Blacks And Jews Unite To Build Housing For Elderly And Poor

by Susan Bostian

Last Sunday afternoon, on the first of our hot, hazy summerlike days, about forty friends and members of the Congdon Street Baptist Church and the Academy of Torah crowded into a little room in the East Side Apartment Complex on Doyle Avenue in Providence. It was a celebration of the combined efforts of the two groups to make the building a reality. Fred Lippitt, currently Director of Administration for the city of Providence, was singled out for his dedication to the project. Before the afternoon was over, several persons from what organizers called the "coalition of two very unlikely groups" had been awarded plaques for transforming the vacant lot on Lippitt hill into safe, comfortable housing for low income families.

Mrs. Denise Saunders, a member of the Congdon Street Baptist Church, described the birth of the Black/Jewish union that resulted in the formation of the East Side Association. "Our brother, Edward Duffy III, encouraged us all to get involved in a community action program," she told the group. "He envisioned us building a home for the less fortunate members of the community." Another member of the congregation approached Fred Lippitt for help while still another effort was made to involve the Academy of Torah. After many months, a 3.6 million dollar HUD proposal was given an affirmative response and the home for elderly and handicapped came one step closer to reality.

Sam Shlevin presented plaques to some of the more persistent and devoted members of the association. "This is truly a joyous occasion," Shlevin insisted. "Our Black and Jewish communities can be very proud of themselves. The mutual assistance of the two groups has made this a great moment in history. I am pleased to honor the people who made this worthy project happen."

Fred Lippitt, a lawyer formerly with Edwards and Angell, a trustee of many well known institutions around Rhode Island, and a board member of numerous other associations and societies, seemed very pleased to be singled out as a motivating force behind this group.

"My long time friend and secretary, Joan Clark, was my inspiration to head this committee." Graciously, he told the group, he would accept the award as a symbol of the efforts of the many who made his job possible. In his rather tender speech, he also said he felt that Joan Clark, now deceased, was somewhere watching the proceedings and very happy at this moment. To which, Reverend Carter, pastor of the Congdon Street Church added another 'amen.'

Denise Saunders approached the podium and offered her hopes for further shared projects. She added that a permanent plaque would be displayed in the lobby of the complex describing the history of the building and the two groups who persisted in pursuing their vision. "The first two tenants to move into apartments in the building located on Doyle Avenue were from each of the constituent groups," she said. "Although, people assumed that this was an unlikely joint venture, the association was very successful."

Rabbi Chaim Pinsky shyly approached the podium after he was unexpectedly asked to give the final blessing. He pointed out that such an honor usually meant reflecting on the event for a long period of time before speaking to the group. Quietly he said to the group that he would repeat the wisdom of the elders about such proceedings. "Giving up ourselves for other people, whether it was by talking or spending time, was like imitating God himself. God gave Adam and Eve clothing. We are giving less fortunate persons a place to live in proper dignity and respect." He asked for the handiwork of all those involved to be blessed.

Other notables receiving awards included: Edward Duffy III, Reverend Carter, Tom Perlman, Meredith Costa, Dr. Joseph Fishbein, Rabbi Strajcher, Bertha Casper, Wilbour Easton, and Nobel Shipp for excellence and effort.

A friendly mingling followed the formal presentations as both groups moved forward to share coffee and goodies and a sense of accomplishment.

Visiting Writers Report On World Jewish Issues

Elie Wiesel At Temple Beth-El: Holocaust & Nuclear Arms Race

by Robert Israel

PROVIDENCE — Elie Wiesel, Holocaust survivor, professor, writer and lecturer, spoke to a capacity crowd at Temple Beth-El here on Thursday, May 15. The subject of his speech was "When the Unthinkable Happens: Implications of the Holocaust for the Nuclear Arms Race." Wiesel refers to himself as a scholar who says he reads "ancient texts for the benefit of modern times." He explored the subject by referring to the moral questions raised by the Bible, the Talmud and the Torah, in an effort to apply these texts to an understanding of the Holocaust and the modern-day threat of nuclear proliferation.

Nuclear Arms Race: A Jewish Issue

Wiesel began by discussing Noah, a man, he said, "I don't admire," because, "Noah is too passive. He only does what God tells him to do. He only thinks of his own and not of the others. Why didn't he argue with God? After all, Abraham argued with God and so did Moses. . . . And so I have problems with him. After the flood was all over, he went and planted a vineyard and got drunk. I would've wanted him to write a poem at least. I would've wanted him to come out with a message, an important message, but what did he do? He drank and got drunk. And so I don't like Noah. But then God came to Noah and gave him a message. He said, 'Never again will I destroy the world with floods.' . . . Why didn't he say, 'Never again will I destroy the world, period.' But it was after my third reading of the text that I finally understood it. God said, 'I will never again destroy the world,' but he never said that we won't destroy the world. Why didn't he say, 'The world will never be destroyed?' And so you see, my friends, we are gathered together here in a holy place to discuss what most of you might not think is a Jewish issue. . .

Peter Hellman Reports On Soviet Treatment Of Jewish Dissidents

by Robert Israel

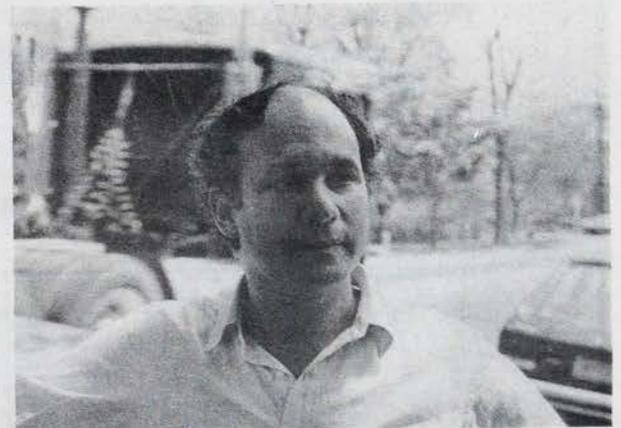

KINGSTON — Peter Hellman, a journalist whose writings appear in national magazines, including The Atlantic Monthly and Life, reported to a group of fifty people on Sunday morning, May 18 at the Tavern Hall here about his trip, last September, to interview Jewish dissidents in the Soviet Union.

Hellman, author of Avenue of the Righteous, was accompanied on this journey by a photographer and a translator. The journey was sponsored by the New York based Coalition for Soviet Jewry. He and his party were to have spent four weeks touring the Soviet Union, but the trip was cut short by one week when they were expelled for associating with the Jewish dissidents.

"To be a refusenik," Hellman said, "one would think you have to refuse to do something, but in this case, with the Jewish citizens in the Soviet Union, it is the government who has refused to do something for the Jews. The Soviets have refused to let the Jews emigrate, to study Hebrew and to live a Jewish life."

Hellman's itinerary included visits to Leningrad, Vilna, Kiev, Siberia and Moscow. It was while touring Siberia that he and his party were expelled, given notice that they were to leave on short notice.

"You get a quick introduction to the lack of Western freedoms at the Soviet airport," Hellman told the group at the Tavern

Hellman said, "You instantly realize you are in their hands. They open your suitcase. They fling your belongings all over. They open up every film canister. They even examined a magazine I had brought with me, which showed a picture of Chairman Gorbachev on the front cover. And they took the magazine and had a long discussion with their supervisors whether or not to allow this magazine into the country. I had coded the names of the Jewish dissidents inside a prayer book. This was examined, too."

Persecution of Soviet Jews
Hellman reported that there is considerable persecution of Jews in the U.S.S.R. today.

"To be a Jewish dissident in the Soviet Union is to live a very paradoxical life," Hellman said. "Because these people have asked to give up citizenship, they have become free; they have nothing left to lose and no fear of what people think. Their children are often harangued and beaten up. But they repeatedly re-apply for an exit visa every six months and are routinely refused to leave the country. I met a refusenik in Leningrad who was carrying around an EL Al flight bag. I

Temple Torat Yisrael will present Cantor Stephen Freedman in "A Cantorial Bouquet," an evening of cantorial and other Jewish music, at the synagogue on Saturday evening, June 7.

The program will begin at 8:30 p.m. with Havdalah, the traditional ceremony ushering out Shabbat, and will continue with a variety of cantorial selections, Yiddish art songs, and contemporary Jewish music in both Hebrew and English.

Though admission is free, the evening has been designated as a benefit for the Torat Yisrael Library; those who are interested are invited to contribute as patrons, sponsors, or benefactors. All donors will be acknowledged in the concert program.

"A Cantorial Bouquet" will be Cantor Freedman's final concert at Torat Yisrael, as he leaves Rhode Island this summer for a new position as hazzan for the Bet Shira Congregation of Miami.

