5747 In Review: A Year Of Debate

(First In A Series)

by Andrew Muchin

NEW YORK (JTA) — Jews argued throughout 5747, perhaps more than during any recent year. As individuals and organizations, Jews took on adversaries and perceived adversaries of Israel and Jewry, and — no less vociferously — each other.

Some of the talk only threatened action, such as Israel's oft-endangered national unity government that held together through the rotation of the premiership, and afterward despite conflicts over the budget and the proposed international Mideast peace conference.

Other talk was in reaction to events. Pope John Paul II was said to be good to the Jews, then bad, then was willing to converse, although to whom was the subject of well-publicized U.S. Jewish in-fighting through most of August. It's not yet wholly clear what the papal meeting with Jewish delegates finally accomplished.

Still other talk during 5747 was intended to spur action. Diaspora Jewish leaders, asserting themselves in Israel more than ever, successfully lobbied against changing laws that define Jewish identity for purposes of Israeli citizenship. Indeed, the debate over what — or who — defines Jewishness continued to vex the Jewish world.

Many other events took place despite what Jews had to say. More Soviet Jews — 4,696 — than at any time over the last five years emigrated in just the first eight months of 1987, but tens of thousands more, perhaps 400,000, wish to join them, and Soviet repression continues against religious and cultural expression.

Of course, the news of the Jewish world concerned far more than all this, as the following month-by-month description demonstrates:

October 1986

JERUSALEM — An angry crowd attended the second funeral in less than two weeks in Ashkelon for a Jewish resident stabbed to death in Gaza.

NEW YORK — Robert Pires, 22 and an alleged member of the white supremacist Aryan Nations, was charged with three counts of bombing and one count of attempted bombing in Coueur d'Alene, Idaho.

JERUSALEM — The first Israelis of diplomatic rank to be posted in Poland in nearly 20 years were applauded by about 130 Rosh Hashanah worshippers at the Warsaw synagogue.

WASHINGTON — U.S. Jewish representatives urged human rights be discussed at the U.S.-Soviet summit in Iceland. Secretary of State George Shultz promised it would be at the top of the agenda. Outside the summit meeting, Jewish activists and families of refuseniks from a half dozen countries pleaded the cause of Soviet Jewry.

JERUSALEM — A grenade attack on Israeli soldiers and their families in the Old City killed one person and wounded 69 in the bloodiest terrorist foray here in more than two years.

NEW YORK — Long-time Jewish refusenik David Goldfarb left his hospital bed and then the Soviet Union with his wife Cecilia aboard the jet of industrialist Armand Hammer.

NEW YORK — Nobel Prize winners included three Jews: author Elie Weisel of New York, for Peace; and Dr. Rita Levi-Montalcine of Rome and the U.S. and Dr. Stanley Cohen of Nashville, Tenn., for Physiology and Medicine.

JERUSALEM — Pundits ate their words as Israel's unity government actually rotated the premiership from Shimon Peres to Yitzhak Shamir, as promised, 25 months into the government. Peres took Shamir's job of Vice Premier and Foreign Minister. Otherwise, the Cabinet remained nearly identical.

BONN — The legislature mandated that victims of Nazi persecution be accorded the same status as war victims and wounded veterans with regard to pensions and welfare.

ROME — Chief Rabbi of Rome Elio Toaff headed the Jewish delegation to the 12-religion day of prayers for peace at Assisi.

VIENNA — Austria recalled for consultations its Ambassador to Israel, Otto Pleinert, over Israel's failure to replace its retired Ambassador to Austria, Michael Elizur. Israel's move was seen as a reaction to the election as president of Austria the previous summer of Kurt Waldheim, allegedly involved in Nazi crimes.

GENEVA — The International Red Cross Movement changed its name to the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement. Neglected was the Red Magen David, Israel's health organization.

JERUSALEM — Women gained ground in religious affairs with the appointment of two women to the Labor Party delegation to the 96-member electoral college that would choose the next Ashkenazic Chief Rabbi of Tel Aviv.

PARIS — Ivory Coast, which resumed diplomatic relations with Israel a year ago, said it would move its recently reopened Embassy from Jerusalem to Tel Aviv in accordance with a UN resolution.

PARIS — Britain was unable to convince its 11 fellow members of the European Economic Community to join the British dissolution of diplomatic relations with Syria over the latter's alleged involvement in world terrorism.

November

WASHINGTON — Two Jewish incumbents were reelected to the U.S. Senate, Arlen Specter (R. Pa.) and Warren Rudman (R. Vt.), meaning eight Jews continued to serve in that body. A number of Israel's best Senate friends also were re-elected. Twenty-nine Jews were elected to the House, one less than in the previous Congress. No candidate affiliated with extremist Lyndon LaRouche won.

Part Three of a Three Part Series

Zhanna Volinsky was a good Soviet citizen. Authorities, in fact, held her as an example of a Jew who was able to achieve equally with a Russian.

For a long while, Zhanna believed in the system of her motherland. She was given the opportunity to study at a leading institute; she even received a Lenin scholarship. She was rewarded for her excellent scholastic achievements and her talent as a musician. Zhanna was selected to help her co-students with their lessons, to organize concert tours, to sing, to recite poetry. "It was my life and I did it with pleasure."

As a talented teacher of music, Zhanna was invited to study on a graduate level and received her Ph.D. The prestigious Moscow Pedagogical Institute offered her a job and Zhanna, at an early age, achieved great success in her career.

"I didn't pay enough attention to the difficulties of other Jews. I heard about friends and relatives, but I looked at the world through rose-colored glasses."

To advance in one's career in the Soviet Union demands that one must be a member of the Communist party. The moment in Zhanna's career arrived; she assumed that the praise of her colleagues and superiors indicated that she would be suggested for membership, even though this would be a rare occurrence for a Jew. The time came. In her place, a teacher of much less professional regard was nominated. Zhanna watched while another woman received the career advancement that party membership enjoys. "This was the first moment I realized I was not the same to them."

The year was 1976,about the same time that David and Mila Shrayer came to similar conclusions. David and Mila had experienced the limitations in their careers and in David's freedom to publish his writings. They had decided to seek the opportunity to live in a land where they could think freely, advance according to their abilities and practice Judaism without fear.

Soviet Jewish emigre Zhanna Volinsky, with her daughter Julia, at Green Airport in Warwick: "We are at last in our native family," she said upon arrival. "People are so close to us. It means they are like our relatives."

Zhanna Volinsky and Mila Shrayer are sisters. Their father had died the previous year. Zhanna feels that he protected them from the realities of life. He strongly identified as a Jew and he and his wife, Anna, had suffered during the Stalin era. But they shielded their daughters from hurt and taught their family to strive diligently for the best.

The years following were a rude awakening to Zhanna. She began to lose her illusions about the Soviet system. Her daughter, Julia, was born in 1975 and both she and her child experienced medical difficulties. She feels that she and Julia were treated roughly and insensitively because she was Jewish. Julia's first school experience with a teacher who was negative towards Julia's "nationality", once again emphasized to Zhanna the situation of Jews.

Jewish Family Service: Hope For Emotional Pain

by Terry Raky

"You can't separate the person from the family system," says Bryna Bettigole, M.S.W., A.C.S.W. of Jewish Family Service. An M.S.W. is a Master's degree in social work, a 2-year graduate program. An A.C.S.W. means membership in the Academy of Certified Social Workers. It is obtained after a person with an M.S.W. completes a required number of clinical practice hours supervised by someone with an A.C.S.W., usually taking about 2 years to accomplish, followed by successful completion of an examination. R.I.S.W. refers to Registered Independent Social Worker, conferred after an examination and being the highest qualification a social worker can achieve.

Mrs. Bettigole recently assumed the position of Clinical Director at the agency; she has been a practicing therapist for 11 years. She is 'systems-oriented' which refers to understanding an individual in terms of his 'system' or family unit, both past and present. In systems theory, a member of the family has been

At Temple Emanu-El

The Yamim Nora'im will be a spiritually exciting and renewing time at Temple Emanu-El this year. Our Rabbi, Wayne M. Franklin, will officiate in the Main Sanctuary. Ivan Perlman will be returning as the Hazzan, and Debra Dickensheets will be at the Eva Bader Memorial Organ.

