Sadat Pledges To Continue Peace Initiative

By Yitzhak Shargil

TEL AVIV (JTA): President Anwar Sadat of Egypt pledged, in a message to the Israeli people, that "I shall continue with my peace initiative to the end. Political handicaps and misunderstandings between me and the Israeli Premier will not prevent me from going on with my plans," he told Yediot Achronot correspondent Ilan Kfir in a Vienna interview published here.

Sadat, who said he was very deeply disappointed that the Israeli Cabinet has rejected his six-point peace proposal and appeared pessimistic over the prospects of this week's meeting between the Israeli and Egyptian foreign ministers in London, declared: "I am a natural optimist. Therefore, I shall not let go my plans until peace is achieved."

He asked the Israeli mass circulation daily to "Please tell the Israelis, especially the young generation who has suffered so much from the wars, please tell them that we all hope that the October (1973) war was the last war. Tell the Israelis in my name and in the name of the Egyptian nation as follows: permanent peace — yes. Security arrangements and proper guarantees — yes. But controlling occupied Arab territories — no. Sovereignty over Arab territories — no."

Sadat said he was aware of Israel's sensitivity over security. "In the negotiations," he said, "we shall try to get proper guarantees for the security of all sides. Israel and we are in need of such security arrangements." He dwelt on the need for peace "and to reach that we need good neighborly relations in every possible meaning that one can find for it in the dictionaries," Sadat said.

Court Of Public Opinion Finds Shcharansky Innocent

PHILADELPHIA (JTA): Anatoly Shcharansky was found innocent by a Philadelphia Court of Public Opinion. The symbolic courtroom trial, scheduled to parallel the actual trial in the Soviet Union of human rights activist and refusenik Anatoly Shcharansky, was held last week at City Hall. Approximately 300 people observed the proceedings.

Philadelphians of all faiths found Anatoly Shcharansky, 30-year-old Moscow computer technician, innocent of all charges and urged that he should be allowed to emigrate to Israel. "Presiding Judge,"

Edward Rosenberg — in reality a Philadelphia Common Pleas judge — said, "The jury and I have concluded that, based on the testimony presented, the Soviet Union has denied Anatoly Shcharansky his fundamental human rights."

At the same time, the "jurors" — consisting of real-life judges, business, labor, community, Christian and Jewish religious and lay leaders — found the Soviet Union guilty of gross violations of human rights, and of violating its own laws and international agreements to which it is a signatory.

The proceedings were convened by the Soviet Jewry Council of the Jewish Community Relations Council of Greater Philadelphia (JCRC). The group had invited Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin, or a Soviet representative, to appear at the proceedings to explain the policies of the Soviet government in the Shcharansky case. Neither Dobrynin nor a Soviet representative answered the call to testify.

Tributes to Shcharansky

Connie Smukler, who visited the Soviet Union three times and became a friend of Shcharansky's, attested to his character. She said Shcharansky's "honesty and decency endeared him to all . . . I unqualifiedly add my voice to hundreds of others around the world who . . . vouch for his innocence . . ." Mrs. Smukler is a member of the Philadelphia Soviet Jewry Council.

Sister Gloria Coleman, chairperson of the Interreligious Task Force on Soviet Jewry testified that Shcharansky "fought for Soviet adherence to the human rights principles by which all nations must abide. In addition, he has pushed for an open emigration policy for Soviet Jews and other minorities."

She noted, "the horrors of the Holocaust taught us all, Jew and non-Jew alike, that it is unconscionable to stand by while innocents suffer discrimination at the hands of dictators. It is hard for me to understand the perversity which causes governments to deny basic rights. But the pages of history of mankind are sullied by repeated incidents of man's inhumanity to man."

One of the last Americans to visit Shcharansky before his arrest on March 15, 1977, was Philadelphian Dr. Bernard Dishler, co-chairman of the Soviet Jewry Council of JCRC. "Wherever we went, he was literally followed by eight KGB (secret police) agents . . . Soviet authorities conducted a six-hour search in his elderly parents' apartment in the hope of finding foreign currency and classified material. They found nothing . . . Within days of my leaving the Soviet Union, Shcharansky was arrested and placed in solitary confinement in Lefortovo Prison." The imprisonment has lasted 16 months.

"Defense Attorney" Jules Lippert, co-chairman of the Soviet Jewry Council of JCRC, said, "We have proved our case beyond a shadow of a doubt. Shcharansky is innocent. The Soviet Union has abused his rights and violated its own statutes and international agreements. They should let him go to Israel to join his wife, Avital." "Judge" Rosenberg concluded, "Justice Brandeis once said, 'Sunlight is the strongest disinfectant,' and that's what this trial has tried to do — shed light on one man's innocence." Reflecting for a moment he added, "Unfortunately, this was a symbolic trial. While the Soviets cannot ignore world public opinion, I don't think they're going to come to the same conclusion we did in the real trial."

Shcharansky: 'Next Year In Jerusalem'

MOSCOW - The following is a transcript of Anatoly B. Shcharansky's closing words which appeared in Friday's New York Times, from notes taken by his brother, Leonid:

In March and April, during interrogation, the chief investigators warned me that in the position I have taken during investigation, and held to here in court, I would be threatened with execution by firing squad, or at least 15 years. If I would agree to cooperate with the investigation for the purpose of destroying the Jewish emigration movement, they promised me early freedom and a quick reunion with my wife.

Five years ago, I submitted my application for exit to Israel. Now I'm further than ever from my dream. It would seem to be cause for regret. But it is absolutely otherwise. I am happy. I am happy that I lived honestly, in peace with my conscience. I never compromised my soul, even under the threat of death.

I am happy that I help ed people. I am proud that I knew and worked with such honest, brave and courageous people as Sakharov, Orlov, Ginzburg, who are carrying on the traditions of the Russian intelligentsia. I am fortunate to have been witness to the process of the liberation of Jews of the U.S.S.R.

I hope that the absurd accusation against me and the entire Jewish emigration movement will not hinder the liberation of my people. My near ones and friends know how I wanted to exchange activity in the emigration movement for a life with my wife, Avital, in Israel.

For more than 2,000 years the Jewish people, my people, have been dispersed. But wherever they are, wherever Jews are found, every year they have repeated, "Next year in Jerusalem." Now, when I am further than ever from my people, from Avital, facing many arduous years of imprisonment, I say, turning to my people, my Avital: Next year in Jerusalem.

Now I turn to you the court, who were required to confirm a predetermined sentence: to you I have nothing to say.

The New Threat In Yemen

By
Dr. Jay N. Flahbein
Special to the R.I. Herald

For months the attention of the western powers, particularly the United States, has been focused on the spreading influence of the Soviets in Ethiopia. The Soviet Union had established a naval base at Berbera, in Somalia, near the Bab el Mandeb strait which controls the oil route into the Red Sea and the Suez Canal, through which pass tankers that carry 60% of the oil used by Western Europe and Israel.

One of the causes of the War of 1967 was the closing of the straits at Sharm el Sheik by Nasser. The Bab el Mandeb strait controls the southern entrance to the Red Sea, which is of far greater importance.

When war between Ethiopia and Somalia broke out, the Soviets promptly switched their support to Ethiopia, sacrificing the naval base at Berbera, on which considerable time, energy and money had been expended. It turned out to be a wise decision.

Soviet military advisers along with tanks and artillery were shipped to Ethiopia, with Cuban forces and technicians to operate the sophisticated equipment, which was beyond the capabilities of the Ethiopians.

While the U.S. hesitated as to the extent of their commitment, Ethiopia with Soviet and Cuban help defeated Somalia. The Soviets then began aiding Ethiopia in suppressing a revolt in Eritrea, which commands the oil route from the western bank of the Red Sea.

While Saudi Arabia has been reluctant to speak out, the spread of Soviet influence in the area alarmed her to the extent that she began a tremendous military rearmament program. This Soviet threat was one of the reasons Congress approved the sale of the F-15's to the Saudis.

The new danger is of far greater importance to the Arab League than the Arab-Israeli crisis. The threat of a Mideast war should begin to recede. Peace talks will continue.

The Arab League must realize that Israel's survival as an ally, is more important to them than her destruction, and the resulting chaos, with Syria, Jordan and Egypt squabbling over the spoils. Now more than ever, peace and tranquility in the Middle East should be of paramount importance. While the Soviets threaten to intervene, should Israel actively aid the Christian Arabs in Lebanon, the Arab League will probably discourage further extension of Soviet influence.

The Arab League is also aware that with the West Bank under PLO control, the threat of intervention by the Soviets assumes greater significance, and would keep the area in constant turmoil. Arab leaders, particularly the Saudis, also realize that they too could become targets of Soviet intrigue.