Cantor Wolberg Honored

The congregation of Temple Beth El will honor their Cantor, Richard A. Wolberg, for his 10th year of dedication in a special "Service of Achievement" Sabbath evening service on May 30 at Temple Beth El. Worship will be held at 8 p.m. in the Sanctuary followed by a reception in the Ziskind Auditorium.

Cantor Wolberg is a graduate of Hart College of Music, University of Hartford. He assumed his first cantorial position at Temple Beth El, Norwalk, Connecticut. He has served on the executive council of the Cantor's Assembly of America, and is currently on the nominating committee of the organization. He also served as Vice President for the Jewish Ministers Association of New England.

The Cantor has been the recipient of many prizes and awards. He has participated in numerous civic activities, and a highlight of his career was a proclamation issued by Massachusetts Governor King on January 14, 1980, naming the day at Bristol County Juvenile Court as Richard Wolberg Day.

Mark Patinkin To Speak At Beth-El

At Friday evening services on May 23, local columnist for the Providence Journal-Bulletin Mark Patinkin will reflect upon his series of articles on religious strife datelined from Northern Ireland, India, Beirut, and Jerusalem. Patinkin, a Temple member, will offer a pulpit perspective on his remarkable odyssey. The community is welcome to attend services which begin at 8:15 p.m. in the Temple's Sanctuary. A festive Oneg Shabbat will follow the Sabbath worship service.

Beth-El Annual Meeting

On May 18 at the 131st Annual Meeting of Congregation Sons of Israel and David, Temple Beth-El, J. William Pinkos, Chairman of the Nominating Committee, presented the slate of officers for the year beginning July 1, 1986.

The Executive Committee was presented as follows: President, Melvin L. Zurier; Vice Presidents, Bruce G. Sundlun, Dr. Henry Litchman, and Bertram Lederer; Treasurer, Irving Schwartz; and Secretary, Lee Krasner. The new members of the board were presented: Stuart J. Aaronson, Robert Glashow, Phyllis Goldberg, Sheila Greenbaum, Edward I. Grossman, Roberta Lasser, Arthur Pell, Betty Pinkos, Lola Schwartz, Jeffrey Brown and Harvey Millman. Nan Levine and Howard Kaufman were asked to serve as honorary trustees. Members of the Nominating Committee include Carl Feldman, Jeffrey Sharfstein, Robert Berkelhammer, Nancy Fain, Howard Zisserson, Hazel Grossman, Dr. Edward Spindell. The Annual Meeting was chaired by Dr. Steven and Roberta Lasser.

Simon Konover, Hartford Philanthropist

Simon Konover, chairman of Simon Konover & Associates, has given $250,000 to the University of Hartford's Maurice Greenberg Center for Jewish Studies. A leader in the greater Hartford community, Konover is a member of the University of Hartford's President's Club, Capital Campaign Committee of 100, and Board of Visitors of the Greenberg Center. He lives in West Hartford, Conn.

The gift, which is unrestricted, will allow the Center to enhance the quality of life for its students, faculty and the community at large by continually broadening its intellectual, academic, cultural and social offerings.

Konover, whose firm owns some 100 shopping centers and manages more than 10 million-square feet of shopping center space, last year celebrated his 25th year in the real estate business. Among the shopping centers owned by the firm are the Farmington Valley Mall, Norwalk Town Mall and most of Bishops Corner. The Corbins Corner shopping center is managed by Simon Konover & Associates.

The firm, one of the largest privately-held corporations in New England, is the owner of Connecticut Innkeepers, owner of 10 hotel properties, including the Ramada Inns in Hartford and North Haven. Also in the firm's holdings are apartment buildings, condominiums and a group of single family homes in Avon.

Konover came to the United States in 1948 and joined his older brother David in a floor covering business, Shalen & Konover. He remained in that business until 1960 when he entered real estate full time. Active in the local Jewish community, he is a member of Beth El Temple and a former president of the Hartford Jewish Federation.

Hands Across America

Dr. Paul Aaron, a well known Chiropractor on the East Side, announced today his commitment to establishing a fund to be contributed to "Hands Across America." This unusual contribution will be comprised of all money taken in from any new patients requesting to make this donation. Dr. Aaron is making available the opportunity to donate to a worthy cause and get a health check in the form of a complete physical and chiropractic exam at the same time. Says Dr. Aaron, "As we approach the turn of the century, we have the opportunity to bring about a rational health care system with an emphasis on human values." Dr. Aaron backs up his words by his actions . . . the health check and donation will be reduced to $20 for this purpose. Locally, "Hands Across America" is scheduled for May 25 at the State House. More information can be obtained by calling (401) 272-1827.

Family Picnic

A special family picnic is being planned by the Family Programs Committee of the Jewish Community Center for Sunday, June 1. Sue Kahn, Chairperson of the event, has announced that it is being held in conjunction with the JCC Havurah Program.

The picnic will be held at Colt State Park, Bristol from 12 noon to 5:30 p.m. and will be for families of all ages. The picnic should be a "fun day" for everyone. Guests are asked to bring their own food for barbecuing. Watermelon, beverages and sports equipment will be provided.

The fee is $2.50/family — $1/individual. For further information call Laura Berkson at the Center, 861-8800.

Israel Bonds To Honor Rabbis

The spiritual leaders of Rhode Island's two largest temples will be honored Tuesday night, June 3, at a special tribute event to be held at Temple Beth-El.

The event, sponsored by Temples Emanu-El and Beth El and the Rhode Island State of Israel Bond Organization will honor Rabbis Wayne M. Franklin and Daniel H. Liben of Temple Emanu-El and Leslie Y. Gutterman and Lawrence M. Silverman of Temple Beth El.

Brig. Gen. Yehudah Halevy, chief executive officer of the worldwide State of Israel Bond Organization, will be the principal speaker.

Rabbi Wayne Franklin

Rabbi Franklin is the senior rabbi at Emanu-El, a position he has held since 1981. Prior to that he was the spiritual leader at the Orange, Conn. Temple and B'nai Shalom Synagogue in Benton Harbor, Mich. Since coming to Providence he has been involved in numerous secular and non-secular activities. Among them are the Black-Jewish Dialogue, Jewish Home for the Aged, Hospice Care of R.I., Jewish Community Relations Council and the Priests & Rabbis Dialogue of Providence. He was ordained in 1970 at the Jewish Theological Seminary.

Rabbi Leslie Gutterman

Rabbi Gutterman has been associated with Temple Beth El since 1970 and succeeded Rabbi William G. Braude in 1974. He is president of the R.I. Board of Rabbis, and chairman of the R.I. Committee for the Humanities. He also is honorary president of the Jewish Family Service, after two terms there as the active president. In addition, he is a special lecturer in the Department of Religious Studies at Providence College as well as a board member of close to two dozen local and state organizations including two hospitals, various governors' commissions, the Jewish Federation of R.I. and the National Rabbinic Council of UJA.

Rabbi Liben has been assistant rabbi at Emanu-El since 1983, following his ordination at the Jewish Theological Seminary. Prior to assuming his Providence post, he performed rabbinical duties at Clifton Park, N.Y.; Waverly, N.Y.; and Danbury, Conn. He also has been involved in a variety of affiliated activities such as resident advisor for graduate student housing at the Theological Seminary, tutor, high school faculty member and Israeli folk dance specialist.

Rabbi Lawrence Silverman

Rabbi Silverman has been associate rabbi and educational director at Beth El since 1984. Prior to that he was spiritual leader at Congregation Beth Jacob in Plymouth, Mass. A graduate of Brown University, Rabbi Silverman was well known in Providence even before joining Beth El. He also has a masters from University of Toronto and a doctorate from Hebrew Union College.

Rabbi Daniel Liben

According to Donald M. Robbins, Rhode Island State Chairman of the State of Israel Bonds, all temple members will want to be at the event to honor their rabbis, therefore requesting that reservations be made as soon as possible.

Smokers In Transition

The Rhode Island Lung Association's Smokers in Transition support groups will meet according to the following schedule:

Bristol — Monday, June 2 at 7 p.m. at the Bristol Medical Center.

Warwick — every Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Warwick Library's Oakland Beach Room, Sandy Lane, Warwick.

The support groups are for people who have quit smoking and are looking for encouragement and mutual support to continue the nonsmoking habit. For more information call the Lung Association at 421-6487.

Summer Festival At Brandeis

Registration is now open for the fourth annual "Summer Jewish Festival," held at Brandeis University, July 13-17, in Waltham, Mass.

The theme for this year's festival, which features seminars on Jewish history and thought and Jewish cultural events, is "Leaders, Teachers, Dreamers: Men and Women Who Have Shaped Jewish Life." All seminars are taught by members of the Brandeis faculty.