Rabbi Daniel H. Liben will conduct service in the New Synagogue. Joining him as Hazzan will be Josh Perlman; the organ in the New Synagogue will be played by Fred MacArthur.

Rabbi Yaacov Rosenberg, recently retired as Vice-Chancellor of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America will once again be the Rabbi for the Alperin Meeting House Congregation. Returning for his tenth year as Hazzan will be Dr. Jules Rosenberg. Supporting Dr. Rosenberg will be the accomplished organist Elena DeNitto.

We are pleased to announce a "new" Service at Emanu-El this year. On the second day of Rosh Hashanah there will be a service oriented to the specific needs of families with children ages eight and up. There will be no organ at this Service. Though geared towards families with children, this worship experience is open to all members of the Temple.

On the afternoon of the first day of Rosh HaShanah, at 4:15 p.m., we will meet at the Seekonk River at the end of Loring Avenue for that special ceremony of Tashlich. Tashlich is a meaningful religious rite by which we symbolically cast off our sins into a living body of water. It is a warm and significant experience and we hope that many people will attend. For those who wish to walk: we will meet at the front of Temple Emanu-El at 3:34 p.m. and wend our way to the Seekonk. We will walk down Sessions Street to Blackstone Boulevard, then to Margrave Avenue which runs into Loring Avenue.

Finally, we are offering a range of children's programs that will help make the Holyday more meaningful for them and allow parents the opportunity to participate in adult Services. There will be babysitting for children ages one-and-a-half through three-and-a-half. Professionals have been hired who will attend to the specific needs of this age group.

There will be a special program for pre-school and early elementary aged children, ages three-and-a-half through five. The professional staff at the Bureau of Jewish Education has designed age-appropriate activities and holiday experiences that they will be teaching to parent volunteers who will lead these programs.

Lastly, the Junior Congregation Service is geared for children with some English and Hebrew reading skills. The service has been rewritten to include meaningful High Holyday prayers, and will encourage the participation of children who have various levels of knowledge and skills. The service is led by a professional leader, assisted by parent volunteers.

All three of these age-appropriate programs will take place on both days of Rosh Hashanah, from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., except for Junior Congregation on the second day. Junior Congregation age children and their families are encouraged to attend the Faamily Service in the New Synagogue at 10 a.m. on that day. All three programs will be held on Yom Kippur day from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The High Holydays are an exciting, invigorating time in the life of a Jew. At Temple Emanu-El this year, we hope to add to the depth of enjoyment and purpose that our members experience.

An Old Year Passes, A New Year Dawns

NARRAGANSETT — The calendar states that September 23 is Eruv Rosh Hashanah, Eve of the New Year, and the first day of autumn. These two events — the beginning of the New Year 5748 and the start of the fall season that brings with it a flurry of activity before the inevitable onslaught of winter — plunges us into a realization of the passage of time, never an easy subject to face.

The New Year is a joyous time, but also a time for a re-examination of one's life and goals. And the autumn is a time for the harvesting of what one has sown — be they the crops one has planted in the earth with one's hands or the crops planted in society with one's mind.

Here on the road leading to my house the air is rich with the smell of fallen apples. The leaves have already begun to turn, from the green of summer to the reds and golds of the autumn. The long weeks that passed without rain has brought on an early fall. And as I sit and watch the last of the sun lingering on the lawn, where even the weeds and trumpet flowers seem dressed for the cool nights, I remember images of New Years that have passed, and most of these images are of bright sunlight and the warmth that comes from family gatherings. Yet there is also the bittersweet sensation that comes with acknowledging the fleeting passage of time.

Several years ago I was on an El Al flight to Israel. I had left Boston's Logan airport at night. A few hours later, the sun rose and men and women on the plane began to pray. When we arrived in Tel Aviv, the sun was beginning to set, and the prayers for sunset were recited. The passage of time — seen in the image of a jet-fueled journey — is marked by davening, by the shared chorus of holy songs, by prayers, by devotion.

A handful of men and women were standing before my seat on the jet plane in the bright sunlight unobstructed by the clouds. They were dressed in the colors of morning, just as I can recall standing with my family in South Providence or in Cranston during the High Holiday services, looking around at the splendor of the earth and the day and at the shiny shoes and new clothes of the congregants. With the New Year comes new wardrobes. As a young man that always bothered me. Why is it that people get prettied up, (to use the Yiddish translation of fehpitskhed) at this time of year? The earth and the flowers and the weeds are in their glory — perhaps that's why. (We always try to emulate the natural colors we see around us in our wardrobes.) Perhaps, also, it is a way of showing off one's joy in life. Surely the resplendent robes worn by the hazzan and the rabbi pay homage to the importance of the New Year. But as a boy I thought it vain. I've since changed my mind — now it is acceptable, because I hardly pay much attention to it. My eye goes upward, to the domed ceiling of the synagogue. My ears hear only the chorus of voices and prayers, the same prayers of thanks for the gift of living and for the new day. These are the same sounds I heard on the jet plane three years ago.

When I was visiting Jerusalem three years ago, talking with former Rhode Islander Nancy Wellins, I learned of the fervor for one's religion that one sees here in Rhode Island to a smaller degree, but exists in Jerusalem, in particular (and certainly in Tsfat), in a greater degree.

"When Sabbath comes tomorrow night," Nancy Wellins told me, "walk with me before sunset. I want to show you something."

I knew what I was in store for, because the week before I had spent some time with Jim Gershman, another former Rhode Islander, who told me, "Being Jewish here is a postive experience."

Later the next night I walked from my hotel to the street Nancy told me about, and there, on the sidewalk, men and women were washing their plates in boiling water to prepare for the evening meal. At the corner bakery, where Nancy bought her Sabbath challah, the baker wished her Shabbat shalom, a peaceful Sabbath, and one sensed instantly that he meant it. There was a wonderful feeling of solidarity, of being tied closely with one's faith. That's what Jim Gershman and Nancy Wellins had found in Israel, and that's what many are looking for here, in the United States.

Thoughts for the New Year: Exuberance, prayers of thanks, prayers for peace, a celebration of community, and the courage of our convictions to network for a better world.

But back to Israel for a moment:

Later the next week, in the bright sunlight of the kibbutz where Les Krieger and his family had invited me to share a meal with them — fresh tomatoes grown in his garden, some bread and yogurt, cucumbers and tea — we repeated the same blessing I had heard recited in Jerusalem, and the Krieger children offered a prayer for peace in the world. It was a simple meal and a simple prayer, but it had a profound affect on me.

I stayed in the guest house in Kfar Etzion, near the Krieger's home, and listened to the night sounds. Out my window, on the horizon, the last of the sunlight lingered on the Hebron hills. I could see the lights of the Israeli Army post nearby, ever alert to danger. I listened to the prayer for peace uttered by the children with the sweet voices over and over again in my mind. But the quest for peace is a more difficult one, a tenuous one. And that was the thought repeating itself in my mind on that summer's night, and it is the same thought that preoccupies me today, as we approach Eruv Rosh Hashanah and the coming of autumn.

In Tsfat, at the Lubavitcher synagogue down the street from where I was staying, there was singing — loud, joyous singing — all through the early evening. It was rhapsodic, uplifting. The men were lifting their voices and raising their arms and their cheeks were fiery red from exuberance. When Sabbath ends in Tsfat, everyone takes to the streets and soon people were strolling in and around the old streets of the Jewish quarter. There was more music and several of the artists living in the artists' quarter were playing musical instruments.

There is a generosity of giving in song that speaks to everyone, voices raised above the songs of the crickets, the chorus of the birds, voices that drift heaven-ward and then return to earth.

We can give that gift of song this New Year. It is the gift of devotion to make the world more receptive to the prayer for peace I heard the children utter. But it cannot come about unless we embrace the goal of networking for peace and working for it in an everlasting way.

Normalizing Relations

by Seymour Reich

Jews regard the relationship between the Vatican and the State of Israel as a crucial litmus test and the ultimate measurement of the health and progress of Jewish-Catholic relations. Accordingly, the absence of diplomatic normalization between Israel and the Vatican is a constant source of distress to the Jewish people and a major impediment to the world wide effort to promote harmony and brotherhood among Jews and Catholics.

