Begin May Resign, Call Early Elections After Another Narrow Confidence Vote

JERUSALEM (JTA) — Premier Menachem Begin would be inclined to resign and call early elections if his government is once again reduced to a slender majority of three, as happened when it barely survived a no-confidence vote in Knesset last week.

This was made clear by a source close to Begin following the 57-54 vote on motions of no-confidence in the government's economic policies.

The source said Begin would have resigned had the vote been tied, even though there would have been no strict necessity for him to do so. Similarly, he would consider his position untenable if a future no-confidence motion results once again in his government being saved by the tiny breakaway factions, as was the case yesterday.

The government was saved, in effect, by the last minute decision of two members of the three-member Ahva faction, a split off from the Democratic Movement for Change, not to vote against the government, and a similar move by independent Knesseter Shmuel Flatto-Sharon.

Among those voting with the opposition were former Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and former Defense Minister Ezer Weizman.

The tense vote came after a seven-hour debate which was climaxed by a speech by Weizman who urged early elections "at this time of emergency." The no-confidence motion by the Labor Party, Rakah and Tehiya followed an announcement last week that Israel's inflation had jumped 11 percent in October to an annual rate of 138 percent, the highest in the world.

There were recriminations after the vote in coalition ranks after the vote against the failure of the coalition whips in recent weeks to woo the Ahva members. Coalition sources said today there would be an assiduous effort to "talk to" Ahva and make certain it voted with the government in any future test of strength.

The Ahva faction comprises three distinct personalities: insurance millionaire Shlomo Eliahu, who voted against the government; Shawfiq Assad, who at the very last minute mysteriously absented himself from the Knesset chamber; and Akiva Nof, who decided at the last minute to abstain.

Eliahu, Ahva's chairman, said today he had no explanation for Assad's behavior, after the three faction members decided unanimously to vote against the government.

If Weizman is ousted from Herut as a result of his vote against the government, one more Knesset vote will have to be counted against the coalition whenever the chance arises to force its resignation and trigger early elections.

The Herut Secretariat, meeting in Tel Aviv today, decided to give Weizman a hearing before taking action. He will appear before it next week. Sentiment at the meeting was overwhelmingly against Weiz-man and it appears that his days are numbered as a member of Herut.

Labor Party Seeking to Topple Begin

Meanwhile, the Labor Party opposition is preparing to topple Begin's government. Shimon Peres, the party's leader, said today that it is urgent to bring Israel "back under proper economic management."

He stated that "we intend to introduce a planned economy, an economy where work is as profitable as speculation." Peres added that, for his own part, he will do everything in his power to build on yesterday's relative success by harassing the government with no-confidence motions at every opportunity.

Weizman Ousted By Party Because Of No-Confidence Vote

TEL AVIV — Former Defense Minister Ezer Weizman was ousted from Prime Minister Menachem Begin's ruling party this week because of his no-confidence vote against the government last week.

Weizman's expulsion leaves the government without a parliamentary majority.

Once considered Begin's likely successor, Weizman was expelled by a vote of 12 to 1, with 2 abstentions, by the party secretariat.

The government survived last week's no-confidence motion, called over Begin's economic policies, by a narrow margin, in a 57 to 54 vote.

The Likud coalition of religious parties and the Democratic Movement officially controls only 60 seats now, half of the 120 in Parliament. Included in the coalition is Abraham Melamed of the National Religious Party, who said he would not vote in confidence tests because he believes the government should be replaced.

Moshe Shahal, the Labor opposition whip, has said he plans to introduce a bill for the early dissolution of Parliament and holding of elections, now scheduled for November 1981.

Likud leaders are hoping to save the coalition by regaining support from small groups and individuals who left the coalition for various reasons. Though critical of the administration, these members would not want early elections because they are not likely to be re-elected.

Begin has asked Cabinet members to be available for votes on short notice because of the precarious situation in Parliament.

Weizman explained his position to the secretariat for one and a half hours but did not remain to hear discussion of his case.

Weizman has antagonized colleagues in the Likud coalition by his sharp criticism of Begin in the past, and most recently by suggesting a new party be formed with Moshe Dayan as its head.

Dayan resigned from Begin's government because of differences over the peace process. He said he was not interested in running for office at this time.

Weizman also said former Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin might join the new party, but Rabin said he would remain in the Labor Party.

New Congress Worries Israel Supporters; Senate Allies Lost

WASHINGTON — Supporters of Israel are deeply concerned about the changes in the Senate following the election defeat of many senior Senate allies.

Some pro-Israeli activists say there is no cause for alarm because support of Israel has historically been bipartisan and nonideological.

But other activists are worried that the changes will adversely affect military and economic support for Israel in the Senate, especially because of impending changes on key Senate committees. The apprehension focuses on two key Senate panels.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, traditionally a strong supporter of Israel, will now be headed by Senator Charles H. Percy, an Illinois Republican seen by many Israel supporters as less strongly pro-Israel than the current chairman, Senator Frank Church of Idaho.

In addition to Church, Senator Jacob K. Javits, the committee's ranking Republican, and Senator Richard Stone, a Florida Democrat who heads the panel's Middle East subcommittee, were defeated in the election. Stone and Javits are Jewish.

Apprehension About Hatfield

Some pro-Israel activists are particularly concerned about the new chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, Senator Mark O. Hatfield, Republican of Oregon, who has previously attempted to cut foreign and military aid to Israel.

Finally, Israel's supporters are worried about the possible loss from the Senate ranks of Senator Henry M. Jackson, Democrat of Washington, one of Israel's staunchest advocates, who is reportedly being considered for a possible cabinet post in the Reagan administration.

Long-Term Problems

Among the long-term problems faced by the lobbyists is that their efforts have been concentrated in the past on Democrats, the party that controlled both House and Senate for more than 20 years.

The American Israel Public Affairs Committee recently appointed Thomas A. Dine, a liberal Democrat, as its executive director.

The committee plans to hire lawyers and lobbyists with close ties to Republicans, and supporters of Israel are closely monitoring prospective appointments to key committees.

POSTMASTER GENERAL William F. Bolger visited Senator Claiborne Pell's (D-R.I.) office in the United States Capitol last week to show him the design of a Touro Synagogue commemorative stamp to be issued next year.

Pell, who described his role as an intermediary between the United States Postal Service and Touro Synagogue, has been working for more than a decade to secure approval of the first class stamp to commemorate Touro's contribution to American history.

Touro Synagogue has been designated as a National Historic Site and has stood as a symbol of the nation's commitment to religious freedom for more than 200 years.

The exact design of the stamp will be publicly displayed at a formal gathering Dec. 10 in Constitution Hall, Washington, D.C. The gathering will be sponsored jointly by the Daughters of the American Revolution and the United States Postal Service.

Foreign Aid For Israel Moves Ahead

WASHINGTON (JTA) — The foreign aid authorization bill for fiscal 1981, which contains $1.4 billion in foreign military sales credits for Israel and an additional $785 million in economic support funds, has been approved by the House-Senate conference committee.

The bill now has to be approved by both houses of Congress and is expected to be taken up there early next month.

The decision to try to complete action on the foreign aid bill, which seemed to be in limbo earlier this month following the sweeping election victory by Ronald Reagan, was based in part by the concern that the aid for Israel could not be added to a Congressional resolution to continue foreign aid funding at the previous year's level of about $1 billion. The House-Senate conference took only one day to approve the bill.

In addition to aid for Israel, the bill also recommended $550 million in military sales credits for Egypt and $750 million in support funds. In addition, Egypt would receive $274 million under the Public Law 480 Food Program.

The only other Middle East country slated to receive a significant amount of aid is Jordan which would get $100 million evenly divided between economic support funds and military sales credits.

Soviet Jews In Israel Protest Brailovsky's Arrest

NEW YORK (JTA) — Five former editors of the underground Soviet Journal, "Jews in the USSR," who now live in Israel, have issued a statement protesting the arrest of the current editor, Viktor Brailovsky, for "defaming the Soviet State and public order." It was announced here by the National Conference on Soviet Jewry.

Brailovsky was arrested Nov. 13 after leading a protest of Soviet Jews against the government's refusal to grant them exit visas. The protest was held in conjunction with the opening in Madrid of the conference reviewing the Helsinki agreements. If officially charged, he could face up to three years of confinement in a labor camp.

The former editors, Mark Azbel, Aleksandr Voronel, Vladimir Lazaris, Raphael Nudelman and Emma Sotnikova, stressed that the magazine "was founded as an organ of self-expression of the two-million strong Jewish minority in the Soviet Union and because of its very nature it could not have, and did not, contain any material of political character."

