Anti-Semitic Slurs Aimed At Professor

Elton Rayak, URI Economics Professor, sat in his home in Peace Dale on Friday evening unaware that his car was being defaced with swastikas, radical inscriptions and remarks about the gassing of Jews in World War II. On Saturday morning he looked in the driveway and read, what's the difference between a Jew and a pizza? If you put a pizza in the oven it doesn't scream" scrawled across the side of his car.

Written on paper and plastered against the window was the epithet, "I am a Jew." The car was smeared with eggs and nails had been pounded into three of the tires. "It's a sad commentary on the civilization we live in," said Rayack.

The 55 year old professor was singled out as the sole recipient of anti-Semitic hate messages that evening. No other similar incidents were reported in the area.

Rayak had participated in protests against the Vietnam War during the 1960's. "I've been involved with civic organizations in the past, but nothing recently," he said.

He reported the defacing and racial slurs to the South Kingstown police, but as of Monday there were no leads in the case.

"As far as the Holocaust is concerned, there were both Catholics and Protestants who were gassed," said Rayack. In the light of this, he doesn't understand why the Christian community is apathetic toward these incidents. Rayack contacted Brown University's Hillel House for information about other occurrences in their area. None were reported.

According to Capt. H. Ronald Hawksley, of the South Kingstown Police Department, it will be a difficult case to solve because of the nature of the crime and the fact that it took place on Halloween when so many people were on the streets. "I haven't heard of any other incidents involving this type of racial prejudice in this area and I've been here 20 years," said Hawksley.

A neighborhood and area check is underway. If police do obtain evidence or find witnesses, charges can be pressed against the vandals for malicious conduct. Hawksley added that if an organized anti-Semitic group is involved then the charges would differ and other agencies would be called into the investigation.

Elton Rayak sent a message of his own to whoever defaced his car. "I am not afraid of you." Rayak is angered but not fearful of further trouble. "I don't know what I'll do, but if it does happen again there will be a battle in the process."

Within the past year anti-Semitic cards and literature have been mailed to Jews living in the Providence and Pawtucket areas. More than a hundred cards have been turned over to the Anti-defamation League and some as recently as August.

Refuseniks Plan Hunger Strike During Madrid Conference

NEW YORK — A group of Jewish emigration activists from Kishinev, U.S.S.R. will stage a hunger strike to protest the Soviet authorities' continued refusal to permit them to be reunited with their families in Israel. According to the National Conference on Soviet Jewry (NCSJ), the group of refuseniks will begin its proposed hunger strike on Nov. 11, the opening day of the second review conference in Madrid of the Helsinki Accords.

In a dramatic letter to the participants of the Madrid Conference, the activists expressed the ongoing frustrations of thousands of Soviet Jews:

"Each one of us had completed his army service nine years ago and at no time did we have access to secret information. We have begged, we have asked, we've inquired and still we are no further in our desire to be reunited with our families.

"Thus we have decided to exercise the only thing left to us to do and go on a hunger strike which will begin on the opening day of the Madrid Conference and which will continue for as long as the Conference lasts. . .

"No matter what happens to us we are counting on your support and we are appealing to your conscience to help free us from our bondage."

Signed: Vladimir Tsukerman, electronics engineer, 35, wife and son in Israel; Grigory Leiderman, electronics engineer, 35, parents in Israel; David Vodovoz, driver, 29, parents in Israel; Aleksandr Lezerovich, technical designer, 33, brother in Israel; Leonid Vainshtein, engineer, 33, wife and daughter in Israel; Aleksandr Khozin, computer engineer, 33, parents in Israel.

The participants in the hunger strike have been active for a long time in Jewish culture and educational activities in Kishinev. As a result, they have been slandered repeatedly in the local newspaper, Sovietskaya Moldavia and recently singled out as "aides to American imperialists." According to the NCSJ, such attacks may pave the way to subsequent arrests and trials.

In addition to these attacks, the KGB has hold the hunger strike.

Reacting to the courage displayed by the refuseniks, NCSJ Chairman, Burton S. Levinson, noted, "In this difficult period for detained them on several occasions, warning them against any contacts with foreigners, either in person, by correspondence or phone. In spite of this intimidation, however, they remain steadfast in their decision to Soviet Jews, the activists in Kishinev serve as spiritual leaders to thousands of Jews who are afraid to raise their voices. We must show our solidarity with their cause and support their efforts in every possible way."

Yeshiva Univ. Faculty Awarded Grants

NEW YORK (JTA) — Two members of the Yeshiva University faculty — Dr. Arthur Hyman and Dr. Moshe Sokolow — have received fellowships from the Memorial Foundation for Jewish Culture for scholarly projects exploring Jewish culture and history.

Hyman, philosophy professor, will write on Maimonides, and Sokolow, a Bible professor, will study Rashi's commentary on the Book of Job.

Dr. Israel Miller, the university's senior president, announced the university's Bernard Revel Graduate School of Advanced Jewish Studies was also getting a grant from the Memorial Foundation and the National Endowment for the Humanities to study "Syntactic Ambiguity in Jewish Exegesis of the Bible."

Sadat, Navon Agree To Expand Links Between Countries

CAIRO — Presidents Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt and Yitzhak Navon of Israel this week reached an informal agreement on steps to improve trade relations and links between the people of both countries.

The agreement was announced at a news conference which followed a one-hour meeting in Sadat's home.

The two leaders said they had also discussed new approaches to the autonomy talks, now stalled over Israel's annexation of the Arab sector of Jerusalem and colonization of the West Bank.

Navon, who has no independent authority in the Israeli political system, said he had checked with the government of Prime Minister Menachem Begin when discussing new ideas.

Sinai Land Route To Open

The leaders agreed to open a land route across Sinai to augment air and sea routes that are now being used, and to arrange people-to-people exchanges in many areas.

Sadat said his talks with Navon had "taken a big leap over all suspicions." He said he did not expect a breakthrough in the stalled autonomy talks before he meets with Begin and the U.S. Presidents next year.

Navon said he was confident a solution will be found to the Palestinian problem.

New Jersey Focuses Energy On Anti-Semitism

TRENTON — New Jersey law enforcement agencies will be directing more attention to the investigation and prosecution of cases of anti-Semitic or racial vandalism it was announced last week.

Attorney General John J. Degnan said at a meeting with County Prosecutors that the local agencies would be included in the process formerly turned over to the state police because of the increasing incidence of vandalism.

Begin To Arrive Nov. 9 For Visit

NEW YORK (JTA) — Premier Menachem Begin is scheduled to arrive here Sunday, Nov. 9 for a 10-day visit to the United States, according to a spokesman for the Israel Consulate.

The highlight of the Premier's visit will take place Nov. 11 when he will address the Jabotinsky Centennial Dinner at the Waldorf Astoria and confer the Jabotinsky Centennial Medal on 100 distinguished Americans from all walks of life.

Begin will be in Washington Nov. 12 and will meet with the President. The following day he will fly to Detroit to address the 49th General Assembly of the Council of Jewish Federations. The Premier is expected to spend the rest of his visit in New York where he will meet with Jewish leaders and other officials.

Dan Patir, Begin's spokesman, is due to arrive here tomorrow and will provide further details of the Premier's U.S. visit.

Anti-Semitic Graffiti Defaces Great Neck High School

GREAT NECK, L.I. — Students at Great Neck North Senior High School arrived for classes one morning last week and were shocked and angry at what they saw: swastikas, slurs, obscenities and five foot high "KKK" letters scrawled on their building.

Officials at the school and in Nassau County said it was the first time such an anti-Semitic incident had occurred in this wealthy, largely Jewish community on Long Island.

In the county set up a task force last year to combat a rash of cross-burnings and anti-Semitic vandalism.

(Officials in neighboring Suffolk County recently set up a similar panel. See story on page 8.)

Jewish Agency Budget Increased

JERUSALEM (JTA) — The Jewish Agency's budget will be 10 percent higher in 1981 than this year, Agency Treasurer Akiva Lewinsky announced here. He said the increase from $390 million to $450 million was based on a projected 10 percent increase in income from the United Jewish Appeal, amounting to $45 million, which he called "a considerable addition."

Lewinsky said at a press conference that the Jewish Agency was making every effort to cope with economic difficulties and inflation. It has eliminated 500 jobs out of 4500 and undertaken other saving schemes which made possible the allocation of some $4 million for the development of outpost settlements in Galilee, Lewinsky said.

An additional $6 million has been budgeted for development of the "Shalom region" where 7-8 settlements will be built to replace settlements in the Yamit region of northern Sinai which must be evacuated by the end of next year.

Lewinsky reported that only $20 million of the $80 million Project Renewal budget was spent this year. But next year, allocations will be targeted on some 2500 specific reconstruction projects that have been approved.

The Jewish Agency allocated about $105 million this year for the absorption of new immigrants while the government supplied $15 million for that purpose, Lewinsky said.

JCC Celebrates Jewish Book Month Opening

The Bureau of Jewish Education and the Jewish Community Center will begin Jewish Book Month with a celebration on Sunday, Nov. 9 at the JCC at 2 p.m.

The activities for the day will include a film, magic show, calligraphy workshop, story-telling session and hints for parents to build a library of Jewish interest for their children.

All school age children are invited to participate in the "Be a Jewish Bookworm" reading contest. Contestants select a book of Jewish interest from a special bibliography and write a book review, illustrate a page or design a book jacket based on his/her book. Registration materials will be available at the center, at the Bureau office (130 Sessions St.) or at their Synagogue.

All contestants will receive the "Be A Jewish Bookworm" badge. Prize winners will be awarded gift certificates to a local bookstore: first prize - $18, second - $10 and third - $7.50. All entries will be printed and distributed in booklet form at the JCC Hanukkah celebration on Dec. 7.

Rabbis Prepare Jews To Settle In Israel

JERUSALEM — Rabbi Naftali Lewin is the "circuit-riding Rabbi" of the World Zionist Organization's Immigration and Absorption Department for the Jerusalem region. The absorption facilities provide a temporary home for Jews from all over the world and prepare them to settle in Israel.

Rabbi Lewin travels to two large immigrant absorption centers, two smaller immigrant hostels, and one residential ulpan in the Jerusalem area on a regular basis. He gives lectures, solves individual problems and provides for the religious needs of the residents, according to Israel Aliyah Center.

During the fall holiday season, the Rabbi distributed the special High Holiday prayer books to the newcomers. For Succot, he provided extra "etrogim" and "lulavim".

Rabbi Lewin makes special arrangements depending on the needs of each location. At one immigrant hostel, he established a special minyan for Iranian Jews who wished to pray together. He has also arranged lectures to be given in English, Russian, Spanish and French.

Rabbi Lewin studied in Israel for five years and received his rabbinical ordination from the head of the rabbinical court in Haifa. He is one of several "regional Rabbis" who work for the Immigration and Absorption Department in various parts of Israel.

Bomb Injures 14 In Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (JTA) — Fourteen persons were injured, at least two seriously, when a bomb exploded in the western outskirts of Jerusalem this week at a roadside shelter where soldiers gather to wait for rides.

Eyewitnesses said the bomb, concealed under a stone bench, detonated near a group of about 30 soldiers.

It was not immediately known how many of the injured were soldiers. Most of the injuries were slight because the soldiers were standing in line on the road rather than inside the shelter.

Police today renewed their warnings to the public to be alert for suspicious-looking objects, especially at bus stops and other places where crowds gather.

ADL Reports On KKK Activity; Calls For FBI Surveillance

DALLAS (JTA) — The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith has made public a report of Ku Klux Klan paramilitary activities in six states and urged the U.S. Attorney General to undertake regular FBI surveillance of the KKK "to protect American citizens from further terrorism and violence."

The findings of the ADL report and a letter the ADL sent to Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti on Tuesday were revealed by Nathan Perlmutter, national director of the ADL, at a session of the agency's four-day National Executive Committee meeting here at the Dallas Hilton.

FBI monitoring of the KKK was sharply curtailed in 1976 by guidelines, issued in response to charges of FBI abuse of its powers, which required evidence of actual or imminent violence before probing the actions of domestic groups.

The ADL was commissioned this month by the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights to prepare an analysis of the Klan and other extremist groups. Perlmutter said the report on the paramilitary activities, which is being forwarded to Civiletti, will be part of that analysis.

Describing the KKK as "armed racist, pathological haters of Blacks, Jews and other minority groups," Perlmutter warned that KKK camps and clandestine training sites in various parts of the country present "a clear danger of new Klan violence more serious than even before."

State-By-State Rundown

The ADL reported:

* Alabama: Bill Wilkinson's "Invisible Empire, Knights of the KKK," the most violent of today's KKK groupings, operates a campsite near Cullman, Ala., which has been dubbed "My Lai" and where training includes target practice with M-16 semiautomatic rifles, obstacle course proficiency, study of guerrilla tactics and practicing search and destroy missions.

* Connecticut: The Grand Dragon of the relatively new branch of the "Invisible Empire" Klan, Gary Piscottano, a 27-year-old security guard from Southington, admits that practice shooting and paramilitary training are being conducted at secret "guerrilla camps." His KKK unit drew 1,000 persons to rallies held this year in Scotland, Conn.