There has been frequent contact between the Vatican and the State of Israel. The relationship appears to have improved with the passage of time. Although these are positive developments, they are not enough. This is a propitious time for the Vatican to normalize its diplomatic relations with the Jewish State.

The promise of a return to the Holy Land appears in the Torah, Judaism's most sacred text, and throughout history the identification of the Jewish people with the Land of Israel, Eretz Yisrael, has been the bedrock of Jewish faith. Zionism is a reflection of this profound theme in Jewish life and modern history has made it an increasingly powerful force in Jewish affairs.

The trauma of the Holocaust remains a searing nightmare for all Jews. The State of Israel was, and is, the ultimate symbol of all the efforts to overcome the consequences of anti-Semitic genocide.

In his homily at Otranto, Italy on October 5, 1980 John Paul II recognized this connection. "The Jewish people," he said, "after tragic experiences connected with the extermination of so many sons and daughters, driven by the desire for security, set up the State of Israel."

The lack of full and normal diplomatic relations between the Holy See and Israel is perceived by Jews as a refusal by the Catholic Church to acknowledge the essence of their identity. For His Holiness to undertake now to normalize relations between the Vatican and Israel would be a moral act and would constitue a historic contribution to world peace.

The State of Israel does not require normalization of relations with the Holy See to ensure its survival. If it is the proclaimed mission of the Catholic Church, to promote peace, hope and justice then the Vatican should feel compelled to promulgate the highest of moral considerations and bring about its stated aim of achieving peace in the Middle East.

The lack of full de jure relations continues to feed the illusions of fanatics and extremists who view Israel as an entity that will not survive. These bigots, in perceiving Israel as a transient, alien entity, cannot but be encouraged by the failure of the Holy See to establish full diplomatic ties with the State of Israel. The singular contribution which the Pope can make to the promotion of peace and coexistence among Jew, Christians, and Moslems in the Middle East is to help remove slanderous characterizations of Israel as a transient nation which still deters some governments of the region from approaching the negotiating table.

A variety of arguments are relied upon by those who oppose normal relations. They are all without merit. For example, it is sometimes argued that relations should not be normalized until disputes over Israel's borders have been resolved. But these unresolved disputes have not deterred other states from enjoying formal relations with Israel, nor has the Holy See refrained from establishing normal relations with states that are parties to disputes. Why discriminate against Israel?

Similarly, it is argued that normalization must be deferred until all issues involving the Palestinian Arabs have been resolved. But the Vatican's refusal to establish normal relations will not help to settle these complex issues. On the contrary, the presence of formal diplomatic channels would foster the open dialogue so essential for the removal of tensions and the promotion of peace. The failure to establish full diplomatic relations with Israel impedes the quest for peace.

It is also argued that normalization could have a backlash effect that might threaten Christian minorities in Moslem lands. We regret that minorities suffer persecution in several Arab nations. In contrast, the one country in the Middle East that has achieved an excellent record in protecting the rights of its Christian minorities is Israel. The history of international relations has shown that governments which seek to attain objectives through threats or blackmail rarely carry out those threats when confronted with firm resistance, resolute action and faits accompli. The Arab states have been no exception. It is common knowledge that Arab threats against countries contemplating diplomatic relations with Israel have not been carried out when such relations were indeed established and similar threats against commercial firms doing business with Israel have been largely ineffective. The prime example, perhaps, of Arab political realism is the effective acceptance, by the Arab world, of Egypt's peace with Israel — after decades during which the very idea of a peace treaty between an Arab state and Israel was unthinkable in that world.

What Did Glass Know?

by Eric Rosenman

"I know a lot of people in Beirut. And I will be okay there," former ABC News correspondent Charles Glass reportedly told friends before heading for the Lebanese capital last May. A month later someone kidnapped him.

Glass's companion, Ali Osseiran — the son of Lebanon's Defense Minister, a Shi'ite Moslem — and Osseiran's driver/bodyguard also were taken hostage, but soon released. Glass remained captive until Aug. 18 when he escaped, or was allowed to escape. Afterward he said that going to south Beirut, the stronghold of the pro-Iranian Shi'ite Hezbollah (Party of God) was "probably the stupidest mistake I made in my life."

But the American was no newcomer to Lebanon; he started his career as a journalist in Beirut in 1972 and won an Overseas Press Club award there in 1976. He became familiar to U.S. viewers for his Beirut-based coverage of the TWA flight 847 hijacking in 1985. On leave from ABC, he went back this spring to write a book on Lebanon.

Glass's personal ordeal, and his professional response to it, raises a serious question — one reporters routinely ask of newsmakers: What did he know and when did he know it?

To begin with, relying on the establishment Osseiran clan for protection from Shi'ite co-religionists in Hezbollah in 1987 was, as one old Beirut hand has said, like counting on Amos and Andy to protect one from the Black Panthers in Harlem in 1968. But if Glass so misread the situation this summer, what of his judgment two years ago — judgment that considered interviews with hostages not media manipulation but professional coups?

ABC's 1985 coverage — much of it by Glass — differed markedly from reports his colleagues filed on his own kidnapping. Two years ago ABC gave 68% of "World News Tonight" shows to the hijacking during its 16-day run. The largest block of that — 37% — went to hostage interviews.

Rarely did ABC inform viewers that the hostages they were seeing had been selected by the kidnappers themselves, or that the interviews were tainted, produced under terrorist control.

Least newsworthy for ABC then were freed hostages, who got a mere 4% of the coverage.

With one of their own, things were different. On Aug. 18, ABC not only led with the story of Glass's release (CBS opened with a follow on the Northwest Airlines crash in Detroit), but budgeted a large portion of the show for this particular freed hostage. He headlined later on "Nightline."

Glass took pains to make clear that the video tape released while he was captive — in which he said he was a CIA agent involved in "Zionist schemes" — was made at the point of a gun. When the tape was aired last month, ABC News President Roone Arledge himself issued the disclaimer that Glass was forced to make false statements under duress.

It was ironic that the terrorists holding Glass forced him to describe himself as a U.S. agent working with Israel. As Fred Barnes of The New Republic observed, "Look at his reporting. It certainly doesn't follow American policy because, if anything, he's pro-Arab and tilted away from Israel."

In the September 1985 issue of the Washington Journalism Review, Glass contrasted the intense coverage given the TWA hijacking with Israel's transfer of Lebanese terrorist suspects to prison in Israel. He labored to connect the two stories, although the terrorists' basic demand — which still underlies much of the kidnapping of foreigners in Lebanon — was freedom for colleagues jailed in Kuwait.

Instead of concluding that reporting on the hijacking was too intense, given the terrorists' demand for and dependence on the media megaphone, Glass determined that the spotlight on Israel was not bright enough. He assigned the same status to Israel's Lebanese prisoners — suspected or known terrorists — as he did to the TWA passengers and crew.

Freed from his own captivity, Glass reportedly pronounced his solidarity with all prisoners including those in Israel. Again the propagandistic analogy between those justly and unjustly held.

Glass, it should be clear, is not so much a reporter as a partisan — and as an unidentified partisan, guilty of media malpractice.

USSR Grants Exit Visas

NEW YORK (JTA) — Five more long-time refuseniks have been given permission to leave the Soviet Union, the Jewish Telegraphic Agency was informed last Tuesday by Lynn Singer, executive director of the Long Island Committee for Soviet Jewry (LICSJ).

Singer said the information was given her by Vladimir Slepak and Mark Terlitsky in a telephone call from Moscow, both prominent refuseniks still denied exit visas.

According to Singer, the five who will be allowed to emigrate with their families have been granted permission by the Soviet authorities, but actually obtaining their visas is a process that can take from three weeks to two months. They are:

Vladimir Prestin, 53, of Moscow, an electrical engineer; his wife Elena, 54; and their son Mikhail 23. Prestin first applied for an exit visa in 1970 and was subjected to harassment and frequent arrests.

Boris Kun, 30, of Moscow, an aircraft engineer; his wife Gedi, 30, an economist; their daughter Pavla, 16. Kun first applied for a visa in 1974 and was refused on grounds he was privy to state secrets. He resigned from his position and has worked at menial jobs since then.

