

NAMED CHAIRMAN: Lester A. Macktez has been appointed chairman of the Woonsocket area division of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island campaign.

Mr. Macktez is on the board of governors of the B'nai B'rith Supreme Lodge International; vice chairman of the International B'nai B'rith Youth Commission; immediate past president of District #1, B'nai B'rith; a member of the board of directors of Congregation B'nai Israel in Woonsocket, and has been a member of the board of directors of the JFRI for several years.

The Woonsocket campaign will be kicked off at a major event which will take place on Sunday evening, November 3, at Congregation B'nai Israel in Woonsocket.

Palestinians Hail UN Vote

BEIRUT, Lebanon, Palestinians were jubilant this week over the General Assembly's invitation to the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The Arab press in Lebanon, Syria and Egypt hailed the vote as historic and said it showed the isolation of Israel in her refusal to recognize the organization as the representative of the Palestinian people.

For the organization and its chairman, Yasir Arafat, the resolution adopted by the General Assembly fulfills a major objective of the Palestinian resistance, which is international recognition.

Mr. Arafat, one of the founders of Al Fatah, a guerrilla organization, in 1965, and chairman of the Palestinian Liberation Organization since 1969, will probably go to New York to address the General Assembly.

Before that, Mr. Arafat is due to take part in the meeting of Arab chiefs of state in Rabat, Morocco, starting October 26. His organization is expected to obtain Arab recognition as the sole representative of the Palestinian people in any Middle East Peace negotiation.

King Hussein of Jordan, who is also scheduled to go to Rabat, has not recognized the right of the organization to represent Palestinians in Jordan or on the occupied West Bank.

But the other Arab countries have recognized its right to establish Palestinian authority over any areas of the Jordan's West Bank and the Gaza Strip that Israel may relinquish in a Middle East settlement.

To Install Ralph Semonoff As President Of JF&CS

Ralph P. Semonoff, a Providence attorney who has long been active in community affairs, heads the slate of officers to be installed at the 45th annual meeting of the Jewish Family & Children's Service on Monday, October 21, at 8 p.m. at the Temple Emanu-El meeting house.

Irving Kronenberg, executive director of the Jewish Home for the Aged, will speak on "Geriatric Day Care — A New Joint Venture." The Home in conjunction with the Family & Children's Service conducts a day care program for elderly persons in the community.

Other officers who will be installed are Mrs. Walter J. Nelson, vice president; George A. Levine, treasurer; Mrs. Max Winograd, secretary, and Norman G. Ordener, legal counsel.

Rabbi Leslie Y. Gutterman of Temple Beth El is chairman of the annual meeting and will be installing officer. Dr. Mayer Levitt is chairman of the nominating committee. Alvin W. Pansey, retiring president, will be honored at the meeting.

Hospitality chairmen are Mrs. Marvyn Woronov, Mrs. Melvin Alperin and Mrs. Harris Rosen.

PLAN FOR EVENT: Plans were completed for the Linen and Equipment Event of the Ladies' Association, Jewish Home for the Aged, at a meeting held recently at the home of Mrs. Jacob Katz, chairman. Mrs. Joseph Katz is cochairman of this event which will be held on Wednesday, November 6, at the Temple Emanu-El meeting house at 1 p.m. Following a coffee hour, a fashion show will be presented. Shown above at the meeting are, left to right, Mrs. George Ludman, Mrs. Meyer Bedrick, Mrs. Jacob Katz, Mrs. Joseph Katz and Mrs. Arthur Rosen.

Israel Against UN Decision

TEL AVIV: Israel denounced this week as illegal the decision of the United Nations General Assembly to invite the Palestine Liberation Organization to participate in debate on the issue of Palestine.

A statement by the Foreign Ministry said the resolution, which was adopted by a vote of 105 to 4, with 20 abstentions, "will not be binding on Israel in any way."

The Foreign Ministry also called in ambassadors of Governments that voted in the affirmative and expressed Israel's displeasure. Israeli ambassadors in those capitals were likewise instructed to lodge protests.

Approximately 50 of the 105 nations that voted for the resolution maintain diplomatic relations with Israel.

The Foreign Ministry's statement said the General Assembly's resolution was "diametrically opposed to the United Nations Charter in view of the declared aims" of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The statement said the aims, as expressed in the Palestine national covenant, "categorically deny Israel the right to exist" and declare an intention "to destroy a member of the United Nations by armed force."

The Foreign Ministry said the organization headed by Yasir Arafat was not a liberation movement at all but the umbrella organization of terrorist groups.

Israel Optimistic On New Round Of Talks

JERUSALEM: After nearly six hours of closed-door talks with Secretary of State Kissinger, senior Israeli officials said this week that they thought there was a "good chance" that a new round of negotiations between Israel and Egypt would get under way after the Arab summit conference later this month.

The officials added, however, that a "major conceptual gap" separated the opening Israeli and Egyptian positions and that the negotiations, if they begin, are likely to prove more difficult than any of the interim pacts achieved so far.

After a private breakfast with the Israeli Premier, Yitzhak Rabin, and a working session at the Premier's residence Mr. Kissinger and his party left for Saudi Arabia, the next stop on his Middle Eastern tour.

In the talks Israeli officials said, Mr. Kissinger summarized the views he had heard during the last three days in Egypt, Syria and Jordan.

'Reasonably Optimistic'

"He sounded reasonably optimistic about the chances of getting talks started," an Israeli Minister said "but it is obvious that everything will have to wait until we see the results of the summit conference."

Arab heads of government are scheduled to assemble in the Moroccan capital, Rabat, on Oct. 26 for four days of talks that both American and Israeli officials expect to be crucial for the immediate future of the Middle East.

The Arab leaders are expected to hammer out a common policy on future negotiations with Israel, the role of Jordan in representing the Palestinians and the status of the Palestine Liberation Organization. In addition, far-reaching decisions may be reached on the future use of oil as a political weapon and on relations between the Arab world and the West, particularly the United States.

Because of the importance of the Rabat conference, Israeli officials said it is unlikely that even the timing and format of future Arab-Israeli negotiations can be agreed upon before it. With this in mind, they said, Mr. Kissinger neither offered nor sought any specified proposals on when, where or at what level the next round of talks might be held. Nor was there any discussion of the substantive issues at stake.

Differences Emerge

Major differences between the Israeli and Egyptian positions on the next round have already emerged, however. Israel has stated publicly that she will insist on "significant and tangible" political concessions from Egypt before she will agree to any further withdrawal from occupied Sinai.

Egypt, on the other hand, has reportedly refused to consider making political concessions in exchange for anything less than a total Israeli withdrawal from all the Egyptian territory occupied in the 1967 war.

Egypt reportedly is willing to reach another interim military agreement with Israel, but not the sort of far-reaching political compromise that Israeli leaders insist much characterize the next phase.

It is this "conceptual gap," as Israeli officials described it today, that separates the two sides even before agreement is reached on the technical details of the negotiations.

American officials traveling with Mr. Kissinger also said that they saw little prospect of the Egyptian President, Anwar el-Sadat, agreeing to the declaration of nonbelligerency called for by Premier Yitzhak Rabin of Israel in recent weeks.

Kissinger Criticized In Political Cartoons

JERUSALEM: A new, conspicuously critical view of Secretary of State Kissinger and the role he is playing in the diplomacy of the Middle East came to the surface in Israel during his visit here.

In political cartoons and commentaries in the Hebrew press, he was frequently depicted as a smiling but slippery operator who has been sacrificing Israel's interests in pursuit of his own policy of reconciliation with the Arab states.

A typical cartoon, drawn by the popular cartoonist Dosh in Maariv, the mass-circulation afternoon newspaper, depicted Mr. Kissinger arriving at the airport with a large number of empty suitcases. "They're empty," he says with a cheerful grin to the Israeli Foreign Minister, Yigal Allon. "I brought them to take something away."

