Bill Hassenfeld Named JJA's Women's Division

Bill Hassenfeld was elected national chairman of the United Jewish Appeal's Women's Division at the annual national conference of the UJA. Held recently at the New York Hilton Hotel with Golda Meir, former Prime Minister of Israel as guest of honor, the conference was attended by more than 3,000 American Jewish leaders to usher in the 1975 UJA campaign. A large delegation from Rhode Island was present to participate in the conference.

"In accepting the chairmanship of the Women's Division, I am only too fully aware of the awesome responsibilities which face me — and which face every committed Jew during this moment in our history," Mrs. Hassenfeld said.

"What is required of us is no less than a total commitment to the principle of Jewish survival. It is a time for the Jewish women in America to realize in full the decisions that must be made and to organize themselves into unprecedented activities. There is a time for action, a time to explore alternatives, and a time to stand as one."

Mrs. Hassenfeld is a past president of the Women's Division of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island and is a member of the board of the United Way in Providence. She is a member of the board of directors of the Providence Chapter of Hadassah and a member of the board of The Miriam Hospital Women's Association.

At present, she is honorary president of the Women's Division of the JFRI and a member of the Medical Resources Committee of Brown University. She is also a member of the board of the League of the Arts Committee of the State of Rhode Island and of the Women's Association Board of the Rhode Island School of Design. Mrs. Hassenfeld has made numerous trips to Israel, one of the most recent being the Prime Minister's Mission in August 1974 and Women's Leadership Mission to Poland, Rumania and Israel in October 1974.

This is the second time that Rhode Island had a national chairman of the UJA Women's Division. Mrs. Albert Pilavin served as

The Educators' Council of the Bureau of Jewish Education sponsors the conference. The program will include a teacher's exhibit, a demonstration lesson with children from the 7th grade of Temple Emanu-El and a workshop session.

Dr. Nulman received his MA degree from Teachers' College, Columbia University and his PhD from the University of Pittsburgh. He has written and lectured on teaching values, programmed instruction and vocational rehabilitation of the mentally retarded.

Says US Threatened To Fly Aid To Egypt

RAMAT GAN, Israel: Moshe Dayan, former Defense Minister, charged that the United States threatened in 1973 to fly supplies to Egyptian troops surrounded in the Suez Canal area if the Israelis refused to allow food and water through their lines.

When the Israelis began to allow supplies through, there was speculation that the United States had told the Israelis they must yield on this point because the Soviet Union was threatening to intervene on behalf of Egypt's beleaguered 3rd Army in the Sinai Peninsula.

After the Egyptian assault across the Suez Canal on October 6, 1973, an Israeli force struck west of the canal and cut off the Army units.

Mr. Dayan's remarks on the war situation were made during a talk with a group of professors at Bar Ilan University here after he had been thwarted by a crowd of demonstrators from delivering a lecture. The demonstrators, who described themselves as parents of Israelis killed during the war last year, accused Mr. Dayan of responsibility for the Israeli attacks at the start of the conflict.

Mr. Dayan left the Israeli Cabinet last April under pressure of similar protests. He remains in Parliament, however.

U.S. Obstruction Charged
In his speech, Mr. Dayan reiterated earlier accusations by some Israelis that the United States had stopped Israel from scoring a complete victory in the war.

"The Americans did not want the Egyptians to surrender," Mr.

Dayan said. "They issued us an ultimatum that if Israel does not permit the 80,000 cut-off force to get supplies from their main forces, they, the Americans, would do it themselves with helicopters."

The Americans did not want to get into a dispute with the Russians and wanted to show the Arabs to what effect the United States could help them. The Americans told us that everyone knew we won the war and that nothing more could be gained by capturing the 3rd Army."

Mr. Dayan said that Israeli policy-workers must keep these events in mind for the future.

He also said that early in 1968, less than a year after the 1967 war, Israel was ready to return all of the Sinai Peninsula to Egypt and the Golan Heights to Syria for a peace treaty with the two countries.

"Israel's readiness to do so was brought to the direct attention of the then Egyptian President, Gamal Abdel Nasser, who rejected it," Mr. Dayan said. "All we asked in return in addition to the peace treaty was that both areas be demilitarized."

AIRCRAFT EXPORTS

TEL AVIV: Israel Aircraft Industries exports to Latin America will reach $50 million this year, the IAI publication revealed here. The items supplied include sophisticated weapons for land, air and naval forces. Also included are Arava and Westwind Executive planes and electronic machinery.

A SETTLEMENT, IF THE ARABS WANT ONE

ANDRE SCEMAMA INTERVIEWS SHIMON PERES

JERUSALEM: In an interview with Le Monde's Andre Scemama last week, Israeli Defence Minister Shimon Peres discussed the military and political future of the Middle East and France's attitude to Israel. Asked whether, like many other Israelis, he thought that in a new confrontation with the Arabs the war would no longer be "conventional" — that is, spare civilian populations — Mr. Peres had this to say:

If there had been any "luxury" wars, then they were a luxury for both sides. It's true we have cities and population concentrations close to the frontiers. But that's also true for the Arabs. Their organization is no less vulnerable than ours. Both sides avoided urban bombing during the last 26 years, mainly because both sides have cities and it was thought better not to get involved in that dangerous game.

The Arabs can presumably make a mistake, considering they have just been equipped with Scud missiles. Why did the Russians send them Scuds? Only the most faithful adepts of Marxism and pacifism probably have the answer to that. The Middle East was armed to the teeth without that. The Scud is a weapon of very limited effectiveness against military objectives. As for the danger it poses to other objectives, that's one of the threats the Arabs have enough reason for not abandoning "luxury" war and for avoiding the "war of cities." Some reasons are well known, others less so, but all of them do exist. QUESTION: Among its other fallout, the October War is said to have stripped the Tsahal (the Israeli army) of its deterrent value in the eyes of the Arabs. Do you think so, and if so, what conclusions do you draw from it?