Evgenya Palanker, 48, a computer engineer from Yerevan, Armenian SSR; her husband, Vili, 52; their sons Dmitri, 27, and Evgeny, 21; and mother-in-law, Elizabeta Demanovskaya. Palanker first applied for a visa in 1980. Her husband received permission to leave the USSR but would not without his family.

Emma Landsman, 46, of Moscow, a computer programmer; her husband, Boris, 49, an engineer; and their daughter Aviva, 4. They had applied for visas in 1976.

Valery Lerner, 44, of Moscow, a mathematician and economist; his wife, Janna, 38; and son, Igor, 15. Lerner first applied for a visa in 1977.

* * * * * * *

JERUSALEM (JTA) — The decision of the Soviet authorities to grant exit visas to four prominent long-time refuseniks and others sparked optimism here that a general relaxation of emigration restrictions is under way in the Soviet Union.

The four, all former Prisoners of Conscience, expected to arrive in Israel soon are Iosif Begun, 55, Viktor Brailovsky, 52, Vladimir Lifshitz, 46, and Semyon Yantovsky, 78. But aliya sources noted that 23 other former prisoners are still waiting for exit permits. Chaim Chesler, secretary general of the Public Council for Soviet Jewry, stressed that pressure must continue on the Soviet leadership on their behalf.

Premier Yitzhak Shamir expressed hope last Monday that the others, including such prominent activists as Ida Nudel and Vladimir Slepak, will soon be allowed to leave. Foreign Minister Shimon Peres sent congratulations to Begun and Brailovsky. "Your dedication to the idea of the renaissance of the Jewish people in its homeland is the great light illuminating our way," his cable said.

Haim Aharon, head of the Jewish Agency's immigration department, noted a rise in aliya this year and attributed it mainly to the arrival of Jews from the USSR. So far, 936 Soviet Jews have come to Israel compared to 200 during all of 1986.

They Make A Good Team

photos by Dorothea Snyder

"What's really great is having a male point of view," said Edith Koffler Spindell.

"Where I can see and create the form and design as romantic and esoteric, Stephen is into its technology, and he can explain the whole process from beginning to end.

"We make a good team," she smiled proudly.

Edith and her son Stephen have teamed up to open Heart'n Hand, a spectacular shop filled with mixed media, so uniquely hand-crafted in high quality fashion that it takes on the atmosphere of an art gallery, but one that is affordable.

They are, as Edith says, a good team, one who complements each other well by blending their potpourri of ideas.

They have both had a loving hand in choosing the artists, whose array of aesthetic beauty is a visual pleasure for those who enter their handsomely designed store.

They also share a partnership in the joy and excitement that accompanies such a venture.

Set in a woody, colonial marketplace called Greenwich Village in East Greenwich on Main Street en route to Goddard Park, the Spindells' store is part of a retail condominium complex that reminds one of Cape Cod ambience.

Heart N' Hand didn't spring up overnight; neither did its concept.

"I was very goal oriented, coming from a very creative and productive family," Edith said. "Being productive is an essential part of me.

"One aspect of my personality is my creative bent, and I have an aesthetic, visual sense of what is artistic. I've been accustomed to having a lot of beautiful things and people around me all my life.

"Before my mother was married, she was a professional seamstress who specialized in bridal gowns. When I was a child, all of my clothes were cut out of newspaper patterns. I was very well coordinated from hats to pocketbooks to linings.

"Just putting things together well became part of my existence. In my own home, I was always puttering, making creative centerpieces, creative meals and creative clothes."

"Then, I went to a crafts' fair at the Jewish Community Center. My daughter Marcia, who was part of the committee, told me she wanted me to meet Dahlia, a weaver. I was very excited by her work. That's when the seed was planted.

"I was overwhelmed by the beauty and the concept that all these people at the crafts' fair were creating beautiful things by hand.

"Following Dahlia's invitation to visit her workshop in Connecticut where I saw what she was doing, I grew even more excited. The next thing I did was subscribe to a crafts' newspaper.

"Stephen was moving back to Providence, and I thought Wow! I could visualize how if the idea to open a creative arts' shop takes off, what a great business potential for him!"

Stephen credits his mother for the idea.

"I realized she needed some extra motivation to get her idea rolling. She needed someone to bounce ideas off of. With her ambitions in creating this shop, I thought I'd join in and see what we could do to make it effective and make it work.

"She bought the store in March, and that's when I decided to leave my job as maitre d' and manager of a restaurant in Connecticut, and move back to Rhode Island.

"I went to my first craft show in Springfield, The Big E, which featured the works of selected artists. I was overwhelmed.

"Everything happened within a few months. We sat down, made an outline of what we had to do ... like building a house. We went out and did it."

Edith knew she wanted a particular kind of look. "The image I have always liked to create is one of elegance and class. I chose my colors, and found a designer to help me with the interior."

Even though Heart N' Hand feels like a mini-museum for the sheer loveliness of its surroundings and the wonderful assortment of unusual and exquisite pieces, Stephen said, "We have items for people who might come in with only $5.00 in their pocket. We've stocked the store with a range of priced crafts.

"Being in the restaurant business for many years, I know what the public wants. You have to be practical, but you also have to be classy, and you have to be well priced."

Stephen is right. One can circle Heart'n Hand many times, and spot a great obect not seen the first or second time around.

There is so much to choose from ... for gifts or for a self-reward ... lamps, mirrored boxes of hand-beveled glass, ceramic sculpture, hand-blown cognac snifters laced in 14-karat gold leaf, free-form raku, terra cotta, a fun hand-made chair, jewelry, quilts, hand-woven blends of hats, scarves, sweaters and sashes, pillows, jackets, sweaters, pocketbooks, hand-made rubber stamps for invitations, imported hand-made Japanese stationery, cat paraphernalia, a sculptured boat, and a door harp like the title that crossed the cover of Chaim Potok's last book. The list goes on and on.

Reflecting on Heart'n Hand's mother-son team, Edith said, "I am aware that our being in business together is another dimension of our relationship. I have to keep that in mind at all times."

With a high, gleeful note in her voice, she asked, "You know what's really going to sell my store? It's Stephen. He has such a nice way. I'm not being subjective because I'm his mother. It's that he has a philosophy of life about dealing with people, and I see it in action. He is patient, tolerant, caring, kind, sensitive and caring. And it comes through!"

This special mother-son combination happily looks forward to the grand opening of their team effort on September 19 from 12 to 6.

Heart'n Hand was named by Edith's actor son, Avi, who lives in New York.

"You know, Mother," Avi said, "When you make things with your hands, you put your whole heart into it."

unconsciously selected by the others to be 'the problem,' the difficult one, or the troublemaker, referred to clinically as the IP or identified patient. However, the IP is merely expressing the pain that exists in the family system itself. According to Mrs. Bettigole, the IP is calling attention to this family pain by "saying that the system is in trouble and needs fixing." Ideally the family soon comes to realize that it is a family problem and that family therapy is needed to resolve it.

Paul Segal is the Executive Director of the agency; he possesses an M.S.W., A.C.S.W., and R.I.S.W. Besides Mr. Segal and Mrs. Bettigole, there are four other social workers with graduate degrees in social work. Michael Silver is a psychiatrist who works for JFS as a consultant; he is also able to prescribe medication for clients when necessary, since he is a physician.

All the staff therapists at JFS do individual, family, marital, and child treatment. The agency plans to offer group treatment in the near future.

When a client enters individual therapy it may be short-term (6 to 12 sessions)or long-term (over a year). Mr. Segal states that the average is from 3 to 6 months. He emphasizes, however, that "what's best for the client" is the guiding philosophy and that a client may remain in therapy for "as long as necessary." Generally, though, in recent years there has been a movement in the mental health field toward more short-term treatment.

Mrs. Bettigole describes what takes place in an initial, individual therapy session. Together the client and social worker discuss the presenting problem (that is, what it is that brought the client to seek help.) Sometimes, she says, a client may not even be able to identify the problem, but rather just experiences generalized anxiety or depression. Together they explore the client's goals in relation to the problem and then set a time frame in which to reach those goals. At the end of the allotted time they will reassess the situation. Have the goals been met? Are there new goals to be set? Is more time needed to accomplish this?

As therapy progresses, the objective is to help the client develop coping skills that he can apply to future situations and, says Mrs. Bettigole, "to learn how to manage (his life) in a better way." This process includes helping the client to tap into his own strengths, to find solutions, and, ultimately, to feel better.