The cartoon reflected the widespread conviction here that the next round of Arab-Israeli negotiations that Mr. Kissinger is attempting to get started will inevitably require more Israeli withdrawals in exchange for vague and inconsequential political concessions from the Arab states.

In addition to the press criticism, Mr. Kissinger was confronted during his visit here by some of the largest protest demonstrations seen in Jerusalem. A crowd estimated at 8,000 marched outside the office of Premier Yitzhak Rabin chanting,

"Kissinger, go home!" One placard read: "Burn oil, not Jews."

Most of the demonstrators were supporters of the rightwing National Religious party who had been frustrated in attempts last week to establish unauthorized new settlements in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan. Their complaints were thus not directed solely at Mr. Kissinger but also at Premier Rabin's Government. Nonetheless, they reflected the dismay among some segments of the population here with the current role being played by Secretary Kissinger.

All this is in sharp contrast to Mr. Kissinger's six previous visits here, when he received an unflinching warm reception from the Israeli public and press.

The Secretary is not without his supporters, however. Commentators such as Yoel Marcus of Haaretz have spoken out in his defense in recent columns. Uri Paz, writing in the Sunday edition of Yediot Aharonot, contended that "Dr. Kissinger represents our best chance at the moment for a tolerable existence in the future."

This sentiment is echoed by most of the Government officials who have participated in the talks with Mr. Kissinger. They seem less in awe of him as a world figure now, but they still regard him as the best possible mediator Israel could have under the circumstances.

MRS. SAMUEL NARVA
Funeral services for Reva Narva, 84, of Rockville, Maryland, a retired Outlet Company saleswoman, who died October 7, were held October 10 at the Sugarman Memorial Chapel. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

The widow of Samuel Narva, she was born in Boston, Massachusetts, a daughter of the late Louis and Ida Resnick. She had lived in Providence for 45 years until moving to Maryland in 1970. She had worked for the Outlet Company of Providence for 15 years until her retirement in 1950. She was a member of Temple Beth Israel and its Sisterhood, the Jewish Home for the Aged, The Miriam Hospital Ladies' Association, the Providence Chapter of Hadassah, and the Pioneer Women.

She is survived by two sons, Sydney Narva of Newtown Square, Pennsylvania, and Dr. Marshall Narva of Rockville; a sister, Miss Rozamond Resnick of Holyoke, Massachusetts, and five grandchildren.

MAX L. GRANT
Funeral services for Max L. Grant, 90 Hazard Avenue, who died October 11, were held Sunday at Temple Beth El. Burial was in Sons of Israel and David Cemetery.

A millionaire industrialist and philanthropist, Mr. Grant, 85, had worked daily at his office at 204 Westminster Mall, until he became ill about six months ago.

The South Providence native, who started out at 10 writing advertising jingles for his mother's millinery store and distributing them door to door, wound up as scion of a vast financial empire that enabled him to announce plans two years ago to give away $2.5 million.

Even in his 80s, Mr. Grant was still writing love poems to his wife, Miriam (Gardner) Grant, and funding anti-war and peace research.

Mr. Grant, who invented the fare collection meter used by transit companies around the world, was given the Joseph Dressler Memorial Award in 1972 as Jewish Man of the Year.

He was a member of virtually every Jewish organization in the state but also cut across religious and ethnic lines in his activity and his philanthropy.

The $2.5 million gifts announced in 1972 included $100,000 awards each to the General Jewish Committee, Catholic Charities and the United Fund of Southeastern New England.

The day he graduated from Classical High School, his uncle died, and young Max took over his relative's jewelry business. The next year he visited the Crompton Company and was soon associated with its booming production of velvets, plushes, corduroys and velveteens.

When he first started at Brown University, Mr. Grant envisioned becoming a lawyer. But his mushrooming financial success sidetracked that ambition. Eventually he took over Grant Money Meters, which became universally known. He also had real estate holdings throughout the country.

Mr. Grant who had a winter home in Palm Beach, Florida, often spoke in homilies and enjoyed quoting himself on an enormous range of subjects, from world travel to cooperation between people.

He was one of the first cochairmen of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. He was president of a variety of businesses, including Grant Supply Company, Central Real Estate Corporation and Elastic Knitted Wire Company.

He was president of The Miriam Hospital for 20 years, first president of the Jewish Community Center, national vice president of the Joint Defense Appeal and former director of the Providence Community Fund, the Legal Aid Society, the Council of Social Agencies, R.I. Blue Cross and Osteopathic Hospital, which is on the site of Mr. Grant's former Cranston home. He donated the site to the hospital.

He was a director of Jewish Family Welfare, the Jewish Home for the Aged, B'nai B'rith and the Ledgemont Country Club and was an early supporter of Israel and helped organize the Zionist movement in Rhode Island. He was born on April 28, 1889, in Providence, the son of the late Louis M. and Mary D. Grant. He is survived by two children, Gardner L. Grant of Scarsdale, New York, and Mrs. Alfred H. Joslin of Bristol, wife of the Rhode Island Supreme Court justice; a sister, Mrs. Charles Brown of Providence, and four grandchildren.

SADIE ROSENTHAL
Funeral services for Sadie Rosenthal, 79, of Cherry Hill, New Jersey, formerly of Providence, who died Sunday, were held Tuesday in Cherry Hill. Burial on Wednesday in Lincoln Park Cemetery was preceded by a service.

Mrs. Rosenthal had retired after 35 years as a medical assistant in a Providence physician's office.

She was born May 15, 1895, in Providence, a daughter of the late Samuel and Anna Lubner. She moved to Cherry Hill in 1968.

Mrs. Rosenthal is survived by a son, Melvin Rosenthal, and a daughter, Selma Rosenthal, both of Cherry Hill, a sister, Rose Segiel of Miami Beach, Florida, and nine grandchildren.

Unveiling Notice
The unveiling of a monument in memory of the late LOUIS LOVITT will take place on Sunday, October 20, at 11 a.m. in Lincoln Park Cemetery. Relatives and friends are invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Meyer

In a single ring ceremony on Saturday, September 28, Miss Marie Ann Miner of Brandon, Vermont, became the bride of Robert Bruce Meyer of Providence, at Texas Falls in Green Mountain National Forest, Hancock, Vermont. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Miner of Brandon, Vermont, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Meyer of Chace Avenue.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a soft white knit gown trimmed with lace. Her bridal bouquet and headdress were of pink sweetheart roses and white carnations.

The bride's sister, Miss Marsha Miner, served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Sandra Miller and Dale Gardner.

Allen C. Ross, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man. Eugene Beaudry and James Miner, brother of the bride, were ushers.

The bride is a graduate of Otter Valley High School and Springfield College in Springfield, Massachusetts, where she majored in physical education. Mr. Meyer is a graduate of Hope High School. He attended R.I. Trade School and Roger Williams Junior College where he studied psychology.

Following a wedding trip to Montreal, Canada, the couple will reside in Brandon.

EXPRESSING OUR INTERDEPENDENCE

By JACOB NEUSNER
Brown University

(This is the second part of a three part essay. Professor Neusner is editor of understanding Jewish Theology and Understanding Rabbinic Judaism (Kiv) and other books.) * * *

It is unfair to the Israelis and to their use of language, merely to point out they are using language in a way different from its original intent. That is a trivial criticism, I think, if the language has gained for itself new and suggestive meanings. If the circle-metaphor is useful to us, as much as to them, then the expressions of that metaphor through inherited, but revised, symbols hardly are to be limited by historical or theological considerations.