PERES: You've got to distinguish between what the Arabs say and what they think. If they really thought we had lost our deterrent strength, they would have resumed the war. Don't forget that when it comes to drawing conclusions from a war, there is a big difference between democratic and totalitarian regimes. A democracy wins a war and all the media describe it as a defeat. A war lost by a dictatorship is shown as a victory. The Arabs to this day celebrate as victories the four wars they waged against us.

Q: When you were working with Ben Gurion you were one of the principal architects of the "European orientation" given to Israeli policy so as not to make the country solely dependent on the United States?

PERES: The question is not one of knowing what the relations between Israel and Europe are, but whether Europe is still Europe. Andre Malraux has said that the oil crisis has resulted in Europe's disappearance. Seen from here, Europe frequently looks like a world of scheming rather than of hope.

Q: And France, of which you have long been a friend?

PERES: I have been deeply impressed by the attitude of most Frenchmen, who remain very friendly towards us despite everything. And this, notwithstanding the French Government's official position and the incorrect idea that some sections of the press give. We never asked France to be our exclusive friend, and I believe France is making a mistake by offering the Arabs its exclusive friendship. Le Monde has said that the United Nations' decision to admit the Palestine Liberation Organisation created a situation where there was one state too many in Palestine. I believe that is a very fair observation. In fact, France's voice will be heard if it is the voice of morality and not the expression of an economic option. All the same, as an Israeli, I shall never forget what my country owes France. But as an Israeli, too, I can't turn a blind eye to the French Government's present attitudes.

Q: How do you envisage a settlement with the Arab?

PERES: I think there is one prior condition: the Arabs must want a settlement. It must be remembered that they didn't want one after we withdrew from the Sinai in 1956 and we were no longer in control of the West Bank, the Gaza strip and the eastern half of Jerusalem. Our forces evacuated the Sinai against the mere promise that navigation in the Tiran Strait would not be hindered. Up to this day, I don't understand why Nasser blockaded this strait and decided to go to war. I haven't found any logical explanation for King Hussein's decision to attack us in 1967, when he had been promised the West Bank would be left in his hands.

As for the future, I hope we succeed in coming to some understanding with Egypt. For that there would have to be agreement on three points.

1. Egypt should be guaranteed the free and unhindered use of the Suez Canal for its shipping and Israel should be guaranteed free navigation in the Tiran Strait.

2. The Sinai desert should no longer be a military base which could threaten Israel.

3. Egyptian policies should stop serving the cause of Palestinian extremism.

I believe we can also come to a settlement with Jordan. I haven't the slightest doubt of that. It's more a question of time than principle. The Palestinians can be represented by one of these: King Hussein, the West Bank and Gaza leaders, or the extremists of the Sabra district in Beirut. Of these three choices, we prefer King Hussein. He is in effect the only Arab leader who has seriously considered peace as a real political conception. Moreover,

Award For Translation Of Jewish Classics

NEW YORK: A new National Jewish Book Award — for an English translation of a Jewish classic — has been established by the JWB Jewish Book Council, according to Dr. Eugene B. Borowitz, president of the Council.

The new award, in the amount of $500 and a citation, will be presented in the name of Dr. Jacob Freedman, a rabbi who is the official translator of the works of Israeli writer Avigdor Hameiri.

The prize, for a new translation of a book originally published prior to 1920, will be presented for the first time at the 1975 National Jewish Book Awards ceremony of the JWB Jewish Book Council.

Books to be considered for the award must have been translated into English from Hebrew, Yiddish, Ladino or any other language during the two calendar years preceding presentation of the award. Only residents of the United States and Canada are eligible, and no one translator may win the award more than two times.

MORE AUTOS
TEL AVIV: The 390,000 residents of Tel Aviv 14 years ago possessed some 28,000 automobiles. In 1972, although the population figure was smaller by 28,000, the number of autos soared to 78,000.

Rabbi Samuel Korff Dies In Boston

Funeral services for Rabbi Samuel Samuel I. Korff, 61, a leader in the New England Jewish community, who died December 18 after a short illness, were held the following day at the Associated Synagogue in Boston, Massachusetts.

The husband of Anna Korff of Newton, Massachusetts, he was born in Russia.

A graduate of Yeshiva University of New York City, Rabbi Korff was among the founders of the Associated Synagogues of New England and served as rabbinical administrator until his death.

He was also a driving force behind the Rabbinical Court of Justice (Beth Din) of the Associated Synagogues which received nationwide attention for its activities in such fields as landlord-tenant relationships.

His activities in the field of landlord-tenant relationships was credited with the establishment of the Boston Housing Court.

He also led the Beth Din into other areas not usually associated with rabbinical courts. These included an opinion by the court concerning the circumstances under which conscientious objection was permissible under Jewish law, and health standards in food preparation.

One of his goals was to establish a central body upon which the Jewish community could rely to certify that Jewish dietary laws had been observed in food preparation.

He also organized the certification of kosher caterers in Massachusetts.

In 1947, Mayor James M. Curley appointed Rabbi Korff as the first Jewish chaplain of the Boston Fire Department, a position which he held until his death. During the past several years, he had also served as Jewish chaplain at Deer Island House of Correction.

During his entire career as a rabbi, he led Congregation Kehillath Jacob of Newton, one of the largest Jewish congregations in the Boston area.

Congregation Kehillath Jacob was originally located in Mattapan, Massachusetts, but Rabbi Korff transferred it to Newton when the Jewish population in Mattapan was substantially reduced a few years ago.

At the congregation in Newton, he established the Institute for Religious and Social Studies, which brought together experts in various fields for lectures and discussions.

Besides his wife, he is survived by two sons, four brothers and four sisters. Among his brothers is Rabbi Baruch Korff of Rehoboth, Massachusetts, who has been outspoken in his support of former President Nixon.