* Illinois: Although its members do not don hoods and robes, many of the members of the Louisville-based Christian Patriot Defense League (CPDL) are members or former members of the KKK and share the KKK's belief that "white Christians" should arm themselves for an impending racial war — with the "enemy" Blacks, Cubans, Mexicans, Haitians, Southeast Asians "and other immigrants and racially impure Americans."

* North Carolina: Prospective members of the KKK Security Guard are trained in guerrilla warfare at a paramilitary camp in Johnston County, owned by Glenn Miller, a former Green Beret sergeant and county leader of the neo-Nazi National Socialist Party of America (NSPA). The training, in army fatigues, includes brandishing of semiautomatic weapons and handguns.

In addition to the Klan, members of the NSPA and the National States Rights Party (NSRP) also train at the camp. The three hate groups — the KKK, NSPA and NSRP — formed an alliance, "The United Racist Front," in September, 1979, two months before the Greensboro shooting episode in which five people were killed. Some of the members of the groups which train at the camp were arrested in connection with the Greensboro shootings.

* Texas: A KKK paramilitary unit calling itself the Texas Emergency Reserve (TER) conducts training activities two weekends each month at various sites in rural East Texas, including one in the vicinity of Anhuac, which has been temporarily shut down. The TER has an estimated membership of from 200 to 500 many veterans of various branches of the Armed Forces, including some members of the Army stationed at Fort Hood.

* California: While there is no evidence that the KKK here is itself conducting paramilitary training, it encourages and promotes such activities. The White Point Publishing Company of Fallbrook, which is the KKK's book service, carries works on paramilitary subjects for do-it-yourself terrorists. Among them are U.S. Army manuals on making bombs, grenades, mines, chemical explosives, fuses and detonators.

European Sports Organization Convenes In Israel For First Time

TEL AVIV (JTA) — The Non-Government Organization of Europe (NGO), a sports contingent from 11 countries plus Israel's Sports Federation leaders, opened a six-day conference here marking the first time ever that a governing European sports body convened in Israel.

The event is epochal because Israel sports bodies now are given recognition as full-fledged entities in the European Zone.

Representatives from Sweden, Norway, Finland, Denmark, Switzerland, Italy, England, Belgium, Holland, Germany and Austria attended.

Holland's W. Van Ulsen, president of the NGO, opened the proceedings followed by a welcome to all assembled by Shmuel Lalkin, head of Israel's Sports Federation.

Boycotts Are Criticized

The highlight of the opening session was an address by Dr. Uriel Simri, director of the Wingate Institute for Physical Education and Sports. Touching on the vulnerability of government bodies in interfering with international competitions, Simri stated:

"We have known boycotts of the Olympic Games in the past, but even the African boycott of 1976 was far less severe than the boycott (against the Games in Moscow last summer) instigated by President Carter and one may rightly claim that the tendency to boycott the Olympic Games, for political reasons, has grown with the years.

"The fact that organizers of international sports events, including the Olympic Games, have boycotted participants who had the legal right to participate has also definitely contributed towards the use of the boycott as a weapon in the sports arena."

Harmony In Israel Radio Car Partners Keep The Peace

JERUSALEM — Sergeant Major Sasson Ovadia and First Sergeant Khalil Dibou are two dedicated Jerusalem policemen who share not only a patrol car but a special kind of friendship. Sasson, 35, is Jewish, was born in Kurdistan and arrived in Israel in 1948. Khalil, 38, is a Moslem Arab who lives in Shuafat, a suburb of Jerusalem. Both men joined the police force after the Six Day War in 1967.

Sasson and Khalil have worked together for five years, their personalities and approaches to people meshing to help them perform an effective law enforcement job around the city.

In every police pair there is the tough guy and the soft-hearted fellow. Khalil, sometimes called "the rebbe" (rabbi), is the soft-hearted one and appears to spend a great deal of time getting people to talk rather than shout.

"I believe my work is to help people, and it doesn't matter to me whether they're Jews or Arabs," Khalil says after being sent to a Ramot apartment to break up a screaming fight between husband and wife. When he arrived, their shouting could be heard down the road. When he left, the couple was sitting calmly at the kitchen table, talking over their problem.

Sasson drives because, before 1967, Khalil was in a motorcycle accident on the road to Jericho. "You won't get me behind a wheel," Khalil says, and Sasson grumbles about having to bear all the responsibility for damage to the patrol car. Khalil laughs and Sasson's grumbling changes to laughter.

"You aren't yourself today," Khalil tells Sasson on their way to fill in for a patrol car that had broken down. Sasson shoots Khalil a look and then smiles. His wife is expecting their third child. "It's any day now, in fact any hour," the mustachioed cop says. Khalil, also mustachioed, has five children.

The two officers have been working together for so long that they know automatically who'll do what when they are out on a case. And, as in any city, there is certainly enough to keep them busy — answering calls on their car radio ranging from family disputes to burglaries, as well as the special problems that inevitably crop up where so many ethnic groups live side by side. (As once explained by Mayor Teddy Kollek, Jerusalem's population of 400,000 is not a melting pot, but a unique mosaic.)

Although they are constantly on the go, they still find time to joke and talk politics, and, in their off-duty hours, to socialize. They often exchange invitations to traditional celebrations. When Khalil has Friday night dinner at Sasson's house, he wears a skullcap like the Jewish participants do. Sasson was recently invited to join Khalil at the slaughtering of a lamb for Id al-Adha, the feast marking the end of Ramadan, the Moslem fast.

Khalil has a degree from the American university in Beirut and once planned to become a teacher. He also knows shorthand in English and Arabic. How does he feel as an Arab policeman in Israel? "We don't work for Arabs or Jews, we work for the state. . . . A policeman is a policeman. You're hooked on it, and it's in your blood. I'd probably be a policeman wherever I lived."

And the fine teamwork and rapport Sasson and Khalil show are ample proof of the pride that both men take in their work.

Peace Award Winner Notes Danger

NEW YORK (JTA) — Norman Cousins, the editor of Saturday Review, warned Americans of what he called the "strident, intolerant, frightening voice of the Moral Majority which poisons the airways with preachments of bigotry and religio-political power."

Addressing the annual Covenant of Peace Awards dinner of the Synagogue Council of America and himself a recipient of that award at the dinner, last Thursday night, Cousins, author of "Anatomy of an Illness," told the 400 people in attendance:

"The attempt to use religion as a means for instructing people in political matters is no less dangerous than the attempt of politicians to instruct people in what they may or may not believe. The paradox of the Moral Majority is that it is becoming an immoral majority. We need a strengthening of forces which underscore the richness of diversity, the indispensability of love combined with law, the goal of peace for all people, everywhere."

Also receiving the Covenant of Peace Award of the Synagogue Council of America were Secretary of Commerce Philip Klutznick, Roberta Peters, Andrei Sakharov and Anatoly Shcharansky. Two empty chairs were on the dais for Sakharov and Shcharansky. Accepting the award for Sakharov was his daughter, Tanya Yankelevich. Receiving the award for Shcharansky was his wife, Avital.

"The vivid symbolism of two empty chairs is evident, for no matter whether the Soviet Union exiles Sakharov or Shcharansky, the message of freedom and justice and example of courage can never be exiled," said Rabbi Arthur Lelyveld, president of the Synagogue Council of America which is the national coordinating agency for the Conservative, Orthodox and Reform rabbinic and congregational organizations.

College Women Wonder More About Children Than Careers

NEW YORK — College women are no longer questioning whether they will embark on professional careers upon graduation as much as whether or not to have children, according to a new study on working women, published in the second issue of the National Jewish Family Center (NJFC) Newsletter, quarterly publication of the American Jewish Committee.

According to its study, which was conducted among working Jewish women in the Washington, D.C. area, a majority of the women felt that while Jewish beliefs have helped them in balancing both career and family, Jewish community agencies have had few programs to enforce or support their lifestyles.

Among the services the women felt the Jewish community should promote were:

Reduced fees for large families at Jewish community centers, synagogues, schools, and summer camps;

Quality Jewish day-care programs;

Communal activities scheduled for the entire family rather than separate programs for sisterhoods, brotherhoods, and youth groups;

Support facilities where mothers may meet.

Decline In Russian Emigres Fault Of Ourselves, Dropouts

by Carl Alpert

HAIFA — In recent months there has been a drastic decline in the number of Jews permitted to leave the Soviet Union. In the first seven months of 1979 there were 26,000 Jewish emigres; in the first seven months of 1980 the number had dropped to 16,000. During this past July there were only 1,200. The August figure was considerably lower. The number of Jews registered to leave still runs up to the many tens of thousands, but the Soviet authorities have begun to close the doors.

For this we have only ourselves to blame and a good many of the Russian Jews who did succeed in getting out before it was too late.

When the emigration began a few years ago, the Soviet government set down certain ground rules. The Jews were recognized as a national minority and within reason those who wished to be "repatriated" to their homeland would receive permission on condition that they were rejoining members of their family who already lived there. The government did not wish to set any dangerous precedents which might stimulate general mass emigration.

The procedure was quickly established in a fixed pattern. Relatives in Israel sent formal letters of invitation to their kinfolk in the Soviet Union. These requests were checked and in ever increasing numbers the Jews were permitted to leave. Those who went gave up their Soviet citizenship.

It seemed almost too good to be true and at first many Russian Jews hesitated to avail themselves of the opportunity. Later, when it became clear that the exit permits were indeed available, the number of applications rose into the hundreds of thousands — exactly how many, nobody really knows. Nor is it clear why some applications were approved quickly, some delayed for long periods of time and some never granted.

The Russian immigration to Israel was another of the unexpected miracles of our time. The family reunions were joyful and dramatic. The newcomers were a valuable addition to Israel's population. They were being rescued physically, but were also being restored to the Jewish people and to Judaism in the spiritual and educational sense.

Along the line, a few dropped out in Europe and made their way to the United States instead. The HIAS organization undertook to help the latter and American Jewish communities went out of their way to provide homes and hospitality and to ease the process of integration.

Indeed, the American welcome became so lavish that word rapidly got back to Russia. Armed with their letters of invitation from Israel and permitted to leave with the understanding they were going to that country, more and more Russian Jews were attracted instead by the generous warmth and hospitality of American Jews. Over the years the drop-out rate rose. This past July, no less than 75 percent of the Russians reaching Vienna opted for the U.S. instead of Israel.

At this point other Russians, not Jews, began to complain. If the policy was indeed to permit general emigration for all who wanted it, no matter where they were going, why was favoritism being shown to the Jews? There are a million, or 10 million, or perhaps 50 million other Russians who want to get out as well. Why the discrimination?

And so — because American Jews were so warmly hospitable and HIAS so helpful and the emigrants themselves dishonest in their declaration when they left Moscow, the Russian government, in self-defense and to check a swelling demand from other groups in the USSR for similar permission to go to the U.S. or elsewhere, has sharply curtailed the departure of the Jews.

Every Russian emigrant who changed his destination when he got to Vienna and every American Jew, undoubtedly moved by humanitarian considerations, who helped make the U.S. such an attractive place, has been responsible for the gradual slamming of the doors in the faces of those who were left behind.

If the USSR permits Jews to leave with the understanding that they are going to Israel as Israeli citizens, then every such emigre should go to Israel and anyone who encourages or aids a diversion en route is rendering a grave disservice to those still waiting in line. Only a strict enforcement of this understanding may yet bring about a re-opening of the doors, if it is not already too late.

Your Money's Worth

Now Comes The Food Price Explosion

— by Sylvia Porter

With this dreary election at last behind us, one vitally important pocketbook issue to you and me will emerge in full force. That is a new upsurge in food costs which will send our food budgets to truly awful heights and which at this late stage cannot be solved by any reasonable White House policy.

There may be minor interruptions now and then in the next few months, but the up-and-away trend is unmistakable.

By year end, food prices will be running at least a hefty 10 percent ahead of last year — and this will be just the start.

In 1981, a conservative estimate by authoritative sources is that food prices will just boil over, jump another 15 percent on top of this year's rise.

This would mark the fourth consecutive year in which food price hikes have been in the double-digit range. And during the late, non-lamented campaign, not once did this subject come up! Not once did either major party even try to tackle the problem. Nor did either candidate admit it was a problem of such depth.

And now it's so late that most of the factors behind this inflationary trend are beyond conceivable controls.

The "cattle cycle" alone is heavily against us. Both beef and pork will now be reflecting tighter supplies as farmers rebuild their sharply-reduced herds. From 1976 to 1979, cattle ranchers slashed their production of meats because abundant supplies were putting ceilings on prices and making output unprofitable.

In 1980, hog and poultry farmers joined them. (The cattle cycle is a familiar one, goes on and on, wave after wave.) Now the herd rebuilding process of the cycle is under way.

But with feed grains in an upsurge of their own, how fast can or will farmers rebuild production?

On top of this has been 1980's drought, which has added explosive fuel to an already ready-to-burn situation.

In the world, forces have been against the consumer, too. Consider just sugar, for instance. Sugar prices have been skyrocketing throughout 1980 due to dreadful weather and disease — forecasting ever higher prices for bakery products, candy, ice cream, soft drinks, all other products which contain large amounts of sugar.

Then, there is the familiar influence of payments to all the sources working in the middle between the farmer and the retailer. Out of an estimated total spending at retail for food this year of $262 billion, marketing is calculated to take $182 billion. Out of that marketing bill, the estimates are for: labor $82 billion, about 10-12 percent above last year; packaging materials $22 billion, 12-14 percent higher; corporate pretax profits, $10 billion, and other costs, $54 billion.