The heart of the problem of the circle-metaphor is that the person who uses it always, invariably, and everywhere conceives of himself or herself to stand at the center of the circle. How can it be otherwise? Our perception of reality begins with ourselves. Our perspective is governed by our location in time and space, our position in society, and our place in the life-cycle. It is normal and natural for each one to see himself or herself as the beginning and the center (to mix metaphors), and it is no less normal and natural for each group to do the same. Why should Israelis not see themselves at the center of world Jewry? On the other hand, I think it equally obvious for us to do the same.

Before us, nonetheless, are those proof-texts which tell us Jerusalem is the center of the world, Zion is the highest mountain in the world, the Land of Israel is the belly-button of the world, and the like. I can think of more mindless "explanation" than to hold that these sayings derive from people who lived in the city or the Land. It is almost certainly false, for they were held to be true descriptions of reality by people who did not. But I can think of nothing

Disagrees With Neusner's Views On Federation, Israel

(I would like to include the following letter as a response to Professor Jacob Neusner's remarks of two weeks ago.) * * *

The old year has passed, a new year has come but from your article a few weeks ago it seems that you have returned to the "old grind" with your sharp criticism against Federation, and Israel thrown in for good measure. Speaking for my wife and myself I have lived and worked in this community for more than 12 years. It is my feeling and personal observation that those who represent the Jewish Federation here in RI are entitled to some recognition (when they get it) for their concern, loyalty, and charitableness in fulfilling their awesome responsibilities especially in these times to Klal Yisroel. Is it a crime for people who serve in positions of leadership to covet a little Koved for their labors on occasion. That is a universal and human trait. A friend of mine remarked to me with regard to this issue, that Judaism is not above exploiting man's vanity if it is for the benefit of mankind. Perhaps the phrase Uv'chen Ten, Kavod Adonai L'amecha, T'hila L'reyacha is not inappropriate and pertinent. We ask God to give glory and praise to his people, and so can we do as well.

But it is to your remarks on Israel that I wish to take firm issue with you. You stated "Everyone knows and takes for granted that the Israelis can come only with demands, take, and do not give. They insist they are better Jews because they are there and we are here." Who is this "Everyone" who knows and that takes what for granted? Just what are Israel's demands whence they take and do not give? I would submit that what Israelis are taking is the full brunt of all-out attack on its sheer physical survival, not to mention the economic crunch they are asked to bear. Israel is our "front line" as well most of us in the "rear" know. If God forbid Israel is overrun, we Jews here will be in full retreat — on the run and our whole 'raison d'etre' in question. What good our prayers, our pride, our faith in a redeeming God? I would state it in these terms, YES! Israel is certainly taking as stated above, and they are also giving! They are sending us teachers and shlichim to fulfill the promise Ki Mitzyon Teytze Torah. If Israel is 'taking' (in your terms) they are taking all the moral and financial support a beleaguered, besieged nation can get from their Mishpacha all over the world. If not from us — whom? And is 'taking' arms and loans from Uncle Sam for purposes of conquest or sheer survival? Who is 'taking' in Russian Jews by the thousands — and at what price to their economy?

Finally, with regard to their feelings of superiority and insensitivity to Klal Yisroel as you stated, surely there is some lack of objectivity in such a bland and negative assertion on your part. Moshe Ben Ezra said, "The critic must be like a grinding stone — to grind and not to cut." I am sorry to say that your remarks about Israelis whom I'm proud to identify with, did cut, draw blood and caused much Agmat Nefesh to my wife, myself, and our friends.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

The Three Rabbis Of Emanu-El

By BERYL SEGAL

Fifty years ago Temple Emanu-El was the only non-Orthodox Synagogue on the North End and what was called at that time the East Side. There were the three giant Orthodox shulens, each having a Rabbi of its own. The most prestigious, because it was the oldest in Providence, was the Bnai Zion on Orms Street. A little above, and the one still in the same place as it was 50 years ago, was the Bnai Yaacov shul. And third, the nearest to Emanu-El, was the Ahavas Sholom on Howell Street, a street entirely obliterated because of redevelopment. Ahavas Sholom, with its wrought iron fence around it, was the shul where the compact Jewish neighborhood on the East Side worshipped. It extended from North Main Street and Benefit Street to Camp and even to Hope Street. There were two other shulens, smaller ones to be sure; none of them in existence now, except in name. Beth David, a little shul by the railroad tracks, and the Kovner shul near Bnai Zion. Both of them were also Orthodox, of course.

In the midst of this Orthodox stronghold spread the news that a new synagogue was being built on the East Side, and that it was going to be Conservative. Many people asked one another, "What is a Conservative synagogue?" There was a Conservative synagogue, Temple Beth Israel, on Niagara Street, but that was in South Providence and most people considered it "almost" Orthodox.

Then, one day in 1925, Temple Emanu-El stood on a grassy hill, on Morris Avenue and Sessions Street. It stood facing these streets, white and simple, and sparkling in the sun. It was graceful and had a reverential dignity. That was before Emanu-El grew and outgrew its original edifice and acquired an annex toward Morris Avenue, and an addition toward Taft Avenue. I always see it the way I saw it for the first time. The additions fall away, and the Temple stands alone, with its graceful sweep of stairways, its columns at the top of the stairs and its arching dome glistening in the sun.

The first Temple on the East Side was also the most beautiful. Temple Emanu-El was fortunate in many ways.

The secretaries of the Temple, whoever they may be, in the past and at present, accurately recorded all the events that took place at Emanu-El from the first day when it was noted that a copper tree, hundreds of years old, had to be cut down so that the temple could be built, to the present when Emanu-El is preparing to celebrate the 50th year of its existence. For the historian, this is a great asset. Not many shulens in town have such records.

The Rabbis of the Temple came here to stay. Rabbi Israel M. Goldman, the first Rabbi, served from 1925 to 1948. He was an energetic young man, just out of the Jewish Theological Seminary, with ideas and grand designs for the Temple. He was in love with Emanu-El. It is said of him, that he would suddenly stop to look at the edifice and exclaim to his visitor: "Isn't the temple beautiful," and then continue with his talk. He was called to Baltimore where he serves as Rabbi of Chisuk Amunoh congregation to this day. Older, but just as energetic as he was at Emanu-El.

Rabbi Goldman was not only among the founders, but also the fonder and initiator of the many sided facets that make Temple Emanu-El distinct in Providence. As early as 1928 Temple Emanu-El had already established the Institute of Adult Education, an Institute that is a tradition with Emanu-El to this day, year after year. Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen who is now rabbi emeritus of Temple Emanu-El left the imprint of his personality on the temple. He is a quiet, unassuming man, but he can be firm when it is necessary. While the first Rabbi was impetuous, always on the go, Emanu-El's second Rabbi is serene. He had a calming influence on the temple and brought stability to the congregation.

Temple Emanu-El, following the leadership of the Rabbi, came to be known as the mainstay of all the communal institutions in Providence. There was a time when the Bonds for Israel committee went begging for a chairman and found none in the city. Then the community was astonished and electrified as well when it was announced that Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen would head the Bond drive. The Bonds for Israel committee has no trouble finding a chairman for its annual drive any more.

Rabbi Bohnen is a Noah Labriyoth. He is agreeable to every person. He once told me that when he was an Associate Rabbi elsewhere, he had learned how NOT to treat an Associate Rabbi. When Rabbi Bohnen had the opportunity to take in another Rabbi at Emanu-El, he remembered the lesson he had learned and treated Rabbi Joel H. Zaiman as an equal.

Rabbi Joel H. Zaiman, who is to be installed this week as the third Rabbi of Temple Emanu-El, is the innovator among his predecessors. He has introduced or revived many customs in the synagogue, and he is emphasizing study, learning, Yiddishkeit among the members of the Congregation.

Watch Rabbi Zaiman of Temple Emanu-El. He has great ideas and ideals, and he does not lack determination to develop them.