Your Money's Worth

By Sylvia Porter

How To Slash Food Waste and Save

If you are among America's tens of millions who eat at least one meal out several days a week, you can slash your waste of food and save significant amounts of money in the coming months of spiraling food prices merely by adopting one simple policy:

Order only what you intend to eat and if you usually leave food on your plate, specify in your order that you want a smaller portion at a reduced price.

If you are among America's millions who own or manage restaurants, cafeterias, any type of eating place in industrial or educational institutions, hotels, offices, etc., you too cut your waste of expensive food and save enormous sums merely by gearing your operations to realistic food consumption patterns:

Tailor your portions to size — small, regular, large; adjust your prices accordingly; offer second portions to customers who ask for them and charge an additional sum for the extra food.

Oversized servings are commonplace in our land. We don't need them. We don't want them. They're actually harmful. And at a time of soaring food costs, worldwide shortages and starvation, the servings are really obscene. By this simple change in our habits, we could save incalculable tons of wasted food and billions of dollars.

A magnificent illustration of what can be accomplished is the "Food Ecology" Project created in the 1972-73 academic year at Michigan State University (MSU), East Lansing — and now spreading to campuses across the land. The details are fascinating.

Appalled by waste at its cafeterias and the skyrocketing costs of food consumed at the 65,000 meals dispensed each day, MSU appointed a committee of food supervisors and students to study what could be done. Its first finding, according to an in-depth study of the project just reported in the 30-year-old privately circulated newsletter, Public Relations News, was that plate waste alone approximated four tons a day!

The committee then developed a program to inform MSU's students of the waste, escalating prices, and the fact that any savings at the cafeterias (run on a non profit basis) would help hold down rates for students' board. On campus publications, especially posters and weekly bulletins issued by individual hall managers, were used; badges were printed and worn by servers, reading, "If you want less, tell me"; awards for fully emptied plates were set up.

After a trial period, a survey disclosed that an important reduction in food waste was being achieved — and at that point, says Public Relations News, local Coca Cola fountain representatives who serve the cafeterias were asked to help.

Coca Cola's response was enthusiastic. Theme posters were designed, featuring 10 key messages, such as "Stop Food Waste," "Complete Your Meal," etc.; food quizzes offered prizes for correct answers on food consumption; counter posters were printed to stress the take only what you'll eat theme; table tents were prepared to promote non waste of butter, milk, or margarine. Coca Cola absorbed the bulk of the expenses.

And the results up to date? Says Robert C. Underwood, residence hall manager at MSU, "Food ecology is booming here and we are receiving inquiries from all over the country." The demand for Coca Cola's kits, including all the materials and weighing 15 pounds, has been so heavy, says Underwood, that it has had to order additional ones.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

The Ramban Hour

By BERYL SEGAL

Every Sabbath, at the noon hour, we gather in the William G. Braude Library of Temple Beth El for an hour of study. We have been doing this for over fifteen years. Jews traditionally sanctify the Sabbath by doing three things: Rest. Prayer. Study. Our group is studying the Humosh with commentaries, primarily the commentary of Rashi, interspersed with other commentators as well.

At the beginning there were four of us: Rabbi Braude, his son Joel, Rabbi Jerome S. Gurland who was associate rabbi of Beth El at that time, and myself. We sat around a table in the Mattie Pincus wing of the library. The table was put in an alcove surrounded by books, placed there for the purpose of study by Mattie Pincus, a faithful servant of the congregation and the first librarian of the temple.

When the group grew in number, we transferred the study hour to the main library. We also changed our format. At the beginning each of us read a sentence of the Torah text and the Rashi commentary, and Rabbi Braude clarified it and added some comment of his own. At that time also we followed the reading of the weekly Sidra of the Torah in the synagogue. But as time went on and the pace of the group could not catch up with the weekly portions of the Torah, we decided to go at our own slow pace of a dozen or less sentences at one sitting. We also decided that Rabbi Braude would be the only reader of the texts of both the Torah and of Rashi, and this is how we have studied for over fifteen years.

We must have repeated the Torah three or four times, and discovered new and exciting nuances in the texts. We all said the traditional Hazak, Hazak, Venishazak, be strong, be strong and let us strengthen each other in the study of the Torah at the end of each of the five books of Moses.

But this year, when we reached the end of the Torah and we read the story of the death of Moses, "and there hath not arisen a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses, whom the Lord knew face to face," we did not start reading the Humosh again at the beginning as is customary among Jews, but turned to the Ramban, or Nachmanides as he is known to the world.

Dr. Solomon Schechter in his essay on Nachmanides writes: "... Nachmanides was a great Talmudist, a great Bible student, a great philosopher, a great controversialist, and perhaps also a great physician; in a word, great in every respect, possessed of all the culture of his age."

And again he writes of Nachmanides: "... I shall mostly confine myself to those features and peculiarities in his career and works which will illustrate Nachmanides, the tender and compassionate, and Nachmanides, who represented Judaism from the side of emotion and feeling..."

This tender, compassionate commentary on the Humosh will occupy the attention of the group. If you are interested, you may join regardless of synagogue affiliation.

Rabbi Moshe ben Nachman, Moses the son of Nachman, also known as Nachmanides, was born in 1195 in Gerona, a town in Spain. He derived his livelihood from the practice of medicine, but he was preoccupied with Talmud, Philosophy, and he studied Scripture as a philosopher sees it.

As was common in those days, Christians often debated with Jews on religious matters. An apostate of Barcelona prevailed upon the King of Aragon to summon Nachmanides to a dispute with him on the evidence from the Talmud on the Messianic claims of Jesus. The dispute was held in the court of the King in the presence of the king's men, as well as representatives of the Church of Spain.

It lasted about five days and, as was to be expected, the apostate won. Rabbi Moshe ben Nachman was banished from Spain and accused of being a blasphemer of the King's religion. After wandering in many countries, Nachmanides finally came to the Land of Israel and settled in Jerusalem.

He was seventy years old at that time.

But at seventy, he began to write his commentary on the Bible, a work which Jews refer to up to this day. The Commentary of the Ramban is, in fact, printed together with the text of the Humosh in the larger editions.