Baptist Leader Requests Meeting With ADL National Director

NEW YORK — The Rev. Bailey Smith, who caused an uproar with his remark that God does not hear the prayers of Jews, has asked for a meeting with Nathan Perlmutter, national director of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, in order to achieve "better understanding with you and your people."

In a letter to Perlmutter, Rev. Smith said, "I deeply regret any hurt that may have come by remarks credited to me." The letter,

Reform Judaism Leader Calls For Coalition Against Moral Majority

SAN FRANCISCO — The leader of Reform Judaism in the United States last week called on American Jews to join with moderate Christians and black groups in forming "coalitions of decency against the chilling power of the radical right."

Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, attacked the Moral Majority, the political activist group headed by Rev. Jerry Falwell, and urged Jews to form alliances to stem the influence of fundamentalism.

Schindler's remarks were made in an address to the board of directors of the Reform synagogue movement.

Schindler charged it was "no coincidence that the rise of right-wing Christian fundamentalism has been accompanied by the most serious outbreak of anti-Semitism in America since the end of World War II."

He referred to the call for a "Christian Bill of Rights" and the remark by the president of the Southern Baptist Convention, Rev. Bailey Smith, that "God Almighty does not hear the prayer of a Jew."

"I do not accuse Jerry Falwell and Bailey Smith of deliberately inciting anti-Semitism," Schindler said. "But I do say that their preachments have an inevitable effect. Note if you will that Smith's first statement concerning the non-acceptability of Jewish prayer was quickly followed by his more recent pronouncement that Jews have 'funny-looking noses.' The earlier comment may have been classic Christian doctrine. But how shall we label the latter? That's not fundamentalism. That's plain, old-fashioned anti-Semitism — Julius Streicher with an Oklahoma twang."

Schindler proposed a broad attempt to counter the influence of fundamentalism. "In our search for allies in building coalitions of decency against the chilling power of the radical right, the Jewish community cannot seek 100 percent ideological purity."

Many Jews, Schindler said, differ with the National Council of Churches on aspects of Middle East policy and with Roman Catholic bishops on such issues as abortion and birth control, but these differences should not interfere with the formation of a coalition.

"The ground for cooperation and alliances is fertile — but there is not time to waste," Schindler said.

The rabbi also cautioned Jews against assuming that support among fundamentalists for Israel was based on respect for Jews. "They believe Jesus cannot return for the Second Coming until the Jews are regrouped in their biblical homeland and then converted to Christianity," Schindler said. "They believe further that even devout Jews are not welcome in Heaven."

Tel Aviv U. Prof Discovers What Romans Did In Israel

by Elissa Allerhand

Romans did not only do as Romans do in Rome, it appears from an archaeological study at Tel Aviv University, but took their Roman customs and life style with them even in the Israelite Negev Desert.

Prof. Mordechai Gichon, head of the archaeology division of the classical studies department of Tel Aviv University, and Dr. Hanan Lerna, archaeological osteologist, examining archaeological finds of Roman and of Jewish Negev settlements, revealed a markedly different life style of each.

Focusing on the study of animal bones, the archaeologists were able to illuminate not only eating habits but also patterns of life style, and even how free time was wiled away in the ancient desert.

The Romans apparently maintained a high and relatively comfortable life style. For entertainment, cock-fighting appears to have been the Roman custom, even in the Negev.

Archaeologists discovered rooster bones with sharp points on their feet, and which were bred for fighting unlike domestic chickens which have no such sharp bones. The leg bone on these cocks was imprinted with a round groove where a tight ring around the leg must have bound the trained roosters. Wooden cages found at the same site were probably used to hold the fighting cocks.

At the Roman fortress, near Ein Bokek, fish bones of various types were found from the Bay of Eilat, from the Mediterranean Sea and from sweet water ponds. Pork was also a source of food for the Romans.

Clearly the Romans as far away as they were, were accustomed to regular deliveries of much more than the bare necessities, and, it is also reasonable to conclude that the roads were safe and passable and that there was a good measure of order in transport within ancient Israel.

The Jewish life style in the nearby Ein Bokek settlement of the Herodian period was quite different. Animal bones found there were, not surprisingly, of kosher animals. Their main source of meat was apparently lamb or goat. In lesser numbers, cow bones were found. These were probably used to provide milk and not meat.

The Tel Aviv University archaeologists are now studying the customs of "Shechita," (ritual slaughter of animals for food). It appears likely that there were probably a few large central bases where the animals were killed and from there distributed to Jewish settlements.

Conservative Women's Leader Stresses Community Values

KIAMESHA LAKE, N.Y. (JTA) — As she accepted the presidency for a second two-year term, Mrs. Goldie Kweiler charged the 2,000 delegates at the national convention of the Women's League for Conservative Judaism last night with the task of "re-channeling our values and priorities and changing them from self-satisfied 'me-ism' to community 'we-ism.'"

Mrs. Kweiler of Kew Garden Hills, N.Y. heads the largest women's synagogue organization in the world, with 210,000 members in 810 Conservative sisterhoods in North America and women's groups in Latin America and Israel.

"We are also charged with the task of turning the tide of family fragmentation, creating in its place a family restoration," she said. "In the words of the late Dr. Solomon Schechter, Chancellor of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, 'leaders become influential among their contemporaries only by teaching and living an exemplary life.' We must become a Judaically knowledgeable laity, rather than Jews whose ties are only cultural and social."

Speaking of problems within Jewish families, Mrs. Kweiler, at an earlier session suggested a return to "strong family life, the high standards of family and personal morality which have been our strength and support, and have helped us survive."

She also remarked that "particularly in an era of feminism, we must make ourselves role models, by our actions demonstrating our conviction that the Jewish tradition, which has always had a strong family life, has to be our top priority."

Referring to the role of Conservative Judaism in Israel, Mrs. Kweiler said that "the steady growth in the number of our congregations in Israel, despite the roadblocks set up by the chief rabbinate, is heartening." In the past two years, ties between Women's League and women in Israel congregations have led to formal organization of a Conservative women's group, Neshama, in Israel.

Resolutions Adopted By Conclave

Resolutions were adopted alerting members to anti-Semitism and speak out against manifestations of all injustice and bigotry. The delegates approved another resolution which urged on-going communications with leaders of Black and Hispanic minority groups.

The delegates urged the United States government "to give high priority to seeking out and prosecuting Nazi war criminals residing in the United States." The delegates also urged the United States government to recognize united Jerusalem as the capital of Israel and urged the Israel government to recognize the validity of Conservative Judaism.

Could President Navon Be Upcoming Prime Minister?

by Carl Alpert

HAIFA — Now that the balloting in the U.S. is over, Israelis can concentrate on their own forthcoming elections, and the fever is already mounting. There is still much that must crystallize but certain scenarios may already be sketched.

If the Knesset votes lack of confidence in the present government, the elections will be held in the spring. This will be a classical confrontation between Likud and Labor in which the two groups will offer the following platforms:

Likud will ask for the voters' support because it brought peace with Egypt, maintains national security and struggles to keep a strong foothold in the West Bank for the sake of that security. It will explain the nation's economic problems in terms of world conditions, in large part the price of oil.

Labor will contend that the Camp David agreements signed away too much, and we still have no agreement on the West Bank. Likud policies have caused economic catastrophe, and the country needs a new deal, with more attention to human needs. The usual 15 or 20 smaller parties will yap around on the fringes and between them pick up enough votes to fragment the Knesset and make a national coalition necessary.

But if the Begin government lasts out the winter and spring, then a whole new scenario is possible. The elections will take place in the fall, and by then there would be sufficient time for one or more new parties to emerge from the wreckage and disillusionment of others.

Despite the political failure of the Yadin-led Democratic Movement there is still a vast electoral yearning for a new party, free from the dogmas and taints of the old, and offering a middle course program between the two extremes. If they could find common ground solid enough for them to stand on together, such a party would be led by Moshe Dayan, Yigal Yadin, Ezer Weizmann and other politicians not as well known abroad. Some of the smaller parties would be prepared to merge into it. Others would join as opportunists, hoping to get on a successful bandwagon.

The trouble is that such a party, like the ill-fated Democratic Movement, would be a coalition to begin with, and the cracks would begin to show whenever the party was faced with stress based on issues or personalities.

There is one other possibility, and everybody in Israel knows it. Everybody agrees it could succeed. It is simple and logical and popular, but it flies in the face of traditional politics, and so the party bosses won't agree.