The first Rabbi of Temple Emanu-El was like a river at the beginning of its course. It is turbulent, rumbling over rocks and trunks of trees, rushing to its destination.

Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen can be likened to the placid part of the river. It runs unhurried within steady channels, now and then expanding, in depth and width, but running on with serenity toward a goal.

Both Rabbi Goldman and Rabbi Bohnen were given the honor to head the Rabbinical Assembly of the Conservative Synagogues. The fonder as well as the stabilizer were equally rewarded.

What of Rabbi Zaiman? Each of the Rabbis who preceded him served about 25 years at Temple Emanu-El. By the end of this century the time will come for Rabbi Zaiman to retire. Many of the readers of this account and evaluation of the Rabbis will be around at that time. Let them write about the achievements of Rabbi Joel H. Zaiman, the Innovator and the Conservator of Jewish ideals among the members of Temple Emanu-El.

Trial, Sentence Of Ben-Josef Expected To Draw Protests

LONDON: Protests are expected to develop here against the reported conviction and sentencing of Solomon Ben-Josef, a 54-year-old Bulgarian Jewish chemical engineer who was given 15 years at hard labor after a secret trial in Sofia last week.

According to a terse announcement from the Bulgarian capital, Ben-Josef was convicted for "economic crimes." But observers believe that he is the victim of trumped up charges simply because he is a Jew.

There are strong similarities with the recent case of Dr. Heinrich Spetter, a prominent Bulgarian Jewish statistician who was sentenced to death on treason charges at a secret trial several months ago but was freed after an international outcry of protest. Spetter is now in Israel.

Like Spetter, Ben-Josef is a member of the Communist Party. He was employed by the directorate for the development of the chemical industry.

The directorate has had numerous visitors from Arab countries recently and the presence of Ben-Josef was obviously an embarrassment. This may have been an element in bringing him to trial, circles here believe.

Ben-Josef's mother and sister live in Israel. His wife and two sons live in Sofia. Ben-Josef spent a sabbatical leave in Paris in 1970-71 where he was in touch with an international firm interested in the construction of chemical plants.

He also visited the Krupp factories in Essen, West Germany.

His foreign business contacts may have been used to discredit him much as foreign contacts were used to discredit Spetter, the circles said.

Israel Is Kicked Out Of Asia Football Federation

TEL AVIV: A resolution which has the effect of permanently barring Israel from competition in the Asian Football (Soccer) Association was adopted in Teheran through the machinations of the Arab and Communist countries.

The vote was 17-13, with six abstentions, less than the two-thirds majority which the Association's rules require for the ouster of a member.

Formosa also barred, and the Cambodian delegate, furious over the decision, predicted that his nation would be next.

Israel condemned the Asian Football Federation for deciding to oust it from its ranks.

The Arab-Communist bloc, which only an hour before the vote was strengthened by the admittance of the People's Republic of China and North Korea, managed to circumvent the rules.

A resolution introduced by Kuwait did not call for the ouster of Israel. But it stated that Israel can never serve as host to Asian Football Association tournaments and will never be invited to any.

Menachem Heller, chairman of Israel's Football Association and one of the founders of the Asian Association, said he would appeal the decision to the International Football Association on grounds that the Asian Association exceeded its power.

"It is a sad day for sports. I came here in the name of sport, not as a political person," Heller said.

Some Rhode Islanders sleep better than others.

Some Rhode Islanders can sleep right through the month of October. Because they have this worry-free protection against medical bills from Blue Cross and Blue Shield. The Semi-Private Plan for hospital bills, Plan 100 for doctor bills, and Major Medical for practically everything else.

They know that if someone in their family gets sick, there'll be enough to worry about without worrying about how to pay the medical bills.

If you don't have a Blue Cross and Blue Shield card, fill out the coupon today. You're sitting directly under a potential avalanche of medical bills.

But even if you do have a card, you should still check it to see if you're fully protected. Just look at your membership card. If there's an "SP", it means you don't have to worry about hospital bills. If there's a "U", it means you don't have to worry about doctor bills. And if there's a number in the Major Medical box, you're home free. That means you have Major Medical: you're covered for almost anything else that could happen to you.

If your card is missing one of these symbols, check the last box in the coupon, and we'll tell you how to cover yourself right.

So here it is. Our worry-free protection plan.

1. The Blue Cross Semi-Private Plan. This gives you a semi-private room in a hospital for up to 120 days. It fully covers room and board, general and intensive nursing care, and the use of operating rooms, x-rays, lab tests, physical therapy, oxygen, prescribed drugs, blood plasma and all the other medical services provided by a hospital except whole blood. On the family plan you are fully covered for in-hospital maternity care after you pay the first $100.

This same plan also covers accidents, simple surgery and x-rays on an outpatient basis.

2. Blue Shield Plan 100. It covers in full just about all the doctor bills you're ever likely to get — for surgery, anesthesia, x-rays, emergency services, and tests of all kinds in or out of the hospital. On the family plan, doctor bills for maternity care are fully covered after you pay the first $50. The full-payment feature covers charges by participating physicians. And, 9 out of 10 doctors in Rhode Island participate.

3. Major Medical. Major Medical covers almost everything the other plans don't — the treatment of catastrophic or chronic illness, prescription drugs, doctors home and office visits, all sorts of diagnostic tests, anesthesia, emergency ambulance service, wheelchairs, extended hospital care, and a lot more.

After you pay the first $100 of these expenses every year, we pay you 80% of all other covered charges. Major Medical can pay up to $25,000 per person, on top of the other benefits you receive from Blue Cross and Blue Shield.

Special Plans. There are special plans for people over 65 and the disabled. Plan 65 starts where Medicare leaves off. And the Disability Program fills important gaps in Medicare benefits for the disabled.

Join Now! If you want the most comprehensive coverage money can buy, October is the month to get it. October is the only time of the year direct-pay members can join or improve their coverage.

Send Coupon For Application. This advertisement is designed to give you a summary of the comprehensive benefits offered. It is not the contract. To receive complete details, including a listing of exclusions and limitations of coverage, send us this coupon.

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

By playing normally or automatically, today's hand cannot be made. An alert Declarer who has listened to the bidding should be aware that leading up to his King in the hopes that the Ace is onside is truly wishful thinking for his left hand opponent has told him exactly where that Ace has to be. So, following along those lines the only way to make this hand is to force that same opponent to lead that suit at the proper time by carefully manipulating his cards. This hand can be made and there is nothing the Defenders can do about it. Almost everyone failed to solve the problem, however. They should have tried at least.

East was dealer, no one vulnerable with this bidding:

E	S	W	N
	4♥	End

You may wonder about North's bid after West had doubled. It sounds very strong but really isn't. The only strong bid after a Double by the opponent to your right is redouble. Anything else shows less than 10 points. Two Hearts would be even weaker so North's bid showed just about what he had; good Trump support and a bit less than 10 points. South had a fine hand, however, so continued on to game feeling he would have a good chance to make it.

West had an automatic lead with the three card Diamond sequence and I then watched as several Declarers bumped their heads against a wall. They won the first trick, drew Trumps, played their three high Clubs discarding either a Diamond or a Spade and then hopefully led a Spade toward their King. When the Ace took it and they lost four tricks they felt they had been victims of poor luck but they should have tried to guide their destiny a bit better for West's Double had certainly pinpointed just where all the high cards were, there were only 14 points out altogether and he had to have at least 13 of them to make that Takeout Double. So where must that Ace be?

This is what South should have done: Knowing that his only chance is to force a favorable lead from West he has to start arranging this. He has to get as many cards away from West as possible and then hope that at the right time East will be unable to obtain the lead and West will have to give up a trick. The best way is to duck the first trick and then win the continuation being even more optimistic if West happens to play the Club Jack at trick two. If East has that card he will use it as his entry to defeat Declarer.