Having abandoned the Berbera Naval Base, The Soviets enlarged their naval base at Aden in South Yemen, which already contains huge underground ammunition dumps, impervious to air attack.

It is from this depot that arms are shipped to Communist guerilla forces in Africa, using the former British airstrips at Muri and Ras Karma, at Aden. The increased activity at this base, with the probability of another base being established in Eritrea, would give the Soviets bases on both sides of the straits. It has lights burning in Washington, the capitals of Europe and particularly Tehran and Riyadh.

Iran borders the Soviet Union in the north, and periodic Soviet provocation necessitates keeping an army at the border. A successful pro-Soviet coup in Afghanistan, which borders Iran on the east, has Iran understandably concerned. Soviet activity is centered not only here, but also in Iraq, which borders Iran on the west, where pro-Soviet forces very nearly succeeded in overthrowing the Iraqi Baathist regime. Iraq recently confirmed the May execution of 21 members of the Soviet supported Iraqi Communist Party who had been found guilty of setting up secret cells inside the armed forces.

A study of the map will illustrate the vast importance the Bab el Mandeb strait holds for Israel as well as the oil producing countries of the area. The common dang will probably prompt a re-evaluation of the Arab-Israeli controversy. The Arab League is bound to realize that a militarily strong Israel can be an important ally in stabilizing the area. In a region seething with intrigue, where enemies become overnight allies, it becomes a distinct possibility.

North and South Yemen are impoverished states on the Indian Ocean to the south of Saudi Arabia. They possess few natural resources. North Yemen is heavily subsidized by Saudi Arabia. To overcome Soviet intrigue in South Yemen, the Saudis encouraged North Yemen to merge with its neighbor, promising to subsidize the united countries.

President Salem Robaye Ali of South Yemen sent a diplomat with proposals of a merger of the two states. Somehow the briefcase containing the documents was switched with one containing a bomb, and when it was opened in the office of President Ahmed Hussein Ghashmi, both men were killed.

As soon as these facts became known, the pro-Soviet members of South Yemen's Presidential Council, attacked the Presidential Palace, crushed the Palace guards, loyal Preparations containing cornstarch may "weep," that is, become watery, if they are undercooked or if they are chilled immediately after cooking. Such preparations should be cooked gently. After reaching the boiling point, they should be cooked for seven to ten minutes, care should be taken not to overcook such preparations, however, since excess cooking will result in a thin mixture, the cooked preparation should be cooled, stirring occasionally at room temperature before chilling. It is best to use such preparations as soon as possible after they are chilled.

Journalist Gets 5 Year Term

TEL AVIV: A Greek Cypriot Communist on a newspaper assignment here was sentenced to five years in jail recently for photographing potential targets for the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Panayiotis Paschalis, 38, was convicted on a charge of collecting information with the purpose of harming the security of the state. He admitted during his trial that he had taken hundreds of photographs commissioned by representatives of the P.L.O. in Cyprus. He also collected maps and statistical data for the organization, he said. But he asserted that the material was not secret.

The district court here ruled, however, that an intent to harm the state had been established. The maps were detailed, and the photographs were largely of seaside locations featuring hotels and restaurants frequented by tourists, theaters, movie houses and crowded streets.

Hans Lebrecht, 62, a member of the Israeli New Communist Party's central committee and a correspondent for several Communist newspapers in Europe, was acquitted of charges of helping gather the material and covering up the project.

The court acquitted Mr. Paschalis of a charge of "gathering information for an enemy" on the ground that the P.L.O. was not a state.

Swastikas Sold In San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (JTA) - A leading flag manufacturer that sells flags to the State of California and the city of San Francisco also manufactures and sells the red, white and black swastika flag of Nazi Germany, the San Francisco Bulletin disclosed. Nazi swastika armbands are also sold over the counter, or under, by a concessionaire at a local F.W. Woolworth Variety Store, the Bulletin's assistant editor Phil Bronstein reported.

The Paramount Flag Co., does over $4000 a year in business with the State, according to the State purchasing manager, Frank Oliver, and the city buys from $1200-$1500 worth of flags from the firm, senior buyer Ray Erikson said.

Jeff Sutter, manager of Paramount, acknowledged that the firm manufactures the Nazi emblem, which is not illegal. But, he told the Bulletin, it does so on special order and does not advertise the item. He said Paramount sells only a few dozen Nazi flags a year in addition to sales to a Los Angeles outlet that supplied film companies with replicas of the flags. Paramount also carries other Nazi emblems including the SS flag and Herman Goering's personal standard.

At Woolworth's, Don Gottlieb, who is Jewish, Bronstein reported, sells the Nazi armband at his concession, the profits of which he shares with Woolworth's. "Originally, Gottlieb sold the armbands displayed on the counter along with buttons, coins, masks and bumper stickers he regularly sells. But Gottlieb-said his father, who is an observant Jew, complained bitterly as did a customer and Gottlieb removed the armbands to a drawer under the counter and now sells them 'on request'" Bronstein reported.

Chinese Visitors Lunch Kosher Style

NEW YORK (JTA): Nearly 200 visitors from the People's Republic of China, who were taken to Staten Island by the State Department to see "typical America" on Independence Day, had lunch at a kosher Jewish delicatessen.

Shelly Goldman, who operates Adelman's Kosher Delicatessen on Staten Island, said he hosted 180 members of the Performing Arts Company of the People's Republic of China. The meal for the Chinese visitors was free, although some of the overflow who went to McDonald's had to pay there.

Goldman said he served the Chinese the traditional chicken soup prepared in the Chinese style. He said the Chinese are not meat eaters but some tried hot dogs which are similar to a dish in China. The usually taciturn Chinese maintained their image, saying only the food was "very interesting," Goldman said.

Goldman said he hosted the meal because he is a "friend" of ballet, because he saw an opportunity for some publicity and because he considers himself a "citizen of the world." Adelman's, which has been on Staten Island for two years, is a branch of another delicatessen by the same name that has been in Brooklyn's Boro Park section for 40 years.

Wandering Ring Has New Owner

JERUSALEM: Its monetary value is only $650.00, but its real worth — after wandering from one woman's hand to another over the past 150 years — is much greater.

Schwester Selma, the 94-year-old former head nurse of Jerusalem's Shaare Zedek Hospital, recently handed over the diamond ring after holding it for safe keeping for nine years.

It reached Schwester Selma in 1969, when a tourist from Vienna brought it to her after learning of the nurse's devotion to the hospital since 1916. The ring, composed of a central, solitaire-cut, one carat diamond surrounded by baguettes, had belonged to the tourist's sister, who was deported and put to death by the Nazis. Before she was taken away, she asked her sister to give the ring, a family heirloom, "to a human being who has never married and has devoted her life to helping other people." The woman said, "The ring shall be a wandering ring. The person who gets it shall pass it on in the same way."

Schwester Selma, who lives in a small room on the hospital's second floor and never married, last year asked Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek to keep the ring for her in the municipal safe and search for a proper heir. Finally, after dozens of consultations and having the city's legal adviser draw up a contract, the nurse agreed to the mayor's choice.

The "temporary" owner is Mira Ettinger, a Hebron-born school nurse. Ettinger worked at the Hadassah Hospital on Mt. Scopus before 1948, and went to Aden to treat Yemenite children who arrived in Israel during "Operation Magic Carpet." She also worked at Lod and Ramle with immigrants who came through Cyprus from war-torn Europe.

Ex-SS DACHAU GUARD ELECTED MAYOR

DUSSELDORF: Josef Friedinger, 67, a former SS guard at Dachau concentration camp who has been a member of the Grafrath town council in Upper Bavaria for 23 years, has been elected third mayor with the support of the first and second mayors.

Social Democratic circles have protested that Friedinger's Nazi record, including early service with an elite SS regiment, was incompatible with the post of mayor in a democratic state.

These circles have emphasized in their protest that Friedinger, who has now resigned from the Christian Social Union, was known as "an unrepentant Nazi still admiring Adolf Hitler."

BUENOS AIRES (JTA): The DAIA has sent a note to the Soviet Ambassador here denouncing, on behalf of Argentine Jewry, the "infamous trials" of Jewish dissidents and demanding an end to anti-Jewish propaganda. The DAIA also urged the USSR to recognize the right of Soviet Jews to Emigrate to Israel.