Dr. Schechter remarks in his essay on Nachmanides that in this work "he put down his finest and noblest sentiments."

The description of the Holy Land at that time is contained in a letter to his son. It is a heart-rending account. In the city of Jerusalem Nachmanides found only one Jew, a dyer, despised and persecuted and poor. He writes:

"I am the man who saw affliction. I am banished from my table, far removed from friend and kinsman."

In the midst of writing the commentary on the five books of Moses, Nachmanides found time to establish synagogues and to organize communities, and to serve as Rabbi and teacher to them.

This commentary, the fruit of the last three years of the life of Nachmanides, we will study and meditate on this year. It is translated into English by Rabbi Charles Chavel and published by Shilo Publishing House.

I will confess here that up to now I knew the Ramban only by name. Several times I glanced at the commentary, glanced at it and gave up. One cannot read it by himself. The Ramban needs a commentary on the Ramban. Witness the speed with which we progress through it. We are still at the first two sentences in the Humosh which reads:

"In the beginning God created the Heaven and the Earth. Now the Earth was unformed and void..."

But the commentary of Nachmanides on these few words goes into the philosophy of creation and the mystery of the Creator and will last us for another month's study and reflection.

And to think that millions of Jews found their way through the depths of the Ramban for generations.

INTERVIEW GOLDA MEIR

NEW YORK: Former Premier Golda Meir of Israel, interviewed on the Columbia Broadcasting System show "Face the Nation," shown here assailed as nonsense the proposal by the Egyptian Foreign Minister that Israel hold her population at its present level and halt immigration. "I hope that he hasn't talked this nonsense just to give a sign to Americans that unless something drastic is done against Israel, then there's no peace, no negotiations," Mrs. Meir said.

Perhaps, Start Fund For Salvation Army?

Would Rabbi Korff of Rehoboth, Mass. and his associates be interested to start, along with his various funds, a fund to benefit Israel, Red Cross, or the Salvation Army? I have not read of any results achieved in his attempt to defend the presidency.

I thank God for the American judicial system and the courts that are performing at this time. Most people now have a much clearer picture of the Nixon, Agnew, Dean, Mitchell, Colson, Hunt, etc., setup. There is no need now for anyone to try to coverup the coverup. I can appreciate the thrill many people experience when they handle large sums of money.

HENRY ARBEITMAN
Pawtucket, R.I.

A SETTLEMENT IF THE ARABS WANT ONE

Hussein isn't ready to sell his soul to Moscow, even for arms.

Finally, of all the Arab leaders he is the only one to have really improved the conditions of the people living on the banks of the Jordan. After the 1967 war, we found a frightful social and economic situation in the Gaza regions. There was nothing like that on the West Bank. Jordan is about the only Arab country today where there is no unemployment.

But if the Arab world stops Hussein from negotiating with us, we could then look for solutions with the Arab leaders who live with us, and we'll work out arrangements which will permit them to preserve their national characteristics and allow us to preserve our security. We could do that both in the West Bank and in the Gaza region.

Q: Do you think this is possible even after the Rabat summit?

PERES: I believe the Rabat resolutions will not stand up to wear and tear. The Palestinians introduced a new extremism in pan-Arab policies at Rabat, while pan-Arab policies caused a deep split within the ranks of the terrorists. I believe the spirit of Rabat will not last long, because the Arab world cannot shut itself up indefinitely in such extremism, and the terrorist camp will not be able to survive with its present divisions.

The basic thing is that we have to deal with an Arab world made up of incredible contrasts. While a handful of men are leading lives worthy of The Arabian Nights, the others are grovelling in complete wretchedness. They rule over territories which stretch over 12 million square kilometres, with a population density of 10 to the square kilometre. Eight per cent of the world's land surface belongs to them. They have 20 states, immense riches, and this year they will have a surplus of $45,000 millions. By 1980, Europe alone will have paid them $700,000 millions.

You get dizzy when you think that all this power has been mobilised for the 6,000 square kilometres of the West Bank and the 400 square kilometres of Gaza. Do you know that of the $60 millions given by the United Nations as aid to the Palestinian refugees, Saudi Arabia's share comes to only $890,000? One of King Faisal's relatives recently lost six times as much playing roulette in Monaco. What's distressing is to see the United Nations Organization falling in behind the Arab world; the UNO was set up by Roosevelt, Churchill, deGaulle, but today, alas, it has become the UNO of Amin, Bouteflika, Gadhafi, Faisal and others.

Q: There is a general feeling in the world that, confronted by the seriousness of the situation, Israel would once more be seized by the "Massada" or the Samson complex.

PERES: Well, let me tell you first that I'm very happy to hear the world is beginning to take an interest in Bible stories. Massada and Samson were only minor episodes in the history of the Jewish people. I believe that Israel's situation is far better than it was in 1948. And that it has no need for Massada's or Samson's. In 1948, we had no army, no state, no united Jewish people, and no American support, and around us was rising the smoke of the ovens in which European Judaism was consumed. Altogether we were only 650,000 men, women and children, and in 27 years built up the country in a desert and fought against extremely well-equipped armies. Today we are three million Jews, with a state which we are not ashamed of, with an army of which we are proud, and a people who won't be taken by surprise. We have a large reservoir of sympathy in the world, and are considerably helped by the American government.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

DAVID R. SARGENT

Partial Redemption of E Bonds Allowed

Q: My mother has $10,000 Series E Savings Bond bought in 1940. If she cashes it in she will have to pay income tax on the considerable interest which has been earned. Can she cash in a portion of the bond, say $1,000 this year, $1,000 next year, and so on? If this is allowed, would any bank handle it?—R.I.

A: Partial redemption of any E bond in a denomination of over $25 is possible. In your mother's case, she would request partial redemption to the extent of $1,000 maturity value, with the balance to be reissued (as of the original date) as nine $1,000 E bonds. On the back of the bond, above the signature, after the request for payment the words "to the extent of $1,000 maturity value and reissue of the remainder" would be added.

