Providence Resident Named To JTA Board

NEW YORK — Mrs. Sylvia Hassenfeld, of Providence, is one of five new members elected to the Jewish Telegraphic Agency Board of Directors. Other members elected were: Greville Janner, Q.C., MP, London, England; Arthur J. Levine, New York; Neil Norry, Rochester, N.Y.; and Hy Vile, Kansas City. Martin S. Fox, who was re-elected president of the Agency, made the announcement.

In addition, Fox announced the re-election of William M. Landau as chairman of the Board, Robert H. Arnow as chairman of the Executive Committee, and Raymond P. Epstein, Philip Slomovitz, Melvin Swig and Marshall Weinberg as Vice Presidents. Also re-elected were Julius Berman, Secretary and Abraham Goodman, Treasurer.

Mrs. Hassenfeld is a National Vice Chairman of the United Jewish Appeal and past president of its national women's division. She is a member of the Board of Governors of the Jewish Agency and a member of the Executive Committees of the Joint Distribution Committee and United Israel Appeal.

In addition to her national and international leadership roles, Mrs. Hassenfeld is a Director of the Rhode Island Jewish Federation, honorary president of its women's division, and an outstanding civic, cultural and philanthropic leader in her home community of Providence.

Janner is a Labor Member of Parliament for Leicester West since 1970 and President of the Board of Deputies of British Jews. He is founder and vice chairman of the All-Party Parliamentary Committee for Release of Soviet Jewry, member of the European Executive of the World Jewish Congress and author of 26 books.

Levine is a Certified Public Accountant with offices in New York City. He is an honorary President of the United Synagogue of America and a member of the Board of Governors of the Jewish Agency. He also represents the Conservative movement on the WZO Executive, and is a member of the Executive of the Synagogue Council of America and of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations.

Norry is a national vice chairman of the United Jewish Appeal and chairman of the National Jewish Resource Center. He is a Board member of the Joint Distribution Committee and the American Association for Jewish Education. A graduate of Columbia University, he serves as president of the Norry Company and chairman of the Board of the Ajax Electric Company. In his home city of Rochester, he is vice president of the Jewish Community Federation and president of Hillel Day School and Hillel Foundation of University of Rochester.

Vile is one of Kansas City's leading Jewish communal leaders and chairman of the Board of Vile Goller/Fine Arts and Lithographing Co. He has been honored by many civic and Jewish communal organizations, such as the Jewish Theological Seminary, Israel Bonds and others. He is a past president of Beth Shalom Congregation, the Jewish Geriatric Center and the Printing Industry Trade Association in Kansas City.

In making the official announcement of the elections which were held at the JTA Board of Directors meeting in New York earlier this month, Fox stated that the five new members are all deeply involved in communal affairs and their insights and expertise will further enhance the world-wide functions of JTA as the "eyes and ears of the Jewish people."

GOP Candidate Admits To Nazi 'Ploy'

Patrick C. Labbe, the "endorsed" Republican candidate for the District 40 Seat from Pawtucket, has admitted that he has portrayed himself as the leader of the Nazi Party in Rhode Island.

The 23-year-old millworker has described his involvement in the National Socialist Movement as only a 'ploy' with his intention being only to infiltrate the movement in order to obtain information for a book his wife, Linda, is writing about Nazism.

Labbe, however, has insisted that neither he, nor his wife, had done anything illegal and that three weeks ago, while preparing his declaration of candidacy, he renounced his NSM membership in a letter to Robert F. Brannen, the national chairman in Cincinnati.

According to Labbe he renounced his membership because if this came out, the voters would take it the wrong way and it would ruin my reputation at work."

He stated that he had disbanded his unit, which consisted of five members, and has given up distribution of NSM publications.

Labbe has described both his part and his wife's part in the 'ploy' as:

-They spent between $2,000 and $3,000 annually to publish "The American Herald," which portrays itself as the newsletter of the local NSM. One February issue contained several anti-Semitic and anti-black articles. In one article signed with Labbe's name, Adolf Hitler was called "our modern redeemer."

-They published and distributed flyers urging people to join the NSM. The flyers often had anti-Semitic themes. For the last few months these flyers have been distributed in neighborhoods here.

-The Labbe's kept a display of Nazi memorabilia in their apartment which was used to impress "flunkies" who joined his unit. Labbe stated that the display is now dismantled.

Ronald Civins-Mills, state GOP executive director believes that the circulation of stories connecting Labbe with the Nazi party is an effort to discredit him politically but Pawtucket GOP chairman J. Colin Dawon said that if Labbe really was involved in Nazism, "I want him to get as far away as possible."

A GOP renunciation of Labbe would not keep him off the ballot. He submitted his nomination papers on Wednesday it was not known immediately whether his signatures were sufficient to qualify. The deadline is Tuesday.

Begin Considers Move To East Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (JTA) — Officials of the Prime Minister's Office were reported to be seriously considering moving it to East Jerusalem. They are said to have selected one of several new government buildings now under construction in the Sheikh Jarrach district, just across the former demarcation line with West Jerusalem.

The transfer, scheduled to take place within the next few months after the office building is completed, is intended as a gesture symbolizing the unity of Jerusalem under Israeli rule, the official explained.

(In Washington, a State Department spokesman declined comment, saying the United States had received no official word of the planned transfer.)

The status of East Jerusalem, which unlike the West Bank was annexed to Israel after the war, has been a focus of the Arab-Israeli conflict and this week is to be the subject of debate in the United Nations Security Council. The announcement came a day after the Pope, with President Carter by his side, called for a solution to the question of Jerusalem, which he said was pivotal to a just peace in the Middle East.

Premier Menachem Begin was reported to have vetoed a move into the vacant premises of what was the Saudi Arabian Embassy to Jordan before 1967 for political reasons. But he is known to favor a shift of his office and of the Cabinet meeting room and Cabinet Secretariate into East Jerusalem as yet another gesture of Israel's claim to permanent sovereignty over the united city.

Security Council Extends Mandate

UNITED NATIONS (JTA) — The Security Council has extended the mandate of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) for another six-month period, until Dec. 19, 1980. The vote was 12-0 with the German Democratic Republic and the USSR abstaining. China did not participate.

Kollek Intervenes In Tent City Crisis

JERUSALEM (JTA) — A clash was averted late last week between police and several score poverty families encamped on State-owned land outside Jerusalem. The squatters dismantled their tent city voluntarily after Mayor Teddy Kollek of Jerusalem convinced their leaders that he would do his utmost to alleviate their housing problems.

Kollek, who just returned from a fund-raising visit to the U.S., took charge of the crisis which had developed in his absence as 1000 Jerusalem policemen and border police, armed with truncheons and shields, surrounded the site awaiting orders to remove the tent dwellers by force. Earlier, the Supreme Court withdrew an injunction it had issued forbidding the government to order a forcible evacuation.

The families, Oriental Jews from Jerusalem slum neighborhoods, had erected the tent city on unused land earlier this month to protest the government's failure to alleviate the housing shortage. Efforts by Premier Menachem Begin, Housing Minister David Levy and others to negotiate a compromise failed. Housing Ministry officials were adamant in their refusal to give the squatters preferential treatment. They argued that to do so would discriminate against other people who are urgently in need of housing but do not take the law into their own hands.

Kollek promised to intervene with the Ministry to help the group set up a cooperative housing community on State or municipality owned land elsewhere in the Jerusalem region. He said he would personally consult with the city engineer on a suitable site.

Obituaries

Talmon Dies At 64, Was Noted Historian

JERUSALEM (JTA) — Prof. Jacob L. Talmon, a world-famous historian and educator, died June 18 during open heart surgery at Hadassah-Hebrew University Hospital. He was 64.

Born in Rypin, Poland, he studied at the Hebrew University, where he later became Professor of Modern History in 1960, and at the Sorbonne, and at St. Catherine's College, at Oxford University. He had served as visiting professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

During his studies at the London School of Economics, he served on the British Jewish Committee of Emissaries and in that capacity he often acted as a liaison between Dr. Chaim Weizmann and the then British Prime Minister Winston Churchill. He also served as secretary of the foreign affairs committee of the Board of Deputies of British Jews.

Talmon was a world expert on totalitarian regimes from the period of the French Revolution until the present time. Among his best known books are "The Origins of Totalitarian Democracy," "Political Messianism — The Romantic Phase," and "Israel Among the Nations."

In recent years, Talmon became steadily more involved in political activities, siding with a dovish solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict. In his last article, published in "Haaretz," on Passover Eve, he called for the resignation of Premier Menachem Begin. The article was called "The Homeland is in Danger."

A member of the Israel Science Academy, he received the Israel Prize in the field of legal and social sciences.

HENRY LERNER

PROVIDENCE — Henry Lerner, 101, a resident of the Parkview Nursing Home for the past 10 years, died at the home on June 19. He was the husband of the late Hannah (Haimovitz) Lerner.

Born in Russia, he was the son of the late Moses and Rachel Lerner and had been a resident of Rhode Island since coming to this country in 1903.

Mr. Lerner was educated in Russia and spoke seven languages, including Yiddish, Polish, Russian, German, French, and Rumanian. He was an officer in the Russian Army.

Among his jobs, he had sold ice cream from his own pushcart; became a district manager for the Metropolitan Insurance Co. and also had been a foreman at Washburn Wire Co., East Providence. He entered the retail food business and was one of the first people to initiate a self-service market on Melrose Street.

With his vast knowledge of flowers, Mr. Lerner became an adviser at Roger Williams Park and personally supervised the Japanese garden there. He continued to work in the gardens after his retirement.

He was a charter member of the Shaare Zedek — Sons of Abraham and a member of the Providence Hebrew Free Loan.

He leaves two sons, Samuel "Al" Lerner of Cranston and Joseph Lerner of Providence; two daughters, Mrs. Leah Litchman of Warwick and Mrs. Miriam Rosenberg of North Miami, Fla.; six grandchildren, five great-grandchildren and one great-great-granddaughter.

A graveside service was held June 20 at 11 a.m. in Lincoln Park Cemetery, Warwick. Arrangements were made by the Mount Sinai Memorial Chapel.

JACOB DUBOVICK

PROVIDENCE—Jacob Dubovick, 75, of 156 Lancaster St., died Friday, June 20, at home after a three-month illness. He was the husband of Sarah (Shuster) Dubovick.

Mr. Dubovick, a grocery merchant, was a member of Touro Fraternal Association, the Providence Hebrew Free Loan Association, and a life member of Congregation Anshe Kovno-Sons of Zion.

Born in Russia, he was a son of the late Mordechai and Sarah (Briliant) Dubovick. He had lived in Providence since 1930.

He and his wife founded the New England Academy of Torah girls dormitory on Taft Avenue.

Besides his wife he leaves two sons, Rabbi Dov Dubovick of Dallas, Texas, and Rabbi Yitzchok Dubovick of Providence; and eight grandchildren.

The funeral service was held Friday at 3 p.m. at the Providence Hebrew Day School. Burial was in the Lincoln Park Cemetary, Warwick.

UNVEILING NOTICE

On June 29 at 11 a.m., a monument in the memory of the late Ralph W. Miller will be unveiled at Lincoln Park Cemetery. Friends and relatives are invited.

Jewish Chaplain Directs Cuban Refugee Program

NEW YORK — Religious coverage and clothing distribution for Cuban refugees in Florida have been assigned to Jewish Chaplain (Col.) Marvin L. Labinger of Eglin Air Force Base, according to a report received by Rabbi Judah Nadich, chairman, JWB's Commission on Jewish Chaplaincy.

In the report to Rabbi Nadich, Chaplain Labinger described the areas of work with the refugees.

"As far as the collecting, sorting and distributing of clothing that was contributed is concerned, the Eglin Chapel coordinated the effort, and Chap. (Maj.) Fred Reinke was assigned the task," Chaplain Labinger stated. "With the help of local volunteers and the Salvation Army, the Chapel managed to get basic clothing distributed to all 10,000 refugees within three weeks, a feat I am very proud of."

Chaplain Labinger, a native of New York, was ordained a rabbi by the Jewish Theological Seminary of America in June 1960. He was ecclesiastically endorsed for military service by JWB's Commisision on Jewish Chaplaincy, and by August he was in the Air Force. After assignments to Keesler AFB, Miss., and the U.S. Air Force Academy, the first full-time Jewish chaplain of any military academy, he "decided that this was my calling."

"In the Air Force," Chaplain Labinger explained, "I have more freedom to be a rabbi than I could possibly imagine outside the Air Force. And I found I enjoyed what I was doing and the people I worked with immensely."

"My mission is to be the best Jew I can be, and to help other people be the best they can be in whatever faith they have."

Chaplain Labinger has been in the Air Force for 20 years. He has served at Sheppard AFB, Texas, the 48th Combat Support Group in England with additional duty for all American Forces in the United Kingdom; the 60th Air Base Group at Travis AFB, California; the 475th Air Base Wing covering U.S. forces in Japan; the 3380th Air Base Group at Keesler AFB, Mississippi; the 401st Combat Support Group at Torrejon AB, Spain, covering U.S. military installations in Spain, Greece and Turkey; and Eglin AFB, Florida.

In March of 1969, he was awarded the B'nai B'rith Four Chaplains Award. He is the recipient of the AF Commendation Medal with one Oak Leaf Cluster and the Meritorious Service Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters.

Study Reveals Jewish Problems

NEW YORK (JTA) — Ethnotherapy, not a cultish mind control technique, but a new form of group therapy under study by California psychologist Judith Klein which relates ethnicity to emotional stability, was the subject of a recent American Jewish Committee panel discussion here.

Klein, who got the idea for her study from participating in Black-white encounter groups in the 1960s, told over 100 persons that problems of Jewish identity and self-esteem are far-reaching in this country. Her therapy has already helped some Jews who participated in her research identify their hang-ups and sometimes alleviate them, she said.

The multi-ethnic panel of four served as an introduction to Klein's just-completed study "Jewish Identity and Self-Esteem: Healing Through Ethnotherapy."

In her research Klein led several group ethnotherapy sessions for 32 hours over an eight-week period and later followed up with individual interviews. The subjects were asked to discuss a variety of Jewish issues, and many identified anxieties about everything from sexual relations with non-Jews and abstract notions of historical figures, to negative images of Jewish looks.

