Pawtucket Congregation Helps Families Emigrating From Russia

By CELIA ZUCKERBERG

Of the most importance to the Russian emigres who have recently come to Pawtucket is the right to work at the job in which they are trained.

Roland Koff, one of the new Jewish emigres, whose mother was born in the United States, speaks English quite well. Of course, one of the major problems of emigres from anywhere, is lack of knowledge of the language of their new home. This is the reason that a program modeled on the Israeli Ulpan has been started to teach the newcomers how to speak English. This 12-hour a week course, according to Rabbi Yaakov Uvsitzky of Congregation Ohave Sholom in Pawtucket, is sponsored by the Jewish Family & Children's Service and the Jewish Community Center.

Mr. Koff, by profession a mechanical engineer, is now working at the Elizabeth Webbing Company, a job which does not require his skills. He is happy to be in the United States and could not praise more the people who have helped him. (Jewish immigrants to Rhode Island are helped with food, clothing, housing and work by the Jewish Family & Children's Service and the Providence Section, National Council of Jewish Women.)

In discussing the USSR, Mr. Koff told of the problems attached to applying for exit visas from the country. He said that any of the Jewish people who want to go to Israel lose their jobs immediately upon asking for an exit visa and must wait many months after that for permission to leave. He, himself, left because, as a Jew, he could see no future in Russia. Also, it was difficult to live as a Jew in the Soviet Union because of the lack of synagogues Hebrew teachers and the dislike of the Russian government for Jewish learning. He is here with his wife, Katherine and his son of 20, Leonid, a geologist.

Vladimir Zeitlin has wondered, he says, always "what is America?" He thinks of it as the most democratic country in the world. He spent 10 years in technical school and is an experienced auto mechanic. He worked for several years in the Department of Auto Transportation of Moscow. He has already found his first problem in this country (and he is not the only one). The United States, he says, costs very much money.

Mr. Zeitlin, who is here with his wife Rita, and his daughter, Julia, four and one-half years old, found that after he applied for a visa, he lost his job and was without work for four months before receiving his permit to leave.

A technical artist, Sergei Chantsev is now working for Carol Cables as a shipper. He reinforces Mr. Koff's complaint of not being able to work in his own profession.

In Russia, he says, Jews cannot go to synagogue. Younger men who do go are apt to lose their jobs. There are no Jewish schools except for one in Moscow; there is no Yiddish theater or newspaper or books. Even Sholom Aleichem's books, he says, have not been published in Russia since 1949.

There is one Yiddish magazine, he added, but it is filled with government ideas and other narishkeit. He likes the United States very much, but he and his wife, Rosa, who is a hairdresser, would like to work in their own fields if they could.

Welcoming the emigres to Pawtucket (there are other families in Rhode Island other than these three) were Rabbi Uvsitzky of Congregation Ohave Sholam and Barton Zaner, president of the newly formed Men's Club of the congregation. Mr. Zaner, a Warwick resident, feels that the men's club, which he helped start, will fulfill the need for the Pawtucket Jewish community as well as the synagogue to meet the legitimate service needs of the various Jewish families as well as becoming involved in educational and cultural activities. There is no better way, he continued, of proving the value of the men's club to the community than to meet the real needs of the people of that community.

Rabbi Uvsitzky, who has been with the congregation only since last August has been working very actively in furthering the activities of the only Jewish congregation in Pawtucket. Originally from New York, he had been principal of the Chelsea (Massachusetts) Hebrew Academy before coming to Pawtucket.

He has organized a number of new programs for the Hebrew school and helped to organize the Men's Club. He is planning a day camp for children 5 through 8 years of age. There is already an active ladies' organization and youth group.

The Ulpan system which is used in Israel for teaching Hebrew rapidly to immigrants he is sure can be used to teach English to the Russian emigres.

This, Mr. Zaner agreed, would help make the smoothest transition from the USSR. "It behooves all Jewish communities to do the same thing."

The immigrants agreed that learning the English language was most important. They did not come to the United States said Mr. Koff, obviously speaking for all of them as they nodded while he spoke, "because we were poor. We had a minimum of 10 years of school. We did not want to become millionaires. We had our own apartments (in Russia) and a car. But we could not live there.

"I want to be a Jew; I want my son to be a Jew — not just have it say so on his passport. I want to be a member of this country."

Of course, they will have problems. They don't know yet how to get around in the new city; they don't know where to shop. They have problems with the language. It will be while yet before they will be able to get driver's licenses or jobs which fit their special skills, but they seem quite determined to conquer all odds.