She should present her request to a local bank where her signature would be certified by a bank officer and the request for payment amended as described above. This bank will then forward the bond to a Federal Reserve Bank where the transaction will be completed. By following this procedure, tax liability will be incurred only on that portion of the bond which is redeemed.

Q: Could you evaluate General Foods' (NYSE) potential? Why has the stock performed less well than other food stocks recently?—J.B.

A: The September quarter report was somewhat disappointing, with earnings up only 3.6% on a 17% gain in sales. Profit margins were under pressure from rising costs for raw materials, packaging materials, labor, etc. Several recent moves by the coffee-producing nations to bolster the price of coffee have also contributed to share weakness. Because the supply situation is favorable, it is unlikely that these plays will succeed. In its 52 years of operation, financially strong General Foods has never reported a loss. New products, highly profitable overseas business, and a strong marketing organization should stimulate accelerated earnings growth.

Generating Gains For Westinghouse

Q: What do you think of an investment in Westinghouse Electric (NYSE) in the $9 to $10 range? Is this a solidly entrenched company only temporarily in the doldrums or does the price decline indicate more serious problems?—W.K.

A: While the decline in share price is indicative of difficulties at Westinghouse, one uncertainty was removed by the election of a new management slate. The new team faces a number of problems such as the disposal of loss units and turning around the troubled appliance business. On the other hand, Westinghouse has some very profitable businesses including: broadcasting, defense and industrial equipment, plus the long range potential inherent in the nuclear field. Operating results this year have been penalized by a slowdown in shipments of turbine generators and some loss operations. Incidentally one was disposed of in June, another in October. Receipt of several major contracts for generators boosted backlog to $8.8 billion at the end of the third quarter. At less than 6X estimated 1974 net of $1.70 per share, Westinghouse is a speculative buy for patient investors.

Q: A friend has tried to persuade me to cash in my H bonds to buy bankers' acceptances. Would you advise this?—M.W.

A: Before making a change of this import you should understand thoroughly what it is you would be buying. Bankers' acceptances are effectively bank guarantees on corporate IOUs. These IOUs are created in order to expedite business transactions between two firms unfamiliar with each other. Corporation "A" is about to ship goods to Corporation "B" but wants to assure timely payment for its merchandise once it is delivered. In order to satisfy this requirement Corporation "B" draws up a promissory note and then finds a reputable bank to "accept" or guarantee it. If, prior to the note's maturity, Corporation "A" wishes to obtain cash, the note is sold at a discount to a bank. The bank may either hold or resell the IOU at a discount to an individual or a mutual fund. The safety of bankers' acceptances depends on the credit worthiness of the debtor corporation and the stability of the endorsing bank.

Payout Ratios Vary Widely

Is there any yardstick for corporate earnings and the amount paid as dividends? There is such a wide divergence in dividends paid that I suppose shareholders are at the mercy of corporate directors.—M.F.

A: Not entirely, since individuals do have a choice of investment vehicles. Those investing solely for income should choose stocks with a high yield, whereas those looking for appreciation should evaluate other factors. Although it is the responsibility of the directors to determine a corporation's dividend policy, these decisions are generally based on historic payout rates, current earnings, projected earnings, economic factors and corporate cash requirements. Furthermore, reported earnings are not always what they seem, often including such variables as: inventory profits (if FIFO accounting is used), changing tax rates, variations in amortization and depreciation, deferral of research expenses, etc.

According to figures developed by Argus Research, corporations are paying out only 38% of after tax profits in dividends, the lowest rate since the Korean war. However, if inventory profits are removed from the earnings base, the figure soars to 58%, well above the postwar average. My own figures show that in 1973 corporations distributed 15% less of their profits in cash dividends than in 1972.

Payout rates vary widely from one industry to another, from a high for the utilities of 68% to a low of 16% for the electronics industry. However, dividends grew at a faster pace in the latter industry, increasing 81% in six years versus only a 24% rise in utility dividends. Thus, the investor has still another factor to evaluate should he choose a low yield issue in a growing industry in order to participate in that growth through increasing dividends or should he opt for a high yield stock in a retrograde group? His decision will probably reflect whether the need for high current income is paramount or whether he has sufficient time prior to retirement to build income through gradual liberalization of dividends. Over the long term, the total return achieved through the combination of yield, appreciation and increments in the dividends generally outpaces that from the high yield type issue.

POPULATION GROWS

JERUSALEM: The Jewish population of Israel now numbers 2,860,000, which is about one-fifth of the world Jewish population estimated at 14,750,000. Of this total about 6,060,000 are said to be living in America, with 3,000,000 residents in the Soviet Union.

One thing I stress continually when I teach or advise is as Declarer, when the opening lead is made, to examine it and also to plan as far ahead as one can how he is to play the rest of the hand. I watched as in today's hand some very sharp Declarers figured just what the lead was so therefore tried to offset what might happen without realizing what else might befall them which would hurt them even worse. Where to win the first trick was the key to the whole hand.

North and South were vulnerable, East Dealer with this bidding:

 W 2♥
 End

The bidding is interesting in that it is highly competitive. East just barely has an opening bid and West just enough to give him a raise. Many think that West's bid is a "free" bid but in this case only, when one raises his partner's opening bid in a Major to two it makes no difference whether the opponent bids in between or not. When the bidding came to West again his next bid was sort of a sacrifice as he felt he wouldn't go down much in Hearts and that South could certainly make two Spades. He achieved his purpose when he made South bid one more

Spade.
 West led the singleton Diamond 10 and I watched as two good Declarers pondered over what to do then. They both were quite sure that it indeed was what it was, all alone, and that a ruff was in the offing. Hoping to best offset this they both finally decided to win in Dummy so as to lead Trump which would possibly be ducked and that when East eventually did get in West would be out of Trumps. But West won the first Trump lead and returned a Heart. East went right up with his Ace and quickly returned the Diamond Queen, West ruffing South's Ace.