Now the Trumps but not all three rounds for that would take Dummy's last one ruining the plan for if there are no Trumps in Dummy and West wins the lead he will be able to easily get out of his hand with another Club forcing Declarer to ruff and he is right back where he was before. This plan will not work if West is the opponent with the third Trump but he isn't and it is the only hope. Now the Clubs are played discarding a Spade on the third and the stage is set.

At this point all West is left with are Spades and Diamonds which is just how you wanted it. Now play your last Diamond and see what a fix West is in. Remember you still have a Trump in Dummy and Spades, Dummy's Clubs and Diamonds are gone. West is on lead and is absolutely helpless. If he leads his Diamond you ruff in Dummy and discard a losing Spade. If he leads a Spade it will make your King good. He will most likely try the latter for he can watch everyone follow on three rounds of Diamonds and knows a Diamond will provide a sluff and ruff whereas although he feels Declarer probably has the Spade King he is not positive and that would at least give him a chance. Regardless, whatever he does gives you the contract and anyone who played the hand that way deserves to make it. As mentioned above, if West does happen to be the one with the extra Trump your plan will fail but it certainly is the best chance.

Moral: Even non-mathematicians can add and subtract well enough to figure where certain points are when they are given the right figures to use. Just learn to use them.

Hello Again!

News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

THEORY THWARTED: One of the greatest, and probably the greatest, baseball managers of all time said, "When the leadoff batter strikes out, his team generally wins the game." It was John McGraw, the only one of his kind in baseball history, who said that. And I have found that it does work out according to Mr. McGraw's theory. But it didn't in the first two games of this year's World Series when the Dodgers lost the first one and the A's the second game.

ODD REMARK: When an announcer tried to explain that Reggie Jackson had lost a ball in the sun and didn't have the slightest idea of where it was. And then commented that the players were more accustomed to playing under lights than in sunshine. The first night game in a World Series was played in 1971 in Pittsburgh with Baltimore playing the Pirates. More than 51,000 fans comprised the biggest crowd in Pittsburgh annals and NBC reported that about 63,000,000 individual viewers watched the game on an estimated 21,000,000 TV sets.

SPECULATION: Away back in 1893, according to Irving A. Lerner in his book, "Baseball, A Diamond in the Rough," a sportswriter named O.P. Caylor speculated in writing, "Should the time ever come when by some system of illumination baseball could be played as well at night as in the daytime the possibility of the game's earnings could hardly be estimated . . ."

IN PROVIDENCE: Baseball under lights was introduced at Hendricken Field for a Providence College game when a portable, gasoline-driven generator provided power for temporary floodlights. And while on the PC subject, the Friars baseball team was at one time, just as popular as the basketball shooters. We hear of great strides being taken in baseball in Japan and, lest we forget, the Friars once entertained a Japanese baseball team at Hendricken

Field. (Was you there, Sharlie?)

NEW: There may be truth in the saying that there is nothing new under the sun but there was something new under lights when in 1879 the Fort Wayne team played Quincy, Illinois, at Fort Wayne at night. That, according to Mr. Lerner's very informative book, Floodlight baseball became a fixture in the major leagues in 1935 when Larry MacPhail trail blazed the way at Cincinnati on May 24. The Reds beat the Phillies 2 to 1 before 20,222 chilly fans. Owners were skeptical, not aware of the pot of gold that would shine under the lights.

MAGNETIC: Probably the biggest boxing gate attracted in Rhode Island was $19,058 at RI Auditorium back in 1952 and the magnet of attraction was a bout between Ralph Zannelli and Kid Gavilan. And now Joe Celletti has added an exhibition bout between that same Zannelli and Dick French to the program at Rhodes-on-the-Pawtuxet tonight (Friday). It is sponsored by Cranston FOP for charities. Willie Pep and Paddy Reed will box on the same program that will include appearances by numerous luminaries of the past along with lively settos by Junior Olympic boys who are looking to the future. As a special attraction, Mr. Celletti will present a wrestling match that will feature "Beautiful Bobby." "He's coming out of retirement just for this show," says Joe, who adds, "My grandson, Bobby Abbott, will box on the card." The program appears to be an exciting one and the public is invited to help the charitable cause. Boxing coming back? Sam Silverman will present a live show at Four Seasons in Walpole before showing the televised Ali-Foreman bout on October 29.

BLACK BEARS: Of course, they represent U. of Maine. The Black Bear Club will meet tonight at

"T.K." Club in Pawtucket and the big moment will come when a check is presented to the "Marion Farrington Merritt Scholarship Fund." Mrs. Merritt, wife of Carlton W. "Speed" Merritt, established the fund. Both are deceased. Among those present will be Sam Sezak, retired member of the Maine football coaching staff. Frank Pritchard, very capable Naval PR man, will be a guest and also the famed Curly Oden, one of the greatest of all gridiron luminaries at Brown and also in the pro ranks.

WHO? Who was one of the greatest competitors in Track and Field events in RI and elsewhere, too? And she appears ready for competition now! Answer coming next week. — CARRY ON!

SINGLES DANCE

B'nai Zion Connecticut Singles Chapter No. 189 will hold their first anniversary dance at Temple B'nai Shalom, 1809 Whitney Avenue, Hamden, Connecticut, on Saturday, October 26, at 7 p.m. The group is for singles 25 years of age and over.

Music will be provided by Charlie Regan's orchestra. There will be singles attending from Great Neck, Long Island, New York; Boston, Massachusetts; Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and Washington, D.C. B'nai Zion chapters.

Further information may be obtained by calling Rita at 232-1474 (West Hartford) or Barbara at 624-4676 (New Haven).

Mrs. Steven Demby

Deborah Miriam Kortick of 34 Home Street, West Warwick, became the bride of Steven Demby of 130 Fordson Avenue, Cranston during services held at Temple Emanu-El on Sunday, October 13. Rabbi Joel H. Zaiman and Cantor Ivan E. Perlman officiated at the ceremony which was followed by a reception in the temple.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Harry Kortick of West Warwick and the late Mr. Kortick. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Demby of Hillside Avenue, New Rochelle, New York.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Irving Lisnoff, and escorted by Mrs. Sanford Trachtenberg as matron of honor, the bride wore a marscane jersey gown designed with an empire waist embellished with seed pearls and a keyhole neckline. The gown had long tapered sleeves and a Watteau train. She carried a cascade of white roses.

The matron of honor wore a yellow knit halter styled gown with a matching hooded jacket, and carried a cascade of yellow roses.

Bridesmaids, Miss Michele Little, Mrs. Neil Arbor and Miss Sandra Demby, sister of the bridegroom, wore identical gowns to that of the matron of honor in burnt orange and carried cascades of orange roses.

Joel Demby served as best man for his brother. Ushers were Sanford Trachtenberg, and Arnold and Gerald Kortick, brothers of the bride. The couple will reside in Cranston.

I believe government is the business of all people, not just a select few. Therefore, I advocate an open government where-by any information that any person seeks is readily available.

As a candidate for city council, I advocate the following:

- 1) SEALED CITY BIDS WHICH ARE PRESENTED AND OPENED IN PUBLIC
- 2) WRITTEN RULES REGARDING THE DISPOSITION OF CITY OWNED LAND
- 3) RE-ESTABLISHMENT OF AN ELECTED SCHOOL COMMITTEE ON A NON-PARTISAN BASIS
- 4) STRONG LAWS PROHIBITING AIR AND WATER POLLUTION. OUR QUALITY OF LIFE DEPENDS ON THE QUALITY OF OUR ENVIRONMENT

Destroy Cemetery

ELIZABETH, N.J.: A leading American Orthodox rabbi has reported that, at the request of the head of the Moscow Jewish community, the Soviet Ministry of Cults had sent a special commission to Radin, near Vilna, to investigate a report that the ancient Jewish cemetery there had been levelled. The Radin cemetery included the grave of the Chofetz Chaim, regarded as the greatest Talmudic scholar of modern times, who died in 1933.