During the course of the five-day program, participants will have the opportunity to explore the lives of four of Zionism's outstanding figures — Theodor Herzl, Stephen Wise, Judah Magnes and Martin Buber. Other sessions will focus on the religious and intellectual legacies of three seminal twentieth-century Jewish thinkers — Solomon Schechter, Will Herberg and the founding chairman of Brandeis' Near Eastern and Judaic studies department, Simon Rawidowicz. Programs on "The Jew As Artist" will examine the lives and works of Leonard Baskin and Charles Reznikoff.

The festival also includes a variety of artistic and cultural performances that offer films from the National Center for Jewish Film, a concert of music or dance, an evening of Jewish humor and other special events.

Sponsored by Brandeis' Benjamin S. Hornstein Program in Jewish Communal Service in cooperation with the university's National Women's Committee, the festival "represents an effort to share some of the riches of the Brandeis campus and its teachers with the larger Jewish community," says coordinator Jonathan Woocher, associate professor of Jewish communal service at Brandeis.

"The blend of classes, cultural events and leisure and recreation time, plus the spirit of good fellowship that develops among the participants, makes for a very special week."

Cost for the entire festival, including lodging, kosher meals and snacks and all classes and performances, is $365 per person. Day rates also are available for those not needing accommodations.

Registration for the festival ends June 10, and spaces are limited.

For more information and registration materials, contact Jonathan Woocher, Hornstein Program, Brandeis University, Waltham, Mass. 02254-9110, (617) 647-2641.

The Secret Of Happiness

PT. JUDITH — Biking here at the end of the day when the afternoon sun is sinking behind the strip of land they call Jerusalem has been a singular pleasure I have repeated day after day. From this vantage point on the lawn by the lighthouse, I can see the hazy outline of Block Island fourteen miles out to sea. Behind me, the bay opens wide. Large ocean going vessels can usually be seen at this time of day and the light lingers on their smokestacks. There are surfers here, too, protected against the frigid waters by wet suits. They look very much like sea lions bobbing up and down in the choppy water.

On the way home from Pawtucket tonight, I heard an advertisement for a beverage company that promised if you use this particular soft drink in a mixer with your hard drinks, you will be guaranteed "the secret of happiness."

If we strip away the unnecessary pollution and seek solitude, just for an afternoon, just long enough to watch the sun sink behind a strip of land they call Jerusalem, we will have found the secret of happiness.

Nothing could be more ridiculous. To think happiness can be found by purchasing the carbonated beverage described so lovingly on the radio is to seriously question the intelligence of the listener. But hearing the ad brought back memories, twenty years ago, when I first visited Provincetown, Mass.

I was walking along Commercial Street in Provincetown and I came upon a young woman dressed as if she walked off the streets of New Delhi, India. Her long robes were resplendent, and her head was shaved. She wore a gold nose ring in her left nostril and her eyes were glazed, distant.

"Hello," she said to me, "would you like to learn the secret of happiness?" She handed me a comic book with pictures of her spiritual leader. I thumbed through it while she stood there smiling and I couldn't believe she was serious. I asked if she felt alright.

"Oh, yes," she said, "everything is blissful."

I had never known the meaning of the word "blissful" until then, until that encounter. It was a state of stupefaction, brought on by the willing abandonment of reality. Nothing reflected in her eyes, in her gaze, except the distant clouds. She was high on the guru, lost in space. Had she found the secret of happiness? I didn't think so.

I have not led a purposeful search for happiness but I know what makes me happy and standing here on the lawn by the lighthouse facing Block Island Sound watching the last light of day surely comes close to it. Watching a surfer catch a wave and hold onto the wave by cutting into it, rising up on it before it breaks and riding it into the cove before the rocks get imposing and threatening is surely coming close to it. Walking down the strand of beach past the fog horn's reach and past the tall reeds to where a secluded rocky beach can be found is coming closer to the secret of happiness.

Years ago, when I was living in Minnesota, I met a writer, Sigurd Olsen, who had spent his life writing about and advocating for the wilderness. He had a favorite rock that he liked to sit next to in the Boundary Waters area of northern Minnesota, near the border of Ontario. He called it "listening point." It was here that he listened to nothing, just silence, the wind, the sounds of the birds and animals.

If I were to write a prescription for happiness, it would be to find the "listening point" wherever one travels, be it on the rocky strand of beach in Pt. Judith, R.I., or in the wilderness of northern Minnesota. Too often we create loud and raucous noises that purposefully prevent us from hearing the silence. Too often we are swayed by the latest and trendiest solution that is offered that boasts of a way to find the "secret of happiness." If we strip away the unnecessary pollution and seek solitude, just for an afternoon, just long enough to watch the sun sink behind a strip of land they call Jerusalem, we will have found the secret of happiness.

I found that same exquisite happiness in Kare Desher, on the Sea of Galilee, last summer when I awoke at dawn and watched the kingfisher birds dive into the sea as the first light shone through the haze that enshrouded Tiberias.

I have found it here, at Pt. Judith, and in northern Minnesota, and in my own back yard. I have found it whenever I pause to listen for it, turning off the radio, putting away the newspapers and the magazines, unplugging the telephone. I choose to live with all these intrusions to my life. I wouldn't want it any other way. The secret of happiness is learning how to control those intrusions. It is learning how to say, enough is enough. It is learning how to open one's ears and senses to the silences that have just as much, if not more, to tell us.

Let Shcharansky Be Himself

With an irrepressible candor that disarmed even as it pierced, Anatoly Shcharansky made his mark on the American scene this week, and on the American Jewish scene in particular. As his straight answers to tough questions sank in, creating waves at times as they did, one overall point shone through: the free, unbowed individual who asserted his rights at such cost against the claims of the Soviet state has no intention of accepting the role of consensus mouthpiece now that he is out.

First and foremost, from his meeting with Jewish leaders to his talk with President Reagan, Shcharansky repeatedly stressed the stark limits of quiet diplomacy and the dangers of piecemeal bargaining in human goods when dealing with the Russians — even though these were precisely the practices that led to his release. There is no irony here, for it is entirely possible that had Shcharansky known of these efforts on his behalf he would have spurned them, as he did in 1983. Then, he staunchly refused the bargain quietly worked out, assuring his release on the face-saving Soviet condition that it be on grounds of ill health.

For Shcharansky, the liberation of Soviet Jews must be an affirmation of their basic, inalienable human rights, or it is nothing at all. His rejection of pragmatic, piecemeal dickering for human souls stems from his angry rejection of the implicit commoditization of human life that the process institutionalizes — a process in which, as he noted, "Soviet authorities see Soviet Jewry as a kind of business" and haggle "to sell some Jews" if the United States agrees to improve political and trade relations.

"It is quite natural for many people in the West to think this way," Shcharansky said. But inevitably, when the problem is approached in this manner, "the Soviet Union increases the price of some of the Jews and then tries to sell them," he noted.

"Every such meeting in prison, even every letter (from family members to prisoners) they can sell for any price," he noted, finally reducing human rights themselves into mere commodities.

In taking this stance, Shcharansky helpfully stiffens our instinct for reacting with outrage to such cynical manipulation, rather than gratitude and hope for further Soviet "liberalization." If our object is really freedom for all 400,000 Soviet Jews who want to leave, this will only be achieved through standing firmly for them on the basis of their rights "until the losses and dangers for (the Soviet authorities) if they do not do so will be greater than the consequences of allowing the Jews to leave," as Shcharansky said.

Shcharansky's willingness to eschew the status of lofty symbol above the fray is good news for the Soviet Jewry movement. His readiness to wade in with rolled-up shirt sleeves and take honestly informed and considered positions where consensus has not yet been reached gives the Jewish people, to whom he is a hero, the benefit of his applied intelligence to urgent tactical issues while they matter.

This may not make every Jewish organization comfortable. But in an almost metaphoric sense, Shcharansky represents the classical Western tradition. He affirms the value of the individual's intelligence, whose very distinctiveness makes the most valuable contribution to the collective of which he is part. This is a precious human paradox which the Soviet system is wholly unable to accommodate. Even the much more open West does not always live comfortably with it. It is in the nature of organizations to stand uneasily in relation to their candid, unfettered members.

In the Jewish community a clear need exists to respect scrupulously the personal autonomy of not only Shcharansky, but other former refuseniks, who tend naturally to be among the most individualistic of people. At times during this past week here, and these past few months in Israel, such consideration has gotten short shrift as various partisan groups have competed for Shcharansky's attention, commitment and loyalty. Comments critical of his choice on where to spend the Sabbath and reported tussling over who, if anybody, would accompany him in meeting the President have been but two manifestations of this tendency.