MARC EVAN SWERDLICK, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Swerdlick of Lexington, Massachusetts, became Bar Mitzvah recently at Temple Isaiah, Lexington. Services were conducted by Rabbi Cary David Yales. A reception was held at the Sheraton-Lexington. Participating in the celebration were the confirmand's sister, Jodi, and brother, Jeffrey, and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Pabian of Pawtucket. Guests attended from Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Florida and Connecticut. Music was provided by Billy Winiker and his orchestra. Marc is a student at Diamond Junior High School and Temple Isaiah Hebrew School.

A Very Special Feeling

By Meir Kahane

President Jimmy Carter telephoned Mayor Eddy Koch recently to congratulate him on the passage by the House of Representatives of the New York City loan-guarantee bill. I quote the Mayor: "It was a very special feeling...It was just awfully nice - especially for a Jewish kid from the Bronx." With a certain fundamental reservation, I admire Edward Koch and consider him to be a fair man and a good mayor. But his comment arouses within me an unpleasant feeling, one that is similar to my reaction when the then Prime Minister of Israel, Golda Meir, visited the Vatican and was received by the Pope. In describing her feelings upon meeting the head of the Catholic Church, she said:

"I thought to myself, Here is Golda Meir from a little town in Russia, daughter of a Jewish carpenter, meeting the Pope."

The fundamental cause of assimilation is the failure to understand why it is important to be Jewish. The lack of any difference between Jews and non-Jews; the failure to perceive any special, different quality in being Jewish—quite naturally leads to assimilation, for why should one raise barriers between peoples and faiths when those barriers are only artificial ones, as we lack any natural or logical ones?

The sad truth is that Ed Koch and Golda Meir both do not really understand what being Jewish is and in this way they are joined by millions of Jews who, outwardly, are proud and active Jews. To be sure, Golda, Koch and all the rest can give emotional reasons for being Jewish. On the one hand, they are Jewish because of the gentile who will not let them be anything else. The Socialist-Zionism of Golda Meir came into being only because of a Jew-hating Czar and pogroms by the gentile workers and peasants who refused to accept Jews as fellow oppressed. The secular Zionism of the Goldas, Ben Gurions, Pinskers and Herzls was the creation, not so much of Jews, but of gentiles. If one pauses for an honest moment, he will realize that the Nazis of Skokie did more for Jewish identity than all the sermons of the Windy City rabbis.

Or there is, on the other hand, the "identity" born of nostalgia. The Jew who lives in Edward Koch is one step from a traditional atmosphere, more or less. He remembers Jewish Mama: he remembers the Sabbath candles and perhaps the wine of kiddush: he remembers the chulent bubbling away all night on the stove.

He is a Jew because of nostalgia, but how does one pass on to his child an emotion that was never experienced by the young one you seek to convince? If there is no better reason to be Jewish than constant cries that "the goy will get you" or "I remember chulent" - there will be no Jews. But of course, there is a better reason, an intellectual truth that transcends nostalgia. There is a reason that marks the Jew as very special and it behooves them to understand that in any meeting between a Pope and a Jew. It is the former who is honored at being in the presence of the latter. It is the President who should be touched as he speaks to the representative of the Jewish people.

The Jew is not merely one More people; he is simply not Another faith. The Jew is a very special people, chosen by the All Mighty as His distinct children. "You are children unto the L-rd, your G-d...for you are a holy people and the L-rd has chosen you to be for Him a special people from all the nations that are on the face of the earth." It is not a cheap thing we are speaking of here! It is the awesome blessing of being selected from all the peoples on this earth to be a special child of our Father in Heaven. "And to place you higher than all the nations that He has made, in glory, in fame and in majesty...not for nothing does the Jew raise the cup of wine of Havdala every Saturday night as the Sabbath ends and shouts:

"Hamavdil...He who separates the holy and the ordinary; light and darkness, Israel and the nations..."

We are a special people not because our skin or blood are different, nor even because of intellectual differences. We are special because we have been called to holiness and spiritual elevation. We are different and chosen for greatness, for a destiny that translates the Holiness of the All Mighty into a similar spirit within man. To be Jewish is to be different. It is to be the special child of the All Mighty. How much greater a reason than chulent...

So let us know it: let us recognize who we are. And if we ourselves recognize our innate special greatness, the gentile will, too. If we react with the dignity of the princes that we are, then the gentile will sense it too. It is not only our rabbis of the Talmud who understood who we are: "If not kings, than at least princes." The noble Jabotinsky included it in his Betar Hymn as he wrote, "Hadar, pride! A Hebrew even in poverty is a leader; whether slave or serf you were created a prince."

No, it is not Ed Koch or Golda Meir who have to be awed in the presence of a Pope or President. Let them both return to their roots, to their source, and they will stand with quiet dignity before kings and princes tower over them.

Israel - A Fuller Jewish Life

Ezer Weitzman is Israel's answer to Ambassador Young.

It seems that history really does repeat itself. Ambassador Young has embarrassed the President and America's political credibility by making a statement without any forethought on his part. Political leaders were correct in calling for his immediate resignation. America will survive this political foolhardiness till the next national election; however, there are other lands where blunt, tactless, undiplomatic statements can harm national survival. One of these lands is Israel.

For the last few years, Ezer Weitzman has attempted to enter the political arena. He was looked upon by many Israelis as a Jossel (JOHNNY)-come-lately who wanted all the political plums. One Rabbi, who has met many members of the Likud leadership, told me that upon meeting Weitzmann one sees a ruthless and powerhungry man.

It was not too long ago that he made his tirades against Begin on the debates over settling Jews in the Liberated territories. This week, he has started another round of verbal attacks on the Likud leadership. It is unfortunate that the Prime Minister made his first big mistake in office, not giving (Weitzman to) Peres' party when Dayan switched allegiance to Likud. Weitzman's statements feed the anti-Semitic fires of Egypt's propaganda, the way Ambassador Young's statements feed the flames of anti-dissident propaganda in Russia.

As if Israel hasn't enough troubles, now the so-called Chief Rabbi of England, Rabbi Jacobovitz, has attacked the Begin policies, as well as the policies of Gush Emunim, the organization of nationalist-religious Jews, in a vicious manner. He has come under attack by his fellow Orthodox Rabbis for his statement. While known for his religious knowledge, he is also well known for his lack of historical knowledge. Doesn't Rabbi Jacobovitz realize what the party of such "TZADDIKS" as Ben-Gurion, Rabin, and Peres brought upon Israel?

The older generation of Sephardic Jews brought their children to Israel to start a fuller Jewish life. There, they found a Jewish Agency that sought to deprogramme the youth from Yiddishkeit. The parents were put into "temporary slums." The policy of the Socialist Party was to destroy Yiddish, Yiddishkeit, and Frumkeit. When Georgia's Jews (Russia's Georgia) came to Israel seeking homes in a religious environment, they were placed in anti-religious neighborhoods so that their children could learn to be good Hebrews and not be contaminated by religious "fanaticism." There was a story told about a frum family that came from Russia to Israel a couple years ago. The parents were asked to allow their son to live elsewhere in Israel for a while so he could become adjusted to the country. Little did his father, who was Shomer Shabbos, even during Stalin's rule, know what the Socialist do-gooders had in store. They brought him to an anti-religious Kibbutz and he was taught to despise his father's practices. When the son came to see the father, a battle ensued. The father was frum under Premier Stalin; the son was not under Premier Rabin. The son attacked his father's piety, and now they never speak or see each other.

There are now reports from Israel of non-

From Badr To Tabuk

By Mordechai Nissan

There is an obvious religious dimension to the Arab conflict with Israel; Islam is the focus of Arab identity and Arab militancy. And it seems odd that Saudi Arabia — the territorial centre of Islam — has had so little direct involvement in the Middle East dispute.

There are many expressions of the role of Islam in Arab political thinking on Israel. Anti-Semitic teaching in Arab countries, based on Koranic antagonism to Jews, is an example. The names of PLO brigades that harken back to Islamic victories against non-Moslems are suggestive. Special attention should be accorded the choice of the code-name Badr for the attack against Israel in October 1973, recalling Mohammed's first major military victory in 624. The battle of Badr, like the attack on Yom Kippur, was a successful surprise thrust that altered the face of Islam in history.

Mohammed's victory at Badr, an oasis in Arabia, proved Moslem military strength and vindicated the new faith of Islam against Jewish and Christian communities. Badr was full of religious and political significance for the rise of the Islamic State.

The road from Badr led north to Tabuk six years later, in 630. At Badr Mohammed led 300 troops; at Tabuk he had an army of 30,000 men. Badr was just the start of the process by which Islam gained supremacy; that process culminated impressively at Tabuk.