There is little or NO evidence of profiteering by middlemen, however. Other factors must be considered.

And now is when we must look inward at ourselves, our own kitchens, our own pantries, our own food-buying habits and preferences.

We are a nation of two-paycheck families and we demand the built-in service that comes with precooked foods, prechopped or prefrozen vegetables, breads ready to pop into the oven, fruit juice that need only be poured from a container or mixed with water.

For this built-in service, we must pay — and we show all the signs of being willing to pay. If the reason is none other than just lack of time to do our own preparation, we are paying for the service.

We demand, too, the convenience of food stores that are open late in the evenings, all day Sundays, ready to meet our requirements.

For this, too, we must be willing to pay and we show all the signs that we will do so.

We demand special store services, ranging from carry-out service to check-cashing, for special sections for "diet" foods, other special sections for "gourmet" foods, counters for already cooked meals we may simply carry home and serve.

Side by side with these service stores are the no-frill, discount markets where prices are shaved as the frills are eliminated. But both types are flourishing side by side.

And with the return of the trading stamp just around the corner, our cry for the cheapest-cheapest seems peculiarly muted in a period of double-digit inflation. What's more, worldwide demand for our food production cannot help but keep up the pressure on our commodity and finished food prices.

You can sharply reduce your food budget by changing your food buying habits and eating patterns. Will you? I wonder . . .

Avital Shcharansky: "Don't forget my Husband" Madrid Forum Focuses On Soviet Jewry

PHILADELPHIA (JTA) — Avital Shcharansky, whose imprisoned husband is recognized throughout the world as a symbol of Soviet Jewry's struggle for aliyah and cultural and religious freedom, asked in a letter handed to Rosalynn Carter last week for continued support for her husband Anatoly.

According to Al Erlick and David Gross, associate editors of the Jewish Exponent, the dramatic presentation, witnessed by a capacity audience, was the emotional highlight of "Forum on Madrid: Promises and Realities," co-sponsored by the National Conference on Soviet Jewry and the Soviet Jewry Council of the Jewish Community Relations Council of Greater Philadelphia.

The forum was designed to focus attention on the plight of Soviet Jewry prior to the official opening on Nov. 11 of the international conference in Madrid, which is to review compliance with the Helsinki Accords, including "Basket Three," devoted to human rights.

In her letter, which was addressed to President Carter, Mrs. Shcharansky said:

"I am happy for this opportunity to meet your dear wife at Independence Hall, Philadelphia, in the city of freedom, and brotherly love. Very soon the conference in Madrid will be held to review the Helsinki accords. Please do not forget my husband, Anatoly Shcharansky. You were so kind to speak up on his behalf when he was first arrested, and now, he is still serving his sentence. My husband was suffering with illness and he was in a prison hospital. He is falsely accused simply because he wanted to be reunited with me in Israel. My husband needs your help to be released. Can you increase your support to free my brave husband, Anatoly Shcharansky?"

Mrs. Carter pledged her husband's continuing support for the cause of Soviet Jewry.

Not Optimistic About Madrid

A panel discussion, moderated by Abraham Karlikow, director of the Foreign Affairs Department of the American Jewish Committee, focused on the Madrid human rights review procedure.

While the panelists held out little hope that Madrid would materially change Soviet repressive actions, they stressed that activists in the cause of Soviet Jewry must continue to use all available means to keep the issue before the world, thereby maintaining pressure on the Soviets.

At a dinner at the Warwick Hotel following the forum, Mrs. Shcharansky revealed that Soviet authorities had cancelled the upcoming visit to her husband of his mother and brother. She also told the assembly that his health had improved since his recent hospitalization, but that prison life was taking a toll.

Delivers Somber Message

The principal address was delivered by R. Spencer Oliver, deputy chairman of the U.S. delegation to the Madrid review proceedings. His message was a somber one.

Soviet authorities, stung by Western criticism which had dominated the five-month review process which ended in Belgrade in March, 1978, were attempting to change the rules under which human rights violations could be discussed. Western diplomats were holding firm at the moment, he said, but he offered little assurance that the Western Europeans would maintain their staunchness as the 11th hour approached.

At issue is the length of time that will be devoted to the subject of human rights and the duration of the meetings, which were opened in Belgrade but which the Soviets want to be limited in Madrid.

In Belgrade, for example, Oliver explained, human rights discussions lasted nine weeks. If the Soviets have their way, they would be wrapped up in two and one-half days in Madrid.

Oliver cautioned that Nov. 11 might see only a continuation of preliminary wrangling and intimated that the Madrid conference might never get off the ground. The U.S., he said, was determined that specific violations and specific personalities should be discussed.

JNF Mission Raises $650,000

NEW YORK (JTA) — At the concluding dinner on Oct. 26 of a seven-day visit to Egypt and Israel, the 40 participants in the first Jewish National Fund Nation Builder Mission to Israel, headed by Jerome Cardin of Baltimore, committed themselves to a total of $650,000 for vast land reclamation projects of the JNF now well under way in the northern and southern sectors of Israel.

Members of the mission participated in an intensive week-long series of seminars and briefing by top JNF officials who met them at various locations in both the Galilee and the Negev.

German Publisher Accuses Bonn Gov't Of Backing PLO

BONN (JTA) — Axel Springer, owner of one of West Germany's largest publishing enterprises, has accused the Bonn government of giving political weight to the Palestine Liberation Organization which has been involved in providing training facilities to German neo-Nazis.

In an editorial in the daily Die Welt, Springer warned that the new wave of anti-Semitism is clearly linked to the government's anti-Israel stance.

Springer, a long-time critic of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's pro-Arab Middle East policies, contended that anti-Semitism and anti-Zionism are two manifestations of the same phenomenon.

He cited recent examples of cooperation between the PLO and neo-Nazi activists, noting that leaders of the rightwing "Wehrsportgruppe Hoffmann" and 20 of its German supporters were the guests of El Fatah for two weeks at a training camp in Lebanon.

"Something is wrong in a political atmosphere" in which a rumor is allowed to circulate unchallenged, that Chancellor Schmidt denounced Israeli Premier Menachem Begin as a "danger for world peace," Springer wrote. He recalled that a belated official denial came only after strong protests by Israel.

He also attacked Bonn's policy of giving priority to the "reunification of the Arab world." According to Springer, "An Arab unity existed, if ever, only in the united fight against the Jewish State."

PLO Official Meets With French President's Representative

PARIS (JTA) — Issam Sartawi, an aide to Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasir Arafat, met last Thursday with one of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's diplomatic representatives.

It was the first known official contact between the office of the French President and a PLO representative.

Sartawi, who is also the PLO representative in Vienna, handed over a letter addressed to Giscard d'Estaing by Arafat to inform him of the latest developments in the war between Iraq and Iran, including Arafat's attempts to mediate a ceasefire.

Jacques Blot, Elysee Palace spokesman, said there was no discussion concerning a visit to Paris by Arafat. He said the French government is not opposed to such a visit but feels that it is "not timely right now."

The public is invited to attend this service which is a 27 year old tradition.

Light Sabbath Candles At Home

The Lubavitcher Rebbe Shlita, Rabbi Menachem Mendel Schneerson urged all women and girls at a recent Chabad Lubavitch gathering to help "make the world a little brighter" by lighting candles every Friday night, eighteen minutes before sunset.

This mitzvah of lighting Sabbath candles will bring peace and harmony to the Jewish home. Israel and the world, the Rebbe said. A special candle lighting calendar has been published, according to Rabbi Laufer, Director of Chabad-Lubavitch of Southeastern New England. It lists the exact times for lighting Sabbath and holiday candles with all the blessings and their English transliteration. The calendar is available free of charge from Chabad.

In addition, colorful buttons are also available for girls who light Sabbath candles. According to Jewish tradition, girls as young as three years old should kindle their own lights. It is also customary to put a few coins in a charity box just before lighting the candles. Some families make it a tradition to light one candle for every member of the family.

With the change to Daylight Savings Time, the Sabbath starts one hour earlier. Candles should be lit no later than 4:24 p.m. on Friday.

Free calendars and buttons are available by writing to Chabad Lubavitch, 48 Savoy St., Providence or calling 273-7238.

Toys For Hospitalized Children Launches Chanukah Drive

NEW YORK — Toys for Hospitalized Children, a volunteer organization which each year distributes thousands of new toys at Chanukah time to children of all races and creeds who are hospitalized in city, state and private hospitals, has just launched its 1980 drive.

According to Rabbi Jacob J. Hecht, Executive Vice-President of the National Committee for Furthance of Jewish Education (NCFJE), the organization which sponsors Toys for Hospitalized Children, the goal of the drive this year is 25,000 toys. Chairman of this year's drive is the noted pediatrician, Dr. Milton Gordon.

"In the past twenty-five years, we have distributed more than 350,000 toys," said Dr. Gordon. "But we expect this year's total to be higher than ever before because of the greater number of organizations and individuals that will be participating."

The toys distributed in the Toys for Hospitalized Children program come from dozens of sources. Hundreds are donated as a result of appeals over the radio. The toy companies themselves contribute. Local organizations such as Boy Scouts, Golden Age Clubs, Women's Groups, Jewish War Veterans, Jewish Centers, Yeshivas and Talmud Torahs all pitch in with either volunteers or new toys or money to purchase them.

"It's wonderful the way that everyone helps out in this worthwhile cause," Dr. Gordon said. "And each year we are getting more and more support from the younger members of the community."

A large percentage of the toys distributed each year comes from Jewish schools, where students themselves organize drives to collect the toys for the hospitalized children. In some schools, a collection box is maintained in the school office. In others, children are asked to donate individually — on a "one toy per hospitalized child" basis. "The generosity of some of these Jewish children more than fulfills the true Chanukah spirit," he added.

Once the toys are collected at Toys for Hospitalized Children headquarters, 824 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, N.Y., volunteers sort them according to type, age (5 to 15) and whether they are for boys or girls. Then they are individually wrapped. When the calls come in from the hospitals giving the count as to how many hospitalized children they will have during Chanukah, the volunteers deliver the toys and, wherever possible, hand them to the children with words of good cheer.

"These toys work therapeutic wonders, and it is almost impossible to describe how appreciative the children are," Dr. Gordon said. "Why, some even try to hand us pennies to pay for them."

According to Dr. Gordon, the success of the Toys for Hospitalized Children program would not have been possible without the leadership of the Committee which organizes the volunteers and toy collection and distribution. Special appreciation is due to The Honorable Howard Golden, Boro President of Brooklyn.

The Toys for Hospitalized Children drive begins officially on November 15, 1980.

"All Dressed Up And No Place To Go . . ."

Unless You're A Member Of The Jewish Singles Club And It's Halloween

by Linda A. Acciaro

"I feel like a piece of meat in a singles bar, but here I have friends to be with and it's comfortable," says Bev Lazaroff boldly dressed as a 1920's French prostitute at the Halloween party for the Jewish Singles Club.

Rather than scout the local bars or night spots, Bev and the other men and women in the club, are discovering a social life that offers lasting rewards.

When Barry Golden returned home to Rhode Island after graduation from college in Georgia, he left his friends behind. "I didn't have any friends here," says the 25-year-old vice-president of marketing at Scott Brass in Cranston. Barry joined the singles club last February because "people here aren't on the make. You can find lasting friendships with both the men and women.

Dissatisfied with the Jewish Community Center's lack of commitment to the single members, Larry Winkler decided to strike out on his own. He co-founded the Jewish Singles Club two years ago. "I checked into what other singles groups were doing and then organized this one," says Larry as he rips off the mask of a wrinkled old man which he donned for the evening's festivities.

BEV LAZAROFF RECEIVES a "proposal" from Larry Winkler.

Larry publicized the formation of the singles club and the response was overwhelming. About 125 men and women joined him at the first event, a cocktail party. Since that time, Larry has served as the president of the club. "There's a lot of work that goes on behind the scenes to arrange a party, lecture, or make arrangements for the bowling league, he says.

The social hall, where the party took place, was filled with creatures from outer space, a Japanese geisha girl, monsters of all sorts, and flappers from the 1920's. The most striking aspect of the scene was the mingling of men and women. How many times at a party do the men converge in one corner of the room and the women stake out their territory in the other? This was not the case here.

"If you see a man you would like to meet there's always someone who can introduce you to him," said 30-year-old Nancy Abeshaus. The chances of meeting people are higher here than at singles bars, adds Nancy. She has been involved with the club since its inception and has worked to promote it by designing all the flyers and advertisements. "Even if I don't get a date out of it, I have good friends in the club." Someone overhears the conversation and interjects, "She's a very popular person and gets a lot of dates."

Although the singles club has an active membership of 100 persons, the group has a mailing list of 500 men and women. One of the new members, Lance Hodosh, said this is the first place he has been able to find people his own age since he began working in Rhode Island. The members range in age from 19 to 35.

"I can relate to the people because they are going through the same situations and experiencing the same problems I have," says Lance. Nancy echoed this same sentiment "It's easier to talk with people in the club because they have the same interests and background.

The hall is filled with 80 single men and women listening to the sounds of the Disc Jockey, Al Norman from JB 105. The women outnumber the men and according to Nancy, relationships which develop from meeting single men here may lead to marriage.