This scenario calls for Yitzhak Navon to resign from the presidency now, a year in advance of the elections, so that he could be a candidate for prime minister after a proper cooling-off period from his present post. The Labor Party would recognize his potential, both Peres and Rabin would shelve their ambitions and their feud and step aside in favor of Navon. The usual party machines behind Peres and Rabin would yield to the new leadership of Navon.

There is not a political pundit in the country who can deny that a Navon-led Labor Party would, for the first time in Israel's history, command a clear majority of the nation's voters, would control the Knesset comfortably, and could govern without the need for a coalition with any minority parties.

It is clear and logical, but it seems little hope at this time that the main-line politicians, nor their underlings who drink at the trough, are prepared to forego their ambitions or their petty powers. And unless an agreement is reached in the weeks immediately ahead, and Navon severs his connection with the presidency now, it will be too late, for he is both legally and morally bound not to trade the prestige of the presidency as an immediate springboard into active politics.

Navon will not seek party leadership. He will not campaign for it. He will not lift a finger even to encourage others to negotiate it for him. But if a united Labor Party were to have the intelligence to see that this would be both in their interests and in the interests of the national welfare and if they would place his name at the head of their list and pledge him their support, they would breeze to an unprecedented victory in next year's elections.

Religious Delegation To Madrid Backs Repression Charges

NEW YORK — A delegation of seven religious leaders — Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish members of the National Interreligious Task Force on Soviet Jewry — left for Madrid this week to bolster charges, currently being expressed at the Conference on European Security and Cooperation, that the Soviet Union has violated the human rights provisions of the Helsinki accord.

The group plans to present a Task Force position paper to the various national delegations assembled in Madrid detailing five human rights agreed to in the Helsinki Final Act, which, they maintain, the Soviet Union has consistently abrogated.

These include the right to leave one's country; the right to establish and maintain religious contacts between citizens of different countries; the right to teach children their religious traditions; the right to maintain one's religious beliefs in dignity, free from persecution; and the right to maintain houses of worship.

After four days in Madrid, the group will meet in Rome with Vatican officials to enlist their help for Soviet Jews and Christians who are subject to Soviet repression.

The Task Force delegation is under the joint leadership of Sister Ann Gillen of Chicago, Ill., Executive Director of the National Interreligious Task Force on Soviet Jewry, and Rabbi A. James Rudin of New York, National Assistant Director of Interreligious Affairs, American Jewish Committee.

The other members of the delegation are Sister Ann Marie Erst, a member of the Bishop's Commission on Justice and Peace, Dublin, Ireland; the Rev. William R. Phillippe, a member of the World Alliance of Reform Churches, and Pastor of Boer Hill Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh, Pa.; the Rev. John Radano, Professor of Theology, Seton Hall University, South Orange, N.J.; Charles Z. Smith, Past President of the American Baptist Churches, and Dean of the Washington Law School, Seattle; and the Rev. John Steinbruck, Pastor of the Luther place Memorial Church, Washington, D. C.

Most of the members of the delegation were part of a similar group that represented the Interreligious Task Force on Soviet Jewry at the Belgrade Conference on European Security and Cooperation in 1977.

"We believe we represent the sentiments of millions of our fellow Americans who are appalled by the Soviet Union's dismal human rights record," Rabbi Rudin said. "We are especially concerned about the virulent new campaign of anti-Semitism now under way in the USSR. Our interreligious group is a visible sign of our solidarity with all peoples who are oppressed in the Soviet Union and other East European nations."

Sister Ann Gillen, citing some of the Soviet citizens who have elicited international concern for their efforts to emigrate, added, "The courage of Anatoly Shecharansky and Andrei Sakharov, Ida Nudel and Sister Valeriya Makeeva is symbolic of all who are imprisoned, banished and silenced by the Soviet Government. That courage is an inspiration to our Task Force, just as our work in support of their human rights is a lifeline of hope for them. We must maintain this connection to strengthen the cause of peace with justice."

Your Money's Worth

Men: Slash Your Clothing Budget Costs In Half!

by Sylvia Porter

Just by using common sense, shopping prudently and buying creatively, you — a typical American man — can slash your clothing budget by as much as 50 percent.

And with the big gift-buying season now starting and men scheduled to receive millions of dollars in clothing gifts from women, the money-saving tips that follow are of as much value to the budget-squeezed woman as to the man.

It's commonplace to compile money-saving guides for women's clothing, not so obvious to do this for men. But why not? And if ever there was a time for men to improvise when buying clothing, to seek more functional and practical items, this period of double-digit inflation side by side with a queasy economy is it.

(1) If your budget is especially tight and you do not want to be seen, particularly at work, in any clothes that appear inferior to what you have been wearing, compromise by spending less on the "invisible items," such as socks, underwear, pajamas. You can wear decent underwear without wearing the best quality. Rethink your attitude on this. Who are you trying to impress?

(2) Look for the bona fide sale periods (within these next few weeks) when you frequently can pick up a suit, shirt, tie or other items marked down 25-50 percent from the regular price, advises Marvin A. Blumenfeld, president of April-Marcus, Inc., a merchandising consulting firm which represents more than 150 men's stores across the nations.

At outlet stores, often no more than no-frill lofts, it's not unusual to find the same name-brand items you'll find at the more fashionable men's shops for a fraction of the price. Try shopping at outlet stores! Take advantage of sales. Basic as this is, it's amazing how many men ignore the clear opportunities to save.

(3) Shop quality for larger items. The money you save on your "invisible items" will be wisely spent if it buys a better quality suit. Cheaper garments require more care. An inferior suit may require many more visits to the cleaner than a quality garment — an expense which when eliminated can mount up into substantial savings.

(4) Shop "wash-and-wear." Whenever possible, buy items that can be cleaned in your washing machine. This includes wash-and-wear shirts, many sports items such as shirts, slacks and jeans, even certain suits. The money saved on cleaning mounts up here, too.

(5) Shop conservative. Unless you're in a trade (radio, TV, the clothing business) where wearing the latest styles is a must for your "image," you're much better off sticking with the conservative cuts that will be around longer. For instance, if you bought several suits with 5-inch lapels a few years back, you either have a closet full of unstylish outfits, or else you have spent a small fortune having your lapels cut down.

(6) Shop color. Unless you like the thought of being known as a "peacock," with a different suit for every day of the month, resist the temptation to buy a slightly loud plaid or green suit — and instead, choose a navy blue or charcoal gray. Few people will notice that you're wearing a dark suit most of the time, but all will notice how frequently you wear your more flamboyant outfits.

(7) Learn how to improvise, to mix, to match. This one ability can be a major factor in holding down your clothing costs, Blumenfeld stresses. He suggests you consider at least one "wardrobe."

(8) A wardrobe, which is sold in many different stores and is called by different names, is simply a suit with a vest and an extra pair of lighter shade slacks. With this type of outfit, you are essentially buying four different ensembles.

First, you have a suit; (2) you have a suit with a vest; (3) you have a jacket with a pair of slacks, and (4) you have a jacket with a vest and a pair of slacks. This same type of mixing and matching can work well with any dark suit jacket and a lighter shade of slacks.

(9) Fake it, as much as you need or want to. If for whatever reason your clothing budget is really low, and suits and sports jackets are not affordable at this time, you still can convey the feeling of affluence or elegance if you spend a little more for shirts and ties. By wearing a more expensive shirt and tie, you'll accomplish two things. You'll look more prosperous. And you'll probably be able to get by with your old suit a while longer.

Although I've written this report directly to men, there isn't a woman who has an important man on her Christmas list who cannot use the tips to save money and/or avoid expensive errors.

Note these guides particularly: shop "wash-and-wear"; shop conservative; shop color. And be on the lookout for the traditional pre-holiday sales that should be advertised any day.

"Moral Majority" Represents A Potential Threat To American Jewry

DETROIT (JTA) — Two U.S. Senators agreed here last week that the Moral Majority represents a potential threat to the pluralistic society in America and, to American Jewry.

However, Sen. Carl Levin (D. Mich.) and Sen. Rudy Boschwitz (R. Minn.), both Jewish, differed in their assessment of the strength of this new right fundamentalist movement which played a role in defeating a number of Congressmen in the recent national elections and has already drawn up a "hit list" of Congressmen targeted for defeat in the 1982 elections.

The Senators made these statements at the closing of the Council of Jewish Federations' 49th General Assembly here and also differed on how the Jewish community should separate its attitude toward the Moral Majority's support of Israel and its rightwing orientation on vital domestic and foreign policies.

"Let no one doubt the growing role of the new right," Levin warned. "This election gave the extremists an opportunity to put their foot in the door. Theological answers to political questions are dangerous. When they appeal to the Bible we have to ask, which Bible, which version, which conflicting passages? We must maintain a pluralistic America."