In May 1973 Operation Badr was chosen as the code-name for the planned surprise attack by Syria and Egypt on Israel. The date of October 6 was picked as it fell on 10 of Ramadhan — the day when Mohammed began preparations for the battle of Badr.

Operation Badr has now come to signify the reversal of the tide in the Mideast conflict as the Arabs, with a symbolic military success, have asserted their political and religious strength. The world of 1978 is in many ways not the world of 1973 — mainly because of the Arabs. Will Saudi Arabia, the home of Mohammed's prophecies, follow his path from Badr to Tabuk? Are we living in the period (comparable to 624-30) prior to the northern offensive at Tabuk, 250 kms. from Eilat and 400 kms. from Jerusalem?

Tabuk has become publicized lately as an enormous Saudi military base now under construction in the northwestern part of the country. This is linked to arms purchases that add up to some $14b. since 1973, which is about half of all purchases by the entire Arab world. Tabuk faces Israel, and not Saudi oil fields more than 1,000 kms. away. Attack, not defense, seems to be Tabuk's military purpose.

The Islamic dimension to Arab rejection of Israel has been based on the idea that a Jewish State in the Mideast — "the Arab heartland" — is unacceptable and illegitimate. Islamic pride and Arab honour will not tolerate it permanently. From a certain point of view, Saudi Arabia should be the natural leader in the struggle with Israel: she is the true home of Islam and has the resources to carry on the fight. The elevation of Tabuk to strategic importance after Operation Badr suggests that Saudi leaders may now assume the historic role Islam lays upon her. The Arab sense of history, and the religious meaning of Islamic politics, should convince Israel to keep a close eye on the road to Tabuk.

The Arabs look to their past for guidance and inspiration. Israel can look to the Arabs' past for guidelines and inference. But no purpose will be served if the Arab historical sense is not appreciated.

Suez Record 'Goes Missing'

by Mark Arnold-Forster

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has mislaid, and may have destroyed, the text of the Anglo-French-Israeli agreement to co-ordinate their onslaught on Egypt in November, 1956.

The agreement, signed after a clandestine meeting at a villa at Sevres on October 24, 1956, foresaw an Israeli attack on Egyptian positions in Sinai, to be followed by a giant Anglo-French attack on Egypt itself. The reason to be given for the second attack was to be that the first had endangered the Suez Canal, recently nationalized by President Nasser of Egypt.

The written protocol of the Sevres meeting, the original existence of which was recently acknowledged in his memoirs by the then Foreign Secretary, Selwyn Lloyd, is probably the most important secret treaty or international agreement concluded by Britain since the Second World War — and perhaps the only one.

Yet, 12 days after my original inquiry about the existence of the Sevres document, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office could say last week only that the document had not been traced.

The Lloyd memoirs, extracts from which were published in The Sunday Times on June 18, said that the document had been signed on Britain's behalf by Mr. (later Sir) Patrick Dean, then a Deputy Under-Secretary of State at the Foreign Office, in the presence of one of Mr. Lloyd's private secretaries, Mr. Logan.

The suggestion that the Sevres document may have been destroyed — a suggestion that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office did not deny last week — arises from a remark by the then Secretary of the Cabinet, Sir Norman Brook to Sir Hugh Carleton Greene in 1966, when Lord Normanbrook (as he was by then) was chairman of the governors of the BBC, and Sir Hugh was director-general.

In a letter in the Times, Sir Hugh wrote of his conversation with Lord Normanbrook: "I remarked that one day presumably the whole truth (about Suez) would emerge. 'Damned good care,' replied Lord Normanbrook, 'has been taken to see that the whole truth never does emerge.' He would go no further, but I assumed at the time, and still assume, that he was referring to the destruction of important papers."

As was evident when I was trying to report the truth about Suez for the Guardian at the time, the Sevres protocol was the most important paper on the whole affair. This is confirmed by the Lloyd memoirs, which gave an outline of the sequence of events as foreseen at Sevres.

Although the Lloyd memoirs dismiss the Sevres protocol as nothing more than an agreed account of the conversations held at the villa, they also predict in accurate detail what happened when hostilities began.

The Public Record Office, which is due to receive the document in 1986, has no trace of it, but would not expect to receive it from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office yet.

Apologizes For Anti-Semitic Float

TORONTO (JTA): The chairman of the Canada Day celebration in Newcastle, New Brunswick, has issued an apology to the public for his committee's failure to prohibit the inclusion of an anti-Semitic float in the two-mile parade featured at the festival earlier this month.

The float publicized the anti-Semitic book, "Web of Deceit," by Malcolm Ross, a school teacher in Moncton, New Brunswick. The book warns that Canada is being undermined by a conspiracy of Jews and Communists which are infiltrating the country's financial institutions, schools and the media. Both the chairman of the parade, Councillor Timothy McCarthy, and the parade marshal, Tom Morris, said afterwards they did not know who sponsored the float.

The parade entry consisted of a small car with three banners which read: "Fight Truth Decay — Read Web of Deceit by Malcolm Ross." McCarthy said he also received a phone call from Dr. Julius Israeli of Newcastle protesting the inclusion of the float in the parade. Israeli, who lost half his family in Auschwitz, has been conducting a campaign against the book since it appeared last April. He has called for the dismissal of Ross and has asked New Brunswick Attorney General Rodman Logan to apply the criminal code against the book.

Women's Rights Lagging

Knesset member Ora Namir, also reported that even those women that have qualifications earn on the average 80 per cent of the salaries of their male counterparts. This is in spite of the "equal work, equal pay" law which is in effect.

The question must be asked just whose side is the law on? In Israel, there are two laws which are to be upheld and contended with—a civil and a religious law. While the civil law of the state considers both man and woman as equal heads of a family and guardians of their children, the religious law, which is binding in matters of marital relations, considers the husband head of the family and the responsible breadwinner.

Religious laws still on the books provide men with other rights which are practically denied to women such as the right to initiate divorce proceedings, give testimonies in some courts or perform central rituals in synagogues.

According to the Commission's report, the Israel Defense Forces do not offer women too many privileges either. Of 700 available jobs in the army, only 200 are open to women and 50-60 percent of female soldiers are clerks.

Even kibbutzim, the agricultural settlements which once liberated women with their pioneering socialistic ideas, now admit that 80 percent of their work in production is done by their male members. Perhaps by choice, women have been stratified into certain types of service branches or work on these cooperative agricultural settlements.

Somewhere in the realm of Israeli society, women are losing their hold on their claim to equality. They may be slipping of their own accord, but they are also being pushed. In truth, women cannot afford to relax for a moment. Public awareness must be created informing the woman of the laws that are on the statute book to protect them. Education is the first and foremost priority.

Holds Public Hearings On War Criminals

By Rochelle Saidel Wolk

NEW YORK (JTA): The Judiciary Subcommittee on Immigration in the U.S. House of Representatives is scheduled to hold public hearings beginning July 19 on the use of Nazi war criminals by American intelligence agencies. This Congressional group headed by Rep. Joshua Eilberg (D.Pa.) has indicated its "dissatisfaction" with a recent report by the General Accounting Office (GAO), the investigative arm of Congress, on the hitherto secret employment of these accused mass murderers.

A GAO report issued on May 15 stated that there was no evidence of a "widespread conspiracy" within the U.S. government to cover up the Nazi war criminal cases that have been festering for almost 30 years. Charles B. Allen, Jr., a well-known expert and author on Nazi war criminals, told the Jewish Telegraphic Agency that he has been called as a witness by the subcommittee to assist them in determining "which war criminals have been used by what agencies."

The GAO report mentions an "unnamed journalist" five times, and says that the CIA, FBI, Defense Department and other agencies had close ties with alleged Nazi war criminals who entered the U.S. after World War II. The "unnamed journalist" is Allen, who says that he challenges the accuracy of the number of Nazi war criminals and collaborators that U.S. intelligence agencies have admitted to the GAO that they "utilized" over the last 30 years, without the knowledge of the American public.

In an exclusive interview, Allen said that "the GAO report indicates that my series of articles, later a small book entitled 'Nazi War Criminals Among Us,' first forced this issue publicly onto the State Department and Justice Department in 1963. The report further shows that my evidence of at least 16 Nazi war criminals that I said were used by agencies of the U.S. government has since been borne out. The GAO learned that the Justice Department and State Department deliberately rejected my inquiries at the time, when I asked how many Nazi war criminals were here and what they were being used for."

Report Does Not Name War Criminals

The GAO report did not name specific Nazi war criminals. One reference to the "unnamed journalist" takes up an entire page of the 32-page text, using Allen's 1963 charges. "The report serves the purpose of at least having made the agencies admit that they 'utilized' Nazi war criminals and collaborators," Allen said. "How, when, and whom, they don't say, and the reason they don't say is that the CIA, FBI and other of the 10 major U.S. intelligence agencies won't tell them."