Family Seen As Therapy

Joseph Giordano, a panelist who heads the AJCommittee's mental health center, praised Klein's study and said the best kind of ethnotherapy may go on in the family.

The other speakers were Harvard professor of psychiatry Alvin Poussaint and Rabbi Irving Greenberg, director of the National Jewish Resource Center. Poussaint said he saw a definite need for Klein's study because he "has never had a Black patient or a Jewish patient" that has not in some way related problems to his ethnic background.

Greenberg added that Klein "has shown us there is room and hope for improvement" in building Jewish pride and identity.

The American Jewish Novel: A Question Of Feasibility

"LE ROMAN juif americain," by Rachel Ertel. Payot, 390 pp, about Frs 97.

To begin with, there's the basic question of whether a Jewish literature — in American English — is feasible. And beyond that, whether a minority literature in a hegemonic language is conceivable.

Rachel Ertel, a lecturer at the University of Paris, believes that it is, thus taking a stand against both the orthodox view that no minority literature exists without a minority language and the dyed-in-the-wool Zionist opinion that there can be no Jewish literature without a Jewish tongue (Hebrew) and territory (Israel). The central thesis of the existence of a state of Israel doesn't abolish the fact of the Diaspora, and it doesn't exhaust the modes of "being Jewish": to the contrary, it extends them.

Ertel's first postulation, magisterially demonstrated, is that there is a Jewish literature belonging to the Diaspora and, more generally, that a minority literature can cut across territorial and linguistic borders.

Her second postulate is that literature, like language, is indissolubly linked to the social group and its history, that it is the fruit of a "collective producer," and, as Theodore Reik put it, that it is "the way a society talks about itself to itself." This conception doesn't deny the individuality of the artist, but restores it to the religious and moral community. It doesn't ignore the structure of the work but places it in an historical context. History and ethics are two constants of Jewish thought, particularly precious at a time when neo-conservatives in both the US and France are settling down into "prehistorical" (Indo-European, for instance) or "post-ideological" and even "post-philosophical thinking."

Taking her cue from Richard Marienstras ("Etre un peuple en diapason," Maspero, 1975), who believes that "from now on, being a Jew can in no case be defined other than through dialogue with what is not a Jew, what is not in him, what is not around him," Ertel notes that the American Jewish writer finds himself at the confluence of multiple and often antagonistic traditions.

American Jewish literature appears as a difficult, tense, but also fascinating, fruitful and vital dialogue between the writer and his group, the group and the original culture, the writer and the harbouring group, the original culture and the dominant culture, the minority language and the hegemonic language — and so on.

Linked to the harbouring culture in a dialectical relationship, acceding to its demands with astonishing flexibility, this literature nevertheless displays a perceptible discrepancy contributed by specific materials or by particular combinations of borrowed elements.

The specificity of American Jewish literature doesn't result from racial or even theological kinship, or from the choice of themes (even if certain themes do recur more than others, such as family, exile, and collective memory), or from preference for a particular genere (despite a predilection for the novel of ideas, there are also the family chronicle, the picaresque, education), or from the recurrence of various characters such as the intellectual, the simple-minded schlemiel, and the doomed-to-lose luftmentch.

It is, rather, tied to a way — secular, social, political, moral and the like — of being Jewish: what Albert Memmi (in "portrait d'un juif," Gallimard, 1962) called "Judaity" in contrast to "Judaicity" (the Jewish people as a whole) and "Judaism" (Jewish doctrines and institutions).

From this standpoint, the contours of Jewish American literature, now a century old, take shape according to a plan that has to do with linguistic and politico-moral history. Originally, it was a Yiddish literature, a Yiddish theatre less important for its "Literary" value than for its social function as a meeting-place for the Jewish community, the occasion for a dialogue between actor and audience.

Stories published in the Yiddish press (more than 50 titles flourished between 1870 and 1900) evoke the world of the shtetl, the little Jewish community, and the dream of an integrated society.

The contemporary representative of this tradition, Isaac Bashevis Singer (who always writes in Yiddish) goes beyond the duality of the sacred and the profane, reality and fantasy. He borrows from American literature (Edgar Allan Poe's gothic aspect, for instance) and introduces four centuries of Jewish life into the American imagination.

The 1960s were marked by the emergence of colored minorities (blacks, Indians, Chicanos, Puerto Ricans: "home-grown colonized peoples") whose Third World analysis lumps the Jews with the majority, and by the development of a counter-culture inspired by Eastern philosophy and centered on a cosmic fusion with nature and on communion. Jewish thought was oriented towards Europe and centered on culture and community.

The literary riposte took the form of calling into question the arbitrary authority of state, bureaucracy, hierarchy, sexuality and family with Swiftian savagery. Caricature, satire, grotesquerie, humor and parody are the arms wielded by Joseph Heller ("Catch 22"), Bruce Jay Friedman ("Stern") and Philip Roth ("Portnoy's Complaint"), among others. Their comic outlooks recall those of Lenny Bruce and Woody Allen.

As for the future of American Jewish literature, one wonders whether the progressiveness that Ertel associates with this literature of the Diaspora isn't beginning to break down: don't some of the Jews who were liberals in preceding decades today constitute the mainstay of the neo-conservatism which dominates the horizon of the 1980s?

Could it be that the shift to the right of the important Jewish review, Commentary, which continues to publish articles by prestige-laden Jewish intellectuals, is a sign that this new stage has been reached?

Professor Says Oil Dollars Distort True American Interest

Describing American policy as "schizophrenic" and claiming that the United States, unlike Egypt and Israel has concerns other than peace in the Middle East, Professor Fred Gottheil discussed several key factors in his assessment of American foreign policy during a Middle East Forum.

"The primary interest in the Middle East since 1928 has been oil," said Professor Gottheil, National Chairman of Professors for Peace in the Middle East and Professor of Economics at the University of Illinois at Champagne. "The policy of the United States has never been run by Congress, but by the oil companies with the acquiescence of government. Oil, military and commerical interests worth billions of dollars pose a fundamental bloc which distorts the true American national interest," he noted.

He talked about "perception," specifically American perception, of the peace treaty between Israel and Egypt. While he did not undermine the presence of significant obstacles, he did state that the recognition of Israel resulting from President Sadat's visit to Jerusalem created a new environment leading to irreversable changes in the Arab perception of Israel.

Professor Gottheil drew attention to inadequacies on the part of the media resulting in imbalances which influence American perception of events. He credits President Sadat with initiating the peace process without interference by the American Government, claiming that both Sadat and Prime Minister Begin have a commonality of interest — that being the disentanglement of the war condition.

With reference to the PLO, Professor Gottheil noted that when "we hear Begin refuse to accept the PLO, we hear that Begin refused, but Sadat also refused." This type of reporting creates the perception of Israeli stubbornness and Sadat's acquiescence.

Professor Gottheil stated that part of the dilemma in American policy lies with pursuing oil and peace at the same time. "Oil policy will be dead," said Professor Gottheil, "only with a strong Israel that sends sufficient signals that Israeli lives will not be sacrificed for oil."

In a somewhat strong response to a question from the floor dealing with the controversy over engaging in negotiations with the PLO, Professor Gottheil stated that the initiative for a peaceful and just settlement for the Palestinian people should be taken by Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza, claiming that discussions with the terrorist PLO would be unproductive. An Israeli attempt to talk to the PLO destroys the chances for the Palestinians in Gaza to set up a viable alternative for negotiations, said Professor Gottheil.

Expert Warns Of Future Crisis

JERUSALEM (ZINS) — An expert on water resources, Meir Ben Meir, declared here at a press conference held recently that Israel is threatened by a grave water crisis. He said that the state is now confronted with a deficit of 5 billion cubic meters of water each year, and that all available sources have been tapped to a degree beyond their normal capacity. He expressed the hope that the rainfall this winter will help make up this huge deficit.

However, this will not solve the basic problem. The expert recommended that all measures be taken as soon as possible to develop other possible water sources. He believes that new sources could be developed to yield an additional 140 million cubic meters annually from underground areas, and that another 350 million cubic meters of water could be recovered from the annual natural rainfall.

It is important, he said, to be concerned about what the situation will be 20 years hence, when the shortage will amount to a minimum of 200 million cubic meters yearly. He emphasized that the water shortage is far more dangerous than the shortage of funds, because the state can always borrow money, and even petroleum can be imported and stored for future use. However, there is simply no way of transporting huge quantities of water from abroad to irrigate the thirsty soil.

He also pointed out that the Saudis had tried to import water in large containers and abandoned the plan as impractical. Now the Saudis are exploring the possibility of transporting an iceberg from the South Pole to help supply the necessary sweetwater for the Arabian peninsula.

Your Money's Worth

Buy Savings Certificates? Wait Until July 1

by Sylvia Porter

With interest rates sliding as rapidly as they have since 1980's slump finally emerged with a bang, you may be tempted to buy a six-month savings certificate as soon as you can. Your reasoning: The sooner you buy, the higher the odds that you'll lock in for yourself a still-high 8-9 per cent interest rate for the next six months.

Sounds beyond argument, for 8-9 per cent is still attractive as a return on short-term cash savings.

But take a second look at this particular time. You may come out dollars ahead in the long run if you DON'T buy a certificate right now.

Wait until at least July 1 to make your investment, even if you must accept a certificate paying less interest by so doing.

Why? Taxes. Because if you buy your six-month certificate on or after July 1, you may be able to: (1) defer the tax on the interest until 1982 and (2) cash in on a 1981 tax break in 1980. You can use this new tax break that goes into effect in 1981, says Prentice-Hall, to turn 1980 interest into tax-free income.

Here's the full explanation.

(1) Tax deferral. Interest on a six-month certificate does not become taxable until it is credited to your account. So, if your bank doesn't credit your account until the certificate matures (at the end of six months), you do NOT owe any tax until then.

The typical result: If you buy your six-month certificate before July 1, it will mature in this year of 1980. So you will owe and must pay tax on the interest when you file your 1980 tax return in April 1981. But note that if you buy your certificate on or after July 1, it won't mature until some time in 1981.

You won't owe any tax until you file your 1981 return in 1982. . . and that's postponing your tax debt a long span indeed.

What's more, you may reduce your tax bill because some of your interest may turn out to be:

(2) Tax-free income. Under the recently-enacted 1980 tax law, there is a new break for you, as a saver.

You are entitled to exclude from your taxable income the first $200 of interest (and dividend) income. If you file a joint return, the exclusion is doubled to $400. But, and here's the key to the break, this new benefit to you applies only to interest received in 1981 and 1982.

The result: If you buy a certificate before July 1, the interest you earn will not qualify for the new interest exclusion. That's because the interest would become taxable before the new tax break in the law goes into effect.

But if you buy on or after July 1, the interest does qualify. Up to $400 of that interest may be tax-free, assuming you have no other interest and dividends to be included.

This is a surprise dollar-saver, says the Prentice-Hall privately-circulated "Executives Tax Report," which few of you will have taken into consideration in planning your purchases of savings certificates. This alerts you to the potential benefit.

So-called "dividends" from savings institutions, incidentally, credit unions, etc., are not dividends. They are "interest" and should be reported on your tax return as such. And so-called "dividends" on life insurance policies aren't dividends either. They usually are a tax-free return of premiums. This should help clarify confusions which exist in many instances.

Also to avert misunderstandings which might arise from the above analysis of six-month savings certificates, interest on bank deposits is normally taxed in the year it's credited to your account, even if the interest is not entered in your passbook.

This same rule applies to interest credited under a long-term savings plan, even though you may later forfeit some of the interest "earned" because of a premature withdrawal.

But there is an exception for interest on short-term (one year or less) certificates which doesn't have to be taken into income until paid or credited to your account.

And that is the basis for the exemption of the interest you earn on a six-month certificate bought after mid-year until paid, at the end of six months or in the next year, 1981, when the new rules apply.

If you have any doubts about the status of your certificate, ask an informed official at the institution from which you are buying the certificate about its taxation if bought before July 1 or after.

Kaplans Present Challenge Grant To Solomon Schechter School

Dr. Eliot Barron, Financial vice president of the Solomon Schechter Day School of Rhode Island has announced the receipt of a $10,000 challenge grant from Cindy and Daniel Kaplan of Barrington. Kaplan who is currently serving his second term as the school's president made the announcement at the June meeting. The Kaplans have pledged to donate $1 for each $2 received by the school up to the $10,000 maximum.

The Kaplans are recent arrivals in this area having moved here from Texas. He is a graduate of Vanderbilt University and received his J.D. from the University of Texas school of law and is a partner in the law firm of Adler, Pollock and Sheehan.

He is a member of the Board of Trustees of Temple Emanuel and the Jewish Community Center. The Kaplans also maintain membership in Temple Habonim in Barrington.

Mrs. Kaplan is president of ASAP Systems, Inc., a computer consulting firm. She chairs the Temple Emanuel Adult Institute and also serves on the board of their sisterhood. She also serves on the board of the sisterhood of Temple Habonim and chairs its program activities. She also serves the Jewish Federation of R.I. as vice-president of its Young Women's Division.

The Kaplans dedication to the school is total since their daughter Hyla will enter the new kindergarten class this fall. They see a bright future for the Solomon Schechter School, which was founded in 1978, for the purpose of providing quality combined Jewish and secular education in a modern framework. Starting this fall, the school will offer a full Jewish and secular curriculum for kindergarten through third grade.

The school has benefited by the energies and input of a large corps of dedicated parents. Kaplan cites a study done by the Jewish Theological Seminary of America which demonstrated a major correlation between day school education and organized religious affiliation in the adult years. He recently said, "The acceptance of the Schechter school by the Jewish community of R.I. both morally and financially bodes well for the future of American Jewry."

At present, the school, located at 99 Taft Ave., Providence, has students attending from Providence, Pawtucket, Barrington, Lincoln, Warwick, Cranston, and Fall River.

Torah Umesorah Offers Summer Sessions

NEW YORK (JTA) — About 150 teachers at Hebrew day schools in North America are expected at the 29th annual summer seminar for Hebrew day school educational personnel offered here by Torah Umesorah, the National Society of Hebrew Day Schools.