The final part of the process is termination. While it is difficult to avoid some dependency of the client on the therapist, Mrs. Bettigole says, "It is a therapist's responsibility to help ... (the client) leave" when his psychological work is completed. A good therapist will not attempt to hold on to a client out of the therapist's own needs.

What is important in selecting a therapist? Mr. Segal and Mrs. Bettigole agree on the importance of credentials, experience and a good personality match-up between client and therapist.

What kinds of problems bring a client to an agency like JFS? They include depression, stress, anxiety, marital and other relationship conflicts, loss, developmental adjustments, substance abuse, sexual abuse, eating disorders, and lack of self-esteem. According to Mr. Segal, a client will seek help when he "can't deal with everyday life stresses." A family needs help when there is a lack of communication, coordination, and integration within the family structure.

Because JFS is a voluntary, private agency, their clients present less severe problems than seen in public welfare agencies, which often handle child abuse/neglect and other Court-referred cases. Their clients are not psychotic, says Segal, but rather "in contact with reality and dealing with life issues." (In fact, he adds that often it is those who could most benefit from therapy who avoid it.)

A completion of therapy can best be viewed not as an ending or a finished product, but rather as another step in a life-long process of growth and development.

Federation Sponsors Trip To NYC

Career Women will be traveling to New York City on Sunday, November 8, 1987 for a walking tour of the lower East Side, a ferry trip to Ellis Island and the Statue of Liberty, and a dining experience at two of the cities most famous, kosher-style restaurants. The tour will be conducted by Dr. Gerard Wolfe, a noted historian on Jewish architecture.

One of the features of this trip will be a visit to the Eldridge Street Synagogue, a century-old masterpiece of Moorish Revival architecture. The edifice, with its magnificent stained glass windows and hand-carved ark, is a splendid and vital part of American Jewish history, symbolizing the hopes and dreams of the immigrant families who settled in this poorest of neighborhoods in which the synagogue was erected.

To be an eligible participant in this event, membership in the Career Women's Affiliate and a minimum gift of $150 to the Federation's annual campaign is required.

Graphic Designers' Work At RISD

A selection of posters by some of the most internationally significant graphic designers will be presented in The Basel School of Design and Its Philosophy: The Armin Hofmann Years, 1946-1986, on view at Rhode Island School of Design's Woods-Gerry Gallery from September 11 through 20.

Switzerland's Basel School of Design, credited with training some of the world's most influential visual designers, operated under the direction of Armin Hofmann between 1968 and 1986. The posters in this exhibition, created by Hofmann and his fellow teachers and students, are the product of the institution's groundbreaking philosophy of design. An outgrowth of Bauhaus teachings, the Basel School philosophy emerged from the machine age and emphasized the harmony of art and technology, of form and function. Hofmann taught students an ethic of design based upon a set of "universal principles" which sought to account for the way in which a visual image functions. The interaction between the message of the poster and the forms and materials used to construct it was seen as the key to successful visual communication; when creating a poster, wrote Hofmann, "the designer creates a metaphor for the message in the form itself."

On loan from the Goldie Paley Gallery at Moore College of Art in Philadelphia, the exhibition was curated by Hofmann himself and organized by Elsa Weiner Longhauser, director of the Gallery.

Woods-Gerry Gallery, 62 Prospect St., Providence, is open Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Thursday from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

Stock Options For Aggressive Investors

by Mary Rudie

For some investors, conventional stock trading is too conservative, while trading futures is just too risky. Since 1973, many investors have found a middle ground in trading options on stocks. Options offer creative and flexible ways for these investors to enhance their portfolios' performance. These investors use options for growth, income or protection.

An option is a contract between two parties. A stock option contract gives the holder the right to buy or sell 100 shares of stock at a specific "strike" price during a set period of time. The purchase of this right is far less expensive than buying the shares outright.

The buyer pays a fee and obtains the right to purchase the stock at a specific price during a specific period of time, whereas the seller receives the fee and takes on the contingent obligation to sell the stock at the agreed price during a specific period.

There are two basic types of options — "call" options and "put" options. The buyer of a call has the right to buy — and the buyer of a put has the right to sell — a stock at a predetermined price during a set period of time. Conversely, the seller of a call has the obligation to sell — and the seller of a put has the obligation to buy — that stock at the set price if the buyer exercies the option.

Buying Options

Options are diminishing assets because their life is limited. The rights are acquired only for a specific predetermined period of time. As a contract draws closer to expiration, its value — the premium — lessens if the price of the underlying stock has not moved a sufficient amount in the direction desired. If the price of the underlying stock doesn't move sufficiently and in the right direction, you could lose your entire premium. However, if there is enough movement in the right direction, the option buyer can either exercise the option, or resell it at a higher price. In any case the value of the option at expiration is determined by its intrinsic value, which is determined by comparing the current market price with the "strike" price of the option.

Let's say you believe that breakthroughs in superconductivity research will soon benefit the fictitious Superfast Electronics Company, now trading at $29. In August, you buy five December 30 "calls" at a premium of 2½, which gives you the right to purchase 500 shares of Superfast for $30 a share by December. The total cost of the contract is $1,250 (5 x 100 x $2.50) plus commissions. To cover your cost, excluding commissions, the price of Superfast must rise above $32.50 by the December expiration.

Let's assume Superfast's stock rises to $35 by early December. Assuming your December calls are now selling for 5, you could sell the options and earn about $1,250 ($2,500 minus $1,250 and commissions), a return of 100 percent on your initial investment. By comparison, buying the 500 shares of the stock at $29 and selling them at $35 — the same price move — would have earned you $3,000 ($17,500 - 14,500, less commissions) for a return of only about 20 percent because of the much larger initial investment.

On the other hand, if you were convinced back in August that Superfast's stock price had peaked and would soon decline, you might buy five December 30 "put" options. Assuming you were able to buy the puts for 2½, if the price fell to 25, you could exercise your put — giving you the right to sell the stock at $30 — for a similar 100 percent gain. Of course, if the price rose or stayed the same, you could potentially lose your entire investment.

Selling Options

Investors can generate cash in the form of option premiums by selling calls and puts in neutral markets when prices fluctuate within a narrow range. However, call sellers are committed to sell stock at the agreed-upon price no matter how high that stock might rise. You may be able to buy back the option at a higher price, but if you are exercised, you are obligated to buy the stock at the current market price and deliver it. Either way, you would sustain a loss. If the seller of the call options also owned the underlying stock, losses on the call above the strike price of the option might be offset by gains on the stock. However, a seller of these options who does not own the underlying stock can assume unlimited risk for a limited but potentially attractive profit.

Options Carry Risk

Most financial consultants advise their clients not to dabble in options casually. These financial consultants say that if you intend to use options to speculate on price movements, then you should monitor the market daily, be prepared to sustain some losses and use only that portion of your capital that is earmarked for higher risk investments. Before you consider options trading, you should learn as much as possible about it. Establish sound investment goals with the help of a trusted financial advisor. Set reasonable targets for percentage gains and establish a point at which you expect to close your position should the price not move in the direction you anticipate.

In a rising market, it's easy to think yourself infallible if you've picked a few winners. But, remember that even rising markets can be volatile and that paper profits can fade rapidly. Options are extremely flexible investment instruments that can be used to adjust investment risk and reward to your particular needs. The uses to which you can apply options are bounded only by your imagination. However, trading options is not for everyone because of the degree of risk involved.

Hotline Help For Israelis

by Rick Rael

(WZPS) — "An overwhelming sense of loneliness. That's the primary reason why people in Israel decide to use our services," says Moshe Kron, director of Jerusalem's telephone hotline, ERAN, which provides emotional support to people in need. "This loneliness can be expressed in various ways and is not confined only to socially isolated types. A wife who is unable to communicate openly with her husband may ask for help; a teenage boy unhappy with his relationship with his parents, or perhaps a young office worker who just needs to unload about a boss. The common denominator is a difficulty in reaching those near to them."

Founded in 1972 when the first branch was established in the capital, ERAN now has six additional centers throughout the country, including a recently opened office in the rural northern Galil. In a typical month, ERAN will receive between 3,000 and 4,000 telephone calls that Kron identifies as "calls of distress."