Rabbi Pinhas Teitz, a former member of the Presidium of the Union of Orthodox Rabbis of the United States and Canada, said he had learned about a letter from a Moscow source reporting a visit to the Radin cemetery recently and a discovery that a tractor had devastated the cemetery, leaving broken pieces of headstones and monuments strewn over the cemetery area. According to the letter, the grave of the Chofetz Chaim had disappeared.

Pigskin Used In Israel For Burned War Victims

JERUSALEM: Israeli rabbis have approved the use of dried pig skin in grafts for persons who have suffered severe burns. The relatively new method, developed in the United States, has been used successfully on Israeli soldiers badly burned during the Yom Kippur War.

The rabbis who were consulted said the method was acceptable because it involved "pikuah nefesh" — the principle that religious law may be violated to save a human life.

Collapse Of Austrian Bank Threatens Nazi-Hunting Agency

VIENNA: The Jewish Documentation Center, which Simon Wisenthal runs here for tracing Nazi criminals, lost the equivalent of nine months operating expenses through the collapse last month of a small Austrian bank.

Mr. Wisenthal, who is 65 years old, said that he had considered closing the operation which he started after he was released from the Mauthausen death camp in 1945.

But, he said in a telephone interview, friends in Germany helped bridge the immediate financial gap, and a small fund-raising campaign has begun with letters to former supporters of the center in the United States.

Mr. Wisenthal declined to say exactly how much of the center's money was involved in the failure of the Allgemeine Wirtschaftsbank. But he said that the amount could run his office for nine months and that he had toured the United States last year to raise money for just such a financial cushion.

A Small Operation

The documentation center has

Hotel Gets Top Award From Israel Ministry

HERZLIYA-ON-SEA, ISRAEL: The 200-room Daniel Tower Hotel, which opened here last fall, has been awarded a five-star classification from the Ministry of Tourism — the top category in Israel's hotel rating system.

The 19-story hotel is located on the beach and commands a sweeping view of the Mediterranean. All rooms have sea views, radio and telephone. TV sets are available on request.

The Daniel Tower has a choice of meeting rooms accommodating 20 to 1,000 people. The latest audio-visual equipment is also available for congress or convention needs.

Amenities include a pool, equipped gym, sauna, cocktail lounge and a shopping arcade with a duty-free shop, beauty parlor and barber shop.

There are two restaurants and a coffee shop. The cuisine features traditional Jewish, international and Israeli fare. The kitchens are kosher.

The hotel is a 15-minute drive from downtown Tel Aviv and is served by a shuttle-bus service between Herzliya-on-Sea and Tel Aviv every 20 minutes.

Rates including breakfast range from $16 to $22, single, and from $25 to $31 for doubles.

RISD LECTURE

William H. Whyte will give the second annual Carolyn B. Haffner Visiting Fellow lecture on Landscape Design and Environmental Planning at the Rhode Island School of Design on Wednesday, October 30, at 3 p.m. for students and faculty and at 8 p.m. for the general public.

Mr. Whyte's lecture will be a report and illustration of some aspects of his research on the ways people use city space.

always been a small operation built around Mr. Wisenthal. It is housed in a shabby office in an apartment building in Vienna's garment district.

Mr. Wisenthal occupies a room that is slightly larger than a walk-in closet. Two or three secretaries and one or two student helpers share a larger room. Most space is taken up by files and a copying machine.

The center was closed in 1954, Mr. Wisenthal said, after interest in his efforts declined because there seemed to be no more Nazis worth tracking. Then, working in his spare time for five years, he helped to trace Adolph Eichmann, who had headed the Gestapo's Jewish section and who was executed by Israel in 1962, and the center was reactivated.

The center is credited with having traced hundreds of former Nazis, although Mr. Wisenthal says that he does not keep count.

Most of Its Money Lost

Speaking of the funds it lost, Mr. Wisenthal said that the center had kept all but a small part of its money in the Austrian bank since first opening an account there with less than $20.

"They were always very good to us," he said. "They gave us higher than normal conversion rates on foreign checks and advanced us credit beyond what we had in our account."

The bank, which listed assets in 1973 equivalent to $50-million, asked the Austrian Government on September 2 for a six-month moratorium on payment of debts. Business was suspended, and investigators began looking at bank records.

Austria's Finance Minister, Hannes Androsch, said that the bank's collapse was "an isolated case," and that the Government guaranteed payment in full of all small savings accounts — estimated at $10.8-million to some 1,400 account holders.

Only $2,500 Guaranteed

But Mr. Wisenthal said that guarantee was only for savings accounts of less than $2,500.

"We need more than that in a month," he added.

Mr. Wisenthal said that he had written to Government officials, pointing out that his center is a nonprofit organization and asking that its account also be guaranteed. He said that he had received no answer but that informal inquiries had made it clear to him that "no special exception will be made for us."

He noted that the center's expenses have been hit hard by inflation. "Salaries, telephone bills, travel, even information costs more," he said. "The people who know something want to be paid more for it."

His main fund-raising is by lecture tour, and his best sources have been in the Netherlands and the United States.

Fund-Raising Difficult

Mr. Wisenthal says that most of his support came from people who also support Israel, and that this made his fund-raising more difficult these days.

Financial support of Israel has a higher priority for most of his contributors, he says, "is as it should be." He accepts no donation from Israel, he says.

Mr. Wisenthal said that most of the center's funds in the sixties came from the Netherlands, which he said, is the only country besides the United States to allow tax deductions for such donations.

He said the Dutch once raised $100,000 in one day in 1967 after the center helped trace the former commandant of the Treblinka concentration camp, Franz Paul Stangl.

More recently, he said, American donors have underwritten most of the center's expenses, and an office was opened in New York City at 1370 Broadway to coordinate fundraising.

PROFESSOR NEUSNER

less likely to yield an accurate interpretation of these and similar statements than to view them literally. For if we agree that Jerusalem is the center in a literal and fundamentalist sense, then we also have to agree that Zion is the highest mountain. Having climbed it, I can testify it is not. Fundamentalist interpretation of sacred texts unfortunately can be tested in empirical ways. It would carry us far afield to analyze what is actually meant about sacred reality when holy books claim that Jerusalem — meaning, clearly, the Temple and its cult — is the center of the world. The point is clear. Only a naive and purposeless fundamentalism (or deliberate charlatanism) can ask us to take seriously the claim of the circle-metaphor when it is laid before us in language such as this.

I have asked whether the metaphor fits that which it is meant to state in figurative language, and my answer is that it does not fit the reality of people who do not live in the center of that particular circle, because they find themselves in the center of another circle of reality. They naturally perceive their mode of being as central in relationship to themselves. I cannot think of a more obvious observation.

Nonetheless, we have to proceed to the further analysis of the metaphor: its accuracy, its relevance, and its functionality. Let us treat the third most rapidly. If the metaphor does not evoke a common perception of reality and indeed if it obfuscates, then it obviously is not functional. The second flows from what has already been suggested: the metaphor is irrelevant to people who are asked through it to interpret their own being. But what of its accuracy? Is the State of Israel "central," and are we "peripheral?"

Here we have to test the circle-metaphor against the definition supplied by the person who seems to have invented it, Ahad Ha'am. Do the facts before support his claims? It is impossible to argue that he spoke of some distant future, which even now has not been realized, and therefore that we have no right to measure the metaphor against everyday facts. He himself spoke of "what has already been accomplished . . ." and used the present tense. We too have the right to speak of the present. Let us return to his exact language, sentence by sentence, but rapidly. The State of Israel most certainly is the place to which nearly all Jews turn with affection. But does that make it a "national spiritual center of Judaism?" If by Judaism we mean Jewish religion, broadly construed, the answer is by no means clearly in the affirmative. The State is the center of Hebrew language and literature, quite obviously, but its literature cannot be taken for granted as Judaic or even Jewish. Some is, some is not. And that which is not remarkably more evocative of the Jewish condition among our communities than that which is written here. Meyer Levine or Myron Kaufman, let alone Saul Bellows or Philip Roth or Herbert Gold, address themselves in varying but profound ways to the Jewish condition.