Campaign To Start Now

Set $5 Million Goal On Drive For Jewish Home Building Funds

At a meeting of the advisory committee held earlier this week, it was unanimously voted to set a minimum goal of $5,000,000 for the building fund drive for the new Jewish Home for the Aged, it was announced by Max Alperin, general campaign chairman.

Two experienced campaigners, Harris N. Rosen and Joseph W. Ress, have been named co-chairmen of the special gifts division of the state-wide campaign. Plans are being made to start the special gifts phase of the drive immediately and to work on it intensively until the end of June.

Committees are now being formed and the names of members will be announced shortly.

The fund raising project followed closely upon the decision of the board of directors of the Home at a special meeting held last month in favor of the expansion of the Jewish Home in its present location on Hillside Avenue in Providence, and to proceed with the development of plans for new construction as well as substantial renovation and modernization of existing facilities.

It is contemplated that the new complex will make it possible to increase the present capacity from 150 to 250 beds in a modern setting that will provide comprehensive service to the aged. It is also planned that an active day care program as well as other outreach services for the care of the aged in their own homes will be incorporated in the new facilities.

Brooklyn's Advice Not Welcomed

TEL AVIV — At a recent Labor Party Central Committee meeting the Premier had some harsh words against the alleged intervention of the Lubavitcher Rebbe in Israel's current domestic troubles. According to press reports, the Brooklyn based Rebbe who is spiritual leader of Israel's large community of Habad hasidim said, "This is the time to get rid of the Socialist regime in Israel."

Said Mrs. Meir, "We have reached a stage when instructions are received from Brooklyn to get rid of Socialism. He (the Rebbe) should not give such instructions to his Habad people or to the NRP. It is a catastrophe and I do not know how they will overcome it." Mrs. Meir added that it appeared that the NRP saw its natural place in alliance with Likud.

Ambassador Keating Dedicates Center

REHOVOT — American Ambassador Kenneth B. Keating, speaking at a dedication ceremony for a four-building absorption center for Soviet immigrants, said, "This center is a link in a chain that brings a people whose sufferings are among mankind's shame to a nation that is very special and precious to them." Noting that the center was built by funds provided by the American people, Keating asserted, "There is also the encouraging aspect of my own country helping another nation to settle people from a third nation ... it is the right thing to do."

The funds for the center were part of a $75 million grant given to the United Israel Appeal, Inc., of New York to assist and absorb Soviet immigrants. Some 400 Soviet immigrants and Israelis attended the ceremony at which Leon Dulzin, acting chairman of the Jewish Agency for Israel, emphasized that both the U.S. and Israel "were built by waves of immigrants."

A BOY AND A BALLOON. What could be more fun? Joshua Halperin is enjoying the Purim Carnival at the Jewish Community Center. For more pictures of the Purim holiday, see pages 8 and 9.

Leadership Restored

Papering over their differences of personalities and policies, Israel's leaders have finally coalesced into a new government that should stand as a relatively stable interlocutor in the tense diplomatic weeks ahead. It came in the nick of time.

The last two months have been a harrowing period in the life of modern Israel. The country's relations with Egypt, and to some extent Syria, have advanced into a phase that would have seemed beyond possibility just six months ago. Yet internally the nation was shaken by the aftermath of the earthquake, as the Israelis call the October war, leaving a confused and demoralized populace and a weary, contentious national leadership.

Until this week's coalition agreement, Israel was in danger of having to enter upon negotiations with Syria in the absence of its two towering leaders — Moshe Dayan and Golda Meir. Neither of these has emerged from the earthquake unblemished, but criticism directed at both seemed to pale when the nation tried to contemplate political life without them.

It would be easy to dismiss Mr. Dayan's and Mrs. Meir's moves to leave government as self-serving, designed only to enhance their political influence. But such cynicism would overlook the genuine grounds which both could have found for believing that their presence was inhibiting national cohesion as the country moved toward negotiation. Mrs. Meir's leadership of the Labor party was under fire even before the December elections. Mr. Dayan was badly stung by groundswells of criticism for alleged blunders in the conduct of the October war.

If the loss of both these leaders at a stroke seemed too big a shock to take, none of the issues which provoked the internal political crisis is resolved by their continued tenure.

The deep-seated ideological dispute centering on the proper definition of a Jew remains a serious point of contention between religious and secular interests in the Knesset. Even now, Mrs. Meir has to depend on support of the National Religious party in Parliament.