Even more unfortunate were the stifled voices of other former refuseniks, who were allowed on the podium last Sunday, but lost their chance to speak to the numerous politicians. Shcharansky's story and the inner character it reveals are indeed unique. But as he himself so often notes, there are so many others; it is crucial to promote awareness of the problem rather than merely its symbol. One of the best ways to do this is to let Shcharansky be Shcharansky and open up the opportunities for other former refuseniks to be themselves as well.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

Your May 16 editorial, "Eliminating Favoritism," deals well with what to me are Rhode Island's most serious problems — corruption, influence peddling, the recent scandals, and their product: the state's poor reputation. I, too, would prefer to hear our leaders speak out forcefully against unethical conduct in government rather than engage in empty public relations to make us feel better.

As Executive Director of the Governor's Committee on Ethics in Government, I've come to realize that the only way we will feel better about Rhode Island is to restore and maintain public confidence in the integrity of Rhode Island government. The ten-member Committee, composed of Rhode Islanders from diverse backgrounds, must report to Governor DiPrete in September on ways to promote ethical conduct in state government. It is still too early for me to be sure what recommendations the Committee will make, but I am impressed with the Committee members' concern that their recommendations be a real contribution.

Secretary of State Susan Farmer, who chairs the Committee, has indeed spoken out on the problem. For example, at a speech during a recent forum that featured past U.S. Attorney General Elliot Richardson, Mrs. Farmer cited a N.Y. Times article on Rhode Island's reputation for "malfeasance and corruption." She went on to speak of the need to deter those in government "who are unscrupulous," to offer guidance on ethical conduct to officials who want to be conscientious, and — perhaps most important — to offer much stronger assurance to citizens that "government leaders really care about the ethical conduct of those who serve the state."

Based on my work with the Committee and my frequent meetings with Mrs. Farmer, I am certain they are committed to dealing effectively with the problem of ethical standards in government.

Members of the public have been sending suggestions and comments to the Committee. I encourage those who wish to do so to write to me at the address below.

To the Editor:

It is unfortunate that as multifaceted and warm a Jewish community as that of Rhode Island must as well sport characters like those who can do no more than attempt the character assassination of those with whom they disagree.

Karen Dub is a supporter of Meir Kahane, a position many may choose not to take, but a position unarguably taken by her out of feelings of strong Jewish identity and concern for the Jewish future. Those who disparage her do not even bring up the issues she and Kahane address, for those issues are uncomfortable ones for liberal-minded Jews and it is intellectually easier to simply call her names like "Rambo" and compare her to the likes of Louis Farrakhan, (may his mouth atrophy along with his mind). Such obscurantism is much more identifiably "neo-Nazi" than Kahane's plans for mandated relocation of Israeli Arabs, whether one can stomach those plans or not.

That, indeed, is the real issue here. Not whether Kahane is right or wrong or (as I might contend) a bit of both, but whether all positions within the larger and local Jewish communities can be aired and the issues discussed without people like Mr. Arthur Einstein attacking people like Mrs. Dub for their views.

Her position, agree or not, is based not only on the Bible (Mr. Einstein's "man-made" "document," May I disagree without being called names? God gave our ancestors His law. That is history, and I'll be happy to argue the point with a calmer Mr. Einstein any time.) It is based as well on post-biblical and modern history. The view that we Jews would do well to distrust the world, to take on a preventative aggressiveness as our attitude is one which, unfortunately, is quite defensible, though certainly not "liberal." Mr. Einstein is welcome to maintain his belief in the essential good of humanity in spite of our era (and nigh every preceding one). But those of us who would disagree with those with his views should be able to look forward to substantive, even if heated, dialogue, not childish name-calling.

Avi Shafran

To the Editor:

I found the attack by Mr. Einstein on the person of Mrs. Karen Dub to be, to say the least, quite tasteless. It is always those who sit on the fence that attack those who have no fear in giving their views. Mr. Einstein should realize that if it weren't for Jewish women of valor, throughout the centuries, our religion would have gone into the dust bin of history a long time ago.

The attack of Mr., Mrs. or Ms. Name Withheld speaks for itself. It is easy to attack others when in the Purim disguise of anonymity. When this person refers to Mrs. Dub as Rambo, "they" are really paying her a compliment. It is said by the Jewish sages that when a Jew wears tephillin, he is feared by the world that holds him in awe. The Jews weapon, which frightened our enemies, was tephillin (not a souped-up weapon of war). The world was in awe of Rabbi Doctor RAMBam, 900 years ago, not RAMBO. Imagine! Karen Dub and other Orthodox nationalist women are feared by the gentile world (and "gentile" Jews), although, as proper Jewish women, they do not don tephillin. She should feel honored that "Name Withheld's" curse (calling her Rambo) is really a brooch. Karen and her husband Larry are fine members of the congregation to which we both attend (Providence Yeshivah Congregation), and it is a brooch to have them in our community.

What is so wrong with Rabbi Meir ("You-Know-Who") Kahane? He expresses what the Jewish leadership only says in private. Rabbi Kahane does not believe in exterminating "Palestinian" Arabs, merely "exiling" them to Jordanian-occupied Israel (Hussein's monarchy). Churchill had promised this to the Zionist leftists when, as colonial officer, he gave Eastern Israel to King Abdullah to start the puppet state of Jordan. Churchill never transferred the Arab population from Western to Eastern Israel.

Kahane will merely be fulfilling Churchill's promise when the Arabs are sent packing. Most of the Arabs in Israel are descendants of Arabs who came to Israel after the Balfour Declaration. They came, feeling that the Jews were coming with massive wealth from Europe. They wished to have a piece of the imaginary pie. It was something they had no chance for in the Arab World. Now they must go. Israel's survival depends on it. There are many Ultra-Liberals who fear what the gentiles will say. It seems strange that those lands who denounce Jews for wanting such a "Nazi-like act" (and say that former deportees by Nazis are now willing to deport Arabs) are the lands which murdered its Jews, with glee, during the Nazi Era. They needed no German prodding.

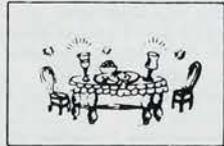

It is time that Jewish "leaders" get off the fence and help Israel rid itself of its potential fifth-column exterminators. The time is late. The hour is now. Torah says the Gentiles should fear us. Who are we to question G-d about the position he has given us in the world. Let us follow the right path.

Jerry Snell

To The Editor:

As National Commander of the Jewish War Veterans of the U.S.A., I have urged Attorney General Meese to approve the recommendation of the Office of Special Investigations and place Kurt Waldheim on a "watch list." I have noted that Mr. Meese's noncompliance with said recommendation to date is highly unusual and I believe the issue is a moral and legal one that needs to be addressed immediately. I have asked the Attorney General to openly investigate the situation thoroughly and to clear the air. If the accusations that Mr. Waldheim either participated in or had first hand knowledge about Nazi atrocities during his wartime service as Wehrmacht officer are found to be true, the United States should act immediately to condemn Dr. Waldheim for those war crimes and for his consistent and unrepentant denial of those charges.

Providence Native Receives Israel Medal

Louis A. Mandarini, a Providence native who lives in Medford, Mass., received the Israel Peace medal at a recent dinner of the Greater Boston Israel Bond Organization at Boston's Park Plaza Hotel.

Mandarini is business manager of Laborers Local 22 and secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts Building Trades Council. He received the award because he has exemplified "the distinctive traits of character and manifested the noble qualities of moral strength that are the hallmark of the inspirational leader and the responsible citizen," according to the organizers of the testimonial.

In addition to his work in the labor movement, Mandarini was cited for his service as a member of the Medford Planning Board, co-chairman of Histadrut, board member of the Kidney Foundation and a director of the Handi-Kids Foundation, which named him its 1977 Man of the Year.

He still has several family members in Rhode Island: his mother, Mrs. Mary Mandarini of Providence, and his brothers, Ralph Mandarini of North Providence and John Mandarini of Cranston.

Women's ORT Celebrates Freedom

The Rhode Island-Southern Massachusetts Region of Women's American ORT will be holding a twinning ceremony in celebration of freedom, security and human rights at their 1986 Honor Roll dinner and Region Installation on Wednesday, June 4. A twinning ceremony dramatizes the oppression of Soviet Jews and introduces the concept of mutual responsibility and concern of one for another. Today many Americans choose to share important ceremonies with Soviet Jews who are unable to observe these important events in Jewish life. Refusnick Tatyana Lozanskaya will be presented as an Honorary Honor Roll member in the Rhode Island-Southern Massachusetts Region.

Cocktails will start at 6:30 at the Barnsiders Mile and a Quarter on South Main Street followed by dinner at 7. Honor Roll members can attend the dinner for $16.