Funded by the Stone-Saperstein Foundation of Cleveland, the accelerated summer seminar will hold classes from July 7 to August 4 at the headquarters of the National Council of Young Israel, co-sponsor of the event, Torah Umesorah officials said.

The four-week intensive teacher training institute will have workshops in specific curriculum areas, educational psychology as well as intensive Hebrew language study. A professional seminar for the training of administrators and principals will cover such areas as administration, curriculum, entrance requirements, enrollment and staff supervision. A team of professionals will lead a special course for kindergarten and primary grade teachers.

Rabbi Zvi Shurin of the Torah Umesorah staff is coordinator for the summer seminar. Those attending receive credit toward a day school teacher's license.

Israeli Professor Receives GM Cancer Award

WASHINGTON (JTA) — The General Motors Cancer Research Foundation has announced that Isaac Berenblum, retired professor in the Department of Experimental Biology at the Weizmann Institute of Science in Rehovot, Israel, is one of four recipients this year of its cancer research awards.

Berenblum is to receive the Alfred P. Sloan Jr. Prize for his discovery which opens new avenues for understanding what cancer is, how it works and suggests new approaches to cancer prevention, the Foundation said.

The award consists of a gold medal and $100,000.

Recent Brides

Maxine Beth Namerow Weds David Todd Weiss

Mrs. David T. Weiss

Miss Maxine Beth Namerow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest M. Namerow, of Pilgrim Drive, Cranston, became the bride of David Todd Weiss, of Bridle Path Circle, Randolph, Mass., at a 6 p.m. candlelight ceremony held at Temple Beth Torah, Cranston, on Sunday, June 22, 1980. Rabbi Gerald Zelermyer officiated at the ceremony and was assisted by Cantor Aaron Marcus.

The groom is the son of Mrs. Jean Weiss, of Bee St., Valley Stream, New York, and Mr. Manny Weiss, of Avenue M, Brooklyn, New York.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her parents, wore a white romantic gown of qiana and imported silk Venice lace. Her queen Anne neckline accented the fitted bodice and her appliqued skirt fell to a cathedral train. The bride's headpiece was fashioned with a fingertip illusion veil bordered with matching lace. She carried a cascade of silk lily of the valley, white roses, miniature carnations and blue star flowers.

Miss Leslie D. Namerow, sister of the bride, was maid of honor with Mrs. Robert Goldman and Mrs. William LaVoie serving as bridesmaids.

Best man was Richard A. Weiss, brother of the groom. Ushers were Lawrence R. Namerow, brother of the bride, Bernard Wishney, Robert Goldman, and Richard Perez.

Following a reception held at the Temple Beth Torah, the couple left for a cruise to the Virgin Islands.

Hollis D. Zierler Becomes Bride of Gordon M. Decker

Mrs. Gordon Decker

Hollis Debra Zierler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isadore J. Zierler of Cranston and Delray Beach, Florida, was married on June 22 to Gordon Michael Decker of Fredericksburg, Virginia. He is the son of Mrs. Harriet Decker of Rockville Center, N.Y. and Mr. Morton Decker of Greensboro, North Carolina.

Rabbi Joel Zaiman officiated the noon-time ceremony held at Temple Emanu-El, Providence, with Cantor Ivan Perlman participating. A reception followed at Temple Emanu-El.

The bride was given in marriage by Isadore J. Zierler, the father of the bride.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown of imported bridal satin which was designed by the bride's maternal grandmother.

Her bouquet consisted of a bible with Phalinopsis orchids, Stephanotis and yellow roses accented with piquot ribbon.

Sharon Corin, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor, and Rolfe Decker was the best man for his brother.

Bridesmaids were Judith Hochman and Simone Gadell. Ushers were Stanley Wilensky, Eric Shangold, Harvey Lapidus, and James Gadell.

The couple will live in Fredericksburg, Virginia.

Ronni Saltzman Weds William Guttin

Ronni Saltzman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Saltzman of Providence, was married June 8 to William Guttin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Guttin of Cranston.

Temple Beth Torah, Cranston, was the setting for the 5 p.m. candlelight ceremony and the reception that followed. Rabbi Jacob Rubenstein officiated at the ceremony with Cantor Jacob Smith participating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Norman Saltzman.

Marci Saltzman was maid of honor for her sister, and Sara-Ann Ritch was bridesmaid. Junior bridesmaids were Rachel Goldman and Naomi Jaffe.

Samuel Goldman was best man, Robert Jaffe and Myron Guttin were ushers, and Jordan Jaffe was the ring bearer.

Grandparents of the bride are Mrs. Helen Saltzman and Mrs. Ruth Kriss.

Following a wedding trip to Quebec, Canada, the couple will reside in Cranston.

Ambassador Denies Cover-up

TEL AVIV (JTA) — U.S. Ambassador Samuel Lewis firmly denied Tuesday that there has been a "cover-up" of alleged irregularities at the two American-financed air bases being constructed for Israel at Ouvda and Ramon in the Negev. He conceded, however, that there might have been instances of "inefficiency, corruption or malfeasance" at the sites which, he said, was inevitable in a project of such size and complexity being undertaken with unprecedented speed.

Guess whose oil bills won't be going up this fall?

Now that OPEC has announced another price increase, almost everyone's home fuel bills will be going up.

The exception to the rule — homeowners who purchased a Sunworks Solector-Pak water heater from the Energy Store in Pawtucket.

Because these homeowners are using the Solector-Pak to heat their hot water, they automatically reduce their home oil costs by purchasing less oil (between 20%-30% of oil bill expenditures can be traced directly to the energy required to heat water for bathing, laundry and dishwashing).

And they'll be getting big tax credits: another money saver. In Rhode Island, homeowners are eligible for a 57% tax credit. In Massachusetts, a tax credit of 61% off the net cost.

The Solector-Pak system from Sunworks has what we believe to be the lowest cost/Btu/ft² within the industry, which is the lowest cost per gallon of hot water for now and in the future (based on HUD and Department of Energy studies).

Finally, nobody has to pay anybody for sunlight. It's free.

Find out how you can tap the sun and put a little sunshine in your pocket by calling the Energy Store, 726-4061.

So the next time OPEC raises their prices, you can laugh. All the way to the bank.

Homes Needed For Exchange Students

The Pacific American Institute is looking for host families in the greater Providence area who are willing to provide care and friendship for one or more of 40 French exchange students scheduled to spend a month here in a special summer school program. The students, aged 16 through 20, will study to improve their English and to learn more about American culture, especially as it is manifested in Rhode Island.

Providence coordinators for the program are looking for homes to host these students from July 6, 1980 to August 2, 1980. The young people will be accompanied by a French program director and will have medical insurance coverage and spending money.

PAI's Providence coordinators, as well as the program teachers, will work to develop meaningful academic and social experiences for the students. It is expected that the host families will also provide valuable social experiences, inasmuch as they will be giving the students a look at American family life.

In return, host families will enjoy the satisfaction and rewards of sharing the rich Rhode Island culture with a student from another nation.

This is the first PAI program in the state and the coordinators hope response is generous so that this enriching program will be repeated. For further information contact the PAI coordinators at 863-4728.

Katz Denounces ILO Resolution

GENEVA (JTA) — An Arab-sponsored resolution demanding the dismantling of Israeli settlements in the occupied territories was adopted for the agenda by the resolutions committee of the International Labor Organization (ILO) conference here. Its adoption by the plenary session next week, however, is considered doubtful.

The committee approved the resolution by a vote of 340 with 270 abstentions. There is no negative vote in committee. The plenary meeting counts the votes differently. While the Arabs lined up the votes of the Communist and Moslem countries for the draft, most African countries were not present. The Israeli delegates believe the Africans will vote against the resolution at the plenary session.

Israeli Labor Minister Israel Katz, who is in Geneva for the ILO's annual assembly, denounced the resolution noting the ILO spent the last two weeks debating over anti-Israel resolutions instead of dealing with labor problems.

OJD Militants Patroling Paris In Wake of Recent Attacks

PARIS (JTA) — Inhabitants of the Jewish district of Saint Paul here live in fear following an attack staged by neo-Nazi commandos a few days ago. Some 40 commandos wearing helmets and arm bands with swastikas attacked shops and passersby in the "pletzl," the Jewish district, to the shouts of "kill the Jews."

Witnesses said that many of the attackers had swastikas painted on their cheeks and elderly people thought they were reliving the dreaded wartime era when Jews were rounded up by the Gestapo and French militiamen to be sent to Nazi death camps.

Minutes after the attack, members of the Jewish defense organization (OJD) clashed with commando members who were armed with iron bars. Each time the leaders of the commandos blew their whistles their men shouted "down with the Jews, kill them," one terrified witness said. Police took some time to intervene after a severe clash between the commandos and OJD militants.

The extreme right-wing European Federation of National Action (FANE) is suspected of being responsible for the attack. FANE, composed of about 50 militants, is considered as the most radical of all right-wing organizations. It is believed to have been set up by dissident members of the Fascist New Forces Party (PFN).

Inhabitants of the Saint Paul district, known as the Jewish Ghetto of Paris though it has lost much of its aspect in 30 years, live with the fear of other neo-Nazi attacks and OJD militants are patrolling the streets of the district day and night.

Israeli Soldiers Charged In Terrorist Conspiracy

JERUSALEM — Israeli authorities, having gathered enough evidence of Jews plotting acts of terrorism, have formally charged two Israeli soldiers with conspiring to blow up mosques and Christian missionary institutions with explosives stolen from an army ammunition depot.

The indictments seeking criminal prosecution came in the wake of a series of bombings in the West Bank area and in Israel, and shootings which left three Jews and five Arabs injured.

Officials believe that the bombing-conspiracy case has no connection with the June 2 bombing which left two Palestinian mayors crippled. The soldiers were already in jail at that time and no other arrests have been reported following those attacks.

An army spokesman declined to give any specific details of the soldiers' alleged plot but did say that their targets included public Arab buildings, such as mosques, and unnamed Christian missionary institutions, many of which are in Jerusalem.

The two Israeli soldiers, identified as Acting Officer Moshe Ben-Arye and Pvt. Arye Leibowitz, both 20, were arrested May 9 after the director of a yeshiva in the Jewish quarter of the Old City of Jerusalem alerted police to the presence of suspicious packages on the school roof. According to reports, the two soldiers had allegedly stockpiled 264 pounds of high explosive, 15 hand grenades, 14 rocket grenades, 160 years of explosive fuse and two detonators.

A third person, identified as a friend of the two soldiers and a yeshiva student, was taken into custody on June 8. He was thought to be in possession of explosive detonators. There have been no further reports on possible charges.

Elsewhere, a 22-year-old Arab woman from Bethlehem died from a gunshot wound suffered when an Israeli border policeman accidentally fired a burst from his automatic rifle. That incident sparked off a demonstration by Palestinian students at Bir Zeit University, north of Jerusalem, and Israeli troops, who were being stoned by the students proceeded to fire into the campus. One student was wounded in the arm and chest and four others were slightly wounded by ricocheting bullets.

Another woman, this time a pregnant Israeli, was seriously injured when a bomb, planted among bottles on an upper shelf in a grocery store in the Tel Aviv suburb of Pardes Katz, exploded. The grocer and another male customer were also hurt in the blast. Another bomb went off harmlessly at a bus stop in French Hill, a Jewish neighborhood of apartment houses in the northeastern sector of Jerusalem, which was captured from Jordan in 1967 and annexed to Israel.

Club Set Up For Mentally Retarded

DETROIT (JTA) — Some 20 persons are participating in a club for mentally retarded adults created by the Jewish Association for Retarded Citizens (JARC) for such adults who live, or are prepared to live, in their own apartments.

The "Semi-Independent Apartment Program" was set up by the JARC with assistance of a grant from the Jewish Community Foundation of the Detroit United Jewish Charities, according to the Detroit Jewish News.

Participants in the program are described as high-functioning retarded adults who show potential for independence but who would be unable to make such a move without support. The JARC apartment program offers such adults help in strengthening their skills, placement in apartments, and supervision geared to individual capabilities.

Cabinet Reaches Compromise On Defense Budget

JERUSALEM (JTA) — The crisis over cuts in the defense budget was resolved to the apparent satisfaction of the defense establishment and the visible displeasure of Finance Minister Yigal Hurwitz at a marathon nine-hour special session of the Cabinet.

The Cabinet agreed to slice IL 7 billion (about $150 million) from the Defense Ministry's budget this year. Hurwitz had demanded an IL 15 billion (320 million) cut which he insisted was the only way to halt the soaring inflation rate.

Chief of Staff Gen. Raphael Eitan, who attended the Cabinet session, told reporters on leaving that he was "satisfied" with the decision, although the Defense Ministry was insisting that it could not possibly absorb a cut in excess of IL 4 billion. Hurwitz was grim. He told reporters on emerging from the meeting that if the requisite cuts were not made in defense spending, they would have to be made elsewhere.

Hurwitz's demand for an IL 15 billion cut had been backed by the majority vote of a five-man committee which Premier Menachem Begin had appointed under the chairmanship of Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon to arbitrate the Defense Ministry-Treasury dispute. His defeat raised speculation that he would resign and pull his three-man La-am faction out of Likud. Begin met with Hurwitz and reportedly urged him not to take such a step.

Informed sources said Hurwitz would demand that IL 8 billion be cut from the budgets of other ministries to cover the monies that will remain in the hands of the Defense Ministry. The sources said Hurwitz would insist on an immediate decision and swift implementation of the cuts as a condition of his staying in the government.

Hurwitz was personally selected by Begin to head the Finance Ministry. He took office last fall after Begin engineered a Cabinet reshuffle which elevated then Finance Minister Simcha Ehrlich to Deputy Prime Minister, a portfolio with no real powers. Hurwitz, given the mandate to take drastic measures to salvage Israel's rapidly deteriorating economy, made it clear from the start that the battle against inflation was his top priority.

The battle over the defense budget polarized Israel and split Begin's coalition government. A number of coalition MKs announced that they would vote against an IL 15 billion cut in the Knesset. President Yitzhak Navon, who normally does not intervene publicly in political disputes, has expressed concern that the proposed budget cuts would endanger Israel's defense capabilities. He said he hoped they would not be approved in total.