Award To Falwell Criticized
Levin noted that while the Moral Majority

"is given more credit than it is entitled to" the real danger "is not the Moral Majority's actual strength at this time but its perceived strength." In addition, he said, the issue is not "whom they embrace but if we embrace them for their support of Israel. We can welcome their support for Israel, but we must be clear that we do not accept the positions they espouse on social issues and church-state issues."

Levin said he was "bothered" by the Jabotinsky Centennial Medal Premier Menachem Begin of Israel presented to Moral Majority leader Jerry Falwell last week in New York. The presentation of the award to Falwell, one of 100 prominent Americans receiving the medal, was also rapped by Sen. Frank Church (D. Idaho) who refused to accept his award because Falwell was being honored. The Moral Majority had targeted Church for defeat.

Levin cautioned that the Moral Majority's pro-Israel position does not imply that American Jews should be silent about the Moral Majority's positions on domestic issues. "I do not believe in silence," he said. Most churches, he noted, oppose what the Moral Majority stands for and this provides American Jewry with an opportunity to join with these church groups, to assure a pluralistic society.

Boschwitz noted that the Moral Majority is not homogeneously rightwing and conservative. He said the polls showed that two-thirds of the Moral Majority's supporters voted for President Carter in the recent election.

The issue of the Moral Majority and other theo-political groups in the U.S. was a topic for discussion in several Assembly plenary sessions. The consensus was that these theo-politicians are a potential danger because they seek to impose their stringent religious concepts on America as the only correct concepts. There was no consensus on whether they automatically constitute a threat to Jews because of their fundamentalist views and whether they can become a focal point for organized anti-Semitism.

Reagan Should Meet With Mid-East Leaders: Linowitz

WASHINGTON — President-elect Ronald Reagan should meet with the leaders of Israel and Egypt soon after his inauguration to avoid a drift in the negotiations for Palestinian self-rule in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

That is the advice of Sol M. Linowitz, President Carter's special envoy for Middle East peace talks, offered to the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on the Middle East last week.

Linowitz said he was concerned that the change of presidents could interrupt the negotiations, underway for 18 months.

If Reagan's administration keeps the negotiations moving, Linowitz said, an accord could be achieved within six months.

Carter has cancelled a meeting with Sadat and Begin that was planned before the elections.

Reagan has not said anything publicly about a summit meeting in his administration. Richard V. Allen, one of his senior foreign policy advisers, has met with Linowitz several times, and publicly backed the Camp David process.

Linowitz said it was important for Reagan to meet with the Middle East leaders early in his administration "because... it would be useful for him to become personally involved and come to know Prime Minister Begin and President Sadat."

by Robert E. Starr

Here is another hand in which all the needed tricks are right there to be taken but several Declarers thought there was a better way. Their line of play couldn't possibly work even if the long suit they were trying to establish had broken normally. Yet, in No Trump, long suits often intrigue Declarers even though sometimes that suit can't even be used at all.

North		East
♠	K Q 7 5	♠	10 9 4
♥	Q 10 9 3	♥	A 8
♦	9 6	♦	8 4 3 2
♣	10 8 3	♣	K Q J 9
West		South
♠	J 8 6 2	♠	A 3
♥	K 6 5 2	♥	J 7 4
♦	Q J 10 5	♦	A K 7
♣	7	♣	A 6 5 4 2

South deals, both sides vulnerable with this bidding:

2D	P	2NT	End

South has a normal No Trump opening. The five card Minor should not be a deterrent although I do not like to open the No Trump with a five card Major. Some Norths, with but seven high card points, decided to Pass. Others used the Stayman Convention to try to find a Major suit fit. Either way, some number of No Trump became the final contract when South rebid Diamonds to deny that Major. North would then sign off at Two and South, with a minimum would let it go at that.

West had a perfect lead, the Diamond Queen, usually ducked by Declarer who then had to win the continuation. He could count to start with three Spades, two Diamonds and one Club trick which adds to six whereas he needs two more to make his contract. Some of the Declarers looked at that five card Club suit with three more over in Dummy and felt that there would come his two more tricks. This would have been true enough with a normal break but see what would happen even if that suit had been 3-2.

To set up a suit like that two tricks must be lost no matter how it breaks. After losing the first another Diamond knocks out the last stopper in that suit. Another Club allows the Diamonds to be cashed and also the two high Hearts. That would give enough tricks, six, to the opponents even if both Clubs and Diamonds happen to break well for Declarer. In this hand Clubs do not but Diamonds do so those playing the hand that way go down two and it could have been worse. The Diamonds, the suit led, could have broken normally which is 5-3 not 4-4.

Note that played that way, two of the losing tricks are to the two high Hearts, tricks that must be lost no matter how the hand is played. Now take a good look at that very Heart suit for that is where the needed tricks are going to come from. After winning the Diamond forget the Clubs and lose a Heart True, the Diamonds will now become established but keep after the Hearts setting up two good ones for yourself.

The opponents can cash whatever Diamonds they have left for that purpose but even now, should that suit break to have someone able to cash three Diamonds the hand will still be made. Count your tricks, you now have two Hearts to add to the six you started with. This line is absolutely sure whereas the other, even if it looked good couldn't have worked.

Moral: Tricks that have to be lost should just be written off especially when after their demise good will come.

Brandeis Women Host Talk: "Gold And Silver" In the '80's

The Providence Chapter of Brandeis University Women's Committee has planned a winter meeting for Friday, Dec. 5 beginning at 12:30 p.m. at the Jewish Community Center, Elm Grove Ave., Providence.

Linowitz: Israel And Egypt Begin To Bridge Differences

WASHINGTON (JTA) — Special Ambassador Sol Linowitz, reporting on the status of the autonomy talks, said here that "Through their serious and constructive efforts over the past months, Israel and Egypt have begun to bridge their differences on even the most critical, complex and emotional issues" that separate them.

Linowitz made his report to the Subcommittee on Europe and the Middle East of the House Foreign Affairs Committee on the general progress of negotiations for autonomy on the West Bank and Gaza Strip. "Unfortunately," he said, "the negotiating process has been made even more difficult in recent months by a host of external and tangential disturbances and distractions which have diverted attention from the central issues under discussion."

Cites Some Distractions

In that connection he mentioned "violence on the West Bank, the seemingly endless stream of UN resolutions and the various actions and statements bearing on the status of Jerusalem." He said these "have interfered with and even interrupted our efforts to focus on the complex and critical substantive issues."

Linowitz added, however, "Despite frustrations and disappointments, considerable progress in the autonomy talks has been made during the past year."

He said that in the past three months "We have been able to help the parties make significant progress on several of the fundamental issues; specifically Israel and Egypt have narrowed their differences on the key issues of land and water. In addition, he said, "our work during the past three months indicates that the parties are far closer on the issue of security than many had thought."

Linowitz said, "We have also begun, I believe, to narrow differences on the nature of the powers that the self-governing authority should appropriately exercise in the transition period."

U.S. Committed to Work for Peace

The envoy stressed the U.S. commitment to work for peace in the Middle East. "Such a U.S. role in pursuit of peace advances our strategic interests while furthering our moral commitment to the peaceful resolution of disputes throughout the world," he said. "I know that President-elect Reagan joins President Carter in recognizing the importance of maintaining the continuum of our foreign policy and the vital role the U.S. must play in the search for peace in the Middle East," Linowitz said.

Chabad Spreads Light Of Chanukah

To help give all Jews the opportunity to participate in the holiday of Chanukah, Chabad Lubavitch of Southeastern New England has once again published its special Chanukah brochure. It lists Providence candle-lighting times and blessings, and includes a short message from the Lubavitcher Rebbe Shlita, Rabbi Menachem Mendel Schneerson.

Chabad also has a limited number of menorahs available to any family or individual who needs one. Both the menorahs and the free brochure can be obtained from Chabad, 48 Savoy St., Providence, 273-7238.

In addition, Chabad is planning several unique Chanukah activities. For the first time in Rhode Island, a twelve-foot menorah will be erected by the steps of City Hall in downtown Providence. Every night during the holiday, Dec. 2 to 9, a public candle-lighting ceremony will take place at 4:30 p.m., featuring prominent Jewish and community leaders. The entire Jewish community is invited to see and enjoy the largest menorah in R.I.

On a national level, Chabad has sponsored these extra large menorahs in every major city in America, including New York, Los Angeles and Washington, D.C.

Chabad will also lead candle-lighting ceremonies in nursing homes and hospitals in the Southeastern New England area.