Juvenile Hotline

"If I had to note one significant change over the last decade," says Kron, "I'd say that Israeli callers have been getting younger and younger. Although their problems tend to reflect the universal difficulties of youth — getting along with parents and teachers, establishing peer friendships — young people seem more influenced by the issues of today. I think Israeli society is going through its own growing pains. Socially and politically its trying to find its own identity and that leaves young people more vulnerable. They desperately look for direction from society."

In direct response to the increasing volume of calls from young people, ERAN's Tel Aviv branch has introduced a special hotline exclusively for juveniles. Over 200 calls are coming in a month. "We hear from 17- and 18-year-olds who are about to enter the army and are secretly a bit scared about leaving home and having to adjust to army life, and there are those with problems related to pressure to achieve in school. Passing graduate examinations, or 'bagrut', is crucial for many young Israelis and we often receive calls from youth who express their fear of failure," explains a volunteer in the Tel Aviv office.

Influence of Contemporary Events

How do Israeli adults cope with the numerous stresses and strains of a society beset with a host of formidable problems? What prompts the individual to dial ERAN? Kron believes that contemporary events can often motivate citizens to pick up the phone. This, however, is often a pretext for a discussion of more personal concerns. "Volunteers find that a news headline, the Pollard affair, for example, will increase the number of incoming calls. People at first only want to talk about international relations, but gradually the conversation shifts to more immediate problems. Then we discover what's really troubling them."

The Demjanjuk trial in Jerusalem has resulted in many calls to ERAN from Holocaust survivors, who, now elderly and mostly alone, are, as a result of the trial, once again reliving their horrifying experiences. They need to talk and to verbalize their painful recollections, despite the passage of 45 years. Frequently ERAN has to confront the emotional burdens of the offspring of people who lived through the Holocaust. These children are often from homes where parents never discussed their experiences.

Volunteers are trained carefully to provide a sympathetic ear and to help callers gain a perspective on their thoughts and feelings. When appropriate, volunteers will provide individuals with a list of agencies to turn to for ongoing counseling and support. The Jerusalem staff includes over 80 volunteers who undergo a thorough screening and six months of intensive training before they begin manning the ERAN hotline.

ERAN carefully protects the identity of both caller and counselor. "Anonymity is critical to the callers," says Kron. "In many cases it enables them to really open up."

"Sexual problems generate a great deal of calls," says Kron, "especially from the ultra-religious communities where there is little access to basic facts about sex. Confusion on sexual issues is not limited to one segment of society, however, and callers express their fears or ask questions on a wide range of topics, including AIDS. During the last several months, calls to ERAN about AIDS have increased greatly. Israelis now recognize the serious nature of the problem and want to know more about it. For those who fear they may have contracted AIDS, we refer them directly to local hospital clinics for a more careful screening."

Over half the callers to the Jerusalem branch are men, according to Kron, and this surprises him. In mental health centers, for example, far more women seek assistance than men.

First Soviet Jews in 4 Years In R.I.

In the Soviet Union, one must lead a double life. There is the public face on the job or in school, and the private face one wears at home and with close friends. Zhanna resented the fact that her child was chided for being Jewish. She did not want her child to think that being Jewish was negative in the public sphere of her life.

"I began to think over my life deeply and seriously. The little incidents that I chose not to see, suddenly fit together. Step by step, I began to see things as they are not as I had imagined them. I went from the person who loved my motherland to the person who understood all the difficulties and contradictions. The main thing that I realized was that I couldn't be sincere with people in that country. And they were not sincere with me either. In the Soviet Union, people lie in their every day life and their jobs. They cannot tell their thoughts sincerely. In this sense, I understand freedom. I realized that this is not possible in the Soviet Union. For me this was a great discovery. When I understood, I felt I could not breathe deeply and freely."

By this time David and Mila Shayer had been refused visas and were victims of constant KGB harassment. Zhanna suffered for them, but as a divorced, single mother with the responsibilities of both a child and a widowed mother she hesitated to be directly involved.

In 1981, two years after her sister and brother-in-law, Zhanna reached the decision that immigration was the only choice that would allow her to bring up her child in a society where they could live honestly. Few Soviet Jews were allowed to emigrate at that time, but Zhanna, in her naivete, hoped that she would be lucky, her last hope in the system. Immediately she lost her job and for many years she had no income. Zhanna sold her precious library, cleaned windows, scrubbed floors. Her mother had a small pension which kept them alive. For three years her situation was miserable, former friends and colleagues turned their backs. Finally, a teacher in a music college, a friend, asked Zhanna to fill in and teach for her. Thus, she provided for her family.

During this time, Zhanna saw her sister Mila transform from a gentle, passive person to a strong defender of human rights. David and Mila had decided to beat the KGB at their own game. David was living under constant threat of imprisonment. He was repeatedly summoned to court as a "witness" knowing full well that once he appeared he would become the "accused." Mila was receiving daily calls from the KGB demanding David's whereabouts and threatening that their son, Maxim, would also be imprisoned.

The political climate in the Soviet Union changed with the rise to power of Gorbachev. The policy of "glasnot," although questionable, was to avoid negative publicity. The Shrayers assessed the situation and decided to unrelentlessly tell the outside world through the media of the refusenik plight. Their hope was that the embarrassment they would cause the "new Soviet image" would hasten their release.

"Can you imagine a little group of people with posters standing in one line, all Jews? I looked at them all so frightened. . . . It was so terrifying. At that moment, I understood the Jewish people."

— Zhanna Volinsky
Soviet Jewish Emigre

Thus began a match of wits, the Shrayers vs. the Soviet authorities. David and Mila gave a statement to the New York Times; for a while, harassment by the KGB relaxed. The Shrayer apartment became the scene of monthly literary seminars, a haven for refuseniks to speak freely about their Jewishness and their difficulties. Everyone knew that the apartment was bugged; KGB men were constantly watching the building and the Shrayer home. But David could share his prose and poetry. In 1986, "Being a Refusenik," David's novel describing the troubles of a Jewish refusenik family in Moscow, was published in Israel. The KGB learned of the book, and harassment resumed.

Last summer, there was a big event in the literary life of the Soviet Union. A special Congress of Professional Writers was to meet, a group that had expelled David in 1979 after he applied for a visa. Although it was dangerous for them, the Shrayers came to the building where the writers had convened, and there, in the court yard under the monument of Tolstoy, this brave couple gave an interview to CBS and ABC television telling the world of conditions for refuseniks. Yes, they were afraid they would be arrested, but they knew the power of pressure from the West.

By the winter of this year, the refuseniks decided that it was safer for women to demonstrate. In a February issue of Newsweek, there is a picture of Mila Shrayer standing in a line of refuseniks in the freezing cold Moscow winter pleading for Josef Begun's release from prison. What the Newsweek article did not show were "luberas," tough, anti-Semitic hooligans, who were hired by the KGB to beat the Jewish demonstrators. Mila was severely hit in the kidneys and was forced to leave in terrible condition. Soon after the demonstration, however, Begun was released from prison. (Word reached the West this past week that Begun would soon receive his visa and emigrate to Israel.)

After the beating, Zhanna was afraid for her sister's well being. When she heard that Mila was going to attend another demonstration, she decided to be there for her, if only to give her support, or to save her if necessary. Unbeknownst to Zhanna, however, Mila had been told by the KGB that it would be dangerous for her to attend, that her presence would constitute a crime and she would be arrested. Mila decided not to take the risk. Zhanna, not knowing this information, went to her first demonstration.

Zhanna: "Can you imagine a little group of people with posters standing in one line, all Jews? I looked at them all so frightened. A large group of people, Luberas, stood in front of them, able to damage them in one second if they wanted. It was so terrifying. At that moment, I understood the Jewish people."

There was no violence at that demonstration, but Zhanna realized that she could no longer be patient. Her daughter, Julia, a child of twelve but old enough to understand, encouraged her, "You must struggle for me, for you, for granny."

By this time people from the Western world had learned of the terrible hardships endured by the refuseniks. Many visited and sent letters and telegrams. The support of these contacts in the free world as well as many Western journalists and correspondents in the Soviet Union helped lend strength to the refusenik movement.