"Every woman is looking for a husband, isn't she?"

Not every man is looking for a wife. "I'm not particularly interested in getting married. I'm here to meet new people and be involved with the organization, says Barry.

A 29-year-old member who refused to reveal his identity behind a gruesome, green mask said it is important to him that this is a Jewish singles club. "We are more comfortable with one another because we have the same heritage. I consider myself a conservative Jew and contact with members of the same faith is important to me." He joined the Bev, the French prostitute, who is in reality a speech pathologist, considers herself a "cultural Jew." She had no formal religious training, but being Jewish was definitely a part of her home life. "Although I feel comfortable with other Jews and have more in common with them, I wasn't particularly looking for a Jewish singles group when I joined," says Bev. Her main reason for becoming a member was to participate in the club's bowling league.

The bowling league for the singles club meets every other Sunday at Lang's Bowlarama, 225 Nyantic Ave., Cranston. at club after a broken engagement as a way to meet "professional and intelligent" people.

Most of those attending the Halloween party are proud of their Jewish heritage. Many of them have received religious training in childhood, but don't consider themselves "religious" today.

"I'm not active religiously," says Lance, but adds that his heritage is important to him. For Nancy, being a Jew is a way of life more than simply going to Temple. "I don't consider myself religious, but I am proud of being Jewish," she says.

Barry, who is the treasurer for the group was raised in the Jewish faith, attended Hebrew school, and had a Bar Mitzvah. "I believe in all of it, and I stand up for it," he said.

BARRY GOLDEN is behind the mask. Bev Lazaroff joins him.

6:30 p.m. The club has planned movie nights, game nights, and coffee houses. Brown University's Hillel House has assisted them on many occasions to plan and sponsor events.

According to Larry, the president, no other Jewish organization has offered any assistance to promote the activities of the club. We are a separate entity and not affiliated with the Jewish Community Center. We receive no outside help," he added.

The club is a non-profit corporation, but is not recognized as such with the state government because of its social rather than educational emphasis, says Barry. There are no membership fees. The only revenue for the club is the admissions fee to the events. According to Barry, Temple Beth Torah discontinued allowing the club to use their non-profit status for the monthly mailing to the 500 members.

This club is not to be confused with the Jewish Business and Professional Singles Club (25-35) which is sponsored by the JCC and strictly abides by its age requirement. "I was single, 24 years old, a professional, and they refused me as a member because of my age," says Barry.

The members say they are satisfied with the events that are sponsored by the club. On Saturday, Nov. 29, the club will host a coffeehouse at the Coweset Hill Apts., 3595 Post Rd., Warwick. Guitarist and vocalist, Dara, will entertain for the evening which begins at 8:30 p.m. Refreshments and soft drinks will be available. The charge for admission is $3 per person.

'What Kind Of Job Is This For A Jewish Boy?'

Rabbi Lefkowitz: Ancient Tablets Help Discover Judaic Roots

by Linda A. Acciaro

When Marduk Zer Iddin, son of Gimilla, borrowed 15 Shekels of silver from Nabu-Ahhe Iddin, son of Shula, in the year 2500 BCE, he paid a whopping 20 percent interest rate on the loan. What does this ancient financial agreement have to do with the new Rabbi of Agudath Achim Synagogue in Taunton, Mass.?

Rabbi Benjamin Lefkowitz examines and translates ancient cuneiform tablets as a vital part of his studies in Bible and Ancient History. He explains that this loan arrangement was translated from cuneiform writing wedged into clay tablets, the system of writing used long before modern alphabets were invented.

The rabbi is currently pursuing his doctorate in this area. "I wanted to broaden my educational base with an interest related to my rabbinic work." The information he obtains from these tablets not only sheds new light on the early history of man, but allows him to help others discover their Judaic roots.

Several hundred tablets have been recovered and are in museums today. Many have not been translated as yet. "Sometimes a new find is not a tablet recently unearthed, but one that has been ignored for years. The tablets are encrusted with dirt and need cleaning. The work done under high intensity lights is painstakingly slow."

The results of patience in this task are translations that deal with the economic, administrative and legal climate of the period. Many texts were written in correlation with the history of the Bible describing the creation, the flood and other Biblical themes.

Rabbi Lefkowitz has always been concerned with his own Jewish identity and the study of the tablets aids him in understanding his Judaic heritage.

As a freshman at Queens College in New York, he chose the rabbinate because "I wanted to help others develop their own Jewish identities. The sermons are a vehicle to teach people about their Judaic background."

"His parents were proud of their son." They certainly didn't say, "what kind of job is this for a Jewish boy?"

A rabbi is a leader and serves as an example and guide for others, he says. "Although sometimes I would like to say 'this is what you should do,' everyone has to be Jewish in their own way."

In the past Rabbis were not only teachers, but they made decisions for others based on Jewish law. "Some orthodox rabbis do involve themselves with making decisions for members of their congregations, but today this is usually not the case," he says.

The synagogue in Taunton is affiliated with the conservative movement, but the members asked the Central Conference of American Rabbis, a reform rabbinate organization, to assist them in selecting a new rabbi. In August of this year, Rabbi Lefkowitz was chosen by the congregation.

As a leader in the Jewish community, the rabbi is "outraged, worried and angered" over the recent neo-Nazi and anti-Semitic activities occurring in this country and abroad. "You can't ignore it." But he adds, "to what extent do you raise a cry? You never know when publicizing these occurrences will do more harm than good." Rabbi Lefkowitz says that he would call upon the Jewish community as well as his non-Jewish colleagues to use their pulpits to speak out against something major or overt occurring locally.

The Rabbi says his role as a leader is that of a pastor, tending to the needs of the people. In his new position he will concentrate on the growth of his congregation and the quality of Judaic education, which are inter-related. "As we grow in numbers we can provide a better Jewish education and environment for our children."

More than half of the people in other religions don't have any organized affiliations, he adds.

Rabbi Lefkowitz was ordained in 1975 in Lode Haven, Penn. He had served as a weekend rabbi while studying for the rabbinate. He graduated from Hebrew Union College in New York and for the past 5 years has been working on his dissertation.

Today he ministers to a rural congregation of 123 families and he has found them to be warm and friendly. "This congregation has a very fine potential," says the rabbi.

L.I. County Forms Panel To Fight Rash Of Vandalism Against Jews

HAUPPAUGE, L.I. — A task force to combat the recent rash of vandalism against Jewish residents and synagogues has been formed in Suffolk County, N.Y.

The announcement by Suffolk County Executive Peter F. Cohan followed an increase in attacks, including one in which a lawn in front of a Jewish center was mowed into the form of crosses.

Cohan said the actions were "clearly acts of anti-Semitism and not merely mischievous pranks."

The administrator asked for public help in finding the "criminals."

Last week, a Jewish official who was scheduled to appear at a ceremony renaming a parkway "Hadassah Parkway" for a week received a threatening phone call just before the ceremony.

The caller said a sniper was "out to get" the official and "all the Jews." As a result of the call, the official and two guests riding in his car wore bulletproof vests during the ceremonies.

Several days later, someone drove an automobile onto the sidewalk and front lawn of a Jewish center, just missing worshipers emerging from services.

Several synagogues have been damaged in the county and desecrated with obscenities, and there have been several thefts of valuable silver religious objects.

The neighboring Nassau County set up a similar task force last year after numerous cross burnings and anti-Semitic incidents there.

The head of the Nassau task force has said the group's efforts have resulted in the arrest of 30 persons.

Israel Needs Nuclear Energy

MONTREAL (JTA) — Isin Ivanier, a Montreal industrialist, stressed this week that Israel must develop nuclear energy in order to become economically self-sufficient.

Ivanier spoke at a meeting of the Canadian Friends of the Technion at the Ritz Carleton Hotel at which a drive was launched to raise $5-$6 million from the Montreal Jewish community to build a Canadian nuclear research center for the training of Israeli engineers in nuclear energy problems. Ground-breaking for the center to be located in Haifa is scheduled for January.

"Israel's independence hangs on cheap, fast and convenient energy," Ivanier said. "Becoming economically self-sufficient is the only way to ensure the political security and moral reliance of our people and its destiny."

Ivanier said that the nuclear research center will provide Israel with engineers capable of establishing nuclear plants throughout the country to provide electricity needed for industry and agriculture, to irrigate the Negev and to create new jobs.

panic by members of the synagogue at the time of the bombing.

The rabbi said that the Middle East policy of the French government, which he described as "anti-Israel" and "sympathetic to the Arabs," contributed to the revival of anti-Semitism in France. But he stressed that the French government itself is not anti-Semitic.

According to Williams, who married a French woman and moved to Paris from England five years ago, one of the factors that undermines the status of French society to be "real Frenchmen."

"There is no easy solution for the status of Jews in France," he said. Because of these factors the Jews must exercise "a high degree of discretion and courage." He stated that he would say "to my fellow French Jews" that when they encounter violence "I am for Jewish self-defense but not for Jewish aggressiveness or high profile propaganda" because "it is counter-productive and can cause a backlash" in the context of French society.

Asked about anti-Semitism in England; Williams said he had not encountered it personally but was aware that it exists.

Rabbi Of Bombed Synagogue Visits U.S., Asks For Help

NEW YORK (JTA) — Rabbi Michael Williams of the Rue Copernic Temple in Paris has said he is visiting the U.S. to make American Jewry "understand how complicated" the situation of French Jewry is "and why we have to keep a balance between a low profile and acting courageously when we need to."

The 36-year-old English-born Reform rabbi who arrived for a one-week visit, discussed the effects on French Jews of the Oct. 3 bomb attack on his synagogue.

In an interview at the headquarters of the World Union of Progressive Judaism, he warned that "It is possible this kind of thing will happen again" and "Jews will have to be courageous."

Williams said another reason for his visit is "to ask for financial help for the security of my synagogue and other synagogues in Paris."

He said the attack on Rue Copernic which took four lives was not an isolated incident but the culmination of a series of anti-Semitic acts.

In the opinion of French Jews, anti-Semitism is the latest phenomenon in France which has its moments of crises, he said, and therefore there was little surprise and little TEL AVIV — Michael Gurdus is a journalist unlike any other who gets one-of-a-kind scoops to prove it.

Instead of pen and pad or camera and microphone, Gurdus works with knobs, dials and radio receivers. He works out of his home, monitoring radio for Israeli radio and television.

Gurdus has gained a worldwide reputation for reliability and discretion.

The Iran-Iraq war has him working with distant transmissions every morning, and his diligence paid off in the early days of the fighting.

It was Gurdus, 35, who broke the news that Libya was giving military support to Iran. This news caused a split in the Arab world, with Iraq breaking diplomatic relations with Libya and two other countries that were helping Iran — Syria and North Korea.

Gurdus ended up in this unusual profession through his father, who was confined to a wheelchair by a childhood illness but managed anyway to serve as a correspondent in Eastern Europe for The Daily Express of London by monitoring radio broadcasts.

After fleeing Warsaw in 1939 with British journalists, the father came to Palestine and covered all of World War II through monitoring.

Gurdus says he learned everything from his father, who worked out of the same house but with less sophisticated antennas and receivers.

Gurdus speaks English, which is the language of international air traffic communications, and knows enough Russian and Arabic to follow other transmissions.

And he understands noises and static that are meaningless to the ordinary listener.

Helped Save Makarios

Gurdus was credited with saving the life of Archbishop Makarios of Cyprus, who escaped during a coup and got hold of a transmitter. Gurdus remembers that Cyprus radio announced Makarios was dead. Gurdus heard the call for help and was able to broadcast it.

Heard Rescue Attempt

During the attempt in April to rescue the hostages from Iran, Gurdus heard about the ground collision between a helicopter and plane before the rest of the world.

He also heard American pilots searching for three airplanes which were not lost but had forgotten to call ground control.

Gurdus withheld the news of the crash and the "missing" planes until after the operation.

Preview of Embarrassments

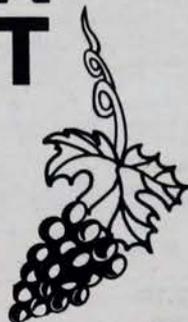

Once when President Lyndon Johnson was in flight to Rome, Gurdus overheard Secret Service agents in Air Force One and at the American Embassy in Rome planning how the president would be protected, exactly how he would travel and which agents would be guarding him.

Toward the end of the Nixon administration, Gurdus overheard a discussion on a flight between Egypt and Saudi Arabia. It was during the Watergate affair.

The White House called Air Force One, Gurdus recalls, with the news that the Special Prosecutor was coming to pick up the White House tapes.

Gurdus heard Air Force one reply, "Don't let them at the safe...Don't open the safe!"

Successful Investing

Recession Over

by David R. Sargent

Q: Is the recession over? S.K., New Jersey

A: Consensus has it that the 1980 recession has indeed bottomed out, and a slow recovery is under way. The auto and housing industries have begun to revive and consumer spending has picked up. The latest government statistics show that the economy as a whole is out of the slump; real Gross National Product registered a 1% increase for the third quarter, compared to the 9.6% decline in the second. Thus, the recession which was so long and widely heralded could be the shortest in post World War II history. And, in fact, some are questioning whether it qualifies as a recession.