The installation will start at 9 p.m. At that time Robin Engle will be installed as president for 1986-87. Joan Perlmutter will be Chairman Executive for the region. The Vice Presidents include Elaine Arbor, Rhonda Couit, Caryl Ferbelman and Sue Roth; Treasurer will be Lena Deutsch, and Ilene Bojar will be the Financial Secretary. Installed as corresponding secretary will be Ellen Reuter, and recording secretary will be Barbara Horovitz-Brown.

Anyone wishing information on the dinner or installation should call Joan Perlmutter 942-6954.

Shoah To Be Shown At JCC

"Shoah" is unlike any film ever made about the Holocaust. Using not a single frame of archival footage, with not a single photo of bodies, "Shoah" allows the victims, the perpetrators and the bystanders to tell their stories.

The critically acclaimed 9½ hour film will be available to Rhode Islanders between September 7 and September 18. Co-sponsored by the Jewish Community Center, Temple Emanu-El and Brown University Hillel, the film will be shown in two parts at Temple Emanu-El in Providence. Opening night will be Sunday, September 7.

Featured are concentration camp survivors and Nazi camp commanders, historian Raul Hilberg and Polish villagers who still live on the edges of the former camps. What emerges from their collective memories is an astonishingly detailed account of a not-so-distant era.

According to Claude Lanzmann, who devoted 10 years of his life to the creation of the film, "The Nazis tried to eliminate every trace of the extermination. To enable the dead to speak, there were only voices of survivors, of transfigured places... this film could be made only in the present."

Each 4½ hour segment has one intermission. Those who have seen the film suggest that the parts need not be seen in order.

Tickets are available at $15 for both parts, $12.50 for students and senior citizens. Advance purchase is suggested. For further information, call Judith Jaffe at the Jewish Community Center, 861-8800.

ORT Installation

The Elmgrove Chapter of Women's American ORT will hold its installation of officers for 1986-87 on May 27 at the home of Lynn Markoff. The installation will follow a pot luck dinner which begins at 7 p.m.

Installed as President will be Debra Engle. The Vice Presidents include Barbara Gumpert, Sherry Cohen, Barbara Wallick, Randie Goldman and Lezie Pious. Financial Secretary will be Linda Resnick and Judy Goldstern will be the treasurer. Robin Humonoff will hold the position of secretary.

Old and new members are welcome to attend. Please call Rhonda Court for information 463-8157.

Eating Disorders Discussed At Butler

Dr. Barry Dym, author, psychotherapist and Executive Director of the Boston Center for Family Health, will be the guest speaker at a Morning Conference to be held on Saturday, May 31, 1986, from 10 a.m. until noon at The Ray Conference Center, Butler Hospital, 345 Blackstone Boulevard, Providence.

The conference is co-sponsored by The Anorexia and Bulimia Association of Rhode Island and Butler Hospital. It is open to the Public and Health Care Professionals, and admission is free. For further information call: ABA at 331-7241.

Shown from left are Elliot Goldstein, Jewish Community Center's Health and Physical Education Director, Louis Gorodetsky, out-going chairman of the Rhode Island Jewish Hall of Fame Committee, and Jeff Goldberg who will now assume that role. Jeff holds a plaque awarded to him for dedicated service as co-chairperson of the Center's Health and Physical Education Committee.

A glowing father and son, Ben and Stan Abrams. Inducted into the first Rhode Island Jewish Athletic Hall of Fame last year, Stan Abrams took great pride in presenting the same honor this year to his dad whose athletic career includes football, basketball and track. Ben had a hand in forming the first Little League in Providence.

Dick Reynolds, Providence Journal sports writer and well-known m.c. about town, at right, inducted outstanding tennis and table tennis player Irving Levine, at left, into the Hall of Fame. A silver and bronze medalist in the Maccabiah games in Israel, he was chosen Jewish Athlete of the Year in 1975.

"In Remarkable Company"

"I think it's the greatest thing that "almost" happened to me," laughed Ben Abrams in response to how he felt about being inducted into the Rhode Island Jewish Athletic Hall of Fame.

"Especially how I got in," he adds. Ben's face was beet red from enjoying each moment at the Hall of Fame's Second Annual Banquet held at the Jewish Community Center last Sunday night.

"I was forced in!" he confesses, not minding it at all. "After my son made it last year, he got up and said that I belonged in the Hall of Fame; he didn't."

"He was wrong," Ben quips. "Stan really belonged in it. He's number uno in the state of Rhode Island." Ben was still beaming.

Harry Platt said he was "very excited about the honor. It's one of the most wonderful things that ever happened to me."

In his acceptance speech, he expressed how the occasion for him turned the pages of history from the past to the present.

The evening had extra special meaning for Howard Schachter, he said, because of the role he has played in his work with youth in basketball, baseball and U.S.Y. programs at the Jewish Community Center.

"It makes me now look back and appreciate the kind of fun I had, but also the real reward of all is to have helped in the development of some young people and the maturity I've seen come about."

"You're really not supposed to receive an award for having fun, and I am," Howard says, "so I feel a little badly about that.

"I feel the main thing is that if I've played some small role in the development of some of the young people in our community, I have a great advantage now. That's where the reward comes in... to see these young people growing up and assuming some leadership roles in our community."

"I feel good about that," he says. Irving Levine's thoughts on the Hall of Fame?

"I think it's fantastic that Jewish athletes, who are rather great athletes, are being recognized. I remember when I was honored as Rhode Island Jewish Athlete of the Year 11 years ago."

"That was the same type of feeling," he says.

Mike Cingiser's sentiments were, "It's an honor. I'm very honored. I feel very proud."

"The company I find myself in with is remarkable. I'm just very happy to be here."

Louis Gorodetsky, who chaired the Hall of Fame committee, remarked how pleased he was with this year's attendance at the presentation banquet. "I think there is a better attendance than last year."

He will act as consulting chairman to new chairman Jeff Goldberg who continues on with the Hall of Fame's annual tradition.

"I'll be working with Lou now for the future of the Hall of Fame," Jeff says. "As next year goes on, this organization will become even more recognizable," he said, enthused about the input from the community about future inductees.

Victor Bernstein, an accomplished athlete in track and football, was inducted posthumously into the Hall of Fame by his son Michael Bernstein. Michael, in turn, presents the award to his mother, Ethel Bernstein.

Two Brown basketball greats induct each other into the Hall of Fame... Harry Platt, left, and at right, Mike Cingiser, head coach of Brown men's varsity since 1981. Forty-six years since finishing his basketball career at Brown, Harry Platt still holds the university's record for most points in one game (48) and most field goals in one game (21). Both records were set against Northeastern on Feb. 2, 1938.

Morris Fabricant inducted Milt Ernstof posthumously into the Hall of Fame. Celia Adler accepts the honor for her brother, who was an acclaimed yachtsman. In 1962, Milt Ernstof finished second in corrected time out of a fleet of 131 boats in the Newport-to-Bermuda race, second in prestige only to the America's Cup.

Visiting Writers Report On World Jewish Issues

... But it is a Jewish issue. It is a human issue. It is an issue for all of us."

Wiesel, who was born in Sighet, Hungary, was in his teens when he was liberated from the Auschwitz concentration camp, where his parents and his youngest sister were killed. Most of his published novels and books of essays deal with the Holocaust. He lives in New York, teaches at Boston University and serves as an honorary chairman of the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Council in Washington, D.C. He came to national and international attention when he protested President Reagan's visit to Bitburg, Germany. The Bitburg event, he said at his appearance at Beth-El, "educated America for three weeks. I was pleading morally and President Reagan's advisers were pleading politically. And once I spoke of the moral implications, I stopped, since I do not want to get pulled into a political debate."

"I am not a politician," he said, "I am not a scientist. I am not a prophet. The prophets disappeared during Biblical times. But when I appeared on the panel after the television movie, 'The Day After,' I said, 'Watching the film, I had the feeling that world had suddenly become Jewish.' And I said that because of the Holocaust. Because we have looked into the abyss and we are not the same. The enemy killed Jews and thought he could get away with it. The enemy killed Jews, but, in fact, he affected human kind. The world is no longer the same. History is no longer the same. Nothing is again the same. From those dark years, a people have been threatened by the enemy of all people, threatened to be exterminated. Children were playing in the gardens in Hungary, in France, and they were already dead and they didn't know it. But the important thing to remember is that the effect of those black years was universal."

Drawing further analogy to the Holocaust, Wiesel discussed the accident at Chernobyl, in the Soviet Union, and expressed his fears about smaller countries like Libya, "who have no regard for humanity, if they get hold of nuclear weapons, the result could be disastrous."