What of the State as a center of study and learning? It is pre-eminent in the study of some things, Hebrew language, for one, and archaeology, for another. Yet a center of Jewish learning it is curiously unproductive. When we consider, in particular, the actual achievements of Israeli scholars of Jewish studies who were not born in Europe, as against the actual achievements of American scholars of Jewish studies who were not born in Europe, we have to wonder at the banality and provinciality, the methodological primitivity of the Israelis, from whom we have remarkably little to learn. Indeed, so many significant young American Jewish scholars have been appointed to Israeli universities in the field of Jewish studies that one must wonder, who serves as the 'spiritual center' for whom? I do not think a great many American Jews would concede that the Israeli rabbinate constitutes the "genuine Jewish type." I think the American Jewish type of rabbi would have much to contribute in the Israeli setting, so far as it is similar to ours. I leave it to others to tell us whether Israeli businessmen are the "genuine type" of Jewish businessman. In all, I do not think the facts will allow us to concede the accuracy of the metaphor of "spiritual center" as defined by Ahad Ha'am. But the reason is not the failure of the State of Israel to produce on its own soil important Jewish scholarship or its inability to offer us a viable Jewish lifestyle which can be exported and assimilated into the American Jewish situation. The problem is deeper.

Mrs. Arpad, an experienced interior designer and a member of the National Society of Interior Designers, will present a two-part program entitled "Joyous Walls" How You Can Decorate and Create Them Yourself with Wallcoverings."

The first segment of Mrs. Arpad's program will feature a color slide presentation of decorating and remodeling ideas for every room in the home. The second part of the program will be a demonstration of how-to-hang wallcoverings and will include information on how to measure and order wallcoverings and what equipment is needed. Further information may be obtained by contacting the store where the performance will be held.

Ahad Ha'am thought that the Yishuv had solved "the problem of our national existence." He claimed that "the whole social order bears the Hebrew stamp" and does not exhibit traces of foreign influence. As to that latter claim, it is difficult to see how Israeli everyday culture fails to betray "traces of foreign influence." There is an international lifestyle, characteristic of all modernized societies, including Israel's (both the State of Israel's and the people of Israel's) lifestyle. True the Israelis use Hebrew. But what they say in Hebrew, the society they build in Hebrew, is no less a part of the international mode of life than our own, and I cannot think of anyone who would want it otherwise.

The former claim is at the very center of things, the center of the circle-metaphor: the claim of the centrality of the State and the vision of the spiritual center. Has the State of Israel solved "the problem of our national existence?"

The State of Israel has greatly complicated the problem of our national existence, and it also has solved important problems of national existence. No one can differ with the view that the Jewish people has done what it set out to do in creating a national homeland, and no one can differ with the view that the only way to create that homeland was through making a State. But the State is a this-worldly and historical entity.

Nothing made by mortal man finally solves any problem. It may provisionally solve one problem, but it is apt also to create others. Only if we conceive the State to be the realization of the Messianic dream can we even ask whether it has finally solved "the problem of our national existence." The answer to that (unthinkable) question is self-evidently negative. In that case the presupposition of the question — the Messianic idea — is shown by the facts to be not only false but either silly (to the secular mind) or blasphemous (to the religious one).

It has further to be stressed that the State of Israel is simply irrelevant to important aspects of Jewish existence, has not ing to say about them, whether here or there. When we speak of a State, we address ourselves to a world-historical fact. That part of the existence of each of us which is engaged by the existence of all — the group, the people — indeed is affected by the world-historical fact constituted by the State of Israel.

But history — the events of nations and societies — for most (fortunate) people most of the time is something which happens somewhere else. The perceived reality of life — the intimacies of the here and now — happen outside of history. There is a dimension of human life which endures, come what may. The cycle of life, birth, maturing, the making and raising of children, old age and death, the cycle of time, summer, autumn, winter, spring, the pattern of everyday doings, work and rest, play and sex, the sum and substance of what each of us knows as existence — to these eternities history and world-historical phenomena are simply not pertinent. That aspect of human, therefore of Jewish, existence formed by the enduring realities of daily life is scarcely touched here by what happens there. And I think for the private person in the State itself, the existence of the State, and the nationalism which it expresses hardly encompass all of life, though, in the present difficult circumstance, they impinge upon the private existence of ordinary folk all too much.

FOR ATTORNEY — GENERAL

By JOANNE DREW

SENATOR JULIUS MICHAELSON

ATTORNEY-GENERAL RICHARD ISRAEL

Senator Julius Michaelson, senator for 12 years from the East Side of Providence and past president of the Rhode Island Bar Association, is fighting for consumer protection from "crimes on the street and crimes against the pocketbook."

In his race to unseat Attorney-General Richard Israel, Mr. Michaelson says that, if elected, he would ask that the Consumer Affairs Division be placed under the department of the Attorney-General. It is now an independent state agency, headed by Norma Goldberg.

As a senator, Mr. Michaelson was involved in passing practically all consumer legislation on the books. These include the Truth-in-Lending Law, Deceptive Trade Practices Law, Unit Pricing Law, Labelling Laws, Pricing Laws and Credit Counselling Law.

In an interview last week, Senator Michaelson said he would fight in court for consumer's rights. His campaign slogan is "Michaelson — The Peoples' Lawyer."

Some areas where Senator Michaelson sees a greater need for the Attorney-General's attention are in supermarkets, in stores and in utility outlets. He said, "The consumer is being misled by grocery stores that do not adjust the unit price on food to coincide with the price of the item. The consumer ends up paying more per pound than the unit price reads. This is lying and misleading," he said. Also, not dating grocery items is a violation of the Deceptive Trade Law. "Richard Israel refused to do anything about this," he said. Senator Michaelson also pointed out that during "eight years of Republican Attorneys-General, there has not been one conviction for consumer fraud or any real effort made." The Attorney-General has the right, he said, to call in the supermarkets and have them explain their price changes. Richard Israel has not investigated price changes, he says.

Senator Michaelson also spoke against large markets taking advantage of bulk packaging, where consumers, particularly the elderly, are offered larger quantities of food than they really need. He said, "If an older person wanted to buy one or two potatoes, he couldn't; he'd have to buy five pounds. This creates waste."

One other serious problem for the consumer is what Senator Michaelson called "bait and switch sales." Here a store advertises a certain price markdown, but when the consumer gets to the store he finds that the item has run out. The Senator believes that the stores should let the consumer know if there is a limited amount of a sale item.

Senator Michaelson said he would also fight against the fuel adjustment clause which he says is illegal. As Attorney-General, he would take the electric company to court. "There should be a hearing before any price increase," he said. And, he added, the Rhode Island rates should not be linked to the Arab oil price increase, because "most of our oil comes from Venezuela." Presently in Rhode Island, there is "too much liberal legislation and not enough opposition by the attorney-general to increased rates."

Quoting figures from a newspaper article, Senator Michaelson said the Consumer Affairs Division receives an average of 100 calls a day. Out of 11,068 complaints, 91 resulted in recovery of money.

Senator Michaelson said he would have a full time lawyer in charge of the Consumer Affairs Division and would see to it that every complaint was acted upon.

Active in the Jewish community, Senator Michaelson is on the board of directors of the Jewish Community Relations Council and of Temple Emanu-El. He is also past president and a current board member of the Jewish Community Center. Past chairman of the Israel Bond drive and on the board of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island, he is also on the board of directors of the Jewish Home for the Aged.