When in doubt, a Herald subscription makes the perfect gift for birthdays or holidays.

Klutznick Vows Fairness In Allocation Of Funds

NEW YORK (JTA) — Secretary of Commerce Philip Klutznick assured an audience of Jewish communal leaders here that funds for community assistance will be given with "no discrimination against any group in American life which is in need of assistance, either on a community or an individual basis."

He made the pledge to 100 Jewish leaders representing grassroots communities throughout the metropolitan area at a meeting sponsored by the Metropolitan New York Coordinating Council on Jewish Poverty.

In response to a question about affirmative action, Klutznick said that the Commerce Department was committed to a policy of equal opportunity in employment for all groups.

Another comment criticized the impact of the Small Business Administration's purported policy of granting 85 percent of SBA loans to minorities and 15 percent to all other applicants similarly unable to get conventional bank financing. Klutznick said that "if the allocation process is discriminatory, it should be changed."

In response to a request from Menachem Shayovitch, Coordinating Council president, Klutznick said he would be willing to set up a meeting with the SBA head, Vernon Weaver, to discuss the matter. He stressed that his position was that "applications should be taken on the basis of qualifications and need."

U.S. Delegates To Madrid Hopeful About Help For Soviet Jewry

NEW YORK — A group of members of the United States delegation to the Madrid Review Conference of the Helsinki Accords issued a statement on November 18 expressing satisfaction with the developments that have taken place since the meeting opened on November 11 and noted that the process "may yet work to enhance individual freedoms within each of the 35 signatory states." According to the National Conference on Soviet Jewry, the delegates gave their full support to the actions taken by the United States Delegation and its allies in setting up the agenda for the meeting.

The delegates pointed out that "the agenda finally adopted ensures that the Madrid meeting will be a forum for public expression of mankind's opinions. Those of us with a special concern for the plight of Soviet Jewry know how important this can be. Despite all the evidence to the contrary, the last decade during which 250,000 Jews emigrated from the Soviet Union provided ample proof that even the Soviets are sensitive to world opinion."

Discussing recent developments at the meeting, the delegates emphasized their support of the Western nations which "expressed strong outrage at the recent Soviet violations of the Helsinki Final Act: its total suppression of dissidents; its imprisonment of Soviet citizens for attempting to monitor Soviet compliance; its sharp reduction of exit permits for Soviet Jews; and its brutal invasion and occupation of Afghanistan."

Praising the work of Ambassadors Griffin Bell and Max Kampelman, co-chairmen of the U.S. delegation, the delegates expressed hope that "the review process... will increase Soviet Jewish emigration as well as enhance both human rights and security on the European continent."

Signers of the statement were: Stanley H. Lowell (New York), former Chairman, National Conference on Soviet Jewry; Theodore Mann, former Chairman, Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations; Louis A. Lerner (Chicago), editor and publisher, Lerner Newspapers; Rosalind Wyman (Los Angeles), President, Professionals Guild of America; Julius Michaelson, (Providence) former Attorney General, Rhode Island; and Jerome J. Shestak (Philadelphia) U.S. Representative to the United Nations Human Rights Commission.

Hot Time At 20-Below

On Friday Jan. 30, a group of the Rhode Island Jewish Singles, Inc. will be busting up to spend a weekend at somewhere below 0 and a probable wind-chill factor of 20 below. The Place: Loon Mountain, with a vertical drop of 1850 feet from the summit to the basin.

For some, the thought of skiing down a 1/2 mile or better has all the appeal of going through airborne training with the 82nd. But, according to Chris Rodli, Senior Service Coordinator for Loon Mountain, there's a ski program for just about everybody.

And everybody includes beginners, senior citizens, and even the blind and physically handicapped. "In fact, one of our instructors has a prosthesis," Rodli said. "Because of the extensive equipment, Loon Mountain can keep approximately 85 percent of the 26 trails covered, and you can always ski at Loon Mountain, to avoid overcrowding on the slopes. Loon Mountain monitors the number of people out.

Cairo Trip Establishes New, 'Close' Relationship, Officials Say

CAIRO — A three-day visit by members of Israel's opposition Labor Party ended with expressions of confidence that a "close relationship" had been established with President Anwar el-Sadat and other Egyptian officials.

The delegation was headed by Shimon Peres, Abba Eban and Chaim Bar-Lev, all Cabinet ministers in past Labor Governments.

Opinion polls show that the Labor Party holds a lead over Prime Minister Menachem Begin's governing Likud coalition, with national elections scheduled next year.

The Egyptians have sought direct contact with Labor leaders because Sadat has lost hope that significant progress toward a peace settlement is possible in negotiations with Begin.

Party Policy Explained

Sadat is said to hope that negotiations with a Labor government would be more productive.

The Labor visitors explained that their concept of peace differed from Begin's because "we do not want to rule over the one and a quarter million Arabs of the West Bank but want to create the conditions in which we can separate from them."

The Labor Party leaders also cautioned against over-optimism by noting that they would reject a new division of Jerusalem and a return to the "precise" territorial lines that existed before 1967.

The visit was described by Egyptians as an unofficial "symposium." Israelis visited with Sadat and Vice President Hosni Mubarak, and a dinner given by the Israelis was attended by 12 Cabinet ministers.

Peres invited Sadat's ruling National Democratic Party to send a delegation to Israel next month to attend the Labor Party congress. The invitation was accepted.

President Yitzhak Navon of Israel, also a member of the Labor Party, visited Cairo earlier this month and received an equally friendly welcome.

Chabad Chanukah Celebration At New Synagogue

The second annual Chabad Chanukah celebration will take place on Saturday, Dec. 6 at 8 p.m. at the new Ohave Shalom Synagogue on East Avenue at the Pawtucket city line.

A Pidyon HaBen (Redemption of the First Born) ceremony will also be performed. Russian immigrants who have recently arrived here will be formally welcomed into the Providence Jewish community.

Morris the Clown will entertain the children and refreshments will be served.

Begin Aide Predicts Increase In West Bank Jewish Settlers

JERUSALEM — A top aide to Prime Minister Menachem Begin has predicted in a report that the number of Jewish settlers in the West Bank can increase by 60 percent during the coming year by expanding existing settlements and completing the construction of others already planned.

Matityahu Shmuelevitz, director general of the Prime Minister's office, said in the report presented last week that the number of settlements in the West Bank had increased from 24 to 68 since the start of the Begin administration in 1977, and that the number of settlers had risen from 3,200 to 17,400.

Shmuelevitz said the total could reach 28,000 by the end of this government's term, no later than next November.

About 700,000 Arabs, half of them under the age of 15, live in the West Bank, Shmuelevitz reported. The territory has been occupied and governed by the Israeli army since the 1967 war.

Begin has pursued Jewish settlement for two main reasons: a national-religious desire to retain land that the Bible says God gave to Abraham and his descendants, the Jews, and as a way to strengthen security by precluding the evolution of a Palestinian state in the West Bank.

This policy has been strongly opposed by Arabs and has impeded the Egyptian-Israeli negotiations on forming a self-administering authority for Palestinians as prescribed by the Camp David accords.

These autonomy talks were portrayed by Carter administration officials before the election as more hopeful because of Israeli concessions.

The talks will reopen after the inauguration of Ronald Reagan as President.

Begin May Resign

Some observers believe that next month's inflation figures, expected to be as high as this month's because the oil price hike will make itself felt, would present an appropriate basis for the opposition to try again.

Dayan Warns Against Loss of Options

During yesterday's debate in the Knesset, former Dayan, who is now an independent MK, said "I will vote no confidence because one cannot vote confidence in 200 percent inflation."

This was a reference to unofficial forecasts that the inflation rate for the final quarter of 1980 is expected to be around 200 percent.

Dayan said that as long as the economic situation is not improved there is no point in discussing the "autonomy option" or the "Jordanian option" in the West Bank autonomy settlement because "we will not have an option for any option. We will have to do what others tell us to do."

Finance Minister Yigal Hurwitz, who has been under severe attack by the Labor opposition, members of his own Likud Knesset faction and Cabinet ministers for failing to stem inflation, said during the debate, "I have only one formula: that we live with what we have, and that we consume only that which we can produce." He blamed Israel's economic woes on Labor's "overblown unproductive services."

Israel Withdraws UN Resolution On Mid East De-Nuclearization

UNITED NATIONS (JTA) — Israel, in a surprise move last week withdrew a draft resolution it had introduced for the "de-nuclearization of the Middle East," blaming lack of response from the Arab countries.