To Bear Witness

Wiesel urged Jews "not to be a judge, but to be a witness. I urge Jews to write, to speak, to open up, to bear witness. For thousands of years, Jews lived in constant uncertainty. Now, the whole world lives in constant uncertainty because of the nuclear arms race. But we are still here. In spite of threats, in spite of dangers, we are still here. If someone had told me when I was a boy growing up in Transylvania that there would ever be a Jewish state of Israel, I wouldn't have believed them. But that Jewish state was born only 3 years after the darkest period in Jewish history. If we remember what was done to us and the way we overcame it, we can prevent further disasters. If we can remember the time when Sadat arrived in Jerusalem, I was there, and it was Sadat that ordered the bombing of Israel that killed hundreds of Israelis and left the people that were there greeting him widows and orphans, and these people greeted him with tears in their eyes, I realized that we indeed can overcome these blockades to peace."

Wiesel's appearance at Temple Beth-El was sponsored by the Temple's Benefactors Fund.

Peter Hellman Reports On Soviet Treatment Of Refusniks

asked him, Aren't you drawing unnecessary attention to yourself? But he told me, no, he didn't think so, since the K.G.B. (the Soviet secret police) had been following him anyway."

Many refusniks are fired from their jobs, Hellman said, but, during the time of his visit to the U.S.S.R., he learned that the K.G.B. had taken a different tact.

"Now they allow the dissidents to keep their jobs," Hellman said, "because they think that if a person is at work, there are those many hours they aren't causing trouble on the street."

Hellman reported that the teaching and learning of the Hebrew language is forbidden in the Soviet Union for Jews, although it is offered at the universities. The K.G.B., he said, are often fluent in Hebrew. But it is forbidden for a Jew to learn Hebrew privately.

"To learn Hebrew," Hellman said, "is to the Soviets a sign that there is a Jewish revival and this is what they want to crush."

One Family's Story

Hellman told of one family who live in Vilna, the town where YIVO, the center for Yiddish culture and research now located in New York City, was founded. The woman in this particular family became Jewishly observant and wanted to use the mikveh, the ritual bath, at the synagogue, which has been unused for a long period of time. And so this woman takes the overnight train to Moscow to use the mikveh there. Upon using the mikveh at the Moscow synagogue, she takes the overnight train back to Vilna. When Hellman asked her how much the train costs, she told him it amounts to her husband's weekly salary. "But that is the price I pay for my married life," she said.

Hellman, who is the son of Richard and Violet Hellman of Kingston, told the group that during his interviews with the Jewish dissidents, he wrote his questions on small slates, the kind that children play with, in order to communicate. The dissidents, in reply, wrote their answers on another sheet of paper on the slate. This was done, he said, so that their conversations couldn't be monitored by the K.G.B. who had electronically bugged their apartments.

T.V. Programming On Arms Race

Women for a Non-Nuclear Future would like to encourage television viewers to watch two informative and inspiring broadcasts to be aired in the coming month. Both programs will be televised on WTBS-Atlanta. (Cable network)

The first program, entitled Women — For America, For the World, will be broadcast Monday, May 19, at 10:30 p.m. The program is hosted by actress Jane Alexander and produced by Academy Award Nominee Vivienne Verdon-Roe. The film celebrates women who have the vision, the courage and the determination to redefine the meaning of security for our nation and our world. With common sense and compassion, twenty-two women — ranging from a well-known actress to a black union leader — speak out for our health, educational and economic needs and for the fundamental value in protecting our most precious resource — our children.

On Monday, June 2, at 10:30 p.m., WTBS will broadcast A Step Away From War, narrated by Paul Newman. This program presents a compelling case for an immediate and comprehensive test ban by the United States and the Soviet Union.

Those viewers who are inspired to become more involved in the movement to end the arms race can contact Carol Bragg or Bina Hansen at Women for a Non-Nuclear Future, 751-5166.

Anne Frank's Diary Authentic, Experts Say

NEW YORK — The Diary of Anne Frank — a Dutch girl's heart-wrenching testimonial to Jewish suffering in the Holocaust that has been called a fake by neo-Nazis — is indeed real but far from complete, experts said.

They said a new version of the classic diary, published in Holland recently and containing all Frank's writings, should quell all doubts of the book's authenticity.

Since it first appeared in bookstores more than 38 years ago, the diary's authenticity has come under attack.

Researchers using chemical analysis on the paper, ink and glue determined that the diary was written in the 1940s. They also made sure the handwriting was consistent throughout and compared it with authenticated letters by Frank and poems she penned.

"This is the final answer to all questions," said Bauc van der Wal, executive director of the Anne Frank Center in New York City.

Neo-Nazi and right-wing writers, some with academic credentials, have charged that the diary was forged.

Frank, dubbed "the voice of 6 million vanished souls," wrote the diary while hiding with her family and several others from the Nazis for two years in a secret annex.

The Franks were discovered by the Germans in 1944, and the Dutch girl died in the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp at the age of 15, probably in March 1945.

The book has become a symbol of Jewish suffering at the hands of the Nazis.

"She personifies the millions that died," Jack Polak, 73, a survivor of the Bergen-Belsen camp, said at a Manhattan news conference.

Frank's father, Otto, published an edited version of his daughter's diary in 1947, saying he had left out "certain parts of no value to the reader."

While retaining the essence of her writings, he omitted about 40 percent of her diary, including passages about her sexual awareness and scathing attacks on her mother, van der Wal said.

Frank's father, who died in 1980, turned over her diary to the Dutch government in his will, said van der Wal. The Dutch government then began its five-year inquiry into the diary's authenticity.

To quash doubts, all of Frank's writings, including her spelling mistakes and more controversial subject matter, were published in a new 714-page book called the Diaries of Anne Frank.

Folk Singer In Newport

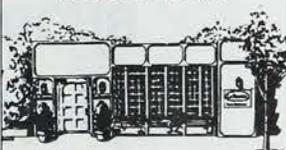

Channing Music Series is excited to announce its last concert of their Spring Series '86 will be an evening with folk singer Bill Staines.

Bill Staines is a very familiar name in the folk world. A New England native, for fifteen years he has traveled back and forth across North America, singing mostly his own songs and playing his upside down, backwards, left-handed style guitar. Bill's folk career started in Boston-Cambridge in the early 1960's. He quickly became a popular performer in the area, recognized in 1971 by a reviewer for The Phoenix as "simply Boston's best performer."

Bill Staines' performance will be at 8 p.m. on May 31 at the Channing Memorial Church, 135 Pelham St. (across from Touro Park), Newport, R.I. Advance sales tickets will cost $7. Tickets at the door will cost $8. Reservations can be made by calling 401-849-7721.

Cabaret At Brown

Live Your Life!, a show written and directed by Loni Berry and starring Deborah Burrell, will be presented Saturday, May 24, as part of Commencement Weekend activities at Brown University. Cabaret performances are scheduled for 9 and 11 p.m. in Alumnae Hall, 194 Meeting Street.

A songwriter, actor, music director and arranger, Berry, Brown class of '76, has been reaping praise from New York City critics for his work. He directed the musical revues I Could Have Been Dorothy Dandridge and Devine and Divinity and played Wesley in William Saroyan's The Time of Your Life.

Singer-acress Burrell is perhaps best known for her leading role as Deena Jones, the Diana Ross sound-alike in Dreamgirls. She has also appeared in The Wiz, Eubie and One Mo' Time.

Live Your Life! combines standard arrangements with pop, R&B, and original material, all played by a five-piece band. The show features The Music Company, a New York-based theater group that includes such well-known cabaret entertainers as Leotis Clyburn, L.E. Howell, Devora Johnson and David McCormick.

The show is open to the public. Tickets may be purchased at the door for $11 or in advance for $9 at Maddock Alumni Center, 38 Brown Street.

Journey Back In History

The Rhode Island Historical Society will host a bus trip on Saturday, June 7 for those who wish to journey back in time to 17th century Rhode Island. Starting at 9 a.m. sharp, the group will embark from the Aldrich House on a day-long journey to view historic buildings and sites important to the state's early history — from Lincoln to South County.

The architectural landmarks that will be visited are the Clemence-Irons House (built c. 1680) in Johnston; the Great Road Historic District in Lincoln, which features the Eleazar Arnold House (c. 1677) and other adjacent historic buildings; the Museum of Primitive Culture in Peacedale; Smith's Castle in Wickford; the Great Swamp Fight Monument in South Kingstown; and the Clement Weaver House, a private home in East Greenwich.

Both the Clemence-Irons House and the Eleazar Arnold House are owned and preserved by the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities (S.P.N.E.A.). The homes are two of the very few remaining original "Rhode Island Stone-Enders." A stone-ender is a typical 17th century dwelling composed of a single room with a 3' half-story loft above, and covered with a steeply pitched gable roof. A huge chimney built of local stone (gneiss) formed almost the whole end wall, hence the name "Stone-Enders." The concept of style was very medieval, as American colonists brought with them English traditions and virtues handed down by generations of country carpenters. Virtues of economy and simplicity were reflected in the early American way of life and architecture.

