Charlene Hanzel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hanzel of Providence, to Alan Gordon Cole of Providence, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Cole of Old Westbury, New York, took place on Saturday, July 19, at Temple Emanu-El. Rabbi Joel H. Zaiman and Cantor Ivan E. Perlman officiated at the 9:15 p.m. candlelight ceremony. A reception in the temple followed.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white silk organza with Venice and Cluny lace and an attached chapel train with a flounced edge. An open Camelot cap held her tiered cathedral veil edged in matching lace. She carried a Colonial bouquet of white roses and daisies.

Miss Barbara Hanzel served as maid of honor for her sister. She was dressed in an apricot floral print halter dress with matching jacket. She carried a Colonial bouquet. Miss Stephanie Cole, sister of the bridegroom, who was the bridesmaid, wore a yellow floral print halter dress with matching jacket and also carried a Colonial bouquet.

Michael Patt was best man and Melvin Hanzel was the usher.

Following a wedding trip to San Francisco, the couple will reside in Providence.

Expects W. Germany To Sign Agreement

GENEVA: Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the Memorial Foundation for Jewish Culture, told the organization's board of trustees holding its annual meeting here that he expected the West German government to sign an agreement for a final monetary settlement of claims arising out of the Nazi era some time in October.

He said the agreement, which had been negotiated and shaped over a number of months, would come into force in April, 1976.

Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, and the government as a whole, including the two major political parties in West Germany, were in favor of the agreement, Dr. Goldmann reported. The new body which will handle the indemnification claims' would eventually have 12 representatives on the Jewish side and eight representatives on the German side, not necessarily all Germans.

Sharp Differences Between Mea Shearim, Israeli-Arab Ideas

JERUSALEM: Sharp differences in the daily life-style and outlook between Israeli-Arab youth and the younger generation of ultra-Orthodox Jews in Jerusalem's Mea Shearim quarter were reported here by Prof. Rita Simon, visiting professor at the Hebrew University who is conducting a research project on social change.

Prof. Simon, on leave from the University of Illinois, found, for one thing that young Israeli Arabs, while retaining their nationalistic values admire and try to emulate Israeli culture. But the Mea Shearim Jews abhor that culture as the root of all evil. Prof. Simon's findings were based on a study of 150 families from both communities conducted in 1970-71.

She observed that among the Arabs, the present generation has virtually accepted the fact that their children would not dress and live as they did. In Mea Shearim, however, there is great agreement between the generations on questions of life-style and the younger generation, in fact, is critical of their parents for insufficient vigilance in passing on their traditional moral and social values.

Prof. Simon's study showed that Mea Shearim girls will marry young and become housewives. Arab girls, on the other hand, hope to complete high school at least and to work outside of their homes for a time. Arab mothers would like to see their daughters have large families — six or more offspring, but the Arab girls want at most no more than 2 or 3 children, Prof. Simon found.

The Arabs were much more exposed to the local news media than the ultra-Orthodox Jews. Arabs watch television programs, mainly from the neighboring Arab countries and divide their radio

In contrast, television is forbidden to the Mea Shearim Jews. They read newspapers, but mainly the religious press and most of them do not listen to the Israeli radio. Most of the women who expressed an interest in the news media, read Yiddish newspapers and listen to Yiddish radio programs. Very few Mea Shearim women read or listen to Hebrew.

Mr. Weiss was graduated from Yeshiva Mercaz Hatorah in Montreal. He received his BSC in statistics from Sir George Williams University where he was the recipient of the Mathematics Medal awarded to the highest standing graduating student in mathematics. # Israeli Government Circles Upset By Ford's Reaction To Leak In News

JERUSALEM: Government circles have been clearly shaken by President Ford's angry reaction to a New York Times story from Jerusalem detailing what purported to be Israel's latest territorial offers to Egypt for a second-stage interim settlement.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said that Israel disapproved of "leaks" of secret negotiations no less strongly than the US and agreed with President Ford that the Times story contained inaccuracies. It should not be viewed as reflecting the Israeli proposals submitted to Egypt through the good offices of the United States, the spokesman said. But the severity of Ford's admonition worried Israeli officials.

The President's statement denouncing the leak was read by State Department spokesman Robert Anderson who made it clear that the President was not criticizing the Times when he declared that the US "will not get into the business of competitive leaks of confidential diplomatic exchanges." Times Jerusalem correspondent Terence Smith attributed his information to Israeli government sources.

Ford's strong reaction surprised many observers here because the Smith story added little to what has already been reported here and in Washington on the progress of the negotiations. Concern was expressed that the episode could lead to a new period of tension between Israel and the US which abated after Premier Yitzhak Rabin's meetings with Ford in Washington earlier this month.