The dominant Labor party itself is still split on policy grounds between reliance on the stand-pat mentality which characterized Mrs. Meir's leadership before October, and the newly awakened belief that there are risks which can be taken toward achieving a political settlement.

Negotiations with Syria are scheduled for later this month in Washington under the auspices of Secretary of State Kissinger. Israel and Syria are far apart on the terms they envisage for a disengagement agreement. But assuming that the work of diplomacy moves forward, the new Israeli Government has the responsibility of preparing its people for difficult compromises that may yet lead to some kind of peace in the Middle East.

United HIAS Service Notes Anniversary

NEW YORK — United Hias Service observed its 90th anniversary yesterday as Mayor Beame cited the worldwide Jewish migration agency as being the "passport to freedom for so many victims of religious persecution."

"It takes great courage," the Mayor remarked, "to leave one's home with only a few belongings and to begin anew in a strange land with a strange language. It wasn't easy for my parents; they had to work very hard."

The Mayor, an immigrant himself who was born in London, was presented with the agency's 1974 Liberty award, a model of the Statue of Liberty mounted on an oak panel. The citation noted that the Mayor's "vision of New York City offers hope to the weary and freedom to the persecuted."

"Generations of refugees and migrants, inspired by his example, will seek self-fulfillment ... proud of their heritage and unafraid for their future," the citation added.

More than 1,000 people filled the grand ballroom of the Roosevelt Hotel for the ceremonies. In the audience were refugees from Europe and North Africa, and scores of recently arrived Russian Jews.

Reports by Carl Click, president of the agency, and Gaynor I. Jacobson, its executive vice president, disclosed that since its inception Hias had assisted four million Jewish refugees and migrants, and was expected to resettle 4,800 in this country this year, the majority of them Soviet Jews.

United States District Court Judge Murray I. Gurfin was cited by the agency for "outstanding service in the cause of Jewish survival."

PERMANENTLY BARRED

NEW YORK — Valery Panov informed western newsmen in Moscow that his wife, Galina, has been permanently barred from leaving the Soviet Union, according to Jewish sources here. The former star of the Kirov Ballet said Soviet officials told him late last week of this decision and also warned him that his own exit visa would be revoked and "administrative measures" taken against him if he continued to insist on refusing to emigrate to Israel without her. Panov told the newsmen that he could leave for Israel but that his wife, who was also a ballet star with the Kirov Ballet, would have to remain in the Soviet Union because her mother objected to her departure.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

Love in the Shtetl

By BERYL SEGAL

Matchmaking was a respected trade in the Shtetl, when we grew up in Orinin, on the Ukraine. The profession was equally divided between men and women. A man matchmaker was called a Shadchen, and a woman was Shadchen'te. The men, however, specialized in out-of-town match-making, while the women plied their trade in the Shtetl and environs. Both of them, men and women, practiced their skill with great patience, never applying too much pressure on either the parents of the bride or the groom. They spoke with enthusiasm about the match, hinting ever so subtly that opportunity knocks only once and that delay could mean losing a chance of a lifetime.

When a boy or girl in the Shtetl reached the marriageable age, the boy became known as a Hoson Bochur and the girl as a Calloh Moid. The Shadchen began to visit the parents discussing possible matches. The Shadchen knew who belonged to whom. There were certain ground rules which the Shadchen observed:

1. Yichus, standing in the community, was strictly observed. The shoemaker's daughter, no matter how beautiful and talented, was never mentioned as the match for the rich man's son. It was the parents, rather than the Hoson-Calloh, who were matched up. The parents knew best.

2. The Calloh must not have the same first name as the mother of the Hoson. In many families the same rule was observed in the father and Hoson's first name, or the first names of the grandparents.

3. The Shadchen knew better than to bring a widow or a divorcee into the house of a Cohen, because the Cohanim family were to marry a virgin only. The Cohanim were known by their last names. A man with the name of Cohen, Kahana, Kagan, Kohn, Kaganowsky, Kaganowitch, Katz, Kuhn, and others were sure to be of the Priestly family, dating back many centuries, to the time of the First Temple.

4. Apostates in the family, no matter how remote, were considered a blemish on the whole family. The Mishpochah had to be kept clean of any defects and the Shadchen who made the unforgivable sin of suggesting a match with the family of an apostate was beating his brow on a stone wall. Here again the feelings of the Hoson-Calloh were not consulted. Farflecken di Mishpochah, to bring a blot on the family, was something no Shadchen worth the name would do.