The GAO further found in its report that the same "unnamed journalist" is now using the figure of 254 for the number of Nazi war criminals and collaborators living in the U.S. This is only two more than the official Immigration and Naturalization Services admission of knowledge of 252, in the GAO report.

According to the GAO findings, the CIA admits to having used Nazi war criminals and the FBI admits having "contacted" 44 Nazi war criminals, and further admits to have employed seven of them. These figures are based solely on a total of 111 "samplings" from the list of 252.

MRS. HOWARD L. BILOW

Miss Rosalind Ellen Ratush of Watertown, Massachusetts, was married to Mr. Howard L. Bilow of Newton, Massachusetts at Temple Beth Torah, Cranston, on Sunday, July 9. Rabbi Gerald B. Zelermeyer and Cantor Bernard Karsch, cousin of the bride, officiated at the 5:30 p.m. ceremony.

A reception was held at the temple. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Milton Filler of Cranston and the late Harold Ratush. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Wolper of Massachusetts and Florida. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bilow of Cranston. The bride was given in marriage by her stepfather, Milton Filler. Maid of honor was Gayle Manowitz. Best man was Dr. Loring Flint. Ushers were Michael Bilow, Andrew Harris, Howard Harris, Stanley Tragar, Jay Bilow and Henry Westreich. The bride is a graduate of Boston University and holds a Master's Degree from Tufts University. She is a school psychologist in Braintree, Massachusetts.

The groom is a graduate of Boston University and received his Master's Degree from the same university. He is a management consultant with Arthur Andersen and Company in Boston. Following a wedding trip to California, the couple will reside in Waltham, Massachusetts.

Paris Court Bans Translation of Mein Kampf

PARIS (JTA): A Paris court last week banned a French translation of Hitler's Mein Kampf. The court ruled the book could neither be published nor circulated unless an explanatory leaflet is included with a detailed extract of the Nuremberg international court ruling on Nazism, Hitler and the book. The court also awarded 80,000 francs ($17,000) damages to the plaintiff, the International League Against Anti-Semitism (LICA).

By a strange twist of history it was LICA which 40 years ago fought hard to have the book translated into French and published in Paris. At the time, LICA felt that French public opinion should be better informed of Hitler's plans and aspirations as outlined in Mein Kampf. LICA president Jean Pierre-Bloch said today he feels that times have changed and that France and Western Europe are already overflooded with neo-Nazi literature and do not need Hitler's original version, too.

When in doubt, a Herald subscription makes the perfect gift for birthdays or holidays.

BRIDGE

Today's hand shows how a clear-thinking Declarer can recover from what turned out to be a "killing lead." Looking at the hands of the Declarer and Dummy it would look as if the contract should be easy to make but after West made his lead, suddenly some of the Declarers thought the roof had fallen in on them. Because some of them failed to recover their composure, they failed to see how they could offset what the opponent had done ending down in a contract that should be made.

South was Dealer, all vulnerable with this bidding:

4S	End

Some Souths decided to open the hand with a forcing bid, two Clubs if they were using Weak Two Bids and Two Spades if they weren't. Fortunately for those who opened one Spade, they found their partner with just enough to make a minimum response. Regardless, every North and South pair ended in Four Spades. Maybe I am a bit premature with that word fortunate for some Declarers went down.

Looking at only the North and South hands you would foresee no difficulty especially when the Trumps break normally. A Diamond lead would allow six to be made, whereas a Club would hold the hand to five. A Heart lead would seem to be the worst as that would knock out that Ace and before you could get to Dummy either by leading low to Dummy's Diamond Jack or playing that Ace first and then low in order to ruff one, four will still be easy.

However, if you examine West's hand you will note that he has a very unfavorable lead in every suit except Trumps so some Wests did lead one. Now see what that does. It effectively stops Declarer from ruffing any Diamonds at all and at the same time stops use of the Club Ace. So it seemed to some Declarers. Some led a low Diamond to the Jack hoping West would have the King and take it. When this failed and East played another Trump the Dummy became useless. Two Hearts and two Diamonds had to be lost.

What can Declarer do after that Trump lead? See what happens if leads the Diamond Queen at trick two. West has a Hobson's choice. If he takes the Queen his best return will be another Trump to stop any Diamond ruffs but that Diamond Jack becomes an entry to use the Club Ace for the tenth trick. Of course, if he ducks that Queen, he will lose even more, but that is unlikely.

At any rate, after the Trump lead the only sure way to make the hand is to play that Diamond Queen for that play is unaffected by any location of the King and must succeed.

Moral: Try not to allow bad luck or "Fixes" throw you. Think carefully how to offset what has been done to you.

Meets With Mrs. Shcharansky, Praises Her For Courage, Dignity

By Joseph Polakoff

WASHINGTON (JTA): Vice President Walter Mondale met with Mrs. Avital Shcharansky for nearly a half-hour at the White House Monday. Addressing reporters before they adjourned for their private conversation, Mondale praised the wife of Soviet Jewish dissident Anatoly Shcharansky for her "courage, dignity and strength" and said he hoped and prayed "you will see a good resolution to all this."

Mondale lauded Shcharansky's final statement to the Moscow court that sentenced him Friday to three years in jail and 10 years in a "strict regime" labor camp. "It will go down in literature as a great statement by an oppressed person," he said. Mrs. Shcharansky, who lives in Israel, was accompanied to the White House by the Charge d'Affaires of the Israeli Embassy, Hanan Barnan. Mondale, who had promised Mrs. Shcharansky publicly last winter that the U.S. will do everything to free her husband, said that "In these awful days" which she is experiencing, "I know that I speak for all Americans when I speak of the dignity and strength you have shown in all the injustices visited upon you and your husband and others." Mrs. Shcharansky would not speak to reporters as she left the White House.

The International Committee for the Release of Anatoly Shcharansky, warmly welcomed Mrs. Shcharansky this afternoon and urged the U.S. to take stern measures to free her husband and others recently imprisoned and to "reverse" the Soviet Union's "repressive policies."

In a crowded hearing room of the Rayburn Office Building, members of both parties in the House expressed their "abhorrence" of the Soviet proceedings against dissidents and called for a U.S. boycott of the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow, reduction of U.S. trade with the Soviet Union, suspension of scientific and technological exchanges and international investigations of the prison conditions of dissidents.

'Now Is The Time To Act'

Mrs. Shcharansky, speaking in Russian, declared, "In your hands is the fate of the Jewish movement in the Soviet Union and the fate of my husband." She added: "The Soviet Union is destroying the Jewish movement and the dissidents. Now is the time to act. The Soviet Union probably does not understand words. The rest of the world is watching us. It depends on us whether humanism will exist in this world or disappear." Referring to the anti-Semitism and repression of the Stalin era, Mrs. Shcharansky warned: "Unless all those oppressed in the Soviet Union get help, the same catastrophe that happened 40 years ago will be repeated."

Organizations Sued

NEW YORK (JTA): A New Rochelle police officer who was wounded by a demented Nazi admirer in a shooting spree last year, has filed a $2 million damage suit against a dozen neo-Nazi organizations and five gun shops and distributors of Nazi memorabilia. The city of New Rochelle was also named as a defendant in the suit brought by officer Raymond Satiro in Westchester Supreme Court and Manhattan Federal Court yesterday.

Satiro was wounded by Frederick Cowan, 33, a collector of Nazi artifacts and Nazi literature, who went berserk at his place of employment. He killed six persons and wounded five before fatally shooting himself. The suit charges that the material distributed by the neo-Nazi organizations and shops appeals to the mentally defective and triggered Cowan's rampage.

Intends To Convert To Judaism

NEW YORK (JTA) - Aulcie Perry, the Black star of the Maccabi Tel Aviv basketball team, who led that team to the European Cup Championship in the early spring of 1977, advised the Jewish Telegraphic Agency by telephone that he is converting to Judaism. Perry led the Maccabi Club to the European title the same night former Premier Yitzhak Rabin announced his resignation from office.

The airways were so cluttered with news of the basketball victory that Rabin was forced to delay his resignation until he could secure time for radio and television coverage. The populace was so jubilant over the great victory spearheaded by Perry that it chanted "Perry for Prime Minister" all night long.

Perry, a studious 6'11", soft spoken individual, has been mulling over the idea of conversion for the last year, he said. In answer to questions, he disclosed, "I intend to reside in Israel permanently and feel very strongly about the people there and have already purchased a 6 room apartment which is nearing completion in Tel Aviv. "I have been studying the Bible and will shortly commence a comprehensive review of Jewish laws and customs under the guidance of a rabbi in Queens, New York. I visit him two or three times a week."