The defense establishment argued effectively against the cuts demanded by the Treasury. Gen. Eitan and other senior officers warned that, among other things, a reduced military budget would limit training exercises, force soldiers in outlying areas to live in tents for the next year or two and probably reduce the overall size of the armed forces.

Defense Ministry officials warned that the redeployment of the armed forces from Sinai to a new, elaborate defense system in the Negev would be delayed, that production of Israel's fighter plane the Kfir, would be curtailed and its second generation prototype, the Lavie, might never get off the drawing boards. This would not only weaken the Air Force and retard Israel's progress toward military self-sufficiency but would affect Israel Aircraft Industries which is heavily dependent on foreign orders for the Kfir and Lavie.

Treasury officials and other financial authorities countered these arguments by contending that inflation, in the long run, was a greater menace to national security than military budget cuts. Arnon Gafni, Governor of the Bank of Israel, said that if the IL 15 billion cut was approved it would have a favorable effect on inflation by reducing the influx of government money into the money market.

U.S. Action Taken Against Alleged Ex-Nazis

WASHINGTON (JTA) — The U.S. Department of Justice has filed actions in Philadelphia and Los Angeles against two former residents of Baltic states who allegedly cooperated with Nazi forces in the killing of Jews during World War II.

The Justice Department asked the U.S. District Court in Philadelphia to revoke the U.S. citizenship of Arnolds Richards Truscis, 70. It also asked a U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service judge in Los Angeles to deport Mike Pasker of Santa Monica, California, on similar charges.

According to the suit against Truscis, he served in the auxiliary police force of the Latvian security service from 1941 to 1943, during which time he allegedly assisted German forces by guarding, beating and tormenting unarmed Jewish civilians. He later served the German SS and SD organizations that persecuted Jews in Latvia, according to the suit.

The Justice Department also charged that when Truscis entered the U.S. in 1951 he "willfully concealed his membership in Latvian groups that persecuted Jews." The Department said that "because his entry and his 1965 citizenship were both illegally obtained, the citizenship must be revoked."

In the Los Angeles suit, the Justice Department said that Pasker, who is also known as Mecys Paskevicius, entered the U.S. in 1950 and made "misrepresentations" saying he was a "displaced person." The suit said that in 1941-44, Pasker "helped German and Lithuanian forces who persecuted civilians in Lithuania." The Department added that he took part in hanging and shooting 100 Jewish civilians in Lithuania in July, 1941.

In August, 1979, the U.S. District Court in Los Angeles ordered Pasker's citizenship revoked for concealing his "background" when he entered the U.S.

JCC Installs Pool Lift For Handicapped Swimmers

Pool lift is demonstrated by Center volunteer Coordinator of Handicap Services Alan Temkin and water safety instructor Patricia "Pete" Kelley.

The Jewish Community Center has installed a pool lift to aid handicapped and disabled swimmers. The user is seated in the lift and easily hoisted in or out of the water.

The lift was made available to the Center by the Friends of the Handicapped, a local fund-raising organization whose officers include President Arline Abrams, Vice-President Dot Samdperil, Vice-President Alice Viola, Treasurer Ruth Bromberg, and Secretary Ruth Roth.

The pool lift is part of an ongoing program under the auspices of the Handicapped Service Committee of the center to make the Providence facility accessible to all members of the community. A hydraulic elevator and entrance ramp were installed earlier this year.

An Interview With Robert Klein:

As we all know, a career in acting is not a legitimate pursuit for a nice Jewish Boy from the Bronx.

So Robert Klein, child of the fifties, entered Alfred University as; "a premedical student. My mother was so proud." It didn't matter that his dad was a good livingroom comedian and his mother a showbiz fan. "I was always entertaining the relatives. The pieces started to fall into place when I joined the college's acting company and became 'The Rod Steiger of Alfred University'. I graduated with a B.A. in political science and history, but my drama teacher told my father that I should pursue an acting career."

When Yale Drama School beckoned, Klein was on his way. "Actually, Yale was not too valuable," he mused. "They don't tell you that an alumni like Paul Newman only spent an hour there.

Back in New York City, he took to special training for young comics called "Improvisation," spending three years there.

Robert is unashamedly intelligent and literate, with precise memory for the most subtle defrails concerning people and situations. We spoke over lunch this week in Manhattan where his entire month of June is being spent fiming "The Robert Klein Special" due on the tube this fall.

WHATS HAPPENING:

It seems that Theodore Bikel's run of bad luck is finally over. He is returning to "Fiddler" now that he has recuperated from a serious car accident two months ago. He has been getting around in a special wheel chair . . . meanwhile, Herschel Bernardi is in Boston performing in his version of Tevye . . . Famed Cantor the late Moishe Oysher's niece, Marilyn Michaels will star in her own T.V. series premiering this fall . . . Israeli star Yehoroam Gaon sold out Carnegie Hall in New York for two shows. He is recently been noted for his fine performance of Yonathan in "Operation Thunderbolt" . . . Israeli star Ruthi Navon is getting married. Her recent signing with Polydor Records will take her to stardom thy critics are saying . . . Barbra Streisand is busy filming Isaac Bashevas Singer "Yentl" . . . Aliza Kashi has been signed for a summer tour with Myron Cohen and Jan Peerce . . . Gregory Peck will star in a new film entitled "The Song of Abraham" . . . Jewish recording country star Barbi Benton will release a new album this week . . . Billy Loek, whose father is a survivor of Buchenwald, has sold out five concerts at Madison Square Garden in three hours. Billy just returned from a super tour of Israel where he toured the entire country including a few Kibbutz's . . . Playwright Neil Simon will be honored as 'Man of the Year' by the Beverly Hills B'nai B'rith next week . . . Former Rabbi and now one of America's top comics, Jackie Mason, has just signed a syndication deal for a weekly talk how based out of Florida . . . Jack Carter and Don Rickles can't complain about being typecast, especially since their starring role in the upcoming picture: "Love on the Run." Carter plays a timid soul and Don the 'Attila the Hun'

Efforts Underway To Reach Peaceful Agreement In Settlement

JERUSALEM (JTA) — Intensive efforts are now underway in order to avert a clash between police and a number of poverty families who have established a tent city on unused State-owned land south of Jerusalem. The families are refusing to leave until the government provides them with decent housing.

Negotiations between representatives of the tent city and Housing Minister David Levy broke down after the squatters had agreed tentatively to leave the site. Some 1000 Jerusalem policemen and border police assembled at the Russian Compound in downtown Jerusalem awaiting orders to remove the squatters by force. Levy insisted, on a radio interview, that their peaceful evacuation was a precondition for any further action by his ministry to alleviate their housing problems.

The squatters are Oriental Jews, mostly young married couples, many with children, who left their slum dwellings in the Katamon quarter and other depressed neighborhoods in Jerusalem to erect the tent city in protest against the government's failure to relieve the housing shortage. They call their tent community "Ohel Moreh," an allusion to Elon Moreh, the Gush Emunim settlement on the West Bank which was lavishly supported by the government until it was declared illegal by the Supreme Court last year. Subsequently the government built a new settlement for the Elon Moreh settlers.

The squatters say they are resorting to the Gush Emunim's methods of militancy and defiance of authority because it seems to be the only way to stir the government to action.

The dispute seemed to have been resolved when Nissim Gaon, a Geneva-based millionaire and president of the World Sephardi Federation, pledged to raise $600 million in the next few months for investment in low-cost rental housing for 40,000 young married couples unable to find homes they can afford.

Gaon, a personal friend of Premier Menachem Begin, flew here last week and apparently was accepted by the squatters as a mediator in their dispute with the government. He and Levy met with representatives of the tent city when it appeared that the negotiations would succeed. They hit a snag, however, when Levy contended that a number of the families involved already had adequate housing and needed no extra help.

The squatters stormed out of the meeting, charging that it was "yet another attempt by the government to con us." Many of them marched through the city's poverty neighborhoods calling through bull horns for sympathizers to join them at the tent city. Although negotiations were resumed, the squatters rejected Gaon's offer, declaring that the housing problem must be solved by the government, not by foreign philanthropists. Gaon returned to Geneva today.

A clash between the squatters and police could have serious political consequences for Begin's government. The votes of Oriental Jews were largely responsible for Likud's victory over the Labor Party in the 1977 elections.

Another source of controversy is the fact that the tent city was financed by independent MK Samuel Flatto-Sharon, also a millionaire but with a tarnished reputation since he was accused of irregular practices in his campaign for a Knesset seat. Gaon denied that one of the reasons he entered the picture was because he did not want the slum dwellers to accept aid from Sharon. "If Mr. Sharon wants to help them — welcome," he said.

Sharon, who usually supports the Begin coalition in the Knesset, warned that if the housing problem is not solved quickly he would finance dozens of new "Ohel Morehs."

Leaders to Discuss Talks

JERUSALEM (JTA) — Israel is waiting for a formal invitation from the U.S. to send its chief autonomy negotiator, Interior Minister Yosef Burg, to Washington for discussions on the resumption of the autonomy talks with Egypt. Cairo is also believed to be awaiting an invitation.

Egypt announced late last week that it is now prepared to move toward resumption of the talks which President Anwar Sadat suspended on May 15. Israel's position all along has been that it favors an early resumption.

Observers here acknowledged that setting a date need not require a face-to-face meeting of the principals and could be arranged just as easily via telecommunications. But apparently Israel, Egypt and the U.S. want to hold a heads-of-delegations session as a tangible symbol that the crisis involving the passing of the May 26 target date without any noticeable progress on an autonomy plan has now ended.

YOUR FUTURE

Asks About Tax-Free Mutuals

by David R. Sargent

Q: I'm interested in buying a no-load tax-free or tax-exempt mutual fund. Can you describe them and recommend a few?

A: Tax-exempt mutual funds invest in tax-exempt bonds or similar securities on which the interest tax exemption is passed through to the shareholder. They appeal to investors in higher brackets who seek income that is exempt from Federal tax.

The funds offer a managed portfolio, one that changes as new developments occur in financial markets. There are no sales charges; however, annual expenses, including management fees averaging 0.5 per cent, are generally in the 0.75 - 0.85 per cent range.

Another type of tax-exempt fund is the unit investment trust, which has a fixed, unmanaged portfolio. Some trusts are designed for an intermediate term of approximately ten years, but most are structured for a longer term and hold securities with maturities of twenty to thirty years. They typically levy sales charges of 3 ½ to 4 ½ per cent. However, annual expenses average less than 0.2 per cent, much less than that for the managed tax-exempt mutual funds.

Unit investment trusts are sponsored by brokerage firms and their yields, considering relative charges, are about half a per cent more than the tax-exempt mutuals — perhaps averaging 7 ½ per cent now, vs. 7 per cent for the funds.

Conceptually, the trusts, which are self-liquidating portfolios that are unmanaged but not unsupervised, are best bought by individuals wishing to supplement income with an investment that provides a specified return; and by those who believe that interest rates are attractive and don't want to speculate on their future course.

For their part, the managed funds may best suit investors for whom income is not a primary objective, but where conservation of capital is most important. Those in this category might include investors in the 30 or 40 group who want to invest under the premise that there will be a gradual, if irregular, upward trend in interest rates over their working lives.

Since yields on the trusts and funds are much less than those available on taxable alternatives, you should calculate whether it makes sense for someone in your bracket to invest in them. Also, in some cases, the income is not fully exempt from state and local taxation.

Mini-White House Conclave Held on Aging

NEW YORK — A variety of proposals for more vigorous support for the growing proportion of elderly Americans — including a multi-media campaign to change the image of aging and the aged in the United States — emerged from the first "mini-White House" conference on the Aging in New York.

The conference here, sponsored by the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies in conjunction with 15 other Jewish service agencies was held to identify priorities in serving the Jewish aged which the Jewish community wants to see addressed at the 1981 White House Conference on Aging, an event held every ten years at which the agenda for America's aged is set, according to Federation officials.

Some 350 attended the conference, which was held at the new headquarters of the Jewish Association for Services for the Aged in Manhattan. Senior citizens and professionals in the field of geriatrics were among those attending.

The keynote speaker, Prof. Robert Morris at the Florence G. Heller social work school at Brandeis University, declared that "the battle for the elderly Americans over the next decade is two-fold: to fight like hell to ensure that there are no major cutbacks in government programs and financing; and to make a major effort to create non-governmental programs of mutual aid and voluntary effort."

Prof. Morris also declared that "in the next decade there must be a major push to switch emphasis from medical care for the aged to home care. It will be necessary to reallocate dollars to back up home care services to relieve pressures on hospitals and nursing homes."

He also praised the efforts of the Federation and its agencies in maintaining the elderly in the community by such approaches as community apartments, medically-oriented recreation programs and geriatric day care.

Among recommendations decided on in conference workshops were proposals that government resources be channeled into programs with community support for the frail elderly; that income tax laws be changed to allow deductions by elderly persons for classes and training for new occupations; that there be reduced fares for the elderly on public transportation 24 hours a day; and that a national family aid program be created to give families financial support for home care and respite services for elderly parents.

In Canada:

Cotler Calls For New Approach

MONTREAL (JTA) — Irving Cotler, the McGill University law professor and newly elected president of the Canadian Jewish Congress, has called for new approaches by Canadian Jewry to matters which concern it, such as the presentation of Israel's case to the government and public opinion in Canada and combatting assimilation.

These issues and the future of Jews in a French Quebec were discussed by the 40-year-old jurist in an exclusive interview with the Jewish Telegraphic Agency here. With respect to Israel, he said, "Part of our problem originates in the way the case was presented to the government and public opinion in Canada. We should advocate the cause of Israel not only because it is a Jewish cause but because it is a just cause. We should explain that Israel is a metaphor for human rights, that it has become the litmus test for democracy, that how it goes with Israel, so it will go with the rest of us. Thus we shall sensitize both the government of Canada and the public opinion, stressing the intrinsic merits of the case," Cotler said.

He added, "I am sufficiently convinced that Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau will respond on the merits of Israel's just cause."

According to Cotler, fighting assimilation with the slogan "Jewish education" is an old cliche. "What is needed is a strategy of cross-commitments, networks of Jewish identities, that is an integrated approach to the family, the school, the religion, our camps and retreats; to pump in the Jewish experience wherever a Jewish child goes," he said. "We have to create a Jewish Gestalt — an ambience one experiences in a very feeling sense. A good deal of the agenda for the eighties claims a greater dedication on the part of all of us which does not cost money."