A rich man could afford to take a Hoson for his daughter from among the Yeshiva boys. He would send a Shadchen to a Rabbinical Academy, a Yeshiva, the farther away the better, to pick the best scholar in school. The parents of the Hoson-Calloh would meet somewhere in between the two Shtetlechs and the match would be arranged. The Hoson Bochur would receive the traditional gold watch on a chain, and return to his studies, while the Calloh would wait in her parents' house for the coming of her chosen.

The prestige of learning was great in the Shtetl! Even though the Hoson was the son of a poor man, he was preferred to all others. To have a Rov for a son-in-law was the greatest wish of every father and mother of a daughter.

In the Hassidic families the custom was for the Rebbe or the Gabbai, the administrator of the Rebbe, to arrange a Shiduch while the parents came to visit in the Rebbe's court. In this way followers of that particular Rebbe increased, and the parents of the Hoson-Calloh were more congenial than if their children were to marry among "strangers."

But by the time we grew up in Orinin the role of the Shadchen became outdated. The Shadchen was still used by many, but we preferred to "fall in love." The barriers between boys and girls were broken and we were given greater opportunities to get together and to make our own selections.

Where did we meet in Orinin?

Where were matches made in the Shtetl without the aid of a Shadchen?

There was the Shosee, the only paved street in Orinin. On Sabbath afternoons, when the parents took their Sabbath nap, the youth of the Shtetl came out dressed in their Sunday best, for the promenade on the Post Road. A group of girls came separately and the boys followed after them. As the day wore on a boy would wander over to the girl's side and a girl would blushing find her way to the boy's side and they would continue the "shpatzier" together. Up the hill they would walk, to the County House, up to the County Hospital, and into the woods among the trees.

There were the "Literary and Discussion" circles, held in various houses, in the long winter evenings. At these circles we read from the new Yiddish literature and recited poetry and felt the new breezes of a new era blow on our flushed faces. We came in groups, but left in twos, a girl and a boy, into the dark streets of Orinin.

And we had the Beth Am, the People's House. In a rented room the youth of Orinin established a library and arranged "literary evenings," under the guidance of men like Alter Boyman and Solomon Lightman, both of whom later came to Providence and continued their work in the community. Their roots were in Orinin where these two men were worshipped. The Beth Am in Orinin was the place where lovers met and exchanged glances and hearts beat faster, and we grew in stature and learned about the Jewish world.

There were, of course, many broken hearts. But young hearts are quickly mended, and another girl and another boy spoke with their eyes to one another.

And so between the Sabbath afternoon spatzier, the Beth Am gatherings and the Shadchen, the youth of the Shtetl managed to pair off each according to his or her taste.

NEW YORK: Reg Murphy, the Atlanta Constitution editor who was kidnaped, and then released, unharmed, toured Israel several years ago with author Meyer Levin on the American Zionist Federation Communication's Media Tour. When Murphy was invited to lead this year's tour of the battlefield, he declined, explaining he was too busy. Ben Grauer, the former NBC commentator, led the tour instead. The trip began the week that Murphy was kidnaped.

ROOTING FOR ISRAEL
 TEL AVIV — Strange as it seems, some Arabs are rooting for Israel to stand fast and annex the so-called occupied Arab territories into the "Greater Israel." Their reasons are strictly personal. An Arab contemplating matrimony is expected to "buy" his bride by paying a sum of money to the bride's parents or family. For Israeli Arabs the price of brides has soared to an alarming degree. In the so-called occupied areas, however, prices are more reasonable. Should the West Bank and the Gaza Strip revert to Arab control, those Arabs of limited means would be virtually excluded from the state of matrimony. Small wonder they want the Israelis to stand fast.

We want you to have the facts about your electric bill.

In January, oil suppliers raised the average price of fuel oil used by your electric company to $9.70 a barrel. We had no alternative but to pay this price in order to keep our customers supplied with electricity.

This increase in fuel prices by our oil suppliers has resulted in a 67% increase in the fuel adjustment charge on your electric bill. It is the reason why your current bill is so much higher.

It is important for you to know that every cent of the fuel adjustment charge on your electric bill is paid directly to our fuel suppliers. We do not retain any of this amount.

Our Average Cost for Residual Fuel Oil

Since the beginning of the fuel crisis last Fall, the fuel adjustment charge which goes directly to our fuel suppliers has gone up 300%. However, in the past year, your basic electric rate has gone up by only 6%.