Apparently, economists had overestimated the impact of higher oil prices and interest rates on the economy. Interest rates and inflation will remain at high levels, however, and we are told to expect a sluggish recovery, and possibly even another down quarter next year. But this year's Christmas season should be a healthy one.

Q: If the recession is over, is this a good time to buy housing stocks? E.G., Florida

A: The housing market will continue to be restricted by high interest rates, but housing starts and building permit applications did show improvement during the month of September. By next year, the housing market should pick up sharply, and you might consider Weyerhaeuser (NYSE) for purchase at this time. Weyerhaeuser is a leading forest products company with large timber resource assets. Earnings for 1980 will be adversely affected by the recession as well as costs associated with the eruption of Mount Saint Helens — per-share net earnings for the first nine months were $2.14, vs. $3.17 a year ago — but should recover well in 1981. Long-term prospects are enhanced by demographic trends and the demand for housing, as more numbers of the population reach the homebuilding age. I recommend purchase of Weyerhaeuser as an excellent long-term growth stock.

Berger Chairman

The Board of Governors of Crestwood Country Club have appointed Herman Berger, 1402 Highland Ave., Fall River, Mass., as Tournament Chairman for the upcoming year.

Other appointed officials are: Murray Frank, secretary; Low Glazer, treasurer; Sid Lechan, publicity; and Seymour Sugarman, Handicap Chairman.

Tournaments, clinics, inter and intra club activity and a variety of interrelated programs will keep the golfers active every week this coming year, said Berger. An ABCD Tournament is scheduled in May preceded by a full course fellowship breakfast.

3-M Company Fined For Violations Of Anti-Arab-Boycott Laws

WASHINGTON (JTA) — The Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing (3-M) Co. of St. Paul has agreed to pay civil penalties of $137,500 for a total of 230 alleged violations committed by the parent company and nine subsidiaries of U.S. laws against the Arab boycott of Israel, the Department of Commerce announced.

Out of the total fine, $80,000 is for late reporting or failure to report 133 instances of alleged violations and $57,500 is for supplying prohibited information about the sale of U.S. goods to Middle East buyers in 97 alleged instances.

In addition, the 3-M organization agreed to strengthen its existing anti-boycott compliance program related to the provisions of the U.S. Export Administration Act.

In making the announcement, the Department of Commerce pointed out that these alleged violations were "voluntarily brought to the attention of the Office of Anti-Boycott Compliance" of the Department of Commerce by 3-M.

Statement By U.S. Firm

Dan Hitt, assistant general counsel for 3-M in St. Paul, said in a statement: "We are pleased that the Commerce Department saw fit to note 3-M's cooperation throughout the investigation, reflecting the fact that every shred of information bearing on the settlement was discovered and volunteered by 3-M."

"Nearly all of the substantive violations did in fact occur at a small European facility that was dealing with Middle East customers only because normal 3-M operations in Lebanon were disrupted by fighting in Beirut," Hitt said. "The people involved were unaware of the company's policy and U.S. regulations because they normally were not involved in transactions of this kind."

Hitt pointed out that "outside the U.S., 3-M has nationals in 50 countries handling more than a quarter of a million invoices a month. We chose this settlement rather than face the potential for long and costly litigation," he said. "Part of the problem stems from a fine point of the law. It is lawful, for example, to say on an invoice where goods were made but it is illegal to state that the goods were not made in a boycotted country." He emphasized that "There should be no question as to our policy" which is "to comply with all appropriate foreign laws and all U.S. laws affecting overseas commerce."

Blum Proposes Draft Resolution For Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone

UNITED NATIONS (JTA) — Yehuda Blum, Israel's Ambassador to the United Nations, presented Secretary General Kurt Waldheim with a letter and the text of a draft resolution on the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Mideast.

The draft resolution, the first submitted by Israel to the UN on the issue of nuclear armament, calls upon "All states of the Middle East to convene at the earliest possible date a conference with a view to negotiation a multilateral treaty establishing a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Mideast."

The draft resolution was the third draft resolution ever submitted by Israel since it became a member of the UN on May 11, 1949.

In recent years, Israeli spokesmen, including its foreign ministers, called for a conference of Mideast nations to reach a resolution of the nuclear arms issue. Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, in his speech before the General Assembly on Sept. 29, declared that "Israel believes that an international conference of all the states in the region and adjacent to our region should be held leading to the conclusion of a formal, contractual, multilateral Convention between all states of the region."

The draft resolution "urges all states in the region to state by May 1, 1981 their willingness to participate in the conference," and "requests the Secretary General to provide the necessary facilities for the convening of such a conference."

1981 Delegation Will Tour Israel

The 1981 National New Leadership Delegation for State of Israel Bonds is now being formed, according to its co-chairmen, Darrell and Susan Ross.

The delegation will depart from New York on May 3 with plans for 11 days of touring, briefing, and high level meetings in Israel. Departure will be via Europe and or Egypt.

All those interested in becoming a part of the historic delegation should contact the State of Israel Bond Office at 751-6767.

Rabbi Goren Criticized For Having Operation In U.S. Hospital

JERUSALEM (JTA) — Ashkenazic Chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren has come under severe criticism in the press and public opinion here for having gone to Cleveland for a quadruple bypass operation by an American surgeon.

The operation was performed successfully last week by Dr. Floyd Loop who performed a similar operation on King Khalid of Saudi Arabia two years ago.

The criticism is two-fold. Goren is being taken to task for having surgery performed abroad when hundreds of similar operations are performed each year at Israeli hospitals.

People are also incensed over the rights and privileges of important public figures to have their medical expenses covered by the public purse, including expenses incurred abroad.

The Goren case has stirred debate here over the various laws and regulations awarding medical benefits to VIPs. These laws and regulations are not entirely clear. Some top level persons, including government ministers, are entitled to public defrayment of their medical expenses and those of members of their families.

Several newspapers have called for a thorough overhaul of the entire system so that such benefits are limited only to the highest office holders.

JNF Honors Memory Of Costa Rican Statesman

JERUSALEM (JTA) — Costa Rica's envoy to the United Nations in the late 1940s, Ricardo Fournier, played a key role in helping the Zionist movement win a majority for sovereignty. Last week, his memory was honored by the Jewish National Fund in a ceremony at the Peace Forest near Jerusalem, attended by Costa Rican Ambassador Ronald Fernandez-Pinto and senior Foreign Ministry and JNF officials. Fournier's daughter spoke of her father's love of the Zionist cause, and planted a tree in his memory.

The question of when the public should pay the medical bills of officials who receive treatment abroad is also being aired.

In Goren's case, his Israeli physician, Dr. Henri Neufeld, chief of cardiology at the Shea Medical Center, did not recommend that the Chief Rabbi go overseas for surgery. But Goren's family decided on the Cleveland Clinic and Neufeld provided the Americans with his full medical history.

This issue has been brought to the Knesset in a motion submitted by Labor MK Gad Yaacobi.

Recovering From Heart Surgery

CLEVELAND (JTA) — Israel's Chief Ashkenazic Rabbi Shlomo Goren was resting comfortably today after undergoing a quadruple heart bypass operation last Tuesday at the Cleveland Clinic here, his surgeon, Dr. Floyd Loop said. Loop, who also performed a similar operation about two years ago on King Khalid of Saudi Arabia, said that Goren had a blockage to the heart in four places which required the transplanting of four arteries.

Premier Menachem Begin of Israel called Goren before the operation but was unable to speak to him. The Premier called again shortly after the surgery and spoke both with Mrs. Goren and Loop.

Belgium Fights Anti-Semitism

BRUSSELS (JTA) — Belgian Minister of Education Guy Mathot has asked all state-controlled schools to organize special courses in fighting racism and anti-Semitism. The minister asked all school principals to give top priority to this subject in view of the spread of anti-Semitic and racist incidents in Western Europe.

Genizah Ceremony Celebrates Jewish Book Month

In celebration of Jewish Book Month, Congregation Beth Shalom-Sons of Zion and the Providence Hebrew Day School-New England Academy of Torah will conduct a "genizah ceremony," Sunday Nov. 9, at 10:00 a.m.

The genizah ceremony will demonstrate the reverent treatment of old and tattered traditional works, sacred writings, and ritual objects. Traditionally any article containing the name of G-d was not to be destroyed, according to Jewish law, but buried in a respectable manner.

"Genizah," meaning "storing" or "repository," was usually a room attached to a synagogue. When the storing area was full, it became the practice to bury the articles in a cemetery. The genizah ceremony was usually conducted in a festive manner since it gave expression to the extensive use the objects received and underscored the reverence of books and learning.

The program is scheduled to coincide not only with Jewish Book Month, but also with kristall nacht, when the Nazis burned Jewish businesses, synagogues and Jewish books in November of 1938 in Germany.

The genizah ceremony will begin at Sugarman's Memorial Chapel on Hope and Doyle where participants may bring articles for burial. A procession will leave from Sugarman's to Lincoln Park Cemetery for the genizah ceremony.

Rabbi Sholom Strajcher, Dean of the Providence Hebrew Day School-New England Academy of Torah and Rabbi Jake S. Rubenstein, spiritual leader of Congregation Beth Shalom-Sons of Zion, will conduct the ceremony. Rabbi Nachman Levine of the Providence Hebrew Day School is chairman of the program. The public is invited to participate.

Israelis Angered By Weizman Campaign Trip With Carter

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Menachem Begin and other Cabinet members were angered last week by former Defense Minister Ezer Weizman's show of support for President Jimmy Carter.

Weizman flew with Carter on Air Force One during a campaign swing Oct. 27.

Officials had asserted Israel's strict neutrality in the U.S. presidential race.

Government officials were apprehensive that despite Weizman's resignation from the Cabinet last spring, his action might be viewed as a sort of official endorsement that could antagonize Ronald Reagan.

The President-elect is viewed with some skepticism in Israel. His pro-Israeli statements may have drawn some Jewish voters away from Carter, but Israelis worry that corporate leaders in American are most concerned about the petroleum dollars in the

Italian Neo-Fascists Sentenced To Jail

ROME (JTA) — Ten neo-fascists who led an anti-Semitic demonstration at an Italian-Israeli soccer match in Varese on March 7, 1979, have been sentenced to three years' imprisonment. The leader of the group was sentenced to three years and six months.

The trial and the sentence marked the first time an Italian court has applied the law prohibiting "apologia of genocide." The Public Prosecutor, Giovanni Porqueddu, categorically rejected the defense attorney's attempt to minimize the demonstration as "mere sports fanaticism."

The Union of Italian Jewish Communities which joined the prosecution's case and was represented by its own attorney, Aldo Lo Zito, won an additional penalty in the form of a fine. The sum, to be decided by the court, will be set aside for the purpose of sending groups of young people to visit the sites of World War II concentration camps.

According to the prosecutor, the anti-Semitic demonstration at Varese was far more serious than a "simple fascist gathering." The only possible legal definition of what took place that day was "apologia of genocide," he said. He noted that the defendants raised huge blue and white crosses in the stands as they shouted slogans such as "Hitler taught us that Jew-killing is no crime" and "ten, a hundred, a thousand Mauthausens," a reference to a notorious Nazi concentration camp.

Porqueddu said the demonstration was organized and clearly was not the work of impassioned sports fans but had "a precise propagandist, political and apologist (for genocide) character."

Lo Zito, speaking for the Jewish community, said: "We do not want persecutions or excessively high penalties, only that with this sentence the young people are made to understand that certain ideologies are insane and must be rejected for being extremely dangerous." He added: "Such demonstrations must be abolished in order to avoid Italian Jews organizing themselves in self-defense in the same way as French Jews are now doing. Jews should not be forced to defend civil liberties. There is a law for that."

Guide To Children's Films Published

NEW YORK — The first comprehensive guide to films for children for use in Jewish education, including schools, camps, Jewish Community Centers, and youth groups, has been prepared by the Jewish Media Service/JWB in response to an expressed need.

Compiled and edited by Nama Frenkel, Program Associate of the Jewish Media Service, the 25-page evaluative guide — "Films for Children of All Ages" — describes 90 films in several subject categories. The films are listed with a suggested age range extending from age 5 to teens. Many films can also be used with college audiences.

The guide includes an index to 40 film-rental companies, many of which provide a discussion guide with each film.

Copies of "Films for Children of All Ages" are available at $3.00 each, pre-paid, from the Jewish Media Service/JWB, 15 East 26th St., New York, N.Y. 10010.

Wallenberg Hearings Scheduled

LOS ANGELES (JTA) — A distinguished group of international personalities led by Simon Wiesenthal will convene formal hearings in Stockholm, Sweden Jan. 15-17 to hear testimony on the fate of the lost hero of the Holocaust, Raoul Wallenberg.

The announcement was made by Rabbi Abraham Cooper, assistant to the Dean of the Simon Wiesenthal Center for Holocaust Studies at Yeshiva University of Los Angeles, upon his return from consultations with the Wallenberg family in Stockholm.

The hearings will be coordinated with the International Sakharov Committee based in Copenhagen. The dates of the hearings coincide with the 36th anniversary of Wallenberg's disappearance in Budapest, Hungary.

Wallenberg, a Swedish Gentile, risked his life to save more than 30,000 Jews in Budapest during the closing months of World War II. He was kidnapped and incarcerated by the Soviets in 1945.