West still had a Diamond trick and that along with the Club trick set the hand. Can you see what Declarer should have thought at trick one? He heard East open the bidding so with two Aces out there is no way he can keep East off lead before Trumps are extracted. So aware of this Declarer should make sure that as long as West is not going to be kept from ruffing a Diamond at least let him ruff a loser rather than a winner. Going along with this in mind Declarer should win the first trick in his own hand and lead the Trump from there.

Now see what happens. West can win and again lead the Heart but now when East wins that trick and returns the Diamond for West to ruff what does he ruff? Only a low one from both hands for Declarer is certainly not going to play Dummy's King if West ruffs first. What does East have left now in Diamonds; the Jack alone. That will now fall on Dummy's King after Trumps have been drawn for East has no more entries to get another ruff.

Moral: When you are in control, what you do at trick one is probably the most important trick of all.

Only In America

By Harry Golden

Capitalism and Depression

Adam Smith laid down the dictum of what constitutes capitalism. It is laissez-faire, which means the option of free competition. In bad times, said Adam Smith, the thing is to produce more and charge less.

Keeping the workers on the job and lowering prices would encourage a vast competition to the benefits of the consumer and America.

But we see capitalism in hard times in rising prices, while producing less. This is all wrong.

Thousands upon thousands of auto industry workmen have been laid off, thousands of municipal employes are out, workers everywhere are now seeking food and shelter through relief and welfare checks.

The reasons for not following Adam Smith's prescription are varied and multiple. None of them is reasonable and none is logical. Certainly none is fair.

But the reason bad times accelerate, I suppose, is because we are a permissive society. Any society which will tolerate six, seven and eight per cent unemployment is permissive, to say the least.

In these straitened times our government has decided it too will cut services and payments and produce weekly forecasts of how deep and enduring the recession will be. Our government reminds me of the man about to be lashed making a catalogue of how and in what ways the cat-o-nine tails will hurt.

The trouble with laissez-faire in the modern industrial world is that it is laissez-faire only as long as profits are large and guaranteed. Once the system is supposed to work itself, then it is only laissez and the government if expected to do the faire.

It is not incredible to imagine that citizens of the richest nation on earth will go hungry, lay idle, and think mutiny. It is not incredible because it has happened before. And, in fact, the Great Depression of the 1930s was the severe trial for this country — one it fortunately weathered and weathered probably because Europe exploded in a war.

Hunkering down does not help. In a tight spot, one often takes chances. Neither does President Ford's idea of voluntarism. Voluntarism is nonsense and leads to disaster.

Recently the highways were clogged with Thanksgiving Day traffic (generally exceeding the President's proposed 55 m.p.h. speed limit.) Does this mean Americans do not care about the substance and implications of Burns' warning? We doubt it.

We believe instead that they are so baffled and confused by the conflicting counsel they have received from Washington that many no longer take any admonition seriously.

Why should one family remain off the road when its next door neighbors are taking off on a holiday jaunt? Why should anyone act as if the crisis is as grave as Burns suggests if the Administration feels no obligation to impose any drastic, across the board program of sacrifice?

If the President remains the captive of those advisers who continue to preach do-nothingism, the Democratic led Congress must assume command. Its failure to do

Hello Again!

News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

SPEAKING OF BOWLS: According to Webster, the definition is, in part: "A concave vessel, usually hemispherical, to hold liquids, etc.---" Every football fan is well aware of the necessity for revision of the definition by Webster. Of course, everyone knows that a "bowl" is where a football game is played, especially when it's a championship game. And so now when we mention "bowl" the listener wonders whether it's the "Rose-Bowl" or the "Gator-Bowl" or the "Orange-Bowl" or the "Sun-Bowl" or other "bowls, ad infinitum.

IN THE MIDST: And so, now when you're going to be up to your necks in "bowls" of this name or that on television, on radio and in the newspapers, you should be aware of the fact that the name refers to a big football game and not a bowl of corn flakes, or oat flakes or even shredded wheat. You should also avoid confusion by remembering that the word "bowl," also refers to "a ball for rolling on a level surface" and also it means to "roll a ball on a plane, as in the game of bowls." And I'm sure Webster refers to our game of bowling on the polished alleys. And, omigoodness, there's the definition "to pelt or strike with anything rolled — often used with "over" or "down." Ah yes, there are other definitions including those referring to the game of Cricket, and then, there's the same pronunciation for the word "boll" which hasn't a thing to do with a bowl because it means, "the pod or capsule of a plant---"

REGARDLESS: Despite the many explanations in the dictionary, the word "Bowl" at this time of year means a great big football game. And, like the different bowls of morning cereals, you have a wide choice for satisfying your football appetites. When referring to football a number of years ago, the mention of "bowl" meant one thing alone. It was the "Yale Bowl," setting for the big game of the football season when Harvard visited Yale for the yearly gridiron classic with the Yale Bulldog. In fact, the Yale Bowl was a sight that was a "must" back in the olden, golden days when it took eight or ten hours to travel from Providence to New York via motor-car or "machine," as an automobile was called. "Let's stop in New Haven and see the Yale Bowl." And sightseers, who hadn't been favored with the opportunity for watching a colorful Harvard-Yale football game, would look with awe at the structure, "made just for football."

WE, TOO, HAD BOWLS: You wouldn't think so now, but right near the corner of Reservoir and Park Avenues in Cranston, there once was a huge wooden bowl. It was called the "Cyclodrome" and motor-paced bicycle racers rode around a bowl-shaped track that required seven laps for a mile. And then, someone thought of making a bicycle racing bowl big enough to encircle a football field and a bigger wooden saucer was built at the Providence-Pawtucket line on North Main Street. It was on the site now occupied by a drive-in movie theater. That one appeared as a tremendous wooden bowl. Its seating capacity topped 15,000 and the bike racers went around its circumference only four times while completing a mile.