Senator Michaelson comes of a long line of rabbis. He is the first generation who has not become a rabbi. His great-uncle was the former chief rabbi of Jerusalem, Rabbi Kuhane, who during the war was also chief rabbi of Warsaw. His father Carl Michaelson (brother of Sam Michaelson of Heller and Michaelson Company) was president of the Hebrew Free Loan Association and one of the founders of the Hebrew school at the Orms Street Synagogue. He was president of the Jewish Workingmen's Beneficial Association, and officer and leader of Congregation Sons of Zion, the oldest synagogue in Providence.

Julius Michaelson regards himself as a Jew, as part of a link in an unbroken chain, that stretches back to the beginning of time. He tells his children they must never do anything to break that chain.

Senator Michaelson has two sons, Mark, 19, a sophomore at Skidmore College, and Jeffrey, 16, a junior at Hope High School. His wife, Rita, is active in the Sisterhood of Temple Emanu-El, and is a member of the National Council of Jewish Women. The former Rita Caslowitz of Woonsocket, she works for the Lippitt Hill Tutorial and the State Commission for Human Rights.

Speaking from his office in the Providence County Courthouse and with the authority of his four years as Attorney-General, Richard Israel reflected on his accomplishments in the area of consumer protection.

He said in an interview last week, "We created consumer protection." What Ralph Nader is to the Federal Government, the Consumer Affairs Council is to Rhode Island, he continued. Under the direction of Sandy Alessandro, the Council made televised appeals to the community to make complaints when confronted by deceptive trade practices. Mr. Israel says he has testimonials from grateful citizens. "Almost everyone calls to thank us for our help."

In a press release, Mr. Israel indicates that he created a Consumer Affairs Unit to assist in the enforcement of law against deceptive trade practices and to aid with consumer education and information. The Unit uses the Attorney-General's power granted to him by the General Laws to obtain voluntary compliance, injunctive relief, prosecution and recovery of money for consumers. Since 1971, the Consumer Affairs Unit has received over 5,000 complaints, caused more than 135 civil investigative demands to be issued, and has been responsible for the recovery of over a quarter million dollars of Rhode Island consumer money.

The Unit was also instrumental in dealing with the increasing gas shortage in this state last winter by conducting hearings with gasoline dealers, distributors and consumers in February of 1974. These hearings resulted in Temporary Emergency Regulations issued by the Attorney-General regulating the amount of gasoline retail dealers could sell to customers, prohibiting discrimination among customers and specifying certain business policies which the dealers were required to abide by during the temporary emergency period. A further result of these hearings was that some gas station operators whose stations were threatened with closing by the major oil companies, were able to keep their stations open.

When calls come in, the Council can recognize a possible deceptive practice, Mr. Israel says, because the National Association of Consumer Affairs warns the attorney-generals to be on the lookout for fraudulent discount coupons, land sales and the like. The Council knows what to look for and where to look, Mr. Israel says.

As far as complaints about price increases or sales tactics, Mr. Israel says, "that's free enterprise." Only the President can put in wage or price controls, because if one state did it, the businesses would move out. He said, "I'd rather have it this way than to have a policy of some countries like Cuba or China. The Attorney-General has no authority to tell a man what to sell or even if he should sell it at all. The only thing the Council is interested in is ending the deceptive measures."

When asked about the claim that unit prices are not kept current with the rising costs of food, he smiled and said, "Yes, they have a terrible time keeping up with it." He attributed the problem to a lack of time and manpower to handle the rapidly increasing prices. However, he said, if more than one price is on an item, the lower price always prevails.

One thing that is a blow to consumers, Mr. Israel says, is the fuel adjustment clause. "No one from the President and members of Congress down has yet discovered a legal response."

Richard Israel says he likes his opponent's, Senator Julius Michaelson's, suggestion of placing the Consumer Council under the department of the Attorney-General and hiring lawyers to direct investigations. He said he would ask Governor Noel to transfer the Council to the Attorney-General's office.

The Attorney-General says he also has a weekly column written by the Council which is available to newspapers, called "Consumers' Corner."

Mr. Israel is actively involved in the Jewish community as a member of the board and former secretary of Congregation B'nai Israel of Woonsocket. He is a member of B'nai B'rith and a donor to the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island and the Israel Bond organization.

He received the City of Hope Award from State of Israel Bonds, presented by the Attorney-General of Israel, on June 14, 1973, for outstanding participation in the Israel Bond program "which is strengthening the economy of the State of Israel as the foundation for the spiritual and cultural rebirth of the Jewish people." He is also a board member of the Jewish Home for the Aged.

Mr. Israel has three children: Susan, now attending the University of Rhode Island; Eric, a student at Classical High School, and Karen, in grade school. He is married to the former Harriet Gladstein.

He and his late wife raised three sons and one daughter, the oldest of whom is the former representative Bernard C. Gladstone, now counsel for the Rhode Island Lottery.

Mr. Gladstone was appointed by the Rhode Island Legislature in 1966 as clerk of committees serving for the last eight years on education, welfare, highway safety and water resources committees.

A past chancellor of the Knights of Pythias, he is presently the treasurer of Temple Beth Shalom, first vice president of the Providence Hebrew Free Loan Association as well as a board member of many other civic organizations.

Defense Spending Highest In Israel And Egypt

LONDON: Israel's and Egypt's military outlays are the highest in the world in relation to their gross national product, according to the "Military Balance, 1974-75," an annual publication of the International Institute of Strategic Studies released here.

The report said Israel's defense budget of $3.53 billion for the fiscal year 1974-75 makes Israel's per capita outlay for weapons the highest in the world and more than four times that of the United States, which is second highest, the report said. Defense expenditures in the Middle East reflect the "very heavy costs" of the Yom Kippur War and the increasing costs of weapons.

Israel's military spending amounts to almost half of its GNP, estimated for 1973 at $8.7 billion. Egypt's military budget of $3.117 billion amounts to almost a third of the Egyptian GNP, estimated at $8.4 billion for 1973. The report said that Saudi Arabia military expenditures have increased 700 percent in the last four years. Saudi Arabia's defense estimates for 1974-75 amount of $1.808 billion.

BAR MITZVAH: David A. Resnick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Resnick of Cranston, became Bar Mitzvah on September 28 at Temple Beth Torah. A reception in his honor followed the services. Paternal grandmother is Mrs. Benjamin Resnick and maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Fishman.

Good news: Walter Sturm, publisher of the Market Timer Commodities Letter has decided he'll personally manage some commodity futures trading accounts. Big news indeed... Sturm has an outstanding record of calling profitable turns in this field! Though past performance can be no guarantee of the future, of course, its the best guide we have. Remember, in this field it's a case of trying to catch the big moves. You need patience and willingness to accept some losses in hopes of latching onto a big winner. With Sturm's record to date, if anyone can do it, likely he can... If you're interested in him managing an account for you, write him at P.O. Box 758, Orange, California 92666. Enclose your phone number and best time to reach you. Plans for Expo Vino (those coming wine and cheese shows I told you about last issue) just finalized! I've been assured that all my readers who wrote them will be receiving details shortly. Incidentally, that supposed substitute for gasoline I told you I had heard about — I've tried to check its merit but with no success. Can not/will not recommend anything or anyone without detailed report I find feasible and references. You should exercise similar caution in your dealings, especially in these crazy times. If it won't check out thoroughly, don't touch it. Coming up next — some valuable samples and services you can get for free... Warning: Don't buy silver or gold coins now! later perhaps, but not now. Now is no time to be holding silver or gold. Will explain next issue. Jewish population and has authored a number of reports on the subject. People rate newspaper advertising more trustworthy than any other medium.