Announcing the move in the General Assembly's Political and Security Committee (First Committee), Ambassador Arie Eilan of Israel's UN Mission said Israel withdrew its draft resolution "with great regret" and warned that "those who have rejected Israel's offer in this committee must bear a very heavy responsibility in the eyes of mankind."

Eilan cited the "adamant refusal on the part of so many Arab states to respond to Israel's calls for de-nuclearization of the Middle East" as the reason for Israel's decision to withdraw its draft resolution.

The draft called for a conference of all Middle East states aimed at reaching an agreement for the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons in the region. It was only the third time that Israel has submitted a draft resolution since it became a member of the UN in 1949.

Israeli diplomats have long been calling for such a conference and such calls were included in the speeches by Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir and his predecessor, Moshe Dayan, in their addresses to the General Assembly.

Says Offer Still Stands

Arab rejection of the Israeli proposal was made clear in their statements in the First Committee this week. But Eilan said, "We shall, however, persevere. The task we have set ourselves is too serious to be abandoned because of the exigencies of the parliamentary situation. Our offer still stands."

Eilan accused Iraq and Libya of seeking to introduce nuclear weapons into the Middle East. "The whole world knows that Iraq and Libya are making enormous efforts to acquire the nuclear option for the price of oil," he said. "Do the rulers of those countries ever realize that the particles that make up a nuclear fall-out know not the difference between Jew and Arab, between Moslem and Christian?" the Israeli envoy asked.

Israel Signs Anti-Hostage Measure

In another development, Israel signed the international convention against the taking of hostages which was adopted by the UN General Assembly last year.

Israel's Ambassador to the UN, Yehuda Blum, signed the document at UN headquarters on his country's behalf. Israel had taken an active part in the working group of the General Assembly which drafted the convention.

It states that under no circumstances whatsoever should anyone taking a hostage, whatever reason he gives, be exempt from either prosecution or extradition. It also calls for cooperation between all states in fighting the taking of hostages. The convention is regarded by Israel as an important practical measure in the struggle against international terrorism.

Women's Arm Of Conservative Judaism Votes To Support Women In The Rabbinate

KIAMESHA LAKE, N.Y. — The concept of women in the rabbinate in the Conservative Movement of Judaism received overwhelming support today from the nearly 2000 delegates at the National Convention of the Women's League for Conservative Judaism held last week.

In the first such stand by the women's arm of the conservative Movement, with a membership of 210,000, the delegates voted in favor of the following motion: "Women's League for Conservative Judaism supports the proposal that women be accepted as Rabbinical School students at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America culminating in ordination."

The original motion, tabled at the 1978 Biennial Convention of Women's League, did not include the last three words in the adopted version. These three words were added as an amendment, after discussion as to whether the amendment should read "culminating in ordination" or "leading to ordination."

Before the vote on the motion, six delegates spoke in favor and six spoke against it. Comments favoring passage of the motion included statements on the Jewish concept of social justice and the importance of not eliminating otherwise qualified candidates for the rabbinate because they are female.

When one delegate spoke against the words "culminating in ordination" as too "pushy," a delegate responded that "A man of quality is never threatened by a woman of equality."

In an interview preceding the vote, Dr. Gerson D. Cohen, Chancellor of the Jewish Theological Seminary who is on record in favor of women in the rabbinate said: "The ordination of women in the Conservative and modern Orthodox Movements is only a matter of time." Calling himself a "religious humanist" rather than a feminist, he said he is convinced that women should be ordained.

Dr. Cohen said that a general trend toward conservative reaction on all spiritual matters may slow down the process, but he is confident that approval of ordination will come about "in a couple of years."

"As more people return to the synagogues and it becomes more a part of their lives, they won't want it to be a fossil," he predicted. "The issue will be solved by the climate of opinion, not by Halachic canons."

In related news, for the first time at a Women's League National Convention, delegates read their own Torah portions at the Monday morning service, attended by over 800 delegates.

Eugene DuBow Discusses Anti-Semitism

Eugene DuBow, Director of Community Services and Membership for the American Jewish Committee, will lecture on the subject, "Extremism and Anti-Semitism: How Jews Can Respond," on Monday, Dec. 8 at 8 p.m. at Temple Beth Torah, Cranston. The public is invited to attend.

DuBow has served on the executive boards of the Chicago Institute of Interreligious Research, the Chicago Alliance for Shaping a Safer City, the Chicago Task Force on Jewish Family Life and the Chicago Interreligious Task Force on Soviet Jewry, all AJC initiated projects.

DuBow was a founder of the National Interreligious Task Force on Soviet Jewry and acted as the National Coordinator for both the First (1972) and Second (1976) National Interreligious Consultations on Soviet Jewry.

A frequent lecturer on Jewish community relations, DuBow has taught on the faculties of Hebrew Union College in Los Angeles and the Spertus College of Judaica in Chicago.

The program is sponsored by the R.I. Unit of the AJC, Temple Sinai of Cranston, and the Academy of Jewish Learning and Living at Temple Beth Torah.

Begin Calls On American Jews To "Start A New Life" In Israel

NEW YORK — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin has called on American Jews to "come by the thousands and thousands" to help settle and develop all parts of Israel.

Speaking last week before an overflow crowd of 700 American Jews of whom 621 are planning to make Aliyah within the next two years, Begin praised the group enthusiastically. "The greatness of your Aliyah," the Prime Minister said, "is its idealism."

"Usually people leave their country of birth for Israel because they have lost rights or they hope to increase their standards of living," he said. "but no material gains can be expected from this Aliyah. You are not being pogromized. You are not leaving out of fear. Your synagogues are not being bombed. You are young Jewish men and women who have decided out of your own free will to come to Zion and I am here with a heart full of pride."

"Israel is a good country to live in, believe me," Begin said. "The State of Israel is open, democratic and free and our gates are open for every Jew to come."

The meeting, held at Hunter College in New York City, was organized by the Israel Aliyah Center and the North American Aliyah Movement (NAAM).

The Prime Minister, obviously buoyed by the "human electricity" of the moment, cautioned the new immigrants about the "realities of living in Israel." "We are not a rich people but we are a happy people. A life with a purpose and a mission makes a person happy."

"Tonight is a proud evening. I am filled with 'nachas' and I will bring that 'nachas' to Israel in your behalf. Let more come. Let thousands and thousands come. Come because you say to yourself: Israel is my country... the land of my forefathers... the land of my children and my children's children."

Begin's speech was the first ever for a Prime Minister to a significant group of Americans planning to make Aliyah.

Dr. Aharon Kfir, Director of the Israel Aliyah Center, repeated the historic words of Zeev Jabotinsky uttered 44 years ago in Warsaw: "I dissent from the view that we should 'squeeze the lemon' — that the majority of Jews should contribute money to help the few who go to pioneer in Eretz Israel. I demand the lemon itself. I call upon 100,000 Jewish young people to make Aliyah as soon as possible."

In opening the assembly, Rabbi Moshe Berliner of Fair Lawn, N.J., Director of the North American Aliyah Movement declared to Prime Minister Begin: "The ultimate destiny of the Jewish people is not being written today in the five boroughs of New York, nor in the comfortable suburbs where so many Jews have fled. Nor is it being written in the board rooms of local federations, or at the lavish dinners of the fund raisers. The destiny of our people after 2,000 years in exile is being written in Eretz Israel. It is a destiny which all of those sitting before you this evening — all of us — have pledged to join."

To exuberant applause, Berliner added: "Mr. Prime Minister: you have met groups larger and more influential than ours on your visits to the United States, but I can assure you that you have not met nor will you meet in America, any who match the dedication and commitment to the Jewish People, to Israel, of those Olim who sit before you this evening."

Also greeting the assembly was Raphael Kotlowitz, Head of the Aliyah and Absorption Department of the Jewish Agency and a member of the World Zionist Executive.

The Prime Minister presented scrolls of appreciation to five Olim representing various Aliyah and settlement groups: Dr. Menachem Marcus of Teaneck, N.J., President of Raishit Geula, whose members are due to settle in the new town of Efrat in Judea; Lorri Kotlen, a member of Garin Arava, representing the Garinim (kibbutz-bound youth groups); David Latzker, a member of Hashomer Hatzair, on behalf of all the Zionist youth movements in the U.S.; Effie Clivner of TELEM, the movement for Zionist fulfillment, all of whose members are pledged to immigrate; and Fred Schiller, President of the North American Aliyah Movement (NAAM).

UN Urges Israel To Permit Return Of Mayors

UNITED NATIONS (JTA) — The General Assembly's Political Committee voted 117-1 last week to urge Israel to permit the return of two mayors and a Moslem religious judge who were expelled from the West Bank last May.