A FAMOUS ONE: That wooden bowl on North Main Street in Providence should be recognized in the Football Hall of Fame. It was probably the most unusual "football bowl" in the records of the game. In its infield, surrounded by the wooden bicycle track, the "Providence World Champion Professional Steamroller Football Team" made history. What a sight! Fifteen thousand cheering fans, crowding the stands on the high side of the banked race track, forming a most memorable picture for those who saw it! No amplifying systems then. An announcer, Bob Paglini, walked around the wooden apron with a megaphone, shouting out the score and other facts pertinent with keeping the fans informed.

AS GREAT AS ROSE BOWL STARS: And so, when you drive along North Main Street, think once in a while of the outstanding immortals who played football in the high wooden saucer that once was located nearby. Check the records for Ernie Nevers, Gus Sonnenberg, Jim Conzelman, Wildcat Wilson, Jack Cronin, Curly Oden, John Spellman and so many others who were famed throughout the land! The years have built many monuments: what will the new one bring? Happiness for you, we hope. — CARRY ON!

 so will render hollow any criticism the Democratic leadership may level at passivity in the White House. These are not subjects for leisurely, academic discussion. They involve a deepening national emergency.

The Bowery
 As a boy, I used to walk along the most famous of all Skid Rows — the Bowery. When I sold newspapers I walked the five blocks of the Bowery every 5:30 a.m. to pick up the Jewish Morning Journal. In the early morning I used to see the alcoholics still asleep in the doorways and sometimes even across the sidewalk.

I can remember that the only people awake on the Bowery at 5:30 A.M. were the fellows opening up their saloons and cafes. They used to be busy plastering huge signs in their windows, signs which read Oatmeal, 3 cents — with sugar, 5 cents, — with cream, 7 cents. All over the Bowery were signs, Beds — 15 cents. And there were the usual mission with the big sign, BE SAVED.

The clothing stores employed husky fellows who stood outside on the sidewalk and "pulled" you in if you showed the slightest interest in the window display. This "pulling in" was an accepted custom, and a fellow told you he was a "puller in" as casually as someone would say he was a carpenter or plumber.

Once you were inside the store, your chances of getting out without buying were very slim. If you took your pants off to try on a "new suit," you were a dead pigeon entirely. Unless you bought, your pants were suddenly "lost."

Whisky, known as "a stack of reds," cost 10 cents; gin, "a stack of whites," was 5 cents; and beer; with free lunch, was also a nickel.

The fake auction store which you still see at seashore resorts, but with a few refinements, had its origin on the Bowery, with one such loud place in the middle of each block. They even sang a song about them:

I went into an auction store,
 I never saw any thieves before.
 First he sold me a pair of socks,
 Then he said, "How much for the box?"
 Someone said, "Two dollars," I said, "Three."
 He emptied the box and gave it to me.

"I sold you the box, not the socks," said he.
 I'll never go there any more.

Sitting on the Stove
 The teacher would ask, "Why were you absent yesterday?"

And the absentee would answer, "We lost one of the lids for our stove and my mother wanted me to sit on the opening and keep the fire in."

This was funny in 1910. We all laughed. The black coal stove was a kitchen fixture in the homes of my neighborhood. Since those days, there have been innumerable jokes about keeping coal in the bathtub, but this indeed is where it was stored in many homes, including my own.

Bathtubs were innovations back then. We were accustomed to other facilities. Every neighborhood had a fair share of public baths provided by the neighborhood settlement houses.

There was the public mikvah, the ritual baths for the women, and Turkish baths proliferated throughout the whole section. Once a week I went with my father to the Katz's Turkish Baths.

A few years ago, in Copenhagen, I went to the hotel's baths and after a few minutes in the steamroom, I climbed to the top bench. The attendant was deeply concerned and tried to wave me down, worried about the intense heat at that height. But I was used to it from my days in Katz's Baths.

We also used washtubs to take baths at home. The bathtub was a luxury. Instead of keeping coal in the burlap bag in which it was delivered in 50 pound lots, we dumped it into this most convenient container.
 Above the black iron stove was a shelf where my mother and countless others kept the can of Vulcan Stove Polish. The black brush had bristles on both sides, one with which to apply the polish and the other for rubbing.

 We polished the stove but always kept one of the lids unpolished. This was for toast. We made toast, before any of us had ever heard of the word, with a heavy slice of rye bread on the lid and on top of that a heavy flatiron. We spread schmaltz (chicken fat) on the toasted bread and rubbed garlic on the crust. It was a dandy meal.

Rabbi and Mrs. Bernard Rotman of Temple Beth Am will lead a tour to Israel which departs on Wednesday, February 12, and returns on Wednesday, February 26. The itinerary of the tour includes visits to Jerusalem, Haifa, Tel Aviv, Galilee and an optional tour to Eilat on the Red Sea. Haifa will be next on the tour with a later excursion planned for Galilee, Tiberias, Capernaum and Safed. The group will arrive in Tel Aviv in time for Purim.

Rabbi Rotman, spiritual leader of Temple Beth Am since August 1972, has lived and traveled in Israel. He is presently on the board of the Bureau of Jewish Education, a member of the Warwick Drug Abuse Board, Warwick Police Chaplain and a teacher at the Warwick-Cranston Adult Education Institute.

Arabs Want Israel To Stay Within UN

U.N.: Informed sources report that U.N. third-world delegates suggested to the Arab delegations that they ask the UN to deal with Israel as it did with South Africa; excluding it from participation in the deliberations of the United Nations. The exclusion of South Africa was supported by the Soviet-Arab bloc and the third-world countries by a substantial vote in the General Assembly, despite the opposition of the United States and 25 other member states.

Sources close to the Arab delegations, however, say there is little danger that Israel will get the same treatment as South Africa. They point out that the Arabs are interested in maintaining indirect contact with Israel and in utilizing the decisions of the international body to put pressure on Israel to withdraw from the occupied territories. For that the Arabs are interested in Israel remaining within the UN confines. Well informed sources add that Israel's UN Ambassador, Josef Tekoah, confirms this assessment of the situation.