MY HEARTFUL THANKS to all of you who were so concerned about me while confined at Miriam Hospital for major surgery. The many beautiful cards, plants, flowers, fruit baskets and donations in my honor to local charities, helped ease the pain and ordeal of the surgery. I am deeply grateful to a warm friend and understanding Dr. Carroll M. Silver and his associates for the wonderful care and comfort, and setting me on the road to recovery. To all the nurses, thanks for putting up with a tough patient and to Rabbi Morris Drazin, your visits were sincerely appreciated, and rewarding and increased my complete faith in God's willingness to ease a person's wounds. Shalom Joe Block

Hussein Demands Withdrawal, Independence For Palestine

WASHINGTON (JTA) — King Hussein of Jordan has reiterated his position that Israel must withdraw from all lands it occupied in the Six-Day War, including "Arab Jerusalem" and called for "national independence for the Palestinians" as conditions for peace in "our region."

Speaking before the National Press Club, broadcast live by National Public Radio and Public Broadcasting Service Television on 1000 radio and television stations across the country, Hussein implied that the Soviet Union should become again involved in the proceedings for a settlement in the Middle East and warned that a separate peace between Israel and Egypt will not succeed in bringing about a solution.

Addressing himself to the American people, Hussein called on them to demand from their government a "balanced policy" toward the Arabs and Israelis. He said that the U.S. is depriving itself of relations in trade, energy and culture with the Arab people "because of its peculiar and indefensible interpretation of commitment to Israel's security that seems to equate security with conquest."

Claims Jordan Actively Seeking Peace

Hussein claimed that "Jordan has been the most active country in search of a comprehensive settlement" since 1967, adding, "We warned against partial and separate settlements" and that "the essence cannot be ignored." That, he said, was "Israel's withdrawal from the territory it occupied in June, 1967" and it "cannot be separated from the exercise by the Palestinian people of the right to self-determination and national freedom on their national soil. The problem will not disappear if Egypt alone regains its occupied land," Hussein said. "Syrian national territories are occupied. Gaza and the West Bank are occupied. Arab Jerusalem is occupied and officially, according to Israel, annexed."

He also stated that the Arab countries which, at Baghdad and Tunis had rejected the Camp David peace process, "aimed at restoring Arab cohesion and sense of purposes." He said that at Tunis, those governments decided to send out envoys for a "just peace" but "this policy has been thwarted by Israeli settlements and repression of the last few months." The governments he referred to were opposed to the Camp David process since it was initiated in September, 1978.

Hussein said, "We are also consulting with the Palestine Liberation Organization" and "the ultimate solution of the problem is that the Palestinian people must participate in constructing the peace we all want." According to Hussein, "The key issue is the right of self-determination." Without mentioning Israel, he added, "This need not contradict the rights of others in the area." He urged that "Palestinian exiles" be permitted to unite with "those under occupation."

During one question period, the King avoided a question as to whether President Carter sought to persuade him to join the autonomy talks during their two days of meetings. He said his discussions with Carter had given him "fresh insight into the thoughts here."

Hussein said the issue of Israel's right to exist and Palestinian rights should be addressed to "both sides simultaneously." Asked how, if he favors peace, he can support the PLO whose charter calls for the extinction of Israel, Hussein replied, "The PLO is basically for the restoration of the rights of the people of Palestine on Palestinian soil." He acknowledged that "this is an issue difficult to answer, and remarked, "We tend to turn to extremism in our attitude when hope diminishes."

Schmidt Defends Declaration; Sadat Criticizes Hussein

BONN (JTA) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt told the Bundestag that the Middle East declaration of the nine European Economic Community (EEC) Prime Ministers in Venice was an "evenhanded" document "contributing to an overall peace settlement" in that region. Schmidt stressed that "contrary to what was said," the European community did not intend to change Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338.

The Chancellor expressed satisfaction with what he termed the positive reactions to the Venice statement in Cairo and Washington. He did not mention the Israeli Cabinet's vigorous denunciation of the document which Premier Menachem Begin called "a second Munich surrender." However, he said, "we fully understand" the concerns of "our Israeli friends" and "we took them into consideration." He said the EEC member states will explain their views on continuing the peace process to the various parties.

Meanwhile, Yitzhak Berman, the Speaker of the Knesset who heads an Israeli parliamentary delegation visiting West Germany, said that his country totally rejected the idea of European guarantees for a Middle East peace settlement. According to Berman, the Venice declaration supported the Palestine Liberation Organization and thereby encouraged terrorism and extremism.

Meanwhile, in Alexandria, Egypt, President Anwar Sadat predicted that King Hussein would not join in the Camp David negotiations. Sadat said that Hussein wanted to join the Palestinian autonomy talks in 1978, but added, "I did not invite him to participate" because that "was opportunism" in the King's part.

In answering the charges Hussein stated that he had not heard the remarks. "I have never been in the habit of responding to such an attack. I know where I stand," the King said.

Scholarship Named In Honor Of Slomovitzs

NEW YORK — Establishment of a Magen David Adom paramedic training scholarship in Israel, in honor of Anna and Philip Slomovitz, editor and publisher of the Jewish News of Detroit, has been announced by Dr. John J. Mames, president of the Michigan region of the American Red Magen David for Israel. Slomovitz is a vice president of the Jewish Telegraphic Agency.

Mames said the paramedic scholarship was set up by the Michigan region in recognition of the "magnificent support" given to Israel's Magen David Adom by Mr. and Mrs. Slomovitz who were among the founders of the Red Magen David Detroit chapter.

Jewish Prof. Accuses Soviets

MOSCOW — Professor Grigori Freiman, a 54-year old professor of algebra and geometry, has accused the Soviet mathematics and establishment of discriminating against Jews by his being dismissed from his teaching post at the Univeriisity in Kalinin, northwest of Moscow.

The mathematician, who stated, "They told me I was dismissed as of July I as part of a reduction in staff," plans to appeal the dismissal on the ground that it violates a Soviet law which insures a professorship for five years following periodic reviews of qualifications.

In 1978 Prof. Freiman wrote a 20,000 word article for an underground journal, Jews in the U.S.S.R., which charged that a pattern of anti-Jewish discrimination in mathematics was forming. Ex

Exerpts from the report appeared in the New York Times Magazine and several scientific publications in the United States in the Fall of 1979.

Prof. Freiman, feeling that he had no future in the Soviet Union, said that he had applied to authorities for a visa to emigrate to Israel.

The Nights In Tel Aviv Can Be As Breathtaking As A Lush, Tropical Setting See Inside For The Full Picture

Le Club:

For the Tel Aviv Jet Set

TEL AVIV — When darkness falls, people can be spotted migrating to a dark gray building near the water. Their cars are parked by an attendant as they stroll past the bouncer, through the sliding doors, and join groups gathered beneath dim lights while others dance to a hard and fast disco beat.

This is the Israeli chic experience; a close copy of recent American and European trends. Despite an almost total involvement with politics, a swanky set has managed to emerge in Israel.

Since it opened three years ago, "Le Club" has become the biggest and most popular nightclub in Israel, with 1,000 members and an equivalent number on the waiting list.

Inside can be found a game room where members play shesh besh, the Arab version of backgammon, and a French restaurant, with imitation Belle Epoque smoked glass and Art Nouveau petal lamps that hang from the ceiling.

Another level houses the disco dance floor, where the likes of Donna Summer, Michael Jackson, and other American disco recordings are heard along with horas played to a heavy disco beat.

In the penthouse, businessmen gather around wearing tight pants, mezuzas, and shirts unbuttoned halfway down their chest; with pina coladas in hand surrounded by a tropical looking environment—straw huts, exotic plants, and rattan furniture.

Those who come to Le Club are part of the new look. Many members are politicians, diamond merchants, and construction financiers, along with local models, pop singers, and actors. Prime Minister Begin's aide, Dan Patir, has been seen on the grounds. Uri Dan, the Israeli journalist, is a member. Knesset member Shmuel Flatto-Sharon, who is wanted in France for tax fraud, is another regular.

They are viewed by staunchier sets as part of the "nouveau riche," coming from the shtetls to the new scene.

Le Club has also become the place to stop for visiting international celebrities. The spot has seen such people as U.S. Ambassador Samuel Lewis and actresses Farrah Fawcett and Margaux Hemingway.

The man in charge of the operation is a 39-year-old former flight attendant named Rafi Shauli. Until three years ago, he was married to Mandy Rice-Davies, who, along with Christine Keeler, was one of the call girls involved in the John Profumo spy scandal that put Britain in an uproar in the 1960's.

Shauli: He Has A Feel For Social Movement

Mr. Shauli has been accused by the local press of associating with Israeli crime figures, but he has denied all reports of this. Any underworld associations, as questionable as they might be, have not stopped him from becoming the number one man in Israeli nightlife.

His friends say that Shauli, who worked for El Al right out of high school, has a strong business sense and a feel for social movements.

"This is a snob-appeal operation" he said over a cup of coffee in the garden penthouse of Le Club. "I wanted the ability to sell 1,000 memberships at $200 each and I was right."

Shauli had tagged his countrymen right previously, also. Working on the El Al Tel Aviv to New York flights, he noticed the consumer attractions in the United States; hamburgers, flavored shakes, frozen yogurt and the first New York discotheque, Ginza.

In 1967, he brought his U.S. learnings and his wife, Rice-Davies, back to Jaffa, south of Tel Aviv, and opened his own discotheque.

He later brought Chinese food to Israel, opened a drugstore, a health food bar and an American-style pub called "Little Tel Aviv." He named many of the spots after Rice-Davies, capitalizing on her notoriety. All places were very successful.

Mr. Shauli soon learned of the popularity of New Jimmy's and Regine's in Paris and decided to make a similar club in Tel Aviv where its clientele could feel important.

He and several other colleagues invested $40,000 in renovating the Jaffa club. It wasn't even complete before he had 1,000 charter members.

Mr. Shauli has several other projects underway in Israel, without the image of Miss Rice-Davies, however, who has since returned to England to write a book and act in the theater.

Those Who Come Are Part Of The New Look

Viewed As "Nouveau Riche" They Come To The New Scene

For Rod Carew:

Baseball, Religion & Family All Go Hand In Hand

Rod Carew, the California Angels' crackerjack first baseman, is a man with a dream. Yes, his ambitions will almost assure him of a place at the World Series, every baseball players goal, but Rod Carew's dream takes him into other areas of his life: his home life, his family life.

Rod Carew plans to convert to Judaism. His family, wife Marilynn Levy, and his three children are Jewish and it is Rod's ambition to convert to Judaism when his baseball career ends.

It was only an hour before game time at Yankee Stadium but Rod Carew, Gene Autry's California Angels first baseman was not dressed to play ball. Instead he sat in the locker room encased in neck brace, nursing a recent neck injury.

The 34-year-old Carew had been scratched from the team lineup by manager Jim Fregosi. He would have to sit this one out.

As game time approached Carew sat talking with two young men wearing yarmulkes. They were from "Israel Today," a publication that has had a long-standing interest in the man who has attained the highest career batting average among any major league ballplayers born within the last 50 years.

Because of baseball there's not a whole lot of time left for other things in Rod Carew's life. He devotes his time to the perfection of his field. With a .329 average-including a .457 clip over the preceding nine games, Rod Carew thinks in terms of driving home runs. "He can hit a ball within a yard of wherever he wants," contends Yankee pitching coach Stan Williams. "The only other one I ever saw able to do that was Stan Musial."

Traded from the Twins two years ago, Carew has made his mark with the Angels despite not producing one bunt single and performing as Angels' designated hitter for the last few weeks. He was asked to sacrifice the bunt as a major weapon following the injuries of Don Baylor and Dan Ford, two key Angels' run-makers.

Former teammate at Minnesota and his present adversary on the Yankees, pitcher Luis Tiant sums up the situation by saying "They took away the bunt. When they know he can't bunt, the infield plays back. They want him to hit the ball, get more r.b.i.'s."

like Sandy Koufax he never plays on Yom Kippur.

But still Carew hits. His driving machine has produced a .333 career average and seven battling titles (only Ty Cobb and Honus Wagner have won more) and helped bring home the American League Western Division title last year.

So baseball gives Carew a side of life that puts him in the limelight. It is something he enjoys and he wears his stardom easy. When practicing his hitting, his swing is natural; his bat only an extension of himself.

But there is another side to Rod Carew. A side that is kept away from the playing field. A side that becomes his life when the game is over and the fans go home.

For Rod Carew his life is his family, and his religion. Rod Carew wants to convert to Judaism when his baseball career ends and, like Sandy Koufax, he never plays on Yom Kippur.

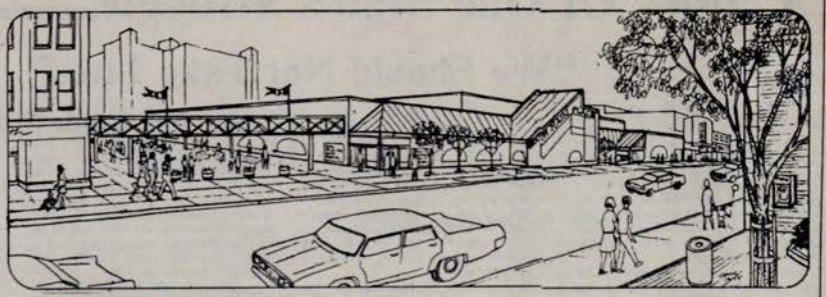
Married to the former Marilynn Levy, Carew, his wife and their three children all celebrate the Jewish holidays together. Born in Panama before moving to Brooklyn at age 15, Carew says of those days, "I was a loner who didn't make many friends." Now Carew shares his talent with millions; his religion he shares with his family.

Like everyone who has a liking for baseball, Carew harbors the American dream of playing in a World Series. And he harbors another dream. "I want to know more about Judaism," he says, "so when my children ask me questions I don't have to tell them, 'Ask Mommy.'"

DOWNTOWN

FALL RIVER

MASSACHUSETTS



A City On The Move Supported By A Man With A Vision

Ronald J. Lowenstein, Esq.