The Russians at first denied any knowledge of Wallenberg. Later, they

URI Hillel Holds Shabbat Services

The Hillel House at the University of Rhode Island began its social program for this year with two bagel and lox brunches on Oct. 5 for students and Oct. 26 as part of URI's Parents' Weekend.

Hillel also sponsored two Friday night Shabbat meals. The meals were preceded by the first Shabbat services of the year and concluded with z'miroth and other Hebrew songs.

These meals are part of the Hillel co-op, a seven meal program of kosher Shabbat foods.

As part of its Jewish Film Festival, Hillel presented the Odessa File, a film dealing with a 1963 Nazi plot to destroy Israel.

URI Hillel hosted a kiddush in honor of the Israeli National Wheelchair Basketball Team on Saturday, Oct. 18. Mr. Sam Shlevin, URI Hillel Advisory Board Chairman, invited the team to attend the university football game that day.

Hillel House will establish a mailing list for URI Alumni to notify them of upcoming socials and special programs. If you would like to be included on the list, contact URI Hillel, 34 Lower College Rd., Kingston, R.I.

In addition to classes being offered by the Jewish Free University, Hillel's bureau of informal education, Rabbi Chaim Casper, the director, has presented three on-campus lectures dealing with "The Jewish View of Sex." For more information concerning courses contact Hillel at 789-1922 or 792-2740.

Carter stirred mixed feelings in Israel: he was appreciated for his role in the Camp David peace agreements, but resented for the failure to veto anti-Israel resolutions in the United Nations Security Council.

Temple Sinai Holds Family Service

Rabbi George J. Astrachan and Cantor Rennie Brown will conduct a family service at Temple Sinai on Friday, Nov. 7 at 7:30 p.m.

All birthday celebrants will be called to the bima and be blessed by the Rabbi. An oneg shabbat will follow.

On Saturday, Nov. 8, at 11:15 a.m., Richard Gessman will become Bar Mitzvah.

Two Jewish Youths Beaten In Paris

PARIS (JTA) — Two Jewish schoolboys were attacked and seriously beaten up last Friday in Marseilles.

Police arrested two of the four assailants and said the incident was the result of a street fight. But local Jewish sources said the boys were beaten up because they wore yarmulkes and were openly asserting their Jewishness. Two of the attackers are of Algerian origin.

Police sources said the two Jewish youths, aged 16 and 17, were leaving the Jewish high school, Yavneh, in one of the city's working class districts when they got into an argument with four other boys. They rapidly came to blows and one of the Jewish boys was badly beaten and had to undergo surgery for a fractured jaw.

In another incident, a Jewish doctor's car was blown up Friday night on a Paris street. The doctor said he had received no threats and has no enemies. Police said they have no clues for the time being.

Dealing With A Taxing Situation

JERUSALEM (JTA) — An anonymous leaflet distributed this week in ultra-Orthodox neighborhoods of Jerusalem suggests a very effective way to deal with income tax officials: kill them on the spot.

The leaflet was distributed following clashes between local residents and representatives of the tax authorities. The ultra-Orthodox refuse to pay taxes because they do not recognize the Zionist State.

The leaflet, signed by "Those robbed and tortured in Zionist captivity," described the income tax officials as "a group of armed robbers."

It charged that the tax money is used to finance all sorts of "heresies." Therefore, the authors of the leaflet suggest, "it is by the rule of Torah . . . that one is entitled to kill those people without trial."

Temple Beth Am-Beth David Plans New Year's Party

Reservations are now being taken for the Annual New Year's Eve Party at Temple Beth Am-Beth David, 40 Gardiner St., Warwick.

Harry Katzman, president of the Temple's Men's Club, said plans have been finalized for the annual event. Reservations will be honored on a first-come, first-serve basis, and will be limited.

Evening activities will include a full-course roast beef dinner, an open bar and dancing until 1 a.m., and favors and hats.

For more information and reservations, contact: Katzman at 737-6521, Doris Einhorn at 739-5703, Meri Tolchinsky at 739-5321 or Cheryl Kushner at 737-5766.

Temple Beth Torah Plans Flea Market

Many new and used items will be sold and auctioned, including furniture, clothing, gift certificates, jewelry, hardware, books and records.

The flea market will be Sunday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Monday from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. The auction conducted by a professional auctioneer will be Tuesday from 9 a.m. until sell-out.

U.S. Autonomy Proposal Sent To Middle East

WASHINGTON — The United States plans to send a diplomatic team to Israel and Egypt this week with a revised interim proposal for an agreement on Palestinian self-rule.

An aide to U.S. negotiator Sol M. Linowitz said the negotiations would continue no matter what the outcome of the presidential election.

The diplomats will be Ambassador James F. Leonard, deputy to Linowitz, and two aides, Alan Kreczko and Ned Walker.

Carter Decides U.S. Will Not Give Saudis Fighter Plane Equipment

WASHINGTON (JTA) — President Carter has decided that his Administration will not provide equipment to enhance the range and combat capability of the 60 American F-15 fighters provided to Saudi Arabia.

The President made known his decision in a radio interview with RKO General Broadcasting Friday. The transcript was made available on the Presidential press plane.

Political observers here said the decision, which has been delayed since last spring, was an apparent policy change aimed at reassuring Jewish voters in the last few days before the Presidential election.

Carter said in the interview, "There will be absolutely no change in the assurance given to the Congress in 1978 by (Defense Secretary (Harold) Brown, acting under my instructions, on the sale of F-15s to the Saudi Arabians. In accordance with those assurances, we will not agree to provide offensive capabilities for the planes that might be used against Israel."

Brown told Congress two years ago in seeking to obtain Congressional approval for the sale of the 60 planes that the planes would not be improved to the point where they could menace Israel.

Friends of Israel pointed out that the planes could be used even without the additional bomb racks and refueling equipment against Israel and that the additional equipment would enable them to fly long-range missions against Israel and be even a greater threat.

Decision Might Be Overturned

After Nov. 4

The Pentagon and the State Department both said in the past months that the additional equipment would not be a menace to Israel and stressed that altered circumstances in the Middle East required that Saudi Arabia be allowed the additional equipment.

While the President said Friday he would not provide offensive capability for those planes "that might be used against Israel," some observers noted that this decision might be overturned after the election.

National Security Advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski, who, like Brown, favored the equipment for Saudi Arabia, said privately recently that the Saudi request would be approved next year, with the implication that this would happen if Carter were re-elected.

Will Not Permit Israel's Isolation

Carter was also quoted as making a pledge on the U.S. stand in the United Nations.

"Whenever in the future the United Nations is misused or abused on Israeli-Arab issues with malicious, unfair and one-sided resolutions we will oppose them and in the Security Council we will veto them," he said. "I want to make it clear again that we will not permit any isolation of Israel in other United Nations organizations nor will we allow the UN to be used as a propaganda organ for the Palestine Liberation Organization."

Meanwhile, in Belgrade, the 21st General Conference of UNESCO adopted a resolution to assist the PLO and other "liberation movements."

Jewish Ed. Bureau Hosts Home Start Parents

On Sunday, Nov. 16 at 7:30 p.m. the Bureau of Jewish Education of Rhode Island will host a get-together at the Jewish Community Center for parents enrolled in the Home Start Program.

The program offers Jewish education for pre-schoolers and primary school aged children, and is sponsored by the American Association of Jewish Education.

The get-together will feature Hanukkah songs, how-to ideas on holiday crafts, games and stories, and a discussion of Hanukkah themes. Donna Perelman is chairman of the evening.

Miriam Hospital Receives Energy Audit Grant

The Miriam Hospital has been named recipient of a $16,000 matching grant from the Department of Energy under Title III of the National Energy Conservation Policy Act.

The grant funds allow for technical assistance in studying and evaluating all possible energy conservation measures for the hospital. This technical assistance audit being conducted at The Miriam by an East Providence firm which is looking into such energy conservation possibilities as solar power, heat recovery systems and weatherization.

Lee Larson, Assistant Executive Engineer

at The Miriam Hospital and writer of the grant proposal, explains that the completed audit report will define building characteristics in terms of energy expended, outline possible energy conservation measures.

The next step in the grant process, which began nearly a year ago with a preliminary energy audit, is applying for energy conservation measures grants, a process which may be repeated over the next several years. Future grants also would be based on matching grant funds, with The Miriam matching the funds allocated by the Department of Energy.

Almost $12 Million Pledged In UJA Mission To Israel

NEW YORK (JTA) — Campaign pledges of $11,787,250 for 1981 were received from participants on the Oct. 5-10 United Jewish Appeal President's Mission to Israel, according to audited results reported here last week.

This is a 37 percent increase over 1980 pledges by the same contributors. An additional $2,536,950 for Project Renewal was pledged at the mission's state dinner with Premier Menachem Begin in the Knesset.

Consisting of 422 men and women from American Jewish communities throughout the U.S., the $10,000 minimum gift mission was the largest major gifts leadership group ever brought to Israel by the UJA. It was led by UJA national vice chairman Joel Breslau of Washington, D.C.

Begin applauded the evening's expression of leadership support for ongoing humanitarian programs and for Project Renewal as clear and strong evidence of American Jewish solidarity with Israel's people.

Breslau and the mission's team of top-ranking national and regional officers said that the fundraising results continued an unbroken sequence of UJA national events which have resulted in increased campaign giving of 35-40 percent.

This indicates that the national goal is achievable, they stated. The UJA is seeking a 1981 goal of $635 million in the regular 1981 campaign, plus a minimum of $54 million for Project Renewal.

Have A Seat, Bring Money

NEW YORK — A "seat" on the New York Stock Exchange has cost as much as $515,000 — the all-time high set in 1968-69 — reports Leonard Sloane, financial news journalist, in his new book The Anatomy of the Floor. On the low side, Big Board membership cost $17,000 in 1942, Sloane said.

Japan Dedicates New Synagogue

TOKYO (JTA) — The Jewish community of Japan, consisting of about 110 families, recently dedicated its new communal center and synagogue here.

The inaugural festivities included, a ribbon-cutting ceremony presided over by Walter Citron, president of the community, the installation of Rabbi Jonathan Maltzman as spiritual leader and a dinner dance attended by the entire community and Japanese notables. The event received extensive coverage in the Japanese press.

The center occupies a three-story complex which contains the synagogue, a religious school for children ages 4 to 13, the largest Judaica collection in the Far East and social and athletic facilities.

It was financed by the sale of land purchased by the Jewish community 29 years ago, and occupies the portion of that land which was retained.

The synagogue is the second Jewish house of worship in Japan (a small synagogue exists in Kobe) and due to the heterogeneous nature of the Jewish community here, it will be neither Reform, Conservative nor Orthodox.

Maltzman is a graduate of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, the rabbinical training school of Conservative Judaism in the U.S.

About half the members of the community are American citizens, one-third are Israelis and the rest represent other nationalities. Most of them are businessmen engaged in foreign trade, banking, finance, transportation and insurance. There are also doctors, journalists, graduate students and musicians.

Medal Struck To Honor Israel Bond Organization

A commemorative medal has been struck in Israel to honor the 30th anniversary of the State of Israel Bonds organization.

Sidney and Yvonne Dressler, R.I. co-chairman, report that the medal honors the campaign which has resulted in sales of almost $5 billion in Israel bonds and other securities over three decades.

On one side the medal shows a power shovel flanked by a symbolic Star of David and an inscription in Hebrew and English from Jeremiah (31:3): "Again will I build Thee and Thou shalt be built . . ."

The abstract bas-relief of the reverse side outlines a menorah and says: "30 years — State of Israel Bonds." The medal was designed by Yakov Enyedi of Jerusalem.

German Students And Teachers To Learn About Jews, Judaism, Holocaust, Israel

CLEVELAND (JTA) — A Roman Catholic professor of Judaic studies at the University of Duisburg in West Germany, has disclosed details of a new education program to help German students and teachers overcome their ignorance of or distorted information about Jews, Judaism, the Holocaust and the State of Israel.

Prof. Michael Brocke, addressing a luncheon meeting of the National Executive Council of the American Jewish Committee, said the program calls for the publication of religious and secular textbooks aimed at children between the ages of six and 19 and to be used throughout the German school system.

He also reported that teams of scholars from the Duisburg Research Center have been carrying out a series of in-depth analyses of the way Jews, Judaism, the Holocaust and Israel are presented by German teachers.

The program is a joint project of the Center for Interdisciplinary Research on the History and Religion of Judaism at Duisburg University and the Inter-religious Affairs Department of the AJ Committee.

Brocke, a Hebrew-speaking, and Prof. Heinz Kremers, a Protestant scholar on evangelical theology and Biblical studies at the university, are codirectors of the project. Consultants are Zachariah Shuster of Paris, the AJ Committee's European expert on interreligious affairs, and Rabbi Marc Tannenbaum, national interreligious affairs director of the AJ Committee.

Basic Objective Of The Project

"The basic objective of this comprehensive project," Brocke said, "is to review all sources of information and knowledge which might perpetuate among German youth distorted views of Jews and Judaism. . . . The purpose of these studies is not only to point to and identify deficiencies and misrepresentations in existing textbooks, but to suggest new constructive premises and approaches in teachings concerning Jews which will help to eradicate prejudicial attitudes inherited from the past and instill a spirit of respect, tolerance and understanding."