From this point on, the battle to live a life of freedom was fought with demonstrations and press conferences. David and Mila Shrayer, now joined by Zhanna, fought with the pen, with free speech, with hunger strikes, with all of their being. The KGB would advance and retreat with threats, with hired "lubera," with constant surveillance. In small victories, the refuseniks were winning the war. Most of those who participated in David's Purim spiel, a spoof of the Soviet system as well as the scope of refusenik approaches, were granted exit visas. The KGB began to include in their telephone calls requests to cancel planned demonstrations.

Finally, on April 8, 1987, eight years after their initial request, David and Mila received an official call to inform them that visas would be granted "to those who applied." This did not include Zhanna and her family. Along with the "good news" came a request to cancel a demonstration scheduled for April 10, indicating that there was no need to struggle.

This was a moment of truth. Mila Shrayer once again bravely stood up to the authorities. She said she would not leave without her sister, her mother, her niece. The officials agreed, but weeks passed and still no word came. Finally, the Shrayers received a request that the families reapply with new documentation. A demonstration was scheduled, and the authorities said they would accept the papers as they were. Once again the families waited. Finally, on May 12 a post card arrived with official notification that their visas were granted. But the harassment was not over. The night before they were scheduled to leave, the KGB called Mila to tell her that her husband's "debt" would prevent them from departing. To prevent an "accident" on the way to the airport, the final step in their journey to freedom, the American embassy drove them in a diplomatic car.

To David, Mila, Maxim, Zhanna, Julia and Anna: Your journey has been difficult; one that we can read about and write about, yet not always understand. How can we share the hurt that you have experienced? Is your lesson to us an introspection of our own behavior under such conditions?

When we first met in late August, tension was in your face and fear was in your eyes. If your gift to us is a new awareness of the freedom that we enjoy, let our gift to you be the smiles that have now replaced the tension and the comfort of knowing that Rhode Island is your home.

Those Left Behind

"Try to forget us as soon as you can. Our memory will prevent you from enjoying your freedom." These words were said by a refusenik, an older man, who came to bid the Shrayers a good journey at the Moscow airport as they left for a life of freedom.

David and Mila Shrayer do not choose to forget. They have asked that we publish the names of the following refuseniks so that they may, through the American embassy, let them know that we in the West are aware to their plight.

Carved Dolls, Animals At BPL

A variety of carved wooden dolls and animals are currently on display at the Barrington Public Library. These pieces were whittled by Barrington resident Valerie Saunders. Valerie began whittling via a Barrington Community School course two years ago and now is an accomplished wood carver, producing figures of many types. She also creates costumes for the dolls by hand, and fashions some of the bodies from such materials as sawdust and cloth.

The exhibit will be on display during the month of September.

A Year Of Debate

NEW YORK — The New York Marathon was rescheduled from October 26, Simchat Torah, to November 2, allowing an estimated 2,000 Jews to participate guilt-free.

JERUSALEM — The Chief Rabbinate accepted the medical definition of brain death, meaning heart transplants would be permitted in Israel.

JERUSALEM — Shamir charged that Jews who leave the Soviet Union with Israeli visas but settle in other countries gravely endanger efforts to increase Soviet Jewish emigration.

JERUSALEM — About 1,000 people demonstrated here in favor of religious pluralism following the disruption of a Simchat Torah service in a Reform synagogue by Orthodox Rabbi Eliahu Abergil. He later apologized, the Kol Haneshama synagogue dropped charges and Abergil embraced Reform Rabbi Levi Weiman-Kelman.

TEL AVIV — Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin seemed to confirm in a speech to insurance agents that Israel supplied arms to Iran to help the U.S. obtain the release of American hostages held by pro-Iranian groups in Lebanon.

JERUSALEM — Israeli soldiers killed an Arab driver at a Gaza roadblock shortly after an Israeli Jew was stabbed in a Gaza marketplace in the third such attack in two months.

JERUSALEM — The government placed the debt-ridden Beit Shemesh engine plant, with 340 employees, in receivership.

PARIS — A powerful bomb exploded outside the main synagogue in Antwerp, causing extensive damage but no casualties. The building was unoccupied at the time.

NEW YORK — Congregation Bene Naharayim here, the first American-Iraqi synagogue, consecrated its ark and five Torah scrolls.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — About 50 farmers met with 100 local Jews in an effort to understand the growing farm crisis and each other.

JERUSALEM — Four young men were arrested in Rumania in connection with the burning of a synagogue in the town of Bohush in October and the stabbing of its Jewish janitor, who survived.

JERUSALEM — Shamir said that Israel did not violate British law in its transfer of allged nuclear tattle-tale Mordechai Vanunu to Israel. He added that Israel "is not selling arms to Iran."

JERUSALEM — The war crimes trial of John Demjanjuk of Cleveland was set to open here January 19. He is charged with committing atrocities at the Treblinka death camp — where 900,000 Jews were murdered during World War II — as the sadistic guard "Ivan the Terrible." But at a hearing in District Court here, the first suspected Nazi war criminal extradited to Israel for trial said he was not "Ivan."

CHICAGO — Speaking at the Council of Jewish Federations General Assembly here, Peres appealed to Jews not to split over religious and secular issues.

JERUSALEM — Knesset members reacted angrily to the Israeli confirmation that it supplied $12 million of U.S. arms to Iran "in response to an American request."

BONN — West Germany expelled five Syrian diplomats, froze economic aid to Syria and said its Ambassador's post there will remain vacant — this in the wake of a court finding of Syrian complicity in the bombing of the German-Arab Friendship Society in West Berlin.

JERUSALEM — Calm was apparently restored in the Old City after nine days of Jewish anti-Arab violence and vandalism touched off by the fatal stabbing of yeshiva student Eliahu Amdi in the Moslem Quarter. It was the worst ethnic violence in the 20 year since Israel conquered East Jerusalem.

WASHINGTON — Jewish groups were shocked at the ruling by U.S. District Court Judge Frank McGarr in Chicago that a creche may stand at Chicago City Hall because the U.S. is a Christian nation. A federal appeals court overturned the decision in August.

Adult Ed At Beth-El

The Adult Education Committee of Temple Beth El in Providence has completed plans for its adult education program for the 1987-1988 term, according to Dr. Henry Litchman, committee chairman.

Entitled "The Learning Encounter, 1987-1988," the program will offer a variety of classes, lectures and special activities, many open to participation by the entire community.

Continuing in the vein of last season's innovative and successful program, will be a series of Sabbath Eve Seminars, featuring distinguished guest lecturers on the general topic: "Judaism's Roots and Heritage."

The opening program in this Friday night series will be on the subject, "What Jewish History means to Us Today," to be presented on Friday, October 23. This will be followed by a session on: "The Commentaries — Evolution or Explanation?" on Friday, December 11, and by "Reminding Our Children," on Friday, January 29, 1988. Admission to this series will be open to all interested adults at no fee.

An "Art Museum Trip to New York" will be held on Sunday, October 25, with participants traveling by motorcoach to New York City to view special exhibits at The Jewish Museum and the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Registration for this program will be open to adult members of the Temple Only.

In keeping with the coming election year, the committee will present "Jews in a Political Year," a series of three weekday night lectures during March, April and May, 1988. The first, "Jews and American Politics," will include a presentation by Mark Talisman of the Washington Action Office of the Council of Jewish Federations. "Israel and American Politics" will be the subject of the second session by Thomas Dine, executive director of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC). John Buchanan, vice president of People for the American Way, will present the final session of the series on "Religion in Politics." These three programs are also open to all interested adults at no fee.

Three mini-series will be presented on "Discovering the Bible," with Rabbi Lawrence Silverman; "Principles of Reform Judaism," with Rabbi Leslie Gutterman, and ULPAN Hebrew Classes, in cooperation with the R.I. Bureau of Jewish Education.

A special illustrated lecture on "The Jewish Catacombs of Rome" will be presented in the spring by Dr. Judith Testa of the University of Northern Illinois.

The Orchard Avenue Study Group, a cooperative venture by Temple Beth El and neighboring St. Martin's Episcopal Church, will meet early in 1988 and several other special activities have also been scheduled.

Details on all these programs and others will be announced during the next weeks, according to Arthur Eisenstein, the Temple's Coordinator of Adult Education. Additional information may be obtained by calling the Temple office, 331-6070.