The news of Fall River's massive facelift is finally making waves as people from different communities are beginning to take a look at what is taking place there.

The man responsible for much of the city's progress is Attorney Ronald J. Lowenstein, Chairman of the Redevelopment Authority of Fall River. Under his leadership, a ten-year struggle to revitalize the Fall River Central Business District is reaching its fruition.

He was appointed to the position through the authority of the mayor, and has served in that position for 10 years on a strictly voluntary basis.

Lowenstein believes this multi-million dollar renewal will be the spark for renewed economic growth in the city. A large map reveals plans for the new downtown, then years in the making, a portion of which is scheduled to be completed by November 1980.

Although the progress has, at times, been set back by a combination of frustration, details, and resistance, concrete progress is finally being seen by Lowenstein and his group of planners and developers.

A group of local banks recently provided $3 million of the $3.5 million needed by South Main Place Associates, developers of a mall in the downtown area that will extend from Bordon to Spring Streets.

Everything came together after that. 70,000 square feet of downtown rental space was under construction; 55,000 of it retail. Approval was also given for an Urban Development Action Grant of $1.6 million that would provide an adjacent parking garage with a 304 car capacity and a flat surface area that could accommodate another 110 cars.

Lowenstein noted that the UDAG grant depended upon construction of the mall; when that came through, so did the parking grant.

A principal of South Main Associates, Peabody Construction Co. of Braintree, will be the contractor for the mall. Upon completion, it will hold various stores, linked together by a bubble canopy over Borden Street into the Academy Building, and a direct walkway to an area of stores on the north side and a new terminal to be built by the Southeastern Regional Transit Authority. This will be the central dropoff point for about 8,000 commuters daily.

Stepping off the bus, commuters will be aware of various stores and buildings, starting with the theater at the south end. A person can walk from the theater to the mall through the Academy Building, and then to city hall.

The Academy Building is designed to hold 85 units of subsidized elderly housing on its upper floors, and various kinds of food shops and restaurants on the lower level.

The $185,000 deed for renewal has been given to Corcoran Brothers by the Redevelopment Authority.

Another subsidized elderly housing unit being build is a new complex called Borden West, which will hold 116 units. A Borden East complex will be located a short way down and will hold 145 units.

Lowenstein said the project has a target date of about a year from now, and it is expected to be an $11 million development by Peabody Construction.

The mall and its parking facility are expected to be completed by late 1980 under the construction of A.T. Whitaker of Bridgewater. One of the first groups to take a major step here was the First Federal Savings and Loan Association. They, along with the chamber of commerce, were the first to build in the new downtown and in so doing, opened up a passageway for others to follow.

A Providence firm, Consultants Inc., are considering building a $7 million high rise luxury apartment building with two floors devoted to commercial use. This development, which has yet to find mortgage money, would be constructed on the corners of Pocasset and South Main streets.

A State Heritage Park for $5.5 million is in its last phase of planning, and will be located on the waterfront the land purchases are underway already on this spot which was previously planned to be an urban renewal plot. The Redevelopment Authority will use $224,000 in CDA seed money to urge on private development.

Ronald Lowenstein is finally getting his due recognition in many areas for the work he's put into the redevelopment of the city of Fall River, and one can only expect the city to continue its growth under his initiative.

Lowenstein, a member of the Fall River law firm "Sherwin, Gottleib and Lowenstein," is married to the former Ronna Rafner and has two sons, Douglas, 12, and Jonathan, 10.

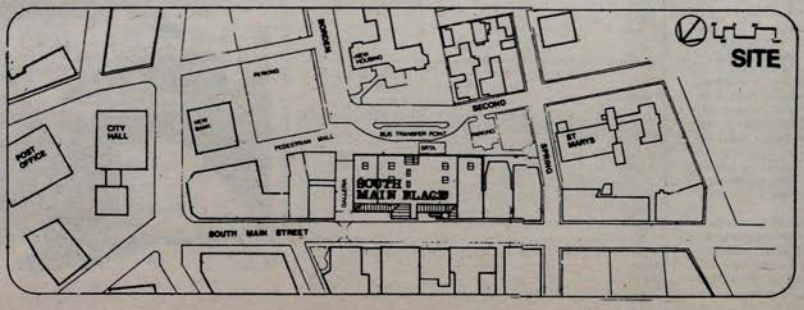
He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerhard S. Lowenstein. Mrs. Lowenstein is the former Evelyn Isserlis of Providence. He is the grandson of Mrs. David Isserlis of Providence.

Lowenstein recently received an award from the Fall River Chamber of Commerce for outstanding work in the community. He is the former chairman of OEDP (Overall Economic Development Program), a former chairman of the Fall River Airport Commission, an Associate Professor of Law at Briston Community College, an Impartial Arbitrator for ILGWU and the New England Apparal Association, and a collective bargainer for the City of Fall River.

Lowenstein is a member of the United Way Budget Panel; the Fall River Chamber of Commerce, Board of Directors; the Fall River Bar Association Sect.; the Mass. Bar Association; the Bristol County Mass. Bar; and has been admitted to practice in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, U.S. District Court,; and the U.S. Supreme Court.

Fall River, like many of New England's cities and towns, feels the brunt of every recession more so than cities in other parts of the country.

Fall River looks to the future with plans for a new Heritage Park and further renewal of its business and residential districts.



A Story Of One Man's Struggle

"We Should Not Take Lives"

-Idris Hirbawi

Last year, women and children of a half-dozen Jewish families were moved into a hospital building, abandoned since 1929, by members of the Gush Emunim, an untranationalist group. The move was intended to prove that Jews had the right to live in downtown Hebron again.

Hebron is the site of the Town of the Patriarch Abraham, revered by Jews and Arabs alike. The Gush Emunim, who illegally settled at the city's edge in 1968, were allowed to build what is now the Jewish apartment settlement of Kiryat Arba, population 3000, in 1970. The group hoped the Hadassah Hospital squatters would lead to Jewish settlements inside Hebron, and the Israeli Cabinet, held in March, agreed to such a plan.

If those people (the squatters) left there, believe me, there would be no more trouble in Hebron," according to Idris Hirbawi.

Idris Hirbawi, whose Arab family holds a place in Jewish history akin to that of the Dutch family who had sheltered Anne Frank and her family from the Nazis during World War II.

In 1929 Idris Hirbawi's father and grandfather used clubs to fight Arab rioters trying to kill 35 Jews who were seeking shelter in a Hebron building owned by the Hirbawi family.

Although the rioters killed 67 Jews, the family, acting on orders issued by Mayor Mohammed Raschid Hirbawi, eventually saved 267 lives.

Mayor Hirbawi rented the building to the Jews. It was like a hotel. People came from other buildings, and from Hadassah Hospital across the street, and hid there. Mayor Hirbawi and the other men of the Hirbawi family got weapons and stood in front of the building and fought the mob when they came for the Jews.

(According to Idris Hirbawi the British had paid Arab thugs to drive the Jews from Hebron because the British wanted the city free of Jews as part of their plans for Palestine. "My father was hit on the leg with a club," Hirbawi said, noting that, until his father's death in 1952 at age 61, he walked with a limp.

"It was broken and turned to gangrene. But my grandfather would not let them cut off his leg, and finally it got better.") The City of Hebron had a population of 18,700 during the 1920's. Eighteen thousand Arabs and 700 Jews lived as neighbors, in peaceful co-existence. They played together as children ...visited each other's houses...ate together.

Although the rioters killed 67 Jews, the family, acting on orders issued by Mayor Itir Bawi, eventually saved 267 lives.

This year, on May 2, 1980, there was another massacre in Hebron. Six Israeli religious school students were slain by embers of the Palestinian underground...some of the weapons were fired by terrorists from the roof of a 16 unit store owned by Idris Hirbawi.

"I was watching television right here," Hirbawi later recalled, "When I heard the shots and the bombs." The following day the Israeli military government dynamited Idris Hirbawi's building, and later bulldozed the ruins. "I was watching from the roof, from where I could see my store building when the Israelis blew it up." In destroying the building the government was acting under a law dating back to the British mandate of 1920-48 under which a building can be destroyed if used by persons violating security.

(The ambush of the students infuriated Israelis, and the destruction of the buildings and the later deportation of two West Mayors and a Moslem judge were part of the military government's efforts to show a hard line against terrorism in the occupied areas.)

A few days later, when the West Bank's military discovered the destruction of Hirbawi's property had taken place, summoned Hirbawi to military headquarters, where officers askd why he had not told the troops about his family.

"I told him," Hirbawi said, "that I did not get the order for the destruction of the building until after it was gone."

Hirbawi, a wiry, energetic, balding man of 43, lives with his four sons and five daughters in the same building where those 35 Jews hid in 1929. When told that of the rumors that Israeli citizens were starting a fund to compensate him on the loss of his property he scoffed at the idea. "If they give me money, I will give it back, I want the government, which blew up my building, to pay me back."

About that time Prime Minister Menachem Begin told the military government to meet with Hirbawi in order to reach an agreement so that, in recognition of his family's previous deeds, Hirbawi would be compensated for his loss.

Hirbawi also owns a thriving building supply store, not in the building that was destroyed, and has enough remaining property to make him a rich man. "Some of the people in my stores lost everything," he said. "They gave them a half-hour to get everything out. The glass man could not move his glass. The automobile spares man could not move his spare parts. If I get the money to build a new building, I will make new places for them."

Now that there is talk of paying Hirbawi compensation for his loss his Arab neighbors sometimes gripe at him. "They tell me, your family saved 300 of them (the Jews), and they came back, and they are 3000 now, and they made a city (Kiryat Arba)."

What would Idris Hirbawido if he were put in the position of his father and grandfather?

Would he risk his life for Jews?

"Of course," he said. "They are human beings. The Koran and the Bible say we should not take lives."

The PLO: A Trojan Horse In Latin America

NEW YORK — Most Latin American countries, unlike the Western Europeans, have kept Palestine Liberation Organization representatives at arm's length because they fear a "terrorist Trojan horse," according to the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

In a report on the PLO's drive to gain quasi-diplomatic footholds in Latin America and Europe, its chief targets in a worldwide propaganda-terror campaign, ADL revealed that only Cuba, Peru and Mexico have thus far allowed the PLO to open official offices.

Abraham H. Foxman, ADL's associate director and head of its International Affairs Division, made the findings public at the closing session of the league's national commission meeting in New York. He said the majority of Latin American nations have resisted increasing pressure from Arab nations and the PLO.

"With their long experience with violence and terror," he declared, "they are reluctant to accept PLO terrorists in their midst posing as respectable diplomats and representatives.

With their long experience with violence Latin American countries are reluctant to accept the PLO.

Foxman went on to say that in Western Europe, where there is a "much shorter experience with terrorism," the PLO has made great inroads with varying degrees of diplomatic recognition.

Austria and Spain, the ADL report said have accorded the PLO virtual diplomatic status while ten other countries have granted or intend to grant permission for the opening of PLO offices. They are Belgium, Cyprus, Finland, France, West Germany, Italy, Luxembourg, Malta, Portugal and Sweden.

But despite the fact that only three Latin American nations have permitted the PLO to establish offices, Foxman said, the PLO has made other diplomatic and propaganda inroads and has established links with terrorists — mainly in Brazil, Venezuela, Colombia, Nicaragua and Panama.

According to the ADL report, PLO infiltration of Latin America, combined with oil "intimidation" from the Arab states for support against Israel, has produced a "noticeable tilt" towards the Arabs since 1973.

But what has helped prevent this tilt from becoming a possibly more serious shift to the Arabs in other Latin American countries, according to Foxman, "is that they have witnessed Brazil's experience with PLO representatives in its midst for the past 10 years.

The current PLO representative in Brazil, Farid Sawan, who is accredited diplomatically to the Arab League office, is reportedly promoting the training of young Brazilians to foment revolution against their country's rulers, as well as waging an anti-Zionist and anti-Semitic propaganda campaign, the ADL report said.

Foxman pointed out that the Brazilians, unlike other nations of Latin America which have varying degrees of oil supplies or even self-sufficiency, are dependent on imports for 85 per cent of their oil supplies, with half coming from Iraq. When a high Iraqi official recently visited Brazil, the ADL continued, that nation marked the occasion by announcing recognition of the PLO as the "sole legitimate" representative of the Palestinian people. But Brazil stopped short of allowing a full-fledged PLO office and has thus far refused to receive Arafat, the report pointed out.

In neighboring Argentina, which has itself rebuffed PLO attempts to set up an office, the newspaper La Prensa warned Brazil last November to "recognize that the PLO spinal column of terror operates on an international scale...as an instrument of Soviet foreign policy."

BIBLE ANIMALS FIND HOME IN JERUSALEM

One of the most unusual and popular zoos in the world is in Jerusalem. It's called the Biblical Zoo. When it is completed, it will have at least one of each of the animals mentioned in the Bible.

"About 130 animals are mentioned in the Bible," said the zoo's director, Professor Aharon Shulov. He said that the purpose of the zoo is to bring the Bible to life for the public, especially children.

A highlight of the zoo is a special corner where Professor Shulov has placed a tiger with some goats! This is so visitors can see the Biblical prophesy (a telling of the future), "The wolf shall live with the lamb and the leopard shall lie down with the kid."

The professor explained that the tiger and goats are able to live together because the tiger was put in with the goats when it was still young. It never thought about harming the goats. The goats were frightened of the tiger at first, but now they eat their meals together and spend hours of play on the rocks in their area.

One of the new, exciting plans is to create Noah's Ark. The building of the Ark will begin in a wooded area, just like it is described in the Bible. The Ark will be the same size as Noah's. Only animals that lived during Noah's time will be included.

The Biblical Zoo is one of the most popular places to visit in Jerusalem. Professor Shulov is proud that Jews and non-Jews, local families and foreign visitors all visit and enjoy the Biblical Zoo.

RAINBOW COOKIES

We don't know what Mr. and Mrs. Noah and their family ate on the Ark, but here's a great cookie to eat today! This is a fun recipe but it takes two days to complete and you need an adult to help you. It makes about 3 dozen cookies.