Zionist Institute Expands

The Zionist Institute for Young Leadership, because of its successful first year in Boston, will be expanded to include Chicago, Hartford, Philadelphia and New York, Mike Ben-Avi, director of the institute's sponsor Dor Hemshech announced recently.

Ben-Avi said Dor Hemshech (the World Zionist Organization's Young Leadership) "is opening the Zionist Institute to up and coming young leaders from all Jewish organizations in these major cities so they may have the opportunity to obtain basic knowledge of modern Jewish history and Zionist ideology. It is the aim of these institutes of six to 15 sessions each to fill the gap that has occurred in American-Jewish life because of the lack of good Jewish education for so many of our youth."

Brocke added, "In the field of Catholic and Protestant teaching, we hope to bring about a fundamental revision in the portrayal of Judaism in Christian preaching and catechism."

Brocke referred to a study conducted by Prof. Hans Jochum, a linguistic analysis specialist and a member of the Duisburg research team, that revealed the nature of some of the problems found in German textbooks presently in use.

He discovered that the Holocaust is not a subject of special study in Catholic schools where knowledge of the subject is either taken for granted or relegated to brief references in the course of history lessons; that religious books generally take a defensive attitude with regard to the Holocaust and a number of them give the impression that the churches have, in comprehensive ways and with great success, helped persecuted Jews.

The problems of guilt or responsibility are either posed in the form of a question or are weakened by the listing of positive examples of Christians who aided Jews, the Jochum report said.

Elements In The New Teaching Materials

Brocke said the new teaching materials will incorporate in the principle that Judaism is the root of Christianity, that the Old Testament is and remains the primordial source of belief of the people of Israel and that teaching about Jews in history textbooks should be made an integral part of German history and represents an important element of European culture and history.

The first volume of the textbook studies is entitled "Jews, Judaism and Israel." It consists of seven major surveys of Catholic and Protestant textbooks used on various levels in public schools and also of basic books currently in use at theological faculties in German universities.

Subsequent volumes are "The Jews and the Death of Jesus;" "A Reader in Theology after the Holocaust;" and "Textbook Analysis of Secondary Schools," ages 15-19.

Puppet Show Planned At Temple Beth-El

The Sisterhood of Temple Beth-El will present The Mimsy Puppets in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" on Sunday, Nov. 9 in the Temple Meeting Hall.

The two performances will begin at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. and feature a trained seal, a trapeze performer (puppets of course) and a visit from Pinocchio.

The recommended age of the audience is 4 to 10. Admission is $2.00 and tickets will be sold at the door at 12:30 and 2:30 p.m.

Proceeds will benefit the Temple Youth Fund.

H.U.D. Employees Organize To Combat Anti-Semitism

WASHINGTON (JTA) — The Federal Times, a Washington weekly reporting developments affecting government personnel, says Jewish employees at the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) have organized to combat anti-Semitism within the agency.

In its current edition, the Federal Times said that the employees are "troubled by a perceived insensitivity of uppermanagement-federal employees" and "are organizing a Jewish caucus to protect their rights and push for more active enforcement of equal employment opportunity."

Interviewing HUD personnel about the article by Winston Wood, the Jewish Telegraphic Agency learned that a Jewish group is being formally organized both for professional and cultural purposes as well as to combat unfair treatment.

Several Cases Of Bias Presented To ADL. It was pointed out that several cases of discrimination against Jews have been presented to the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and one case has entered legal proceedings. One allegation was that time off for Jewish holidays has been refused in some instances although federal policy is to accommodate religious personnel.

In cultural pursuits, the Jewish group plan an exhibit at HUD in conjunction with the Jewish Book Month Nov. 2-Dec. 2 which is under the national auspices of the JWB Jewish Book Council and to organize Hebrew conversation and Jewish heritage classes. Of the approximately 4000 employees at HUD's main offices here, about 300, or less than 10 percent, are believed to be Jewish.

HUD officials told JTA that HUD Secretary Moon Landrieu is concerned about the discrimination allegations and is seeking to eliminate them. As Mayor of New Orleans, Landrieu developed a reputation for strong support for civil rights, the officials said. "His staff is working with the Jewish groups," a Landrieu aide told JTA.

"If there is discrimination he'll do what he can to eliminate it. Thus far, however, no list of grievances has been presented and "no formal request" to see Landrieu has been made, the aide said.

How to Advertise in a Recessionary Period.

In a recessionary period, advertising must pass the most critical test of all, the cash register. Here are some fine points to remember when planning your advertising.

1. Somebody is buying. If "Nobody's buying," is your battle cry, guess again. Somebody is buying. Even at 7% unemployment, 93% of the workable population is still employed. That 93% still must purchase goods and materials.
2. Know Your Customers. Not just by name and address, but by what they like to buy. Effective merchandising meets the needs and wants of your clientele.
3. Do know your customers name and address. It takes less than a minute to fill out a sales slip. That sales slip, plus the credit card slips are your tickets to activating your customer list throughout the year by using direct mail.

4. Track your sales by zip code. Tracking sales by zips shows you what areas prefer what merchandise, and it also provides you with a way of evaluating your newspaper purchases. Always seek to match circulation and sales.
5. Understand how consumers reprioritize their needs. In a recessionary period, psychological necessities become luxuries. Evaluate your stock. How much of it is psychological necessities? And who's continuing to purchase those products as opposed to who isn't?
6. Give a reason to buy from you. This is more important than you can know. 15 stores may carry the same item. Why should someone buy it from you as opposed to Ann & Hope?
7. Don't stop advertising. This bit of advice comes from the research department of McGraw-Hill. Their findings: companies that continued advertising during the recession gained substantial business from competition who stopped advertising.

8. Advertise smarter. Make every dollar count. Throw out traditional media usage patterns and experiment. For example, one company cut down the size of their weekly ad. To get more for their money they had the reduced ad broken into 4 smaller versions run on 4 separate pages. Result: multiple exposure within one issue increased recognition and did not hurt cash register sales.

9. Buy media that reaches people who can afford to buy. Certain zone editions of the Journal have more purchasing power than others. Some weeklies have more buying power than others. The check: circulation analysis by 5 digit zip code.

10. Make the Herald part of your buy. The Jewish Herald circulation falls into top income zip code areas. Our readership can afford to buy what you have. For more information call the Jewish Herald at 724-0200.

Today's hand is another in which not one Declarer found the winning line of play. I suppose the fact that going down was the normal result means that the line taken was the correct one. Yet a little more thought added to looking ahead should have helped some of the players make the hand. Before going on with this article, cover the East-West hands and see how you would play it after a Heart lead.

West was Dealer, North-South vulnerable with this bidding:

W	N	E	S
1H	2C	P	2NT
P	3NT	End

After West opened the bidding, North certainly had a reasonable overall. South should take the attitude that a vulnerable overcall at the two level shows a good hand as we have mentioned many times in this column. He has a sure Heart stopper and his Club King should solidify that long suit his partner has already shown. Most pairs ended in the No Trump game.

Check Your Mezuzah

by Libby Olar

Don't be surprised to find that the mezuzah on your doorstep is a fake! Albert Sokol, administrator of the Brooklyn based "Vaad Mishmeres Stam" says, "Studies over the past four years have shown that almost 90 percent of all mezuzos owned by American Jews are defective and do not conform to Jewish law and are not fit for use."

In order to be valid, a mezuzah must meet specific requirements established by halacha (Jewish law).

To write one, the ordained scribe uses an esoteric ink manufactured according to an ancient formula; an archaically prescribed quill hand-carved from a bird's feather; and special parchment processed from the hide of a kosher animal. The text must be on a single piece of parchment, in one column of 22 lines.

According to Jewish law, mezuzos must be examined for defects twice every seven years. A group of concerned Jews fast becoming known as the "Ralph Naders" of the mezuzah market organized the Vaad Mishmeres Stam in 1975 and since then have changed what was once considered an irreversible trend.

They have established two yeshivos for professional scribes and examiners, the only institutions of their kind in the world and hope to establish permanent examination centers throughout the U.S.

Every West, anxious to get his long suit started, led the Heart Jack with each Declarer winning with Dummy's Queen. So far, so good. I watched as each did what certainly seemed automatic and normal, they started on the Clubs by leading their own King and then another to Dummy. West, of course, showed out and before the suit could be set up East had to win his Queen.

Obviously a Heart was returned and sooner or later, whether the second Heart was ducked or not, another Heart set the suit up for West. When West failed to follow to the second Club, to maintain communication, some Declarers ducked but it made no difference. Before a ninth trick could be scored a Diamond had to be set up and as the opening bid had shown, West had that Ace and was able to set the hand with his remaining good Hearts.

This sequence of events seemed quite normal to all who had participated in the hand, both as Declarer or on Defense and for even some of the top experts I suppose it is. Yet if a slightly different order of plays is used, the hand will always be made.

We can see that if the Clubs break evenly there is no problem at all, we should provide for a poor break. With West showing a long suit by his opening bid plus the fact that if he is the one with three Clubs plus the Diamond Ace the hand can never be made, we plan on what to do if East has the extra Club. We must try to remove West's entry to shut out the Heart suit. Furthermore, if we can only cash five Clubs, means we must get a Diamond trick to add to nine.

With that in mind before doing the obvious and working on Clubs, play a Diamond first. West, of course, wins and returns a Heart. This time we must duck, it costs no trick but gets East out of Hearts. After winning the Heart Ace, now go after Clubs.

Actually, playing the hand as shown, we should hope the Clubs do break as they do for now we are rewarded. East wins the third Club but can't get to his partner. Any return is won by Declarer, and now there is no problem cashing the nine tricks to make the game.

Moral: Hope for the best but prepare for the worst whenever doing so costs nothing.

B'nai B'rith Lodge To Discuss Soviet Jewry

B'nai B'rith Hope Lodge will hold a dinner meeting on Nov. 18 at 7:30 p.m. at Valle's Restaurant in Warwick. The topic will be "Soviet Jewry: A Question of Human Rights."

The featured speaker for the evening will be Mira Eides, a Russian immigrant and the Coordinator of Resettlement Affairs to Jewish Family and Children Services of Rhode Island. She also serves as the interpreter for new Russian families in the state.

Ms. Eides will discuss the recent history of Soviet Jews, their current status, future prospects, and the experiences of Jews re-settled in this country.

A newly arrived Russian family will discuss and answer questions about their personal experiences emigrating from Russia and adjusting to life in this country.

The dinner meeting is open to the public. For reservations, call Steven Demby at 943-2902 by Thursday, Nov. 13. The cost is $7.95 per person.

Atlanta Jewish Community Aids Search For Killer Of Black Children

ATLANTA (JTA) — The Jewish community here has rallied to aid in the search for four missing Black children and in efforts to find the person or persons responsible for the deaths of 10 others, The Southern Israelite reported.

A number of Jewish individuals have already been involved in these efforts. Max Rittenbaum, president of the Atlanta Jewish Federation, has called for a community-wide commitment.

"Our compassion and sympathy go out to the families of these children and we are determined to help get to the bottom of this tragedy," Rittenbaum said.

The Federation's Community Relations Committee (CRC) has contacted youth groups of Atlanta's synagogues and temples and various other Jewish youth organizations. Larry Bogart, the CRC's chairman, said "They have all expressed a desire and willingness to cooperate in aiding the families and children to prevent any further crimes and in searching for any leads to solve these mysterious disappearances."

Several Jewish businessmen have volunteered to provide food and drinks for searchers over the next few weeks. Vacant lots and other out-of-the-way places are being investigated.

Rabbi Alvin Sugarman, of the Atlanta Temple, called on his congregants "to participate in the reward fund and to talk to their friends in the Black community to let them know that they did care and we are one community." The Southern Israelite reported.

Jewish Tourism From US Waning

JERUSALEM (JTA) — There is a definite and downward trend in Jewish figures from the United States to Israel over the past two years, a senior Israeli official revealed last week.

Amnon Altman, head of the Government's Tourism Authority, put it bluntly. "There is a definite downward trend in Jewish figures from the United States to Israel over the past two years, a senior Israeli official revealed last week."

Nor were the major Jewish organizations holding a sufficient or satisfactory number of their assemblies and conferences in Israel, Altman asserted. He said there were some exceptions, but overall he could say that these organizations seemed not to attach enough "consciousness" to the need to encourage American Jews to visit Israel.

In addition, Altman said, Jewish tourism from the U.S. to Israel suffered from the general current decline in Israel's public standing in the U.S. "I am not breaking any new ground by pointing this out," Altman told reporters. "It has been widely reported in our own press." Israel's political image problems were directly linked to the tourism statistics, he said.

A third important factor was economic, Altman observed. American tourism to Europe (general tourism) was down because of general economic reasons — and Jewish tourism to Israel was bound to be affected in the same way.

The statistics show that Jewish tourism accounts for 55 percent of the total volume of American tourism to Israel. But the rate of decline these past two years has been marked and steady, Altman said. Israel for its part would instruct its tourism officials in the U.S. to redouble their efforts to "sell" Israel packages, he said.

EEC Report Causes Embarrassment

JERUSALEM (JTA) — A news agency report from Brussels that the European Economic Community (EEC) does not plan to open an office in Israel caused embarrassment and consternation in official quarters here.

An explicit agreement was reached between Israel and the EEC Commission last summer to the effect that such an office would be opened. The Foreign Ministry here and the Israel Embassy in Brussels said they had received no official word of a reconsideration.