Israel cast the sole vote against the resolution. The United States and Malawi abstained on the measure which is virtually assured of adoption by the General Assembly.

The resolution stated that the deportation orders against Mayor Fahd Kawasme of Hebron, Mayor Moheem Milhim of Halhoul and Kadi (judge) Rajab Al-Tamimi of Hebron were illegal.

They were expelled from the territory in the wake of the ambush slaying of six yeshiva students in Hebron May 2. The two mayors were permitted to return to the West Bank last month to file an appeal with the Israeli Supreme Court. They are confined to Ramle jail pending the outcome.

In other actions involving Israel, the Political Committee voted 91-2 with 22 abstentions to continue the investigation of Israel's treatment of political prisoners in the occupied territories. Israel and the U.S. cast the negative votes.

The U.S. abstained on another resolution that accused Israel of trying to change the status of the populations of the occupied territories in contravention of international law governing the treatment of populations under military occupation.

Faye Schenk Youth Aliyah Center Offers Youngsters A "Second Chance"

by Anita Lebowitz

Kiryat Menachem, Jerusalem — Max Wiesel is a stubborn man. "I don't ask what they want to learn. I already know, far better than they, what they need to learn. I ask them how they want to learn. That's the biggest difference between this kind of school and the others they have attended."

Max needs to be stubborn. As the director of the Faye Schenk Youth Aliyah Center, in Kiryat Menachem, Jerusalem, he is responsible for 82 youngsters, ages 13 through 16, enrolled in a program that offers what may well be their last chance for a full life as productive members of Israeli society.

Max directs the learning process for troubled students. They have come to Faye Schenk from Katamon Het, Tet, Shmuel, Hanavi, Musrara, and other distressed neighborhoods in Jerusalem. They often come from homes where the parents can't read or write — in any language; where their fathers work, when they can, at jobs that require no skill and pay almost no money, and where there are usually several other brothers and sisters crammed into too few rooms that are always too small. They come from neighborhoods suffering from a severe lack of human and community services, medical and dental facilities, and, most importantly, the kind of hope and spirit that is a part of life in Israel.

Typically, these youngsters have not functioned well in the traditional school systems. They are the disciplinary problems, the slow learners, the children whose family lives often failed to offer the support needed to succeed academically. At Faye Schenk, and at other Youth Aliyah centers throughout Israel, these children are offered a second chance.

It's not an easy task for the youngsters; their commitment must be total. Students attend classes six days a week, from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. They learn basic educational skills — reading, math, language — supplemented by an intensive study plan that includes vocational and social skills such as metal work, carpentry, secretarial training, salesmanship, public relations, advertising, and hairdressing. After a break for the evening meal, they return for cultural programs in music, dance, art, and history.

The students take organized tours throughout the country in order to study archeology, agriculture, industry, and to learn about life. At times they are required to bring their parents for meetings and consultations with teachers, counsellors, and even with the director. It is all part of the carefully structured program of Youth Aliyah.

Faye Schenk is far more than a school. It's designed as an entire life experience. The students are organized into a parliament, meeting on their own and then with the director, several times a week to discuss problems and new programs. They are involved in every stage of decision making, under the careful guidance of a trained staff.

This process is in itself a serious part of their education. Here they can develop leadership qualities, discover the structure and the evolution of a social organization, and learn to prepare proposals, how to follow-through on a program, the implementation of their ideas, and sometimes, how to deal with the disappointment of finding that their plans cannot be implemented.

Books, transportation, food — all necessities are provided by the program. Because these are students with special problems, they must receive special attention.

When a particularly frustrated youngster refused to follow the advice of counsellors, the director, and his peers, Max decided to meet with the father.

"It was not easy," Max related. "The father was almost never home. After several broken appointments, I was finally able to contact him only to have him tell me that he couldn't take time away from work for a meeting."

Max persisted, pressuring the father for some commitment of time — at any hour, in any place. They finally met at six a.m., before the father left for work. With parental involvement, and cooperation from Max, his colleagues, and the other students, the youngster is now receiving the special attention he needs ... and is responding positively.

The Faye Schenk center is one example of the programming that is available through the Jewish Agency's Department of Youth Aliyah, supported in a large part by contributions through the United Jewish Appeal. Since the establishment of Youth Aliyah, nearly 200,000 children have graduated from its facilities. Most have gone on to become respected, productive members of Israeli society.

Today, Youth Aliyah continues to have an enormous impact on Israeli life, providing an opportunity for thousands of children in need of special service. However, Jewish Agency budget cuts have forced severe reductions in the program. Unless additional funds are raised, Youth Aliyah will admit 2,000 less youngsters in the coming year.

To Max, and all of the hard-working staff, the busy chatter of children reflects the growing health and vitality of new lives. When Max opens the door to a classroom of thirteen year-olds, he sees more than children studying the history of Jerusalem. He sees an important part of Israel's future.

10,000 Demonstrators In Jerusalem Angry Over Spiraling Inflation Rate

JERUSALEM (JTA) — An estimated 10,000 Israelis participated in a mass demonstration here last week to denounce the government's economic policies which they blamed for the surging inflation rate. The demonstration was organized by Histadrut whose Secretary General, Yeruham Meshel, demanded that Finance Minister Yigal Hurwitz resign.

It was conducted while the Cabinet was holding its regular weekly meeting in the Prime Minister's Office. Hurwitz told his colleagues that Histadrut deliberately torpedoed his attempts to work out a wage-price "package deal" to stem inflation. He accused the labor federation of trying to cling to the special advantages enjoyed by its pension funds. But Hurwitz also had sharp words for some of his fellow ministers who he said were balking at Treasury efforts to hold down government spending.

Inflation Rate Spirals Upward

The demonstration and the angry recriminations in the Cabinet were sparked by figures that showed inflation soaring to a rate of 138 percent and the cost-of-living index up by 11 percent in October, the second largest monthly increase in Israel's history and the highest since November, 1977. Those figures sent shock waves through the population and the political establishment. According to unofficial forecasts, the November figures will be still higher.

The inflation rate for the final quarter of 1980 is expected to be in the order of 200 percent. This is considerably higher than when Hurwitz took over the Finance Ministry from Simcha Ehrlich a year ago and announced that the battle against inflation would be his top priority.

Hurwitz had recently intimated that he had inflation under control. The rate seemed to be slackening. Last August it was only 8.2 percent. Reacting to the October figures, he blamed the government as a whole for his failure to stem the tide, meaning that various ministers were refusing to accept cuts in their ministry budgets.

Hurwitz denied, however, that he was planning to resign and pull his Rafi faction out of the Likud-led coalition government. But he has warned repeatedly in the past that he would strike out on his own if the Likud ministers failed to give full support to his economic policies. Potential supporters of a separate Rafi list in next year's elections have called on Hurwitz to link up with former Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan to establish a new right-of-center political faction.

Successful Investing

Low Price Doesn't Mean "Bargain"

by David R. Sargent

Q — Why do you recommend stocks selling at high prices, such as IBM? I'm 18 years old and interested in stocks selling at $10 per share and under. Q.R., California

A — A relatively low price may signify a bargain in some fields, but not when it comes to the stock market. This is particularly true of issues selling in the bottom range you mention. A low price is usually a warning sign indicating problems relating to a company's sales, earnings, financial strength, or competitive situation, etc.

Thus, investing in low-priced stocks is more speculative than buying higher-priced (and usually higher quality) issues. The operating results of companies in the former category are typically subject to wide swings and are very hard to predict with any degree of accuracy. In addition, their long-term records often exhibit a roller coaster pattern with little if any net growth.

True, informed speculators can frequently do very well by buying low-priced issues that are ready for a cyclical upswing or basically sound stocks that are depressed by temporary difficulties. However, skillful selection requires special knowledge of each situation. This is not an area for a novice, such as yourself, to jump into.

In future years, you may have acquired sufficient money and expertise to be able to afford to speculate with a sensible portion of your assets. In the meantime, you should restrict your selections to well-known growth issues, perhaps saving your money until you can buy ten shares of each. A list of suitable companies would include Abbott Laboratories, Dow Chemical, IBM, Minnesota Mining & Mfg., and Xerox.

Q — I will be retiring in five years. My broker advised putting currently available funds in an annuity. Do you agree? S.M., Missouri

A — I'm afraid your broker and I don't see eye to eye on the subject of annuities. I admit they are safe, in dollar terms, and can provide an assured, known income for the rest of your life. However, the real value of payments will shrink rapidly in an inflationary era such as we are now experiencing.