WHAT YOU NEED:

1 cup soft margarine
3/4 cup white sugar
3/4 cup brown sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
red, green, yellow, and blue food coloring
wax paper

WHAT YOU DO:

1. In a large bowl, mix the margarine, sugar, and vanilla.
2. Break the eggs in another bowl and beat. Add to the mixture.
3. Now add the flour, soda, and salt.
4. Divide the dough into four parts and put each part on a separate piece of wax paper.
5. Put several drops of one of the food colorings on the first ball of dough. Mix with your hands until the dough is evenly colored. Flatten the dough until it is in a strip about 3 inches wide and 1/4 inch thick.
6. Wash your hands. Then repeat step 5 with the next ball and a different color - until you've made four strips.
7. With two people, stack the rainbow strips on top of each other. (No wax paper between them.) Gently press down to help the strips stick together.
8. Wrap the stack in wax paper and put in the refrigerator overnight.
9. The next day, turn the oven on to 375 degrees.
10. Slice the block of rainbow dough into pieces about 1/3 inch wide. Curve the slice into an arch.
11. Bake on an ungreased cookie sheet for about 7 minutes.

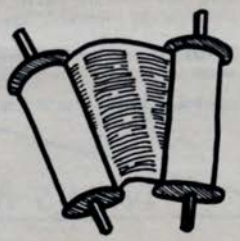
A FUNERAL FOR TORAHS



Children and adults in Memphis, Tennessee attended a funeral for two Torahs on April 27, 1980. The scrolls had been stolen from Beth Sholom Synagogue in January. They were later found in the Wolf River in Memphis. Members of the congregation joined the police in searching for the Torahs. When they were found, they were so badly damaged that they could not be repaired. None of the silver Torah dressings were found. The two men who took the Torahs were arrested.

The Torahs were buried according to Jewish law and tradition. The Holy Scrolls were placed in a wooden casket. Old prayer books and religious articles, which could no longer be used, were also put in the casket. The children from Beth Sholom's religious school read poems and prayers before the Torahs were buried.

The Torahs were buried near the graveside of Rabbi Arie Becker, who was the congregation's beloved rabbi for 20 years. Rabbi Edmund Winter, Beth Sholom's rabbi, said, "A scroll of the Torah which has become unfit for use is to be buried beside a scholar (a learned person)."

The following Shabbat, the synagogue placed a third Torah, which had also been stolen and found in the river, in the Holy Ark. Even though the Torah was also ruined by water and could not be used in services, the members wanted to keep it in their Ark. It was precious because it had been saved from the Holocaust.

Rabbi Winter reminded them that, even though the Holocaust Torah could not be used, they were permitted to keep it in the Ark. "When the Jews were in the desert, they carried in the Ark not only the tablets Moses brought from Sinai, but also the broken fragments (pieces) he brought down the first time."

The Holocaust Torah "lived" through the fires of the Holocaust and the water of the Wolf River, the rabbi said. "We keep it because of what it can teach us about the ability of the Jewish people to survive."

LET OUR PEOPLE GO!

A few months ago, 32 students from the Hebrew Academy in Houston, Texas, presented a petition to the Soviet Embassy in Washington, D.C. A petition is a letter which asks for something and is usually signed by as many people as possible. Jennifer Klein, 13, explained, "The petition said that we want Russia to let the Jews out. Many Russian Jews are suffering now. The petition showed that we care, even though we don't live in Russia and even though we aren't suffering."

The presentation of the petition was part of the school's five day trip to Washington. "Before our trip, we learned about the Helsinki Agreement," explained Todd Brody, 11. "The Helsinki Agreement states that everyone who wants to leave his or her country and move to a new country should be allowed to do so. Russia signed the agreement in 1975. Our petition was a reminder that Russia broke their agreement that the Jews could leave."

Before leaving Houston, the students wrote the petition and asked their friends, relatives, and neighbors to sign. They collected about 4,000 names.

On March 19, the students went to the Soviet Embassy in Washington. They drew lots to see who would present the petition. Abrah Mintz, 12, and Gittel Kuniansky, 12, won. Gittel is an immigrant (newcomer to the United States) from Russia. She has lived in Houston for about two years.

When Abrah, Gittel and their principal, Gerry Nussbaum, were getting ready to try to go inside the Embassy, the gates opened for several Russians. That was their chance to slip in unnoticed.

Once inside, they asked to see the Soviet ambassador but were told he was too busy. They gave the petition to someone else and asked if they could take a picture with him. He agreed, but another man whispered in Russian, "Are you crazy? Get rid of these people - quickly!" They didn't know Gittel could speak Russian and understood every word!

The man gave them some papers which told about life in the Soviet Union and took them to the door.

"The petition was worth the trouble," said Aliza Potter, 12. "I believe that every person - any religion - should be allowed to move about freely and have all kinds of freedom, such as religion and speech."

Harry Brown, 11, agreed. "The petition was important to me because I have many Jewish relatives in Russia. I hope the petition will have some meaning and let them go free."

After leaving the Embassy, students joined a small group from the Washington Jewish community who were marching across the street. People have been marching every day, from 12:15-12:45 p.m., rain or shine, for seven years. They say they will keep on marching until the Soviet Union lets all the Jews go. The Embassy keeps the blinds on the windows closed so they won't see the marchers.

The students don't feel the job is over yet. They think people should send more petitions to the Russian government and to the American government, too.

"After all, my grandparents lived in Russia," explained Hayley Watkins, 10. "Luckily, they got out and that's why I am here! If we put more pressure on the Russians, the rest of the Jews will get out, too."

Trevor Garb, 11, added, "President Carter should give more recognition to the problem!"

After studying the facts, Rob Gray, 11, decided that the Jews in the Soviet Union are the bravest people. He hopes that one day they'll be free.

"I think the issue of Soviet Jews concerns all Jews and everyone should do all they can to help!" stated 14 year old Lisa Ashendorf.

Upcoming issues of NOAH'S ARK will tell more about the Jews in the Soviet Union and what YOU can do to help them!

NOAH'S ARK-MOBILE

A fun decoration for any room would be a Noah's Ark-Mobile. Trace this Ark and hang paper animals from its base.

What you need:

- string
- glue
- yarn
- crayons
- colored construction paper
- poster board (for the Ark)
- hole puncher
- scissors

After cutting out your Ark, punch 5 holes along the bottom. Now make 5 animals from the construction paper. Look at these easy samples. You can make any animals you like. Cut out and glue wings, feet, eyes and noses when you need them. Use yarn for hair. Attach the animals using different lengths of string. Tie knots through the tops of the animals and then to the bottom of the Ark.

Howard Beach A/K/A Stasys Cenkus

Infamous Nazi Criminal Reportedly Living in New York

NEW YORK (JTA) — The daily press here has not yet run a story on a Howard Beach, Queens resident whom Israeli intelligence has called "one of the most important Nazi war criminals in our files," although local newspapers were informed of his background over two years ago.

Stasys Cenkus, now a permanent resident alien, was Lithuanian Chief of the Secret Police, collaborating with the Nazi secret police in Lithuania, headed by gestapo chief Karl Jaeger. In copyrighted material from his forthcoming book on the subject, author-journalist Charles Allen, Jr., calls Cenkus one of the top five alleged Nazi war criminals living in America today.

In his collaborative role, Cenkus has been implicated in various Einsatzgruppen actions against Lithuanian Jews in 1941-43 including appropriation of Jewish money and property. Numerous witnesses and documents in the Soviet Union testify to his role in beatings, transports to death camps, and murders. His secret police unit was a direct reporting line to Ampt IV of the gestapo.

The Soviet Union has condemned him to death in absentia for his war crimes.

Before World War II, Cenkus was chief of the Luthuanian State Security Police in the Marijampole district of Luthuania. He fled to Germany in 1940, after being charged with subversive activity against the Lithuanian state.

In Germany, Cenkus was trained by the gestapo and returned to Lithuania after the Nazi victory there, Allen said.

After the war, Cenkus hid out in American-occupied Germany and became involved with the International Refugee Organization, which functioned as an escape mechanism for some Nazis. Although the group knew of the charges against him, they gave him DP status and helped him get into the United States, according to Allen. From 1946 to 1948 he was a member of the U.S. Army Intelligence Corps, and he entered the U.S. in 1951. Allen testified before Congress in 1978 that Cenkus was employed by the FBI and CIA.

Although Cenkus' background and locale were reported in the former Chicago Daily News in the fall of 1977 by William Clements and Charles Nicodemus, and this information was given to New York daily newspapers by Allen, the story has never appeared in the press here. Allen said he believes the newspapers have omitted the story because Cenkus is the grandfather of Vitas Gerulaitis, third ranking pro tennis player in the world.

Update

Still No Leads In Yarden Kidnapping

TEL AVIV (JTA) — Police were reported to be at a dead end in their search for eight-year-old Oron Yarden who was kidnapped two weeks ago but not released after his parents, Penina and Amos Yarden of Tel Aviv, paid the IL 2 million ransom demanded by his abductors.

Twelve persons had been arrested for questioning in connection with the crime including two known prostitutes and their pimp, who were remanded to jail for 10 days by a Tel Aviv magistrate.

According to police, they have some knowledge of the kidnapping and may possess information as to the missing child's whereabouts. One of the prostitutes reportedly knew the boy. He was last seen on Sunday, June 8, in the wealthy Savyon quarter of Tel Aviv where his parents live.

A massive search by police troops and civilian volunteers aided by helicopters and other aircraft began after the ransom was paid but the boy failed to appear. The search centered on the coastal plain between Kfar Saba, where the ransom money was dropped, and Rishon LeZion. The first palpable clues were reported when police found photographs of the boy and some toys in a flat in Magdiel, near Kfar Saba, indicating that he had been held there.

Oron's parents made an impassioned appeal to the kidnappers on radio and television to release their child unharmed. Premier Menachem Begin also made a personal appeal. Oron's mother went to Rachel's Tomb in Bethlehem to pray for her son's safe return.

The crime has shocked Israelis and even underworld elements are helping police with information gleaned from criminal sources. An IL 250,000 reward has been posted for information leading to the boy's recovery.

Nothing has been heard from the kidnappers since their call for the ransom and Israeli legal sources are said to be considering an offer of immunity to the kidnappers if Oron is returned unharmed.

First Woman Elected To Top Federation Post

NEW YORK (JTA) — Mrs. Laurence A. Tisch is the first woman to be elected president of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies in the organization's 62-year history. She will take over the presidency on July 1, succeeding Harry R. Mancher.

Mrs. Tisch began her Federation service on the board of Blythedale, an institution for children requiring long-term hospitalization.

In more than 15 years of Federation leadership activities, Mrs. Tisch served as the first chairwoman of the Federation Distribution committee, and is a member of the Federation Planning committee. The distribution committee annually recommends allocations to Federation member agencies. The planning unit evaluates needs and priorities of service for the Federation.

As a Federation vice president, Mrs. Tisch serves on the board of trustees and on the Federation executive committee.

Ladies Auxiliary Installs Officers

The R.I. Ladies Auxiliary Post No. 23 of the Jewish War Veterans held its annual installion of officers on June 1 at the Hearthstone Inn, Se ekonk.

The following officers were installed for the year 1980-81 by State Dept. president Emma Cohen, who was assisted by Lillian Mistowsky, conductress. Estelle R. Miller, president; Jullianna Wolkoff, senior vice president; Ida Pearl, junior vice president; Sylvia Robin, recording secretary; Lillian Woolk, corresponding secretary; Lillian Mistowsky, conductress; Florence Goldfarb, treasurer; and Pearl Scherer, chaplain.

Trustees elected for the upcoming year were Emily Pavlow and Rose Rosenfield.

Begin Optomistic Over Upcoming Elections

JERUSALEM (JTA) — Premier Menachem Begin told the Likud Knesset faction that he was confident Likud would win the next elections, scheduled to be held in 1981. But he said he strongly favored the merger of all of the factions comprising Likud into a single party for which he proposed the name "Likud for Israel Party."

According to Begin, the public is fed up with Labor Party leaders Shimon Peres and Yitzhak Rabin and their interminable fight for control of the party. It will reaffirm its trust in Likud next year, he said.

He also assured the Likud MKs that the Cabinet members no longer engage in internecine battles but have "turned over a new leaf." At the last Cabinet meeting, he said, there were no raised voices, no exchanges in insults. The four-hour meeting, brief by Cabinet standards, was businesslike and efficient, Begin said.

However, there was one jarring note. Herut MK Dov Shilansky deplored attacks by some ministers on Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon, the leading spokesman for a hard line toward Arabs who create disorders in the occupied territories and for massive Jewish settlement of the West Bank. He referred specifically to a private letter written by Deputy Premier Simcha Ehrlich of the Liberal Party to an unidentified member of the party in which he expressed fear that if Sharon had been named Defense Minister he might have engineered a coup d'etat and ended democratic government in Israel.

Ehrlich refused to apologize for the letter which was leaked to the press last week.

Britains State Claims Of Russian Harassment

LONDON (JTA) — A series of attacks on British Jews visiting the Soviet Union has sparked a bitter diplomatic row between the two countries. Nikolai Lunkov, the Soviet Ambassador, was called to the Foreign Office and told of an organized KGB campaign of "assault, intimidation and harassment" against British tourists.

The Soviet Embassy said that Britain's protest was part of its campaign against the Moscow Olympics and an attempt to intimidate would-be visitors to the Games. It denied there was a campaign against Jewish tourists and replied that Moscow and Leningrad were no different from London where certain parts of the city are unsafe.

Jewish communal circles here had been buzzing for months with reports of attacks on British visitors to the Soviet Union who were trying to maintain contact with Jewish "refusniks" there. The attackers were always in plainclothes, but the victims had no doubt that they were secret policemen rather than private individuals.

Among those attacked were a London doctor, Michael Herz, and Peter Fischer. During a visit to Leningrad in March, they were beaten up on the street by 10 people after visiting a refusnik's apartment and on the advice of British diplomats they cut their Soviet visit short. Also in Leningrad, two young women tourists from Manchester were attacked and robbed of their handbags.

Victims of official harassment include Mr. and Mrs. Wally Simpson of North London. During a visit to Kiev, they contacted a refusnik family, the Oleiniks, and were later held by the KGB for three hours and accused of trying to sell jeans and perfume. On May 2, Gerry Fyne was detained at Moscow Airport where officials confiscated some Hebrew literature and other documents.