The Brussels report followed an announcement here by Cabinet Secretary Arye Naor that the EEC would have an office in Tel Aviv and a "branch office" in Jerusalem.

Naor said the EEC had agreed to Israel's request that it be represented in Jerusalem although it refused to have its main office in the city. Naor made it clear that he spoke on the basis of Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir's report to the Cabinet Sunday.

EEC ambassadors in Tel Aviv said they knew of no such agreement on the part of the EEC to have a branch office in Jerusalem. Israeli sources explained privately that an understanding to that effect had been reached but not signed, with senior EEC officials. They acknowledged that this was before the Jerusalem Law was passed by the Knesset and the subsequent exodus of all the foreign embassies stationed in Jerusalem.

Diplomatic observers felt that the Brussels report, which quoted an EEC spokesman, reflected the European community's pique at the Israeli announcement of the understanding. It is not clear now when the EEC office will be opened or whether it will in fact have a branch in Jerusalem. Israeli officials are seeking clarifications, as were the EEC ambassadors in Tel Aviv.

Pro-Life advocates have been attacked through the mail for increasing the population of Catholics and Jews. People, who identify themselves as Nazis have called some prominent anti-draft persons with death threats for being "Jew lovers."

The FBI has traced many of the calls to a pay phone in East Providence and cards have been purchased in a greeting card shop in Pawtucket.

According to Providence police the phone calls allegedly are from a group of "creeps" who march around Squantum Woods on weekends wearing Nazi helmets.

Temple Sinai Holds Annual Bazaar

Temple Sinai of Cranston will hold its annual bazaar, called "The Holiday Marketplace," on Sunday Nov. 16 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the temple social hall at 30 Hagen Ave., Oaklawn Terrace.

Featured booths include new merchandise, holiday items, jewelry, white elephants, plants, baked goods, handicrafts and children's games.

The snack bar will be open all day and a general auction will be held at 4:30 p.m.

Hebrew Day School Participates In Hospital Program

The Providence Hebrew Day School, under the direction of Rabbi Sholom Strajcher and Rabbi Kofi Saltman, will participate in a unique program under the auspices of the Rhode Island Hospital Guild.

Entitled "I met Potter," the program is designed to familiarize first graders to a hospital environment in the familiar surroundings of the classroom. The presentation will incorporate puppetry, a slide-tape show, a "show and tell" demonstration with actual hospital equipment and a discussion period.

The program is offered as a public service with the support of Rhode Island Hospital's Pediatric Department, Potter Building Nursing staff, and the Children's Activities Department.

The starting date of the program has not yet been announced.

Engineer Changes Career Design To Be Rabbi

NEW YORK — At age 58, Abraham L. Raich, will enter the Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary, an affiliate of Yeshiva University in New York, to begin studying for the rabbinate.

Raich was a statistical engineer for 30 years at the CF&I Steel Corporation in Pueblo, Colorado. He devoted his spare time to serving as a lay leader and cantor at Pueblo's Temple Emanuel. When the rabbi at the temple left for appointments in larger cities, Raich found himself leading the congregation.

"While I found most of my time at CF&I enjoyable, my real love was serving the Jewish community," said Raich.

He and his wife, Adelyn, are living in the heart of the city in an apartment on Washington Heights while he is attending the seminary. Raich hopes to serve in a rural area when he is ordained.

"We climbed Mount Sinai when we were in Israel in 1977, climbed mountains in Colorado, and now we're up and down the rocks of Manhattan," he said. "It's different, but not as different as you might think," Raich added.

After four years of seminary study, Raich will be 62 years old. Today congregations are searching for "dynamic young rabbis," he said. "I guess I'll have to find a congregation that will accept a dynamic old rabbi."

Honorary Team

AUSTIN, Tex. — At the U.S. Olympic Diving Trials here 52 athletes competed. Of 13 who earned berths on the honorary U.S. team, three were medal winners at previous Olympics.

Jennifer Chandler and Greg Louganis, winners of a gold and silver medal, respectively, at the 1976 Olympics in Montreal, are members of their second Olympic team. Cynthia Potter, a bronze medalist in 1976, was named an Olympian for the third time.

Commerce Department To Release Names Of U.S. Firms In Arab Boycott Of Israel

WASHINGTON (JTA) — The U.S. Department of Commerce has agreed to release an estimated quarter million pages of secret documents disclosing the names of the American companies that participated in the Arab boycott of Israel during an 11-year period that included two Arab-Israeli wars.

Secretary of Commerce Philip Klutznick, who made the announcement, said the Department's decision settled a Freedom of Information Act suit filed on March 3, 1977 by Mark Green and the Corporate Accountability Research Group.

Klutznick called the settlement "a constructive resolution of a complex public policy issue. It reconciles the Administration's longstanding commitment to openness in government with the obligation of government to protect confidential business information."

Green, who heads the Research Group and who is presently running for Congress from New York City on the Democratic Party ticket against the Republican incumbent Rep. Bill Green, filed the suit against the Commerce Department to force the disclosure of the documents after Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps refused to release them voluntarily.

After an unsuccessful appeal by the Department to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, the reports were ordered disclosed by the District Court, and the government will now comply with that order.

The documents cover the years from 1965 until late 1977 and involve nearly 63,000 boycott cases, Mark Green said in New York. They contain familiar corporate names like Caterpillar, Mack Truck, General Tire and Upjohn, as well as the names of several thousand other American companies that agreed to Arab demands not to do business with Israel in order to trade with Arab states. Green said the documents would also show the types of goods traded and their value.

"These documents, never previously published, reveal the whole history of American corporate involvement in the boycott during an extremely dangerous period in Mideast history. We now will be able to learn which companies aided and abetted the Arab war machine at a time of maximum danger for Israel, a period that includes the 1967 and 1973 wars," Green said.

"Participation in the boycott certainly was contrary to the goals and national security interests of American policy in the Middle East. While three successive Administrations were publicly committed to the defense and security of the State of Israel, these companies aided the enemies of Israel," Green said.

Jewish Leaders On Alert For Letter Bomb Attacks

LONDON (JTA) — Jewish communal leaders have gone on alert following the receipt last week by Labor MP Frank Allaun of a letter bomb. It is feared that this could spark a third wave of such attacks in the past four years.

Although the letter did not explode, and although Allaun is known more for his extreme leftwing political opinions than for his connections with Jewish causes, the incident is regarded as symptomatic of a new surge in neo-Nazi anti-Semitism in Britain.

Much of this activity is fragmented and uncoordinated. The National Front, the leading neo-Nazi group, split into five segments last year and there are probably another five neo-Nazi groups.

This means that as a force at the ballot box, the neo-Nazis are further from success than they ever were. Nevertheless, what they lack in cohesion the British Nazis more than make up in virulence.

The Neo-Nazi Groups

One of the most sinister group calls itself Column 88. It celebrates Hitler's birthdays, holds para-military summer camps, invites overseas Nazis to its celebrations and repays them by visiting Nazi functions abroad.

Little is known of its leadership or structure but it is believed to recruit the most fanatical and ruthless members of other Nazi groups. Thought to have some arms, it is particularly keen in recruiting people of military background and once tried to form cells in Britain's territorial army.

Another virulent group is the British Movement, the successor of the British National Socialist movement which was active 20 years ago. Now as large as any of the factions of the fragmented National Front, it is extremely anti-semitic, distributes most of the anti-semitic hate propaganda in Britain, including copies of the Protocols of the Elders of Zion, and is believed to be partly financed by an Arab state, probably Libya.

The National Front, which fielded more than 300 candidates in the last general election, broke up because of personal squabbles. The various break-away groups are now trying to unite, together with the British Movement, which scorns the National Front's attempts to deny that it was anti-semitic.

Bureau of Jewish Ed. Honors Kroll

The Bureau of Jewish Education will host a Melaveh Malkah on Saturday, Nov. 8 at 8 p.m. in the Jewish Community Center, 401 Elm Grove Ave., Providence.

The Bureau will honor Sanford I. Kroll for his outstanding contribution to Jewish education in this community.

Professor Paul Bookbinder of the University of Massachusetts' History department, will address the bureau on the topic, "Old Myths and New Realities: Anti-Semitism in the United States Today."

Cantor Ivan Perlman of Temple Emanuel will chant the Havdalah service. Refreshments will be served.

The Arab-American trade included machinery parts, spare parts and accessories for tractors and other vehicles, tires, oil drilling equipment and technical literature and date, Green said.

Klutznick Praises Diligent Efforts

Klutznick said the settlement was "the result of diligent efforts by Commerce Department and Justice Department staffs, U.S. firms who responded and supplied additional data as needed, and Mark Green and his attorneys, who pressed the issue and joined in a settlement that served the interests of all concerned."

Under the terms of the Arab boycott, the participating companies were required to sign a statement that "the goods are not of Israeli origin nor contain any Israeli materials." In addition, the companies had to state that their goods had not passed through Israeli ports nor been transported on Israeli carriers.

Since 1965, American companies which were requested by Arab clients to participate in the boycott were required to report this fact to the Department of Commerce. The information was considered confidential, and was not available for public inspection. Even the names of the participating firms were kept secret. American participation in the boycott was not made illegal until 1979, Green said.

Jewish Jocks Shine In Sports

by Bernie Kristall

When one scans the American sports scene today, we are hardpressed to find many Jewish athletes involved. However, those who do participate have registered some outstanding achievements.

Steve Stone, current ace of the Baltimore Orioles pitching staff, is a sure selection for the 1980 Cy Young Award, given to the best pitcher in each league. We haven't been able to produce another Sandy Koufax or Hank Aaron since those illustrious players are long up their spikes, but, Kenny Holtzman, former Cubs, Oakland A's and Yankee pitcher, has managed two no-hitters and participated in three World Series during his career.

Art Shamsky played on the N.Y. Mets, World Series champs in 1969. Al Rosen, Cleveland Indians third baseman, garnered two Most Valuable Player awards. Atlanta Ron Blumberg had a short career with the White Sox and Yankees before injuries forced his retirement.

Randy Grossman, tight end for the Philadelphia Eagles, Super Bowl champs, has proven to be a steady and talented footballer.

Throughout the years, such luminaries as Sammy Friedman (U. of Michigan), Marshall Goldberg (U. of Pittsburgh), Ron Mix (U.C.L.A.) and Sid Luckman (Columbia U.) are all named to All-American teams. They added to their laurels with distinguished careers in professional circles.

Leaders in the field of sports broadcasting and telecasting include Howard Cosell, Mel Allen, Marty Glickman, Steve and Marvin Albert, Dick Schaap and Bill Stern.

Sonny Werblin, who created the magnificent sports complex in the Meadowlands, N.J., which is the home of the N.Y. Giants football team, now heads the Madison Square Garden Corporation.

During the era of Mike Jacobs, famous boxing promoter, such champions as Benny Leonard, Barney Ross and "Slapsie" Maxie Rosenbloom, fought their way out of the big city ghettos to gain recognition in the sport.

Steve Mix, although overshadowed by the superlative playing of "Dr. J," nevertheless makes a contribution to the N.B.A.'s Philadelphia '76ers. Former professional players who are now in the coaching ranks include "Red" Holtzman, "Red" Auerbach and Larry Brown at U.C.L.A.

Tennis has produced Dick Savitt, Wimbledon champ in 1951, Vic Seixas and currently Harold Solomon and Shlomo Glickstein who is from Israel. Handball champions have numbered Jimmy Jacobs, Vic Hershkowitz, Marty Decatur, Paul Haber and Kenny Schneider among its title holders.

The crowning achievement in the entire annals of sports was accomplished by Mark Spitz in the 1972 Olympics held in Munich. His winning of seven gold medals in swimming events will probably never be duplicated.

Thus we see that Jews have made an outstanding contribution to the American sports scene. Hopefully, there will be many more Jewish athletes occupying their deserved places in the future.

Growing Plants Out Of Thin Air

by Yitzhak Oked
Jerusalem Post

TEL AVIV — Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon has decided to subsidize research on a revolutionary Israeli system of growing plants out of thin air. The system's developers plan a one-dunam pilot project which should be commercially viable since the system is extremely compact and makes plants mature faster.

The new system is being developed by the Adi company. Called Adi-aeroculture, the system calls for growing plants detached from any soil or hydroponic medium. The roots are fed with oxygen, moisture and nutrients by means of a unique fogging system.

The system, developed by a team led by Dr. Yitzhak Nir, enables the plant to receive a superior mix of oxygen and water compared to conventional growth systems in soil or water. The supply of "fog-cocktail" is monitored by an electronic control system.

Aeroculture has been successfully tested with various cuttings and plants including citrus, avocado, carnations, chrysanthemums, cucumbers and a wide variety of foliage pot plants.

According to the developers the system gives higher yields; brings about huge economies in both fertilizers and water, since the nutrient solution is recycled; saves space since modular benches holding the plants can be stacked one above the other; and saves money for the farmer since daily maintenance is controlled by a simple automated system.

The developers claim that in areas where soil and water are in short supply Aeroculture provides an economical answer to the problem of growing vegetables and other crops. Growing saplings with soil-less rooting by the Aeroculture system is suitable for exports, the developers say, because it makes it easy to meet international hygienic requirements. Freight is also much cheaper because no soil has to be transported with the plant.