We do not like these increased costs any more than you do. However, like all utilities, we have no choice but to pass the added fuel cost along to you. At present prices, the total increased cost of oil to our System would amount to over $176,000,000 (176 million) a year. This is more than 4 times as much as our annual net earnings. Our earnings, which are limited by regulatory commissions, are the minimum amount needed to keep our company financially sound so we can provide our customers with reliable service.

We are doing all that we can to reduce our costs and to lower your electric bills by making the most efficient use of the fuel we now use and by converting to coal at those generating plants where coal can be used. Coal is somewhat cheaper and certainly more available than oil.

We do not complacently accept the present high prices we must pay for residual fuel oil in order to keep you supplied with electricity. We have sent telegrams to both the Internal Revenue Service and the Federal Energy Office requesting an investigation into some of the extremely high prices we have had to pay for residual fuel oil shipments. These shipments were arranged by the Federal Energy Office. We also will continue to shop for lower fuel prices.

At present, we cannot predict when or how much fuel costs will come down. However, be assured that we are doing all that we can to keep our costs down and your electric bill as low as possible under these very difficult circumstances. Your understanding and cooperation will be most appreciated by all of our employees.

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

One of the big differences between I.M.P. Bridge and regular Match Point Duplicate is in over-tricks as against trying to play a hand safely. A good player in a Team match, if he were alert to the danger, would play to the first trick to guarantee his contract for today's hand was 100% cold if played correctly. However, there was a possibility to make an extra trick if one wanted to take a chance. This chance would evaporate if the safe play was made. Yet I feel that the spot led should force a good Declarer to take the correct view and eschew the finesse, even in Match Points. If it were to lose, as appeared likely, and an obvious switch made, the "cold" hand could easily go down. Actually, the hand was played thirteen times with eight failing to make it. So you can see that care pays off, in any kind of game.

Mrs. Sylvia Le Savoy was Declarer playing with Mrs. Phillip Finkle. Everyone was vulnerable. East Dealer with this bidding:

P	4♦	End

In most cases the bidding went exactly as shown, two pairs going on to Slam, the rest wisely stopping at four. The majority of the Declarers didn't even make that. I take a dim view of 27 point Slams anyhow and South should realize that the total combined points between him and his partner could easily be just that.

Every West led the Heart 10 which the eight careless Declarers finessed, losing to the King. Back came the Club Queen, quite a normal switch with that weakness in Dummy staring East in the face along with the now singleton Heart Ace. Now the whole hand depended on the Diamond finesse being successful. When Trumps were drawn and that finesse tried and Declarers Queen won by East's King, two more Clubs were cashed and the hand set one at Four, never mind six.

True, you might say that it was exceedingly bad luck that all of these bad things happened together on the same hand. Yet if you actually think about the hand as Mrs. Le Savoy did you would see that the only finesse that mattered at all was that same Heart finesse for if the hand were played the safe way as mentioned, the Diamond finesse working would make no difference at all as you will see.

Our Declarer examined her chances after the opening Heart lead and saw the danger that might exist so she went right up with the Heart Ace and pulled Trumps meanwhile being careful to leave the high Trump in Dummy for an important entry. Ending in her own hand she now took that Diamond finesse not caring whether it worked or not. If it worked she would not lose a Diamond but would still have to lose two Clubs and the Heart now waiting to be cashed. If it lost, after the Defenders cash their Heart and switch to the Club, she wins her Ace, cashes her other Diamond Honor and then goes over to Dummy's high Trump to discard a Club loser on the Diamond Ace. True, all finesesses might have worked but that opening lead of the Heart 10 should have made a careful Declarer extremely wary of possible future developments.

As you can see, after going up with the Heart Ace at trick one, the success of the Diamond finesse is absolutely immaterial as far as gaining a trick is concerned. The only thing is that a good Declarer, after having gone up with that Heart Ace, should hope the Diamond finesse loses so that the Declarer who did take the finesse at trick one will be penalized and go down by losing both finesesses and the two Clubs. For if the Diamond finesse works now those Declarers will still make the contract, all they will lose is the Heart and two Clubs.

Moral: Never sacrifice a good contract for the sake of an over-trick.

Miriam Hospital Receives Grant

The Miriam Hospital has been awarded a $16,850 grant from The Rhode Island Foundation for the purchase of equipment to freeze, store and subsequently wash blood. It is anticipated that by freezing blood and thus preserving its storage life, the state's blood supply will be increased and blood "spoilage" will decrease.