In addition, you usually surrender control of your financial assets when you buy an annuity. You don't have the flexibility to switch investments as economic conditions or your individual circumstances change. Also, early withdrawal often involves substantial penalties.

Instead of an annuity, I suggest investing in a good, no-load growth-and-income mutual fund, such as Fidelity Equity-Income Fund. (Address: 82 Devonshire St., Boston, MA 02109.) Distributions can be reinvested over the next five years to boost retirement income.

Chanukah Delicacies

by Joyce Eisenberg

An old folk proverb says "Chanukah latkes teach us that one cannot live by miracles alone." The Maccabean women knew that. They brought the pancakes to their men on the front lines as they fought against the Syrians. Latke eating, a Chanukah tradition for centuries, commemorates their efforts.

The custom of eating foods fried in oil also celebrates the miracle of the cruse of oil. When the Temple was desecrated and the eternal light put out, the Maccabees found a small cruse of oil, enough for one day. It burned for eight.

We eat dairy dishes, especially cheese, on this holiday to honor another woman. According to the Code of Jewish Law, Judith of the Hasmonean family dined with the Syrian general Holofernes. She fed him milk and salty cheese and then wine to quench his thirst. When he was drunk, she killed him. His troops fled and the Jews were saved.

Whenever there has been a shortage of food, Jews have been creative. In the Old City of Jerusalem, schoolchildren on the last day of Chanukah would visit the homes of rich Jews. In response to their songs, the children would collect fruit, vegetables, fowl, oil, flour, onions and sometimes coins. With the edible ingredients, the children would prepare a meal for the poor, their teachers and themselves. Dough stuffed with meat was a specialty. Sometimes, dough was stuffed with absorbent cotton to add decoration.

The Feast of Lights gives us eight days to feast on these Chanukah delicacies:

Potato Pancakes

7 or 8 medium old potatoes (about 2½ pounds)
1 large onion, peeled
2 eggs, separated
2 tablespoons potato flour or matzoh meal
1 scant tablespoon salt
1 teaspoon white pepper
Corn oil, for frying
Applesauce, as accompaniment

Peel the potatoes and cover with cold water until you are ready to make the pancakes. Grate the potatoes and onion into a strainer that is suspended over a bowl to catch the juices. If this is hard for you to manage, grate the potatoes into a bowl, then turn into a strainer suspended over another bowl. Grate the potatoes and onion alternately, as the onion juice will help prevent the potatoes from darkening. Using a wooden spoon, or picking up handfuls of the grated potato mixture, squeeze or press out as much liquid as possible. Reserve all liquid and let it settle in the bowl for 2 or 3 minutes.

Put the pressed potato and onion mixture in a clean bowl. Carefully pour off the watery part of the reserved liquid but do not discard the thick, starchy paste at the bottom of the bowl. Scrape that into the potato mixture.

Add the egg yolks, potato flour or matzoh meal, salt, and pepper and mix thoroughly. Beat the egg whites to stiff and shiny peaks and fold them into the potato mixture.

Heat a 1/2 inch-depth of oil in a heavy skillet, preferably of black cast iron. Drop the potato mixture into the hot oil, about 2 tablespoons per pancake, and fry, turning once so the pancakes are a deep golden brown on both sides. Drain on paper towels. Total frying time for each batch of pancakes should be about 10 minutes. Keep fried pancakes warm while the rest are being fried. To do that, put the fried, drained pancakes on a rack in an open baking pan and place in a low oven (about 250 degrees). Do not hold for more than 15 minutes before serving or they will become soggy. Serve with applesauce.

Yield: 6 servings

AJC Expresses Regret Over Ruling On Religious Observance

NEW YORK (JTA) — The American Jewish Congress has expressed "regret" over a U.S. Supreme Court ruling letting stand a lower court ruling upholding guidelines for the observance of Christmas and other religious holidays in the public schools of Sioux Falls, S.D.

The organization said at the same time that it was considering starting another federal lawsuit challenging sectarian practices in a public school district in the New York City metropolitan area. Officials declined to identify the school district or the sectarian practices.

The AJCongress and the American Civil Liberties Union had filed a friend—the court brief in the Florey vs. Sioux Falls School District case after a federal district court ruled that the observance of religious holidays in the school was permissible. The Eight Circuit Court of Appeals upheld that ruling and the Supreme Court declined to review it, thus letting it stand.

Nathan Dershowitz, director of the AJ Congress commission on law and social action, said that "while a denial of certiorari" in the case "is not a judgment on the merits — and thus it cannot be said that the Supreme Court has approved the rules adopted by the Sioux Falls School District — the Court's failure to review them will undoubtedly encourage other school districts to adopt them or similar rules."

Dershowitz added that the Supreme Court's action "may simply reflect a desire to await a case with a better record" and that "we and others interested in separation of church and state will attempt to present the Court with cases demonstrating the inevitable sectarian character of school holiday observances so that it can decide whether public schools can constitutionally observe religious holidays."

He added "we are looking closely at the practices of a school district in the New York metropolitan area that may soon be challenged in the federal district court."

The guidelines adopted by Sioux Falls were first challenged in 1978 by a group of students, parents and taxpayers. The AJCongress and the ACLU argue that those guidelines are unconstitutional because they represent inherently religious action. The AJCongress said "the guidelines countenance the creation of a religious atmosphere not only at Christmas but on numerous occasions during the school year."

Falls Oven Barbecued Chicken

2-3 lb. chicken, cut up
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
1 teaspoon paprika
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 cup vegetable oil
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 cup tomato juice
3 Tablespoons honey

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Season chicken with garlic powder, paprika, salt and pepper. Combine all other ingredients in baking pan. Arrange chicken in a single layer in baking pan, turning once to coat. Bake skin side down for 45 minutes. Turn skin side up, bake 15 minutes longer. Makes 4 generous servings.

Kasha Tabbouli

Kasha Tabbouli

1 cup cooked kasha (whole, coarse or medium)
1/3 cup chopped green onions about 15 fresh mint leaves, chopped
1/4 cup chopped parsley
1 large tomato, seeded and chopped, salted to taste
1 Tablespoon lemon juice, red wine vinegar and oil dressing
Romaine lettuce leaves

Tabbouli is best prepared with kasha that has been cooked in chicken broth. Combine all ingredients, using sufficient salad dressing to moisten kasha (about 3-4 Tablespoons). Chill for at least 2 hours before serving. Place tabbouli in center of plate, surround it with Romaine leaves to be used as "scoops" to eat this tangy appetizer. A food processor speeds preparation. Serves 4-5 as hors d'oeuvre or 2-3 as salad course.

October Immigration Figures

JERUSALEM (JTA) — Some 1,687 new immigrants arrived in Israel last month, compared to 1,525 in September, the Jewish Agency spokesman has reported.

The largest group of immigrants, 394, came from the Soviet Union, and 267 came from the United States.

In the first 10 months of this year some 18,869 immigrants arrived in Israel, a drop of 40 percent from the same period last year when 31,666 immigrants arrived.

The decrease was among Soviet immigrants — 7,160 compared to 14,654 in the first 10 months of 1979, a decrease of more than 50 percent.

A slight increase was recorded in the number of immigrants from Rumania: some 889 in January-October, 1980, compared to 717 in the same period last year.

Israel Joins Nations At Disney World

ORLANDO, Fla. (JTA) — Representatives of the State of Israel and Walt Disney World have signed an agreement for the design of a major pavillion representing that country in the community of nations in World Showcase at Epcot Center.

Epcot Center, a vast new showplace for the nations of today and the technology of the future, is under construction at the central Florida resort. It will open Oct. 1, 1982, and cost $800 million.

The agreement was signed by Joseph Wolff, Special Adviser to the Minister of Finance in Israel and President of the Tourist Industry Development Corp., representing the State of Israel; Carl Bongirno, President of W.E.D. Enterprises, The Disney Design Organization, and Executive V.P. of Epcot Center; and Howard Roland, Corporate V.P. of Contact Administration representing Walt Disney World.

Anti-Semitic Groups In Holland

AMSTERDAM (JTA) — Justice Minister Jacob de Ruiter told Parliament that he is seriously disturbed by the appearance of anti-Semitic groups in Holland and pledged that his ministry will take strong measures against them.

De Ruiter expressed his concern during a debate on his ministry's budget. He referred specifically to the distribution of anti-Semitic material in Breda in southwest Holland. He said criminal proceedings would be initiated against the parties responsible, if necessary.

The recently formed Foundation to Combat Anti-Semitism in Holland (STIBAAD) has alerted all parliamentary factions to the problem.