When asked if he realized that the Israel rabbinate was very strict in the matter pertaining to conversion, he said, "I know all about that, as a matter of fact, my teacher-rabbi has tried several times to dissuade me from making this change. I am aware of the fact that it is mandatory for the rabbi to try to convince a proselyte not to convert and he has to admonish that individual several times. Every time I have visited my teacher, he has tried to persuade me against this move, but, I am firm in my convictions that I want to join the fold. I am circumcised already and know that eventually I shall go through a religious procedure at the mikvah."

In the event that Perry goes through with the conversion, he will become the second Maccabi team member to go this route. Previously, Jim Boatwright converted after playing for the club for a period of some three years.

It is Perry's intention to move back to Israel early in September, at which time he will start learning Hebrew at an ulpan. He hopes to meet with an Orthodox rabbi in Tel Aviv, who will help carry out the conversion procedure.

New Yorkers Dedicate Nursery School In Israel

Mr. and Mrs. Abe J. Lieber of Scardale, New York, recently dedicated a nursery school in Kyriat Ono, Israel, in memory of Samuel and Minnie Lieber and Max Pachter.

Providing day care for 85 youngsters VENTURE WOULD MOVE YOUTH INTO LAY LEADERSHIP ROLES

LONDON—A new venture designed to bring more young people into the lay leadership of the Anglo-Jewish community has been officially launched. Known as the Young Jewish Leadership Institute, the scheme is a 40-week study course here, followed by three weeks in Jerusalem based at the Hebrew University in the summer of 1979.

The institute has five sponsoring bodies—the Hebrew University itself; Dor Hemshech, the young leadership arm of the World Zionist Organization; the Zionist Federation; the Board of Deputies of British Jews; and the Spanish and Portuguese Jewish Cong., at whose Maida Vale premises the courses will be held from October 18.

from the ages of six months to four years, the school will enable children from underprivileged families to attain a head start in their education by learning under trained teachers and educational specialists. Psychologists have constantly stressed the importance of schooling for the culturally deprived before formal kindergarten begins and the Lieber's contribution will help achieve the goal of providing improved educational opportunities for those who need it.

The nursery education will teach the children to play, to use their hands and minds and to relate and communicate in a warm and encouraging atmosphere.

The Liebers are old friends of Kyriat Ono, having sponsored a pre-kindergarten for three and four years olds last year.

Both schools were constructed under the auspices of the Israel Education Fund, the United Jewish Appeal's capital fund program which has established 700 educational and cultural facilities in Israel since 1964.

ADL Urges FCC Probe Into Radio Bias

LOS ANGELES (JTA): The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith has requested the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) to fully investigate the proposed sale of Monterey, Calif. radio station KWAY to an individual who is reported to have pledged to exclude Jews from the station's religious programming.

In a letter to the FCC, David A. Lehrer, ADL's Western States Counsel, expressed the ADL's concern that "a licensee of the federal government, a person entrusted with control over a limited national resource, should evidence the intent to abuse that privilege by engaging in anti-Semitic discrimination in determining to whom programming will be made available."

Lehrer noted in his letter that the discriminatory policy enunciated by James E. Brown of Christian Awareness Broadcasting Systems Division may well be in contravention of federal law and regulations as well as California law. Brown is reported to have said that he will broadcast Christian programs and exclude Jews from such programs except for "Jewish people . . . who have converted to Christianity."

In his letter, Lehrer stated: "The ADL views with great concern the decision of an enterprise to predicate business relationships on the basis of the religious beliefs of the individuals with whom the firm deals. The injection of bigoted considerations into the business arena is totally unacceptable and cannot be allowed to go unchallenged. We believe that the avowed policy of KWAY to determine who will be allowed access to the public airwaves on the basis of religions should be prevented by firm FCC action."

TRINITY SUMMER REP:

Performance Takes Your Mind Off The Heat

Trinity Summer Rep's second offering is Tom Stoppard's "The Real Inspector Hound" with "The Shock of Recognition," from Robert Anderson's "You Know I Can't Hear You When the Water's Running" added to round out the evening. George Martin directed with flair and competence.

The half-hour comedy by Anderson opened the entertainment: it concerns a playwright, his producer, and an actor desperately in need of work. Daniel Von Bergen, Peter Gerety, and Richard Jenkins play those respective roles irresistibly, and Amy Van Nostrand is exactly right as the Bennington girl turned secretary for a summer. Paced right, built carefully, moving with sureness through the laughs that start slow and continue until they're belly-laughs, "The Shock of Recognition" is perfect for the summertime scene. Gerety, as the flamboyant, hard-driving producer Herb Miller, is especially good. Among the neat scenic touches are posters proclaiming "Herb Miller Productions," with one of the "Olneyville Horror." David Ward designed scenery for both of the plays, Mark Rippe the lighting, and Mary Aiello Bruce the costumes.

The main offering, "Inspector Hound," is based on a neat bit of trickery that doesn't quite work out in the script. Although it starts beautifully and works well for much of the time, it has a difficult act to follow.

"The Real Inspector Hound" is set in isolated Muldoon Manor in the thirties, and as the curtain opens one becomes aware of the corpse onstage and the two critics in the audience who are part of the play. Jenkins and David C. Jones gave extremely good performances, exchanging gossip and munching chocolates while supposedly viewing a play. Characters in the play are Simon (Von Bergen), Felicity (Van Nostrand), Cynthia (Margo Skinner), Magnus (Gerety), Mrs. Drudge, the charwoman/narrator (Melanie Jones), and the inspector (Howard London).

The ingenue Felicity, the matronly Cynthia, wheelchair Magnus, and smoothie Simon (is he really the escaped killer last seen heading through the marshes toward Muldoon Manor?) are pleasant to watch and in their carefully timed group scenes very funny (the card games offer several attractive bits of business, for example). Mrs. Drudge doesn't grow tedious, as she might have if less well played. The timing of entrances and exits must have been hard to effect and works exactly right, while Magnus performs miracles of precision with his murderous wheelchair. But when Inspector Hound enters, the timing begins to go just a bit awry, and with it the whole house of cards begins to wobble. London is not a strong enough actor to sustain this role, and his entrance comes just when things start to build or start to drop. The audience is never again quite as caught up into the scene after this, and so, despite some amusing sections, it fizzles out a bit toward the end. But a Stoppard play always has more good moments than not, and Trinity Summer Rep has given it an excellent production, while the Anderson comedy is light and fluffy, guaranteed to take your mind off the heat. Playing through the beginning of August at the Lederer Theater.

Ex-Nazi Gets Life Sentence

BONN (JTA): Frederick Wilhelm Heinen, a 57-year-old former member of the SS, was sentenced to life imprisonment by a Saarbruecken court last week for the murders of three Jewish inmates at the Lemberg concentration camp in Poland during World War II and complicity in the murders of five others.

A court in Titisee-Neustadt, also in south Germany, imposed a $1200 fine on a man accused of carrying a swastika flag. The defendant and four companions attacked a campsite occupied by Communist youths in July, 1976. Before the incident he drove past the camp waving the flag. The display of Nazi symbols is against the law in West Germany.

Meanwhile, the Federal Ministry for Youth, Family and Health has banned the sale of four long-playing records on grounds that they glorify the Nazi ideology and thus endanger German youth. The records include such titles as "A Nation Goes to the Guns-Blitz Victory Over Poland" and "Hitler Youth Marches." Last month the ministry banned publication of five volumes of reprints of the Wehrmacht newspaper.

Nazi War Criminal Bill Approved

WASHINGTON (JTA): The House Judiciary Committee has approved a bill in the fight to denaturalize and deport alleged Nazi war criminals. The bill, introduced by Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman (D.N.Y.) now goes to the floor for full House action. The legislation would make former Nazi war criminals subject to deportation if they entered the U.S. under the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952. It would also prevent the future entry of war criminals.

Currently, alleged war criminals are subject to deportation if they entered the U.S. under special refugee legislation in effect after World War II — either the Displaced Persons Act of 1948 or the Refugee Relief Act of 1953. Most of the recent legal action against alleged Nazi war criminals has been taken under these two provisions. But the 1952 Immigration and Nationality Act has no such provision to deport persons if they have engaged in persecution because of race, religion, nationality or political opinion. The Holtzman bill applies to these persons as well as to war criminals.

The bill also removes the "stay of deportation" provision from the 1952 act.