With the capability of freezing blood The Miriam will be able to maintain supplies of red cells that are rare or have special clinical importance. Freezing will make it possible for a healthy person who has a rare blood type or a multiple antibody problem to have his own blood banked on a routine basis. This will provide assurance that in the event of accident or illness the patient will be able to draw against this personal reserve. Predonation of blood by an individual prior to elective surgery, thereby allowing the individual to be transfused with his own blood, either at The Miriam or at another hospital, will also be possible.

Frozen blood offers safety features that are not presently attainable with liquid-stored blood bank blood. The reaction of the recipient against the transfusion will be greatly reduced through freezing and washing. Febrile (fever) reactions are almost entirely eliminated.

Freezing blood prolongs its storage life from the present 21 days to a minimum of two years.

Red Sea Resort Will Enlarge

TEL AVIV — Construction is being renewed for the expansion of hotel facilities at Sharm-e-Sheik, Israel's Red Sea resort at the southwestern end of the Sinai Peninsula.

The go ahead was given this week to complete construction of a 100 room addition to Hotel Sharm, on Na'ama Bay at the location commanding the Straits of Tiran. The new construction, it is said, will cost approximately $1.2 million, on top of almost one million dollars which has already been invested in the development of Hotel Sharm. The new investment includes a government Tourist Ministry loan.

CONDEMN EXPULSION
 LOS ANGELES — Three Red Army Jewish veterans from Minsk who hold a total of 43 orders and medals, have condemned the expulsion of Soviet Nobel Laureate author Alexander Solzhenitsyn as "a manifestation of Stalinism in our time."

PURIM

AT JEWISH COMMUNITY CENTER

IT SEEMS a bit like "High Noon" with our sheriff in the front quite confident of his aim but his friend doesn't seem too sure. We're banking on our man to hit the bull's eye.

PURIM IS FOR DRESSING UP and that is just what these teenagers were doing at the Center. From left to right are Billy Schoening as The Servant; Bobby Schoening as The King; Rene Johnson as Haman; Pilar Almeida with two roles as Esther and Vashti, and Lenny Kroll as MORdechai.

IF IT WEREN'T PURIM just think what would happen! At the Center they were busy getting themselves painted up.

ISN'T IT WONDERFUL to get messed up without getting into trouble? Shaving balloons was one of the carnival features at the Center. (We pity the poor people who had to clean up afterwards.)

THE TIME FOR CARNIVAL!

AND IT'S NOT EVEN SUMMER! The pool area at the Center was so warm and sunny, we were tempted to jump in. In the boat are Thaddeus Segal, Anne Friar, Joshua Segal and Fabian Alfi. Who the marauder is coming up from the deep, we couldn't say. It wasn't until the picture was printed that we even knew he was there.

PUT ON BY THE USY AT TEMPLE EMANU-EL

MANNIE PERLMAN, son of Cantor and Mrs. Ivan E. Perlman, is the advisor for the United Synagogue Youth group at Temple Emanu-El. This group works on social, cultural and religious programs centering around the temple. Proceeds from the Purim Carnival, which was planned by the USY, will be used for its various programs. On stage are Steven Jacober, Mark Felder, David Sondler (at the mike) and Michael Rosenstein. David and Michael were cochairmen of the carnival.

HE WOULDN'T have been so worried if he had known how bad the customer's aim was.

IT'S OBVIOUS that not only the children enjoy themselves at Purim Carnivals.

Soviet Union Gave $2.6 Billion To Arabs

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union provided the Arab nations with more than $2.6 billion in military equipment during the Yom Kippur War, Admiral Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told the House Appropriations Committee. His estimate compared with the $1 billion the United States said it spent on supplies to Israel and the $2.2 billion in aid voted by Congress for Israel.

He said that while the heavy use of Soviet-made anti-tank and anti-aircraft missiles by Egypt and Syria did not represent a new era in military strategy, it had spurred development of better U.S. weapons to deal with them.

Hello Again!
 News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

TSU-CHIN: It's the name of a game with some similarities to Soccer and it was played in China in the third and fourth centuries BC according to the Guinness Sports Record Book which has all kinds of unbelievable recordings. So, if the Oceaneers decide to play games in the Civic Center, will the number of players in action at a time be reduced and will the great game of Soccer, or Tsu-chin, adopt a new name? Ah, yes, a rose by any other name, etc. At the time of this writing the Soccer Oceaneers were planning to play home games in the new Soccer League at McCoy Stadium, in Pawtucket, of course. But rumor has it that those Oceaneers might play at Brown U. Field. The Boston Astros are said to be definitely interested in playing Soccer in Boston Garden. It would be good for them and good for the Garden, too, because the big Boston operation lost a tenant when the Hockey Whalers moved to Hartford.