Pacific Jews

Tahiti Jews have joined the Asia Pacific Jewish Association (APJA). Numbering only 100, the French-speaking community consists mainly of Sephardi Jews from Tunis, Morocco and Algiers who sought a haven from persecution and where the language and climate were amenable. Many were single and married French women, hence the name of their community — Association Cultuelle des Israelites et Sympathisants de Polynesie.

Licht Chairs Citizen Bee Competition

Lieutenant Governor Richard A. Licht recently announced plans for the second statewide Citizen Bee competition, which will culminate with two Rhode Island high school students traveling to Washington, D.C., to participate in the national final competition.

"The Citizen Bee is a national effort to bring American history, government, geography, basic economics, culture, and current events to the forefront of student consciousness in the framework of an exciting series of competition," said Licht, who is chairman of the Rhode Island Citizen Bee Steering Committee. He outlined plans for the competition at a State House news conference.

Every high school in the state will be invited to enter the event which is being conducted by the Close Up Foundation in Washington, D.C. Students will proceed through a series of local, regional and state competitions answering questions on American history, geography, economics, politics, culture and current events.

The steering committee will be establishing prizes for the regional and state competitions. Winners of the national competition, to be held in Washington, D.C., in June, 1988, will be awarded scholarships of $7,000, $5,000 and $3,000.

Stressing the importance of Civics knowledge, Licht cited "disconcerting" results of national surveys in Geography, Civics and History. Quoting from one survey, he said that 25 percent of high school seniors tested in Dallas, Texas, did not know that Mexico is the country that borders the United States on the south.

Licht also referred to a Hearst Corportion study, which revealed that half of Americans of all age groups surveyed, believe the president has the power to suspend the Constitution in the event of a national emergency. Quoting from a National Endowment for the Humanities survey, Licht said 68 percent of high school students questioned could not place the Civil War within the correct half-century, and that nearly a third of the 8,000 students surveyed placed the date of Columbus's discovery of the new world after 1750.

"I Can Cope" Series To Begin

Rhode Island Hospital and the American Cancer Society are sponsoring an educational program for cancer patients, their families and their friends. The free program, called "I Can Cope," is a series of eight weekly sessions. There are two separate series: one in the morning and one in the evening. Participants may choose to attend one of these two series. The morning sessions will be held on Thursdays from 10 a.m. to noon in the Hospital's George Library located on the third floor of the George Building. The evening sessions will be held on Thursday evening from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the Hospital's cafeteria. Both sessions will begin on September 17 and run through October 29.

The eight-week workshop offers participants the chance to talk with physicians, nurses, social workers, counselors, physical therapists and psychologists involved in the care of cancer patients. Some of the topics to be covered include "living with cancer," "dealing with daily health," "understanding your emotions," and "keeping active in mind and body."

For more information and to register for "I Can Cope," contact the American Cancer Society at 722-8480.

Out Of Africa

Concern continues over the position of those Jew who remain in Ethiopia. Government declarations that the Jews are living a free life and are even better off than many other population groups are not in accord with reports from other sources and the government's refusal to allow Jews to leave the country.

In Israel the Histadrut (Labor Federation) has taken up the cause of Ethiopian Jewry. It has called upon trade unionists worldwide to lobby for their release.

"GED On TV"

Education commissioner, J. Troy Earhart, announced that on September 22 a 43 part telecourse will begin on Channel 36 for adults who want to earn a high school equivalency diploma by completing the GED exams. The half-hour programs are designed as a preparatory course to help adults pass the five tests required of the GED. The series will be broadcast on Tuesdays and Fridays at 6:30 p.m. and repeated on Saturdays at 11 a.m.

"GED ON TV," which is offered by the Department of Education in cooperation with Channel 36, is divided into three segments: reading, writing, and mathematics. An orientation session and one on test-taking tips will be offered.

The adults who enroll and participate will follow the TV programs in special workbooks provided to them. Testing for the equivalency diploma will be offered in March 1988 at the conclusion of the series at several locations throughout the state.

A unique aspect of the program will be the availability of a toll-free "hot line" to those who enroll in the course. A Department staff person will provide personal counseling and will respond to questions related to the course content on Mondays and Wednesdays from 3 to 5:30 p.m. throughout the series.

The program was offered for the first time in the Spring of this year. Over 120 people enrolled in the first series; 75 took the battery of tests for the GED at the conclusion of the programs, 90% of whom earned their diplomas.

Persons who wish to enroll in the "GED on TV" may call one of the following for information: Cranston Adult Learning Center, 785-0400, Ext. 160, RI Regional Adult Learning Center, 762-3841, Newport Adult Learning Center, 847-7171, or Department of Education, Adult Education, 277-2691.

Mystery Jews

The tiny Indian state of Mizoriam has become the focus of controversy. Several thousand Mizos claim to be Jewish, descendants of the lost tribe of Menasseh. They claim to have dispersed eastwards to Afghanistan, Tibet, China, Burma and India. In the course of this they lost their Jewish traditions and became nature worshippers.

Last century, Christian missionaries converted many to Christianity but in the course of studying the Old Testament some concluded that in fact they were Jews all along and now observe Shabbat, dietary laws and circumcision rites. An Israeli rabbi who visited them is convinced of their authenticity, but the official Indian Jewish community and the Israeli Chief Rabbinate are skeptical.

Na'Amat Holds Convention

(L-R) Keynote speaker Hirsh Goodman, and Masha Lubelsky, Secretary General of NA'AMAT Israel, are welcomed to the 30th national biennial convention of NA'AMAT USA (formerly Pioneer Women/Na'amat) by national president Gloria Elbling, and convention chairwoman, Marjorie C. Moidel, both of Pittsburgh, Pa. just prior to the opening session of the convention, held at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles, Calif., August 9-12.

Reaching a peace accord in the mideast, reuniting refuseniks in the USSR with families waiting for them in Israel, and continuing to improve the status of women and the care of children and older people in the United States and Israel, emerged as the major concerns of both NA'AMAT USA and it sister organization, NA'AMAT Israel, at the 30th national biennial convention of NA'AMAT USA, the Women's Labor Zionist Organization of America, Inc., during its August 9-12 sessions at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles, Calif.

Capturing the mood of delegates, NA'AMAT USA National President Gloria Elbling of Pittsburgh, who was re-elected to a second term at this convention, said Jews were yearning for the "miracle of peace," and extended her organization's full support to the 750,000 members of NA'AMAT Israel in their latest nationwide peace campaign," at a gala installation dinner, Tuesday evening, August 11.

Addressing over 1,000 delegates and guests at the opening session of the covention, Masha Lubelsky, Secretary General of NA'AMAT in Israel, contended that "political objectives cannot be reached through war," and pointed to the war in Lebanon as a case in point. Taking note of the growth of the Arab community in Israel, she warned, "We don't want to rule over two million Arabs." Adding that "We must concentrate on reaching a state of peace with our neighbors," through an international conference or any other means, she stressed that the peace effort "requires the support of Jews everywhere."

Heralded as a "champion of equal treatment of minorities in Israel and of women's rights," by Marjorie C. Moidel of Pittsburgh, national convention chairwoman, Mrs. Lubelsky also hailed NA'AMAT USA's name change from Pioneer Women/Na'amat. She drew an enthusiastic round of applause when she said, "Now we really are 'one in name, one in spirit,'" echoing the theme of this year's convention.

ARE YOU THE OWNER OF UNCLAIMED PROPERTY?

A Message from General Treasurer ROGER N. BEGIN Regarding Unclaimed or Abandoned Accounts

TO ALL RHODE ISLAND RESIDENTS

Each year millions of dollars in unclaimed funds are turned over to the State of Rhode Island because the owners cannot be located.

The present list represents 3597 Rhode Islanders that are owners of unclaimed accounts. I encourage you to review this list for your name and address and also the names and addresses of your relatives, friends, and neighbors. There is no cost to you for inquiring about or claiming your rightful property. At no time does the State of Rhode Island assume ownership of this unclaimed property.

It is my goal to return as many unclaimed accounts as I can to the people of the State of Rhode Island.

The names included in this insert are only the most recent listing of unclaimed accounts that have been reported to the state. All accounts previously advertised and surrendered to the state are not printed here but are kept on file.