Jews Losing Political Strength

By Barbie Zelizer-Meyouhas
JERUSALEM (JTA): American Jews are losing their political strength due to a declining Jewish population and a mass exodus from the urban northeast to smaller cities and suburbs around the country, according to Herbert Bienstock, a senior expert in the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. Bienstock spoke at the 14th annual America-Israel Dialogue at Van Leer Institute here. He explained that the Jewish "political edge" is growing duller, because Jews have less votes and money to offer would-be candidates.

The sharp decline in the Jewish population, from 2.1 million in New York City in 1957 to 1.2 million in 1974, coupled with a movement among young American Jews to find employment in the free professions rather than in business, plus a Jewish migration to the suburbs, which is abandoning the more established Jewish religious, cultural and social institutions, is making the Jews slowly "disappear" from the scene, at least in terms of numbers and influence they enjoyed in the past, Bienstock said. He urged that greater efforts be made on the educational scene to prevent total Jewish disappearance.

Different Conclusions Offered

But another participant at the dialogue reached totally different conclusions. Prof. Fred Massarik, of the University of California, Los Angeles, claimed that although the declining Jewish birthrate poses a great threat to Jewish population growth in the U.S., the rising date of intermarriage among U.S. Jews could lead to a net gain in the country's Jewish population.

Massarik assailed the widespread assumption that American Jews are marrying themselves out of existence. Rather, he claimed, there is "a drift toward Jewishness among intermarried Jews, and a drift away from Jewishness among in-married Jews."

DAVID R. SARGENT

STOPS, LIMITS AND STOP LIMIT ORDERS

Q: Could you explain the difference between stop orders and limit orders? I am never certain which is which. B.I. Florida

A: These terms are confusing, more so because most investors seldom, if ever, use them. A limit order to buy or sell is placed at a specified price, "or better," which is a help in remembering its function. In buying the limit is set below the market and in selling above the current trading price. If the current market on ABC Co. is 45, you would place a sell limit at 48, or better, or a buy limit at 42, or better. In each case, your object is to buy or sell at a "better" price than the present market level. However, should the stock drop only to 42½, your buy order would not be executed since you specified 42 at the limit you would pay. If the market dropped rapidly and the shares went through 42, your order would be executed, probably at a price better than 42.

Stop orders are placed in just the opposite way, a sell stop is at a price below the market and a buy stop above the market. On the sell side, the investor is protecting an existing profit or limiting a loss on shares held. A stop to buy is used to protect a profit on a short position or contain a loss on a short sale. Once the specified price is reached, stops are triggered and executed in the order received. But in a fast-moving market, the price of execution may vary significantly from the specified stop price.

As if these weren't confusing enough, there is another type of order combining them, called a stop limit order. In using the stop limit, the investor is seeking to prevent the execution of his buy or sell at a price several points from the one he expected. Since a stop order becomes a market order once the specified price is reached, the limit order then takes over to limit execution to the specified price "or better." Stock ABC is trading at 45, you wish to sell if the stock drops to 42, but you don't want to take less than 42. You place a stop limit at 42. But, rather than miss the market, the order could be placed "Sell 100 ABC, 42 stop, 41½ limit."

YIELD SPREADS NARROWING

Q: I have $10,000 to invest and am tired of the 7% interest given by banks. What do you suggest? B.K. Nebranka

A: Assuming that you have sufficient savings for emergencies and adequate insurance coverage, you might consider investing in utility common stock. Because interest rates have been rising, utility prices have given up some ground and currently yields are very attractive. In fact, in many cases, the yields on high quality utility issues are slightly better than that available on AA-rated long term bonds and preferreds of these same companies.

Cleveland Electric Illuminating (NYSE) is an example of this. The common stock pays $1.84 a share annually to yield 9.14%, while its 8¼% bond due in 2005 yields 9.11% currently. Cleveland Electric's various preferreds carry only single A ratings, therefore yield slightly more than the bonds — 9.2% to 9.4%. Regardless of the yield differential between the fixed income and the equity issues, only the common affords the potential for income growth. In the last decade the dividend has increased regularly from year to year.

Q: We hold Kemper Total Return Fund. It used to be called Supervised Investors Income Fund. Is this fund a good one for a retired couple? We have $7,000 to invest and wonder if we should add to this fund or diversify? Our main interest is income and safety. P.W. Iowa

A: Kemper Total Return Fund, as the name suggests, aims to provide holders with income plus appreciation. In the last five years the fund, which yields 5% from income dividends, achieved a 7.9% growth rate. This was only slightly below its ten-year growth rate, but was well above that of the averages. Eight of the fund's top ten holdings are bonds, and these and other fixed income issues comprise about 50% of the portfolio. If you can continue to forego some current income in favor of long term growth, this fund should be held. I would use new money to supplement the 5% yield. Northeast Investors Trust, or Fidelity Corporate Bond Fund, both no-loads, provide very generous returns. The former yields over 9% and the latter just under 9%.

Lown Distinguished Service Award for "exemplary leadership in furthering the cultural and educational vitality of the Jewish people."

BOOM IN PRINTS ROARS ON

For new evidence that the art boom roars on, oblivious to the dollar's wild gyrations and fears about the U.S. economy's direction, just note that Sotheby auction in London a few days ago.

Records were smashed every day in a solid week of auctioning the art collection of a Swiss leather merchant, Robert von Hirsch. More than $2 million was paid for each of two 12th century Rhineland enamels, the highest ever paid for a work of art outside of a painting. On one day alone, $13.4 million changed hands.

"Art used to be a place to spend extra money," says Sylvan Cole, president of Associated American Artists, in New York. "Now taxi magnates are investing their profits in art."

And high on the list of winners in the art market are prints — which have moved way out of what was once second-class status into an artistic niche of their own. To illustrate:

- A Picasso linoleum cut, entitled "After Cranach," went for $600 in 1960, today commands $60,000.

- A Toulouse-Lautrec print, entitled "La Grande Loge," has soared to a world record of $175,000, while Rembrandt etchings are startling the art world with price runups as high as $80,000 to an almost incredible seven figures.

- In the early 1960s, an original, signed Matisse lithograph entitled "Seated

The New Threat In Yemen

to Salem Ali, rushed the President before a firing squad and executed him. The fact that matters were carried out so expeditiously, indicated that the coup had been well planned.

The apparent leader is Abdel Fattah Ismail, a staunch communist, and longtime rival. Robaye Ali, fearing increased Soviet influence had refused to send soldiers to aid Ethiopia against the rebels in Eritrea. The fact that President Ali desired closer relations with the United States may have accelerated the coup. There can be little doubt that the Soviets played a decisive part.

The murder of the two Yemeni presidents indicates serious political instability for this area at the south-western tip of the Arabian peninsula. Soviet control of the invaluable naval base at Aden is thus assured, as well as providing her with a convenient base for furthering intrigue in black Africa, where she also poses a threat to traffic around the Cape of Good Hope. The Arabian peninsula is an area where tribal feuds, intrigue and bloody coups are quite common. It was thus that Ibn Saud won his kingdom.

Sharif Hussein Ibn Ali of the Hashemite Dynasty in Mecca proclaimed the Arab revolt against the Turks in 1916 and assumed the title of King. His brother, Emir Feisal, who fought with Lawrence of Arabia on behalf of the British, had been promised the throne of Syria, but was expelled by the French. In January 1921, Abdullah marched out of Arabia with an army into Transjordan, and threatened to drive the French out of Syria.

Winston Churchill, the Colonial Secretary, unwilling to get into a controversy with the French, called a conference of British officials in Cairo, and Feisal was awarded the throne of Iraq, as king under the British mandate. Abdullah, who was still camped in Amman, waited to see what the British would provide for him.

Transjordan was part of Palestine, and Churchill was in a dilemma as how to satisfy Abdullah, disgruntled when his brother was awarded Iraq, which originally had been promised him. To stave off a crisis, Churchill agreed in March 1921, to sever Transjordan from Palestine, and set it up as an autonomous kingdom for Abdullah, under British protection. Palestine was consequently reduced by 80%. However, the Hashemites were now satisfied.

Arabia was a less desirable domain. It had been in almost total isolation, because of its poverty, its deserts and its religious fanaticism. Its wealth was derived chiefly from Pilgrims who came to Mecca. In 1924 Abd al-Aziz Saud defeated Hussein, and took over this desert area. It became valuable just before the onset of W.W.II when oil was discovered. Had the Hashemites been less greedy, they might still have been in Arabia, instead of ruling a poor desert kingdom. By 1926 King Saud had extended his power over all of Arabia.