SUGGESTION: A suggestion which will be followed, no doubt, is a name change for the Hartford Hockey Whalers. For years and years teams from New Bedford have been "Whalers" because there's where those who went down to the sea in ships after Whales went from. But you don't go harpooning Whales from Hartford. I think that at one time Hartford athletic teams were known as the "Senators" because the Connecticut State House is there. Prominent Hartford teams played baseball in the old Eastern League and the "Insurance City" was a hotbed for Roller Polo at one time. That ancient and honorable game was once played in Hartford in "Footguard Hall" which afforded an unusual friendliness for defensemen. The place was so small, the back rink men could almost shake hands while playing in perfect position. It would have been a tough time landing a Whale in there and I'm sure that the Whalers will have room enough in the new Arena for harpooning the hockey opposition even if they don't land a Whale.

THE RI REDS: "Who is handling publicity for the RI Reds now?" was the question asked Miss Florence Donovan who has been with the Providence Hockey Club longer than anyone although she doesn't look it. "Bill Castro," answered Florence. "Is that the Guy in Cuba?" was the followup question. And of course the answer was two or three giggles and a pleasant, "No." "Of course, we're going to make the playoffs," Miss Donovan continued. "It's only a question of whether we make it in first or second place. We'll know soon. The regular season ends on March 24."

HERE AND THERE: The "Sons of Irish Kings" were wearing their Crowns at the annual St. Patrick's Day Dinner the other night. It was an impressive sight of dignity and refinement as little groups meshed together and then disintegrated while forming other groups. The sports talk concerned the Providence College Friars and their possibilities in the NCAA Tournament but conversations drifted to nostalgia. Remember this and remember that, etc.?

LIKE BABE RUTH! Dr. Joseph Johnston, preparing to celebrate a birthday, was conversing with Mayor Joseph Doorley and the talk must have been about some of "Joe's" accomplishments. Which birthday was Dr. Johnston approaching? It would be tough hazarding a guess for the great medico doesn't appear much different than he did when he was clubbing a baseball to the distant extremities of the various fields in the Tim O'Neil big League and also in the old professional Colonial League. Joe Johnston's homers in those days were of the Babe Ruth type. There was no question about it. When he hit one, you knew immediately that it was good for the circuit. So, belated "Happy Birthday, Dr. Johnston." And always remember that "years don't make age!" Keep in there hitting home runs.

TALK BOXING: Joe Celletti, the perennial boxing enthusiast, talking with Representative Edward Beard, a former "Leather Pusher" himself. They must have been discussing Celletti's latest promotional idea, a mixed match exhibition showing just how a boxer would fare with a Karate specialist. Celletti says the boxer would win. SIX MILLION CRUZEIROS! — That's what Brazil and Uruguay attracted at a Soccer game in Rio de Janeiro! CARRY ON!

Black Jewish Boxer Knocks Out Opponent

PARIS — Eighteen million Euro-vision television watchers saw American middleweight boxer Benny Briscoe, wearing a Star of David on his trunks, battle his way to victory against the younger Argentinian favorite, Tony Mundine, in the Paris "Palais de Sports."

Unmarked, the Black Jewish convert raised his hands in victory and rubbed the Star of David as a sign of good luck after he successfully defeated Mundine with a knockout in 14 minutes of combat.

Later in the dressing room still clad in red trunks and red robe with both imprinted with a white Star of David, the 31-year-old Philadelphian said: "I never once doubted I would win with a knockout."

Fight organizer Maurice Ben Haim said that during his stay in Paris, Briscoe insisted on eating kosher food, putting on phylacteries and saying his prayers.

APPOINTED MANAGER: Moshe Eilat has been appointed as district manager of El Al Israel Airlines in the New England area, based in Boston, Massachusetts. He is taking the place of Mordechai Savitsky who has returned to Israel to take up a new position at the head office.

Mr. Eilat, born in Jerusalem in 1938, is a graduate of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem where he majored in history and political science. A member of the Israeli Defense Force, he has fought in two wars. He has been employed by El Al Israel Airlines since 1964. His arrival in Boston, planned for September 1973, was delayed due to the Yom Kippur War.