The Eleazar Arnold House, however, is the most unique stone-ender remaining in Rhode Island. Arnold, who was more affluent than many of his neighbors in Lincoln, built his stone-ender with two full stories on the interior and with many intricate details on the exterior. He decorated his home with expensive furnishings but concentrated on those exterior details which reflected his wealth from the outside. His home is known as a two-story "splendid mansion" and will be viewed by the tour group from its unique exterior only.

Other historic points of interest which will be seen are Smith's Castle in Wickford which was built on the site of Roger Williams' trading post, and the Great Swamp Fight Monument in South Kingstown which marks the bloody battle between the Native Americans and the colonists in 1675.

The bus will return around 4 p.m. after spending the day discovering the early vestiges of Rhode Island's First Century. The cost of the tour, $25, includes transportation, lunch and admissions. Advance registration is necessary as space is limited. For more information, call Carol Hagglund at 331-8575.

RI Civic Chorale And Orchestra

The Rhode Island Civic Chorale and Orchestra proudly announces its thirtieth anniversary season, 1986-1987, and the results of its search for a successor to its departing Music Director, Robert Bass. Choosing from more than seventy interested conductors and twelve semi-finalists, the Rhode Island Civic Chorale and Orchestra has selected three Guest Conductors for next season, intending to choose one of them as its Music Director beginning with the 1987-1988 season.

RICC&O will give its annual presentation of Handel's The Messiah this December, under the baton of Christopher McGahan. Edward Markward will conduct Beethoven's Mass in C and other works in February, 1987. Timothy Mount will direct F.J. Haydn's Mass in Time of War and The Storm in May, 1987.

Brief descriptions of the three Guest Conductors follow:

Christopher McGahan, of Lowell, Mass., received his Masters Degree in Choral Conducting from the University of Wisconsin, and his Doctorate in Choral Music from the University of Illinois in 1979. He is on the faculty of the University of Lowell's College of Music and conducts the Choral Union and the Chamber Singers at the University.

Edward Markward, of North Providence, Rhode Island, received a Bachelor's Degree in trumpet, voice and French horn, and a Master's Degree in voice, from Drake University, and his Doctorate in voice from the University of Michigan in 1974. He is on the faculty of Rhode Island College's Music Department, and conducts the R.I.C. Chorus and Chamber Singers.

Timothy Mount, of Hammond, Louisiana, received his Bachelor's Degree in music from the University of Michigan, and received Master's and Doctor's Degrees in Choral Conducting from California State University, Fullerton, and the University of Southern California, respectively. He conducts at the San Luis Obispo Mozart Festival each summer and will join the Music Department of the State University of New York at Stony Brook this autumn.

Further information may be obtained from Chester S. Labedz, Jr., Chairman of the Rhode Island Civic Chorale and Orchestra Search Committee, at (401) 457-2584.

BBC Offers Summer Courses

Registration is now open for the over 33 non-credit course offering at Bristol Community College. Courses vary from mixology and photography to conversational languages taught in French, Spanish and Portuguese.

"Non-credit courses offer an in-expansive way to master a new skill or get a head start on fall studies," said Janice Motta, dean of continuing education. "Students may find a morning or evening off from their regular routine to learn something new or have fun is just what their summer needs." Registration takes place in the Continuing Education of the Hudnall Administration Building on the Elshree Street campus from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Non-credit classes begin on Monday, June 16. A special walk-in registration for all credit and non-credit courses will take place on Thursday, May 22, from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the Hudnall Administration Building. For more information, call the College at (617) 678-2811, extension 155.

Nationality Day At Solomon Schechter

They hailed from France, Germany, Spain, Italy, Ireland, England, Denmark and Russia. Dressed in the colorful costumes of their native lands, these "immigrants for a day" took students, parents and other visitors on a visual and gustatory tour of their homelands.

Maps, fact sheets, and bright photos transformed the walls into a tourist's heaven. Tables were laden with objets d'art — wooden shoes from Holland, toy soldiers from England, porcelain from France, a doll from Ireland.

Delectable native food and drink was plentiful: French wine and Italian pizza, Spanish gaspacho and Danish cheese, English tea and Irish potatoes. An international smorgasbord!

Visitors entering the international fair were handed a passport which was stamped for them at each location. Representatives of each country conducted verbal tours, pointing out interesting facts and places of interest.

The mood was jolly, the food excellent. As Nationality Day drew to a close, all participants — travelers and tour guides alike — agreed that the trip had been "first-class all the way!"

Edward Adler To Receive Award

Edward O. Adler, the 1986 recipient of the Amudim Award of the Providence Hebrew Day School, will be presented with the award this Tuesday evening, May 27. A cocktail reception to honor Mr. Adler will be held at the Marriott Inn at 7:30 p.m. The community is invited.

Since 1963 Mr. Adler has been on the teaching staff of PHDS, supporting not only the students, but working on behalf of the institution as well, through his involvement in fund-raising, seminars, student programs and social events. As ritual director of Temple Emanuel since 1970, he has overseen the functioning of the daily and Shabbat minyanim, coordinating services, aliyot, weddings, and learning sessions and teaching Hebrew school and adult education classes.

He serves on the teacher certification committee of the Bureau of Jewish Education, raises funds for the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island and still finds time to be available when needed to help the residents of the Home for the Aged conduct their Friday night services.

Mr. Adler will receive the 1986 Amudim Award for his inspiring and tireless efforts on behalf of the Providence Hebrew Day School and the entire Rhode Island Jewish community. He joins a distinguished roster of Amudim Awardees that began with Rabbi William G. Braude in 1965 and Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen in 1966. Mr. Howard E. Schachter was last year's Amudim honoree.

PHDS Celebrates Israel's 38th Birthday

Oversized bright-colored papier mache letters spelling out ISRAEL were hung above the stage. They were made by the children in art classes under the direction of art teacher Ms. Maria Moniz.

The children stepped up to the stage through gates representing those of the old city of Jerusalem. The sets were created by art teacher Ms. Maria Moniz's students.

Providence Hebrew Day School students and their families celebrated Yom Ha'atzmaut last week with a traditional Israeli falafel supper, songs and dances, and a special evening service. A stunning replica of the Western Wall and the gates to the old city of Jerusalem formed the backdrop for the student performances. It was a festive occasion to celebrate the State of Israel's 38th birthday.

Blue and white balloons and blue and white tablecloths transformed the PHDS kindergarten room for the buffet supper party.

MAURICE ABRICH

PROVIDENCE — Maurice Abrich, 83, of 62 General St., associated with his brothers in running the former Allens Avenue Oil Company for many years, died Thursday, May 15, 1986, at Charlesgate Nursing Center.

He was born in Providence, a son of the late Abraham and Ida (Taber) Abrich.

After graduation from Brown University in 1925 he worked for a brokerage house on Wall Street until the 1929 stock market crash, when he returned to Providence.

In the 1930s he joined his two brothers in operating the oil company, at Allens Avenue and Public Street. Besides selling oil under a brand name, the company also blended lubricating oil and sold it to retailers in Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

He was an Army veteran of World War II.

Mr. Abrich retired from the oil company when the state purchased the company's property. He then traveled extensively throughout Mexico, Europe and North Africa.

He leaves a sister, Thelma DeLeon and a brother, Jacob L. Abrich, both of Cranston.

A graveside service was held at Lincoln Park Cemetery, Warwick. Arrangements were by Mount Sinai Memorial Chapel, Providence.

ROSE COHEN

PROVIDENCE — Rose Cohen, 89, a resident of Charlesgate Nursing Centre, died Sunday, May 18 at the home. She was the widow of William Cohen.

Born in Setauket, N.Y., a daughter of the late Samuel and Lena (Sherman) Blackman, she had lived in Providence for more than 65 years and previously lived in Bristol.

Mrs. Cohen was a former member of the board of directors of the Women's Association of Miriam Hospital, a member of Women's ORT, and its board of trustees, and was a member of Temple Sinai and Hadassah.

She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Barbara Miller of Cranston and Mrs. Claire Cath of Arlington, Mass.; four grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

The funeral service was held at Mount Sinai Memorial Chapel, 825 Hope St. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery, Warwick.

CELIA FLEISIG

PROVIDENCE — Celia Fleisig, 80, of 397 Montgomery Ave., died Thursday, May 15, 1986, at Rhode Island Hospital. She was the widow of Maurice B. Fleisig.

In 1940 she founded The Mills Sisters Dress Shop which was located for 42 years at Thayer and Angell Streets. She moved the store to Wayland Square about three years ago.

She was a member of Temple Beth-El and its Sisterhood and was a life member of the Women's Association of the Jewish Home for the Aged.