The oil, however, was not exploited until the U.S. entered the war. The British who had treaty relations, were warned against interference in Islamic law, relating to crime, slavery, etc. This, the British scrupulously observed.

Punishment for thievery was amputation of a hand, by chopping it off with a sword. Today, enlightened through contact with the western world, the hand is amputated surgically, under anesthesia. Slavery, still exists.

Nasser and the Saudis were on opposing sides in a civil war in Yemen. However, after the defeat of Egypt by Israel in June 1967, an agreement was reached. Nasser withdrew his army from Yemen, and the Saudis placed an embargo on its oil to the west.

While the gap between the Egyptian and Israeli positions still remains wide, the resumption of talks in London is encouraging. At least it is a break in the stalemate. Israel prefers retaining military control of the West Bank for five years, with its status to be decided at the end of that time. Egypt demands the return of the West Bank to Jordan and Gaza to Egypt, pending a negotiated settlement of their status, and the withdrawal of Israeli forces. A solution acceptable to both sides will probably be decided upon regarding these two areas.

The return of East Jerusalem poses a more serious problem, but not insurmountable, as both sides want to keep the hope of a peace settlement alive. Some progress has undoubtedly been made in the private talks between Israel Defense Minister Ezer Weiz-man and Egyptian Defense Minister Abdel Ghani Al-Gamassi.

Regardless of the results of the London Conference, it is certain that peace talks will continue. The situation in Yemen and the

"A militarily strong Israel can be an important ally in stabilizing the area."

Horn of Africa created sufficient problems for the Mideast oil states, and will require their full attention for some time to come. It should soften demands about the West Bank being turned over to the PLO.

This upheaval in Yemen adds to the instability in Oman, which borders South Yemen. Two years ago the Marxist National Liberation Front, aided by the Communists in South Yemen almost succeeded in taking over the government, had it not been thwarted by troops sent over from Iran. At the moment the threat in Yemen supercedes all other problems.

Fourth Year Community Development Funds Approved

There is little doubt that the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 was one of the more important legislative acts passed by the Congress, for its impact upon cities and towns in this nation has been incalculable. In utilizing these annual funds for redevelopment projects in the city of Providence, my administration has been concerned with building a citizens advisory committee of over one hundred concerned Providence residents from every neighborhood in the city and from almost every possible constituency, in order to ensure that these funds would be spent on programs and projects that were most needed and were of significant value both for the present and for the future. Our success has been far beyond our expectations, and we have frequently been commended by the Department of Housing and Urban Development in Washington for the excellent decisions we have made in how best to use these community development funds.

Thus, it is especially gratifying to announce that Providence has been approved for fourth year community funds for the 1978-1979 fiscal year in the amount of $8,019,000 to finance a host of programs that will continue to improve the quality of life in our neighborhoods in a number of significant ways, and will further the goals we have set for the renewal of this city. Included in our programs are the highly successful housing improvement projects, including the house pointing program that has aided over 1,000 senior citizen homeowners in the past year, the neighborhood facilities projects, the numerous parks and open spaces developments, the social programs of various kinds affecting citizens on all age levels and from all walks of life. In addition, the fourth year program funding will continue our concentration on economic and commercial redevelopment along several commercial corridors in the city, and the historic preservation and recycling activities that have brought us much attention from regional and national groups seeking unique ways to bring their own communities to better utilization of existing structures of significant architectural and historical worth. That the important programs for social and community redevelopment will also be part of the fourth year activities goes without saying.

I am delighted that the Department of Housing and Urban Development has once again approved our application for these funds and the uses to which we shall put the monies, and I congratulate the citizens advisory committee and their various subcommittees who spent countless hours and dedicated service in helping us plan the best uses for these funds. In the cooperative venture that took place in the planning process, we have continued to be a total community, and perhaps this activity has been the most important aspect of the entire community development program.

Rabbi Stresses Need For Increased Communication

By GEORGE VECSEY
 TORONTO: Orthodox Jews must do a better job of reaching their college-age youths, says Rabbi Bernard Rosensweig, the new president of the Rabbinical Council of America, an association of Orthodox rabbis.

"Many college-age youngsters feel they are not part of their community," Rabbi Rosensweig, who is a college instructor and the rabbi at Adath Yeshurun in Kew Gardens, Queens, said.

As an adjunct professor of religious studies at Queens College, Flushing, Rabbi Rosensweig does not advocate sending Orthodox students only to Orthodox colleges, nor does he lament the fact that more Orthodox students have been attending secular colleges.

Keeping In Touch
 But he said that he felt it was the responsibility of him and his colleagues to keep in touch with youngsters who attended non-Jewish schools.

"I have been doing it on a personal basis at my congregation," Rabbi Rosensweig said in an interview. "We had a youngster go to Georgetown University, an excellent Catholic school. I was glad she went there, but I did send a letter to a rabbi I knew in the area and asked him to contact her."

The rabbi appointed a four-member panel this week to create a program for communicating with college students. The panel is led by Rabbi Sol Roth of Atlantic Beach, N.Y., who teaches at Yeshiva University in New York.

Rabbi Rosensweig said that he would like to revive the Orthodox custom of "Torah tours," in which Orthodox scholars and speakers are sent to teach short courses at colleges. He also said that he wanted to promote sessions of Shabbaton, a weekend of prayer for small groups, music and discussion that produce, he said, "a remarkable sense" of closeness and spirituality.

'Home Away From Home'

"I think we could provide contacts at most colleges in the U.S. and Canada," the rabbi said. "We could let them know where services are held, where they would have a home away from home. It would not be difficult. We might also be able to give guidance to certain schools that we felt youngsters should not attend."

Some religious leaders in North America have already tried a system of reaching youngsters who are attending school away from home. A Methodist chaplain at a California university recently said that he was pleased when his colleagues suggested that attention be directed to college students. But, the minister said, only a tiny percentage of Methodist youngsters were receptive to attending services or to joining the campus Methodist club.

"One of the prime functions of college is to undo what people believe," Rabbi Rosensweig said. "It could be said colleges have a God-given right to make them godless. But seriously, I think young people are reaching for something authentic at this time in their lives. They are cynical on the surface, but they want something genuine."

"The young people who enter cults are very sincere people, let me tell you. If they wind up in cults, we failed them."

Your Money's Worth

Odalisque" from an edition of 50, was priced at $350, now has rocketed to the $50,000 range.

Why the churning of prices in the print explosion?

A first obvious answer is supply and demand, with the availability of prints from the old masters diminishing, works from the 15th to 18th centuries reflecting a value based on antiquity and rarity, and institutions continually draining old masters from the marketplace.

A second answer is that as fine original paintings have become far too expensive for buyers outside of museums, other institutions and the very wealthy, young investors have turned to prints and thereby helped fuel this boom.

All the favorable factors that apply to paintings apply now to prints as well — portability, a hedge against inflation, easy maintenance, absence of property tax, personal esthetic pleasure, etc. And the number of dealers (in prints) has multiplied, spread to department stores, bookstores, gift shops, etc.

But if you are to enter this part of the art market, you must learn and abide by the rules — or you'll lose.

(1) If you are considering buying an old master, you must get expert guidance. For instance, Cole warns you to beware of buying an old master printed in the 19th century, even though it was from an original plate. It could be of minor value, not worth the price.

(2) Be on guard against prints in poor condition. A single fine print by Duerer may be worth $25,000 or more. Late impressions of the same print in poor condition may be worth less than $1,000. This rule applies particularly to Rembrandt, with late impressions worth only a fraction of the value placed on early impressions.

(3) While prints from old masters such as Rembrandt and Duerer bring $10,000 and up, you can buy lesser masters of these periods in your own price range. Outstanding examples of Van Leyden, Callot, Van Ostade and Raimond can be bought for $2,000 to $3,000 and fine examples for $100 to $500.

(4) If you invest in ultramodern art, you must recognize that time has not tested the durability of many contemporary artists.

(5) Don't underestimate the problem of liquidity. You may have to wait years to get the price you want. And, as Cole points out, "auctions are turning down the hard-to-sell items."

(6) Before you buy, study all sources of information on the category of prints you want — museum print cabinets, print galleries, auction catalogues, art books and "catalogues raisonnées" (complete compilations of all prints of a single artist).

(7) Beware of questionable print offers, such as one-shot print exhibitions in hotel suites, small-time auctions conducted by unknown auctioneers, vendors who indicate a "regular" price of $1,000 and a "special" price to you of $500 (why you?), such terms as "Fine Art Print" or "Museum Quality Print," which have little to do with a print's intrinsic value.

(8) And the most basic rule of all: buy only from established dealers who will guide you on quality, authenticity, and fair price.