'Black Hebrews' Form Groups

NEW YORK — The B'nai Zakan, an organization of self-styled "Black Hebrews," is believed by police to be affiliated with young gangs that are terrorizing and extorting money from merchants in large areas of Brooklyn.

The group, which according to its "Rabbi," Chaim Ben Israel, formed a coalition of youth gangs "to teach Torah and self-defense" is accused by police of receiving a percentage of the gangs' take from extortion, the New York Times reported.

"Police say they received reports that B'nai Zakan was distributing guns to the Tomahawks and the Outlaws in return for a cut of the monies extorted from store owners," the Times report said.

The Tomahawks and Outlaws are two of the youth gangs said to be demanding money in return for "protection" from merchants in the Bedford-Stuyvesant, Crown Heights and Brownsville-East New York sections of Brooklyn.

Rufus Spruiell, a leader of B'nai Zakan, who is employed as a correction officer and has ties with the Liberal Party, said his group was actually controlling the youth gangs and alleged that "the police are just jealous because we are doing their job for them."

Rabbi Chaim Ben Israel remarked, "We are like godfathers to the gangs. They respect us because of our knowledge of the Torah," the Times reported.

He admitted supplying the gangs with guns but added, "Everybody in this neighborhood got a gun."

The Times said that according to police intelligence reports, the B'nai Zakan was established in Brooklyn in the early 1960s, an outgrowth of a B'nai Zakan group in Chicago.

The Times said that police went to the Brooklyn District Attorney with allegations against the group last year but lacked enough hard evidence to bring a case before a grand jury.

INFORMATION CAMPAIGN
JERUSALEM — Plans for a world-wide information campaign to counter massive anti-Israel propaganda were devised at a special four-day session of the Zionist General Council which was called to study post-Yom Kippur War problems.

START CAMPAIGN
NEW YORK — A campaign has been started by the Queens Division of the American Jewish Congress, in cooperation with federal, state and borough agencies, to halt activities of landlords who buy good housing, force out middle class tenants and rent the housing, mainly apartments, to welfare families at very high rentals, producing slum conditions. Rabbi I. Usher Kirshblum, chairman of the housing commission of the Queens division, said that Queens, with 675,000 Jews, had the largest Jewish population of the city's five boroughs and many outstanding institutions. He said the AJCongress was committed to the maintenance of viable communities, which he said were threatened by the activities of such landlords.

Rabbi Kahane Stands Trial For Conspiracy In Israel

JERUSALEM — Rabbi Meir Kahane, leader of the Jewish Defense League, went on trial here today, charged with conspiracy against diplomats and against a large American oil firm.

Three letters and a cablegram were introduced that were said to have been sent by Rabbi Kahane to Jewish Defense League offices in New York authorizing "anything necessary" to upset the visit to the United States last year by the Soviet leader, Leonid I. Brezhnev.

One of the letters also suggested the kidnapping and shooting of a Soviet diplomat in Washington, the bombing of the Soviet and Iraqi missions there and the bombing of the Occidental Petroleum Company offices in New York. The letter said the bombing would serve as a warning to Occidental's president, Dr. Armand Hammer, not to conduct business with the Russians while emigration to Israel was being prevented.

Rabbi Kahane admitted that he had sent the cablegrams and letters. He began a strenuous attack on the Government's policy on emigration from the Soviet Union but was interrupted by the prosecutor who produced a letter from Premier Golda Meir saying that information on this subject was "a state secret."

England's Chief Rabbi Criticizes The NRP

LONDON — Britain's Chief Rabbi Immanuel Jakobovits issued a statement here sharply critical of Israel's National Religious Party for refusing to join a coalition government over the "Who is a Jew?" issue.

"The belated insistence of the NRP on pursuing the 'Who is a Jew?' controversy is a disastrous blow to the vital national and religious interests of the Jewish people at a time of supreme crisis" and "cannot but gravely weaken Israel's leadership and unity when these are indispensable assets for the security and survival of the Jewish State," Rabbi Jakobovits said.

He noted in his statement that as a result of the NRP's tactics "the Law of Return has not been amended. Neither will religious influence continue to be exercised within the government."

Rabbi Jakobovits' statement could also be taken as implied criticism of Israel's Chief Rabbinate, which forbade the NRP from joining a government that refused to amend the Law of Return according to Orthodox demands.

Rabbi Jakobovits observed that while "all committed Jews are deeply concerned to resolve the 'Who is a Jew?' issue, a principle of such universal ramification should not be determined by political bargaining."