Some analysts suggested a deeper motivation for Ford's reaction to the Times story than Presidential pique over leaks of confidential information. According to these sources, the President's statement marked the beginning of a new effort by Washington to pressure Israel into softening its terms. This theory assumes that Egypt's reply to the latest Israeli proposals did not seem promising to Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and that the Secretary believes a further softening of Israel's stand will be necessary if an interim settlement with Cairo is to be obtained.

The Foreign Ministry spokesman noted pointedly that leaks are not a one-way affair. His statement that Israel strongly disapproved of leaks whatever their source was taken as an oblique hint by the Israeli government that it too has been upset and incensed in the past by Washington's penchant for feeding selected information to selected newsmen, often as a means of exerting subtle pressure on

What Is The Reason?*RABBI YAACOV UVSITZKY

Why must the wedding ring be a plain gold band without precious stones?

Because the precious stones might mislead the bride with regard to the actual value of the ring. A ring accepted under a mistaken impression would invalidate the legal "sanctification" for which the ring was intended, so that the bride under the circumstances would really not be legally married.

Why is the wedding ring placed on the forefinger of the bride's right hand?

It is placed on the index finger that points easily so she can display it for the two witnesses to see, as legal evidence of matrimony. The bridegroom then declares: "Behold thou art consecrated to me with the ring according to the Law of Moses and Israel."

Why does the bridegroom break a glass at the end of the wedding ceremony?

The reason is that we want to call to mind the incompleteness of all rejoicing as long as the temple in Jerusalem remains in ruins. It is written "Serve the L-rd with fear and rejoice with trembling" (Psalm 2:11). Rejoicing should always be tempered with awe and trembling.

Announcement
In Rumania To Aid
Jewish Emigration

JERUSALEM: Chief Rabbi Moses Rosen of Rumania disclosed recently that an announcement was read in all synagogues in Rumania advising Jews who want to leave for Israel to register their names with the community offices. He said the announcement was not specifically linked to any move by the Rumanian government but indicated that it was made with the government's knowledge. He said its purpose was to inform the Jewish communal authorities of the correct situation as to aliyah desires among the community.

Rabbi Rosen also said he was authorized to cite a "most senior Rumanian government official" to the effect that "all Jews who wish to leave for Israel under the ongoing family re-unification program will be permitted to do so."

The Rumanian Chief Rabbi, who arrived here on a brief visit, told the JTA that he had found a "common language" in his talks with top Israeli government and Jewish Agency officials on the problems of his community. "There are no differences between us...We want the same thing...We reached the same conclusions," Rabbi Rosen said of his talks with Jewish Agency Executive chairman Pinhas Sapir, Agency director general Moshe Rivlin and his meeting with Foreign Minister Yigal Allon.

ASKS FOR BIDS

TEL AVIV: The Israel Electric Corporation asked three American companies to submit bids for building the country's first nuclear power station. The 600-megawatt plant will use enriched uranium from the United States and will not need the "Heavy" water required at most nuclear installations, a spokesman said. It was estimated it would cost about $460-million to build. No site has yet been chosen.

The three United States companies were the Westinghouse Electric Corporation, the General Electric Company and the Babcock & Wilcox Company.

Inflation on the rise again. Food prices especially may never be lower than they are right now! Stocking up on some food supplies would be a smart investment. But be sure they have long storage life.

Such supplies are available — will keep for many years. Both nutritious and delicious. And cost only about 40 cents a meal.

Have just heard about a system for trading commodities that purports to have never had a losing trade . . . 75 straight trades and every one a winner . . .

Seems unbelievable. System sells for $35 — I just sent for it. Will see how good it really is as soon as it arrives and report to you in full about it next column.

Speaking of investing, certain postage stamps have been increasing in value year after year. And more and more people are investing in them as their potential for continued appreciation becomes known.

As a result, prices for old rare stamps have been bid up sharply and are only available at very high prices. However, there are many recent issues which haven't been bid up much yet that have excellent appreciation potential ahead of them. For example, stamps depicting our early triumphs in space — a 1971 issue and a 1969 issue showing our astronauts on the moon. Both of these are good bets to appreciate rapidly in value in the days ahead.

If you are interested in this field and would like to know more about it and its appreciation potential, write me for free report "What's Ahead for Stamps," P.O. Box 2065, Dept. S., Providence, Rhode Island 02905. Please enclose folded #10 stamped, self-addressed envelope.

That, my friends, is it for now.