She was born in Fall River, Mass., a daughter of the late David and Ida (Nager) Mills. She had been a Providence resident 70 years.

Mrs. Fleisig leaves a daughter.

Phyllis Fleisig of Providence; two sons, Dr. Norbert Fleisig of Providence and Samuel Fleisig of East Greenwich; a sister, Rita Roseman of Yonkers, N.Y.; four brothers, Irving H., Sanford and Albert Mills, all of Warwick; and William Mills of Providence; and four grandchildren.

The funeral service was held at Mount Sinai Memorial Chapel, 825 Hope St., Providence. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery, Warwick.

UNVEILING

An unveiling for Lillian Chorney will be held Sunday, June 1, 1986, at 12, noon, in Lincoln Park Cemetery, Warwick, Rhode Island.

New Approaches To Brain Disorders

REHOVOT, Israel — Bringing brain tissue transplantation closer to reality is the research goal of Prof. Menahem Segal, first incumbent of the Weizmann Institute's Harry and Leona Levine Chair in Neurosciences. Established by Mrs. Harry Levine of Cambridge, Massachusetts, the Chair represents yet another example of the longstanding dedication, leadership and support given to the Institute by the late Harry Levine and friends of the Levine family, including the establishment of the Levine Institute of Applied Science and the Harry Levine Center for Applied Research.

Not only did Harry Levine contribute to the development of the Institute from its earliest years, but he also made extremely important contributions to the creation of the State of Israel.

New Research Approaches

Prof. Segal's research may result in a new approach to disorders of brain function such as Parkinsonism and Alzheimer's disease as well as to handling the natural consequences of aging. The progressively debilitating symptoms of these conditions are caused by irreparable damage to certain nerve cells. Since nerve tissue cannot repair itself, Prof. Segal hopes to find ways of replacing injured areas with healthy tissue from suitable donors — an approach conceptually similar to heart and kidney transplantation.

Although this work is still in a very early experimental stage, Prof. Segal's group has already shown that rats, experiencing memory defects due to brain damage, regain some memory function when appropriate cells from normal rats are transplanted into the impaired region. His work also used brain tissue cultures to examine the transplantability of various types of nerve cells, something which facilitates in-depth study of the way that new nerve cells "hook up" with host cells. Proper formation of such functional connections (synapses) are essential for the re-establishment of normal nervous system function following transplantation.

Born in Israel in 1944, Prof. Segal received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from Israel's Bar-Ilan University, his Ph.D. in 1973 from the California Institute of Technology. Following postdoctoral work at the Neuropharmacology Laboratory at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Washington, D.C., he returned to Israel in 1974 to work in the Institute's Isotope Research Department. He has served as a Visiting Scientist at the Institute of Neurophysiology, University of Oslo, Norway, and as a Visiting Scientist at the National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Maryland.

Are nutritious snacks boring? uncreative? bland? Not so, demonstrates Elie Kaunfer, Solomon Schechter Day School student, as he displays his winning entry, called "Banana" in the SSDS Taste-Off contest. This was one of the many exciting labs and events that occurred during the school's month-long study of nutrition. Debbie Feldstein's "Fruit Salad a la Nuts" came in second, with Daniel Stein and Dorie Fain tied for third, and Hilarie Rubin placing in 4th position.

Zionist Groups Disrupt Soviet Day

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (JTA) — One American Jewish student was expelled from Canada and several others were detained Wednesday when members of three New York-based Zionist organizations protested the treatment of Russian Jewry during Soviet Union Day at Expo '86.

Tamir Elia, 20, of Brooklyn, N.Y., was arrested by Canadian police and given 36 hours to leave the country after he participated in a vocal protest during the opening ceremonies of the Soviet Day celebration. Elias, a member of the Tagar student Zionist activist movement, was taken into custody after he interrupted a speech by Vasily Shamshin, Soviet Minister of Communications.

As Shamshin took the podium to address more than 3,000 people gathered in the Expo's Plaza of Nations, Elias and several other Zionist demonstrators called on the Soviet official to "end the Holocaust against the Russian Jews."

Loud chants of "Let Our People Go," and "Stop Oppressing Soviet Jews," greeted Shamshin as he was introduced by the Master of Ceremonies. Expo security officials removed the students from the building before Shamshin was able to continue his remarks.

Throughout the day, other Zionist activists continued to raise the issue of Soviet Jewry at the world's fair. Members of the Herut Zionists of America and the Betar Zionist youth organization distributed materials on Soviet Jewry, solicited signatures on petitions to the Soviet government, and held a press conference in front of the Soviet Pavilion. During the press conference, two additional activists were expelled from the fairgrounds.

Jewish Perspective On World Hunger

NEW YORK — Feed The World, a teacher's guide to helping students understand the Jewish perspective on world hunger, is the latest publication of the Coalition for Alternatives in Jewish Education (CAJE).

It is one of a series of "crisis curricula" created by CAJE members to aid fellow teachers in bringing issues of contemporary concern to students of all ages. These publications are provided without charge to all CAJE members.

"World hunger is a Jewish issue," the booklet declares, and goes on to explain:

"Judaism speaks in many ways about feeding the hungry and caring for the poor and needy. 'Torah, Talmud, Brachot, Mitzvot ... each contains instructions — moral imperatives — based on an awareness of food as a source of life, a gift from God. Food, we are taught, is something to be appreciated, and never to be taken for granted. Food, like the earth itself, is something for which we are responsible. And providing food for the hungry, in a way that respects both need and dignity, is our obligation."

Feed The World was written by three Jewish teachers in Seattle, all of them CAJE members: Bill Kunin, a graduate student whose area of investigation is world hunger; Beth Huppin, Regional Director of United Synagogue Youth; and Joanne Glosser, a congregational educator and consultant. It was produced under the general supervision of Joel Lurie Grishaver, Chairperson of CAJE Publications.

Commenting on the rationale behind the publication, Mr. Grishaver stated:

"World culture has now learned to respond to the issue of hunger on a dramatic and an event-by-event basis. The Jewish message that the obligation to meet human need is ever-present and continual is the essence of this crisis curriculum.

"While We Are The World was clearly among the stimuli, two of our authors have been working on this issue of hunger for a long time, and our message has to do with mitzvah and basic obligations, and has nothing to do with momentary inspiration."

The booklet proceeds in steps, from analysis of the causes and extent of world hunger, to Biblical and Talmudic texts on tzedakah with special emphasis on feeding the hungry, to suggestions on how to present the subject to students in various age groups.

The guide provides a wide selection of texts from Talmudic and other sources that offer insight into the proper Jewish response to hunger and poverty. It also elaborates on each citation, supplying comments and questions that are designed to stimulate class discussion.

Feed The World also contains a list of books, films, and film strips on world hunger, as well as a list of organizations that deal with the subject.

For information about CAJE, contact Dr. Eliot Spack, National Director, CAJE, 468 Park Ave. South, New York, NY 10016. Phone: 212-696-0740.

Sunday Afternoon At The Carnival

Last Sunday was a perfect day for the carnival held at the corner of Morris Avenue and Fosdyke Street in Providence. Vladislav Tenenbaum, mime extraordinaire, who emigrated from Russia and is now a permanent resident of Providence, waits patiently for his turn to entertain the crowd.

Some mothers and children watched the excitement under the shade of the trees as they took refuge from the delightfully hot and sunny day.

Children and adults cheered and playfully answered the mime who kept them guessing and laughing.

The children took a few minutes during the fun and games to drop some coins into the offering box.

Na'Amat

Gloria Elbling of Pittsburgh, National President of NA'AMAT USA (formerly Pioneer Women/Na'amat), the Women's Labor Zionist Organization of America, announced today that her organization had cabled Israeli Premier Shimon Peres and leaders of the Labor Party in the Knesset, urging them to "vigorously oppose all attempts to narrow the definition of 'Who Is a Jew' in Israel's Law of Return."

"We deplore the recent reintroduction of this issue in the Knesset in a more dangerous form than ever," Mrs. Elbling said, pointing out that NA'AMAT USA, and its sister organization Na'amat, the largest women's organization in Israel, have been and continue to be inalterably opposed to any amendment to the Law of Return.

Under this law a Jew is defined as a person born of a Jewish mother or converted to Judaism. An amendment to the law's definition of "Who Is a Jew" that would have added the words "according to halacha" was defeated in February, but a new version of the amendment that would give the Israeli rabbinical courts absolute authority to decide on the validity of conversions was introduced in the Knesset in April.

"If passed, such amendments would have the effect of invalidating conversions by non-Orthodox rabbis in the United States and elsewhere in the diaspora," Mrs. Elbling said. "Automatic citizenship in Israel must remain open to all Jews, including those converted to Judaism by Reform and Conservative rabbis," she emphasized.