Another London couple, Harry and Sheila Davies, who visited Russia in March, said they were both constantly followed, were searched at the airport and had blank tapes and film confiscated.

Habimah Theater To Stage Yiddish Plays

TEL AVIV (JTA) — The Habimah Theater, in response to a request from the World Council for Yiddish, will present at least three Yiddish plays in the near future. This announcement was made by Yitzhak Koren, chairman of the World Council, at the opening of its annual meeting at the Sholem Aleichem House here.

Koren, who said that Israel is becoming a citadel for Yiddish, stressed that the revival of Yiddish here requires cooperation with the Hebrew world. He noted that Avraham Kagan, principal of the high school in Kiryat Chaim, near Haifa, is the first Israeli principal to introduce Yiddish into his school's curriculum.

Most players think that a two way finesse is strictly a guess. Certainly some of the time it is. Some of the time the odds will say that the key card will more likely be in one hand than the other.

But that doesn't mean it is a sure thing. There are times that something will come up to turn that "guess" into just about a guaranteed certainty. Today's hand was such although most of the Declarers did simply guess. They could have done something to turn the odds in their favor.

East and West vulnerable, West was Dealer with this bidding:

W	N	E	S
P	P	P	1S
P	2S	End

I am showing the bidding as it went the time I watched it. I am a staunch advocate of opening five card Majors so I would have opened South's hand one Diamond. This would have made North Declarer as he did become almost every time the hand was played. However, the result should have been the same with the same information able to be obtained before making that guess.

West has a natural lead, the Heart King, East playing the discouring deuce. Seeing Dummy's Queen, West will certainly switch to the only suit good for him, a low Diamond. As soon as the Dummy shows itself, Declarer can see five sure losers, two high Hearts, two high Diamonds and the Club Ace. He is down if he fails to locate the Trump Queen and he can finesse either way for it.

After the Diamond switch, East would win his two high ones and play a third and now Declarer is in. I watched as now Trumps were started on and the guessing began. The discussions later on this hand did show that almost every Declarer had gone after Trumps by guessing whether to try to drop a Doubleton Queen, successfully, or to finesse one way or the other. Obviously, as in any guess, some players guessed right. And when they didn't they all blamed it on a poor guess. But was it?

See what information this Declarer had.

After the third trick he should know that each of his opponents had started with an Ace, King combination. There was that key Queen that could be with either and there was also outstanding the Club Ace, in this hand the most important card. Neither opponent could open the bidding but one of them had to hold that Ace along with his other high cards.

If that player also had the Spade Queen he would definitely have opened the bidding so whoever had the Club Ace could not hold the Trump Queen, too. With only three Clubs in one hand and two in the other there was little danger of any ruffs so the key play is to locate that Club Ace before attacking Trumps.

As you can see, West will show up with it and along with his marked from the opening lead Ace and King of Hearts the addition of the Spade Queen would give him 13 points and an opening bid. As soon as Declarer gets in all he has to do is use his knowledge to play the Trump suit correctly to easily entrap East's Spade Queen. And really there is nothing supernatural in locating that Queen by this means.

Moral: If possible hold off taking any finesse until the last possible moment. You will be amazed at how many times something will help you play the hand better if only you give yourself the chance.

Menten Verdict Expected This Month

AMSTERDAM (JTA) — A verdict in the second trial of alleged Nazi war criminal Pieter Menten is expected to be rendered by the Rotterdam district court at the end of this month, despite delaying tactics employed by Menten's defense attorney, Eduard Boehl. This appeared likely when it was announced that both Boehl and Public Prosecutor Leo Meyers will begin their summations this week.

Israel Bonds to Host Sedaka Reception

Neil Sedaka, versatile composer, poet and performer will be the guest of the State of Israel Bonds New Leadership evening on Saturday, July 12. Sedaka, who is known for his many hit compositions including "Happy Birthday" and "Oh Carol" and his most recent best seller, "Should Have Never Let You Go," will attend a private cocktail reception at the celebrity courts prior to his show at the Warwick Music Theatre. This personal appearance to meet the New Leadership of State of Israel Bonds reflects his personal concern for the support this program has built for Israel for 30 years.

Darrell and Susan Ross are chairpersons of New Leadership and reservations are being handled by Andrea and Lewis Finkel.

Persons already holding their theatre tickets can make special arrangements for the reception portion of the evening. The reception is scheduled to begin at 8:30 p.m. with the theatre at 10:30 p.m. Reservations are limited and those wishing to attend can contact the State of Israel Bonds office at 751-6767 for a reservation.

NEIL SEDAKA

Hussein To Safeguard Israel From Jordanian P.L.O. Attacks

WASHINGTON — President Carter, referring to his recent two-day meeting with King Hussein of Jordan, said the talks "have indeed been very fruitful" even though the two sides continued to disagree on the value of the American sponsored Egyptian-Israeli talks centered on Palestinian self-government.

White House officials, in a briefing held at the conclusion of the King's official visit, expressed satisfaction over a security pledge made by the Jordanian King which will not permit Palestinians to use its territory to carry out attacks against Israel. The officials were also pleased with the overall atmosphere of the King's talks with President Carter, Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie, Defense Secretary Harold Brown and others.

Referring to the convivial atmosphere of the talks, President Carter said that the King knew that the U.S. believed that these talks, which stemmed from the Camp David accords of September 1978, had "the best chance for success" and would be pursued.

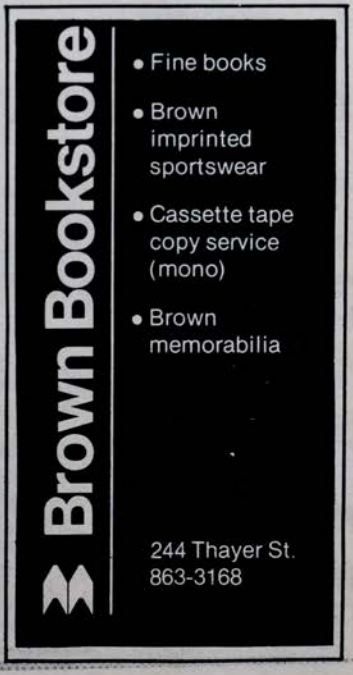
"We have not tried to change each other's minds about the approach or the technique or the procedure to be used," the President said. "But we do agree completely with the ultimate goals: that is, the solution of the Palestinian question in all of its aspects, the right of the Palestinians to have a voice in the determination of their own future, the security of Israel and a comprehensive and just peace for the region."

Finding that "in almost every instance our ultimate goals are parallel or the same," President Carter went on to say that "we have explored ways to resolve the differences in our approach."

King Hussein, calling the discussions 'extremely fruitful,' said, "We understand better the United States position. We've had the chance and the opportunity to bring to you and our friends in the United States our feelings that a just and comprehensive peace must come in the area."

In citing King Hussein's main disagreement with the United States, American officials said that the King had wanted the central issue of the negotiations to be settled now.

According to these officials, the Jordanian King wants the talks to be aimed at removing Israel from all land occupied in the June 1967 war and at a concrete plan which would allow Palestinians living on the Gaza Strip and the West bank of Jordan the right to "self-determination," including the possibility of a separate Palestinian state.



Hasidic Jew Scores Victory In Federal Agency Dispute

NEW YORK (JTA) — A Hasidic Jew has won a second legal battle with a federal agency for the right to keep his beard for religious reasons, according to the National Jewish Commission on Law and Public Affairs (COLPA), which represented him in both contests.

Gershon Eigner, a Lubavitch member, was refused a position in 1978 as an immigration inspector for the Immigration and Naturalization Services (INS) for declining to abide by the INS "no beard" policy. Howard Zuckerman, COLPA president, said that after a hearing, the Equal Opportunity Employment Commission (EOEC) ordered that Eigner be reinstated.

In a similar confrontation previously with the Federal Protection Service, an agency of the General Administration Services which provides security personnel for federal facilities, Eigner won a Civil Service ruling in January, 1977 that he could wear his full beard as a federal protection officer. After vindication of his stand, Eigner subsequently applied for and was hired for the INS post but was ordered by that agency to shave his beard off or resign, Zuckerman said.

The COLPA president, providing the background on the INS contest, said that the INS offered Eigner a job, prior to a personal interview, so that it could fill quickly 20 vacancies for immigration inspectors. This was done prior to a September, 1978 job freeze.

When Eigner reported to work at the JFK airport, he was informed of the INS "no beard" policy and told that no exception would be made in his case. When he refused either to shave off his beard or to resign, he was terminated on Nov. 7, 1978. He filed a discrimination complaint with the EOEC.

The EOEC Office of Complaints Adjudication upheld Eigner's position, according to Dennis Rapps, COLPA executive director, who also represented Eigner in the previous litigation. The EOEC complaints office held that while the "no beard" policy was generally a "reasonable" grooming standard, that policy could not be applied to a person who did not comply because of religious tenets, unless "undue hardship" would result for the agency. That protection for observant employes or job applicants is embodied in a 1972 amendment to the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

The complaints office noted that at the hearings, the INS had maintained that the "no beard" policy was essential for a favorable professional image to the public, but that the agency's own witnesses had conceded, under cross-examination, that they "had no way of judging whether or not a beard would offend the public," Zuckerman said.

He said the INS would not contest the ruling and that Eigner had contacted the INS office to arrange for a required interview before taking up his duties as an immigration inspector. Under the ruling, Eigner is entitled to payment of the salary he would have received between Nov. 7, 1978 and the date he goes to work at the airport, less the money he earned in jobs he had during that period. Rapps estimated that payment sum to be between $12,000 and $15,000.

In the earlier case, Eigner was hired as a federal protection officer in April, 1975 and for eight months fought against orders to shave off his beard to comply with a regulation that faces of such officers must be cleanshaven, "except for a mustache, if desired."

He was transferred out of the Federal Protection Service in January, 1976, taking a job with the New York City Health and Hospitals Corp., where he worked as a claims examiner.

Eigner filed a complaint of discrimination with the Civil Service Commission, contending that the grooming regulation was a violation both of the Civil Rights amendment and of Civil Service rules which require federal agencies to make "reasonable accommodations" to such religious needs except on hardship grounds.

The Commission complaints examiner sustained Eigner's complaint and ordered the federal agency to reinstate Eigner with full retroactivity and back pay.

Pilnikov Faces Charges In Kiev

NEW YORK (JTA) — Valery Pilnikov, a Soviet Jewish activist from Kiev, went on trial Friday to face charges of malicious hooliganism and alleged beating, the Greater New York Conference on Soviet Jewry has learned. The trial is being held despite written evidence clearing him of all charges.

Pilnikov's wife was detained by Kiev police immediately after she submitted to the courts the affidavit signed by an alleged victim of the beating. Not one lawyer in Kiev has been willing to undertake Pilnikov's defense.

Pilnikov was arrested on May 16 immediately upon his return from Moscow, where a group of 20 Soviet Jews delivered a complaint to the Communist Party Central Committee about ovir's refusal to grant them permission to emigrate to Israel.

U.S. Official Blasts Administration 'Leaks'

WASHINGTON (JTA) — Irked by strong opposition by the Israeli government and its friends in Congress over the Carter Administration's consideration of a Saudi Arabian request to build up its air force, a State Department spokesman lashed out recently at "leaks" critical of the Administration.

Hodding Carter, chief spokesman for Secretary of State Edmund Muskie, confirmed that the Israeli Ambassador, Ephraim Evron, had objected recently to enhanced combat capability of the 60 F-15 warplanes to be supplied to Saudi Arabia. "I trust that no government objects to our government considering something," he said. He said that the issue over the Saudi Arabian request will be "interesting" and will take place "in the face of leaks not only from embassies but agencies around town."

He did not identify either the embassies or the agencies. Carter said discussion is taking place with the Saudi Arabian government and that "the decisions have not been taken inside this government on these matters."

Shamir Voices Satisfaction With U.S. Vote

JERUSALEM (JTA) — Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir has expressed satisfaction with the U.S. Senate's overwhelming defeat of an amendment which would have reduced U.S. economic aid to Israel by $150 million as a gesture of disapproval of its settlements policy.

The Senate vote proves that Israel still has friends, "that the whole world is not against us and that it is worth fighting for our cause and for our rights," Shamir said in an address to the Knesset. He spoke in reply to several motions on the declaration by the Prime Ministers of the nine European Economic Community (EEC) countries in Venice last week which, among other things, said the Palestine Liberation Organization and other Palestinian groups have to "be associated" with the Middle East peace process.

Shamir was strongly critical of the declaration but his remarks were far from the Cabinet's emotional outcry, read to reporters by Premier Menachem Begin, which called the Venice declaration a "second Munich surrender." Shamir said European interests were understandable for a variety of reasons and that if the Europeans were to seek a way to encourage the Camp David process, Israel would be the first to welcome their activity.

However, he charged, the Venice document undermined Camp David and thereby encouraged the intransigent elements in the Arab world. "I know full well the difficulty of a confrontation with the states of Europe, some of which are truly our friends," Shamir said. But, he added, Israel could not negotiate with the Arabs on the basis of the Venice document. He urged the opposition to unite with the government in opposing the Venice declaration because it took positions on Jerusalem and the PLO which both the government and the opposition parties find unacceptable.

There was no indication from Shamir's remarks whether Israel would cooperate with a "fact-finding mission" that may be sent to the Middle East by the EEC countries.

Mercury Detected In Israeli Oranges

LONDON (JTA) — Mercury was found yesterday in a cargo of Israeli oranges being unloaded at a British port, sparking fears that Arab terrorists could be trying to repeat the scare they caused two years ago.

Police said that a girl living near the port had eaten an orange contaminated with mercury, but so far had not suffered ill effects.

Arabs Upset ILO Proceedings

GENEVA (JTA) — The Israeli delegate to the International Labor Organization (ILO) annual conference here was prevented from speaking last week when the Arab delegations created pandemonium in the meeting hall.

Gideon Ben Israel, who represents Histadrut, rose to speak on a point of order in reply to charges by the Jordanian delegate that the Israeli government was responsible for the June 2 bomb attacks which maimed two West Bank mayors. Ben Israel declared that Jordan could not accuse the Israelis of an act which was deplored by Premier Menachem Begin.