TO SUPPLY WEAPONS

WASHINGTON: According to Aviation Week the US has agreed to supply Israel with 100 "Lance" rockets which have an effective range of 64 kilometers and carry a payload of 450 kilograms of explosives. The magazine also lists other American weapons which have been promised for Israel's defense, among them the latest P-15 planes and sophisticated electronic gear designed to detect enemy rockets.

NO MALNUTRITION

JERUSALEM: According to an official study even the poorest Israeli families are able to provide the basic necessities of life. There is no malnutrition and no hunger. The diets of the poorer classes lack variety and consist mainly of simple foods, but they do contain the necessary calories, vitamins, and minerals to sustain normal energy levels. The more affluent families are able to purchase luxury items, many of which have very little real food value. Their shopping baskets include various "prestige" products and fancy specialties which add up to a great deal of money but very little extra nourishment.

Egypt Tells Israel to Halt Population Level For Peace

CAIRO: Egypt's Foreign Minister, Ismail Fahmy, declared that Israel must "freeze" her present level of population and suspend immigration for the next 50 years if she wanted peace in the Middle East, according to a New York Times article by Henry Tanner.

Mr. Fahmy's statement, which seemed to indicate a hardening of the Egyptian position, was issued shortly after the United States Ambassador, Herman F. Eilts, had informed President Anwar el-Sadat of the results of talks held in Washington a few days ago by Secretary of State Kissinger and the Israeli Foreign Minister, Yigal Allon.

The results of the Kissinger-Allon talks were described by informed diplomats here as "sharply disappointing."

Mr. Fahmy was present at Mr. Sadat's meeting with the Ambassador.

Mr. Fahmy predicted that Israel would be compelled to recognize the Palestine Liberation Organization.

He said that Israel should accept the proposal for a secular state of Palestine made by Yasir Arafat, the head of the P.L.O., during the United Nations General Assembly debate last month. Alternatively, he added, Israel should accept partition with the Arabs along the lines of the 1947 partition plan adopted by the United Nations.

The Foreign Minister's statement was made public by the official Middle East News Agency.

Compensation Demanded

Mr. Fahmy also declared that Israel to achieve peace, must pay compensation for losses suffered by the Arabs as a result of her "aggressive wars."

He cited the destruction of the Syrian town of El Quneitra and the Egyptian cities in the Suez Canal zone and also Israeli extraction of oil and minerals in the Sinai Peninsula in the seven and a half years of occupation since the 1967 war.

Mr. Fahmy's demands clearly reflected Egyptian anger over the "inconclusive out-come" of the Israeli-United States consultations in Washington, informed diplomats said.

The position taken by Foreign Minister Allon in Washington, the

Emigration To Israel Continues To Decline

GENEVA: Emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel dropped by almost 50 per cent this year, according to official figures released here.

A spokesman for the Intergovernmental Committee on European Migration told newsmen that the trend seemed to be toward a further decrease.

This decline in emigration contrasted with a sharp rise in the number of Jews who decided to move from the Soviet Union to countries other than Israel.

The spokesman said the committee had no official statistics on Soviet Jews settling in other countries, but estimated that the number was about 4,000 compared with 2,500 for 1973.

16,537 Go to Israel

The committee said 16,537 Soviet Jews had migrated to Israel since January 1, 1974. The total for all of 1973 was 32,500.

The December emigration so far has been one of the lowest in recent times, the spokesman added.

Senator Henry M. Jackson, Democrat of Washington, has estimated that the American trade bill granting concessions to the Soviet Union in exchange for a liberalized emigration policy will result in about 60,000 Jews leaving the Soviet Union each year. However, Soviet leaders denied they had given any commitment regarding emigration and rejected as unacceptable the emigration provision in the trade bill.

diplomats said, remained far below the expectation of the Egyptian Government

Cairo has made it clear that it will accept a second military disengagement agreement in the Sinai only if Israel is willing to withdraw behind the strategic Sinai mountain passes and to relinquish the Abu Rudeis oil fields on the western coast of the Sinai. These demands have not been accepted by Israel so far, the diplomats said.

Egypt also insists that a new disengagement in the Sinai must be accompanied or followed by another Israeli withdrawal on the Syrian front.

Cairo Awaiting Brezhnev

The inconclusive outcome of the Kissinger-Allon talks is understood here to have eliminated any chance to progress toward a second Israeli-Egyptian disengagement agreement before the arrival here on Jan 14 of Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Soviet leader.

In the past, President Sadat has been the most outspoken supporter in the Arab world of Mr. Kissinger's step-by-step approach to a settlement, and American diplomats had hoped they would be able to supply the Egyptian leader with new evidence of effectiveness in the Kissinger approach before the arrival of Mr. Brezhnev.

The Soviet Union wants the negotiations to be moved to the Geneva peace conference and has warned against letting Israel deal with the Arab countries individually through American mediation.

Commenting on Mr. Fahmy's statement, well-placed observers said it was the first time that Egypt had stated so specifically that Israel would have to abandon her policy of unlimited immigration as a condition for peace.

Egyptian officials have stated this in a more general way before.

Mr. Fahmy said "it is imperative that Israel, in a peaceful settlement pledge to freeze her population at the existing level and to undertake not to increase the number of immigrants over the next 50 years."

What Is The Reason?

BY RABBI YAAKOV UVSITZKY

(Rabbi Uvitzky has requested the following space to present the Orthodox viewpoint on certain Jewish customs and procedures.)

Why do we cover our eyes during the recitation of the first line of the prayer "Shema?"

It is to be able to concentrate fully without any interference on this reaffirmation of the unity of G-d.

Why is it customary to eat fish on the Sabbath?

In the portion of Genesis telling of the creation of the world, the word "blessing" is mentioned three times. Once on Thursday with the creation of fish, once on Friday with the creation of man, and on Saturday with the creation of Sabbath.

Therefore, the one who eats fish on Sabbath is thrice blessed.
