Transjordan Land Reported Leased

Jewish Group Said to Have Hired Huge Tract; Details Withheld

Jerusalem, Jan. 20—(JTA)—The Arab press reports today that a Jewish company has leased from Emir Abdullah of Transjordan, 55,000 dunams of his own land for a period of 99 years.

This report is taken very seriously in Arab circles and the Arab National Party has called a meeting in Jerusalem "for fighting the Zionist danger."

The Jewish Agency Executive declines to make any comment upon this report. The Jewish Telegraphic Agency learns, however, from a most reliable source, that while the Arab reports are based on inadequate information, they nevertheless have basis in fact.

It is known that the Jewish Agency Executive has been following closely the developments in Transjordan for a considerable period. Important steps have been taken, it is under-

NAZI BOYCOTT PLAN AGAINST JEWS BLOCKED

German Minister Acts to Curb Spreading of Propaganda

Advises Using Police

Berlin, Jan. 20—(JTA)—Minister of Interior Dr. Franz Bracht has taken steps to curb the anti-Jewish boycott propaganda of the Nazis, after he had received representations from the Central Union of German Citizens of the Jewish Faith.

Dr. Bracht ordered the state governments to enlist the assistance of the police to combat the propaganda and to halt the distribution of boycott leaflets in front of Jewish shops. This latter effort has been undertaken by the Nazis in an effort to prevent non-Jews from purchasing in Jewish shops.

Peace, Order Menaced
Dr. Bracht stated that the Nazi agitation against the Jews is disturbing to peace and order in the country and causes damage to the Jewish citizens of the land.

The Nazi boycott propaganda has made serious inroads in the business in Germany, which is particularly serious in the provinces.

Hessian Nazi Protest
The Nazi fraction in the Diet of Hesse protested against the action of the police in Hesse in curbing the Nazi boycott campaign.

The Hessian Minister of Interior replied that this action was being taken because the agitation has resulted in repeated disturbances and gas bomb attacks such as those which occurred in Giessen and Mainz. For this reason the federal government has forbidden the boycott agitation.

Sisson Gives Address Before Workingmen's Beneficial Association

Speaking before a meeting of the Rhode Island Workingmen's Beneficial Association, Sunday morning, former Assistant U. S. Attorney General Charles P. Sisson, Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, described the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Home Loan Bank as the outstanding achievements of the present Congress.

The R. F. C., he stated, is helping to reconstruct the shattered financial structure of the country, while the Home Loan Bank has rendered invaluable assistance to home financing and building and loan companies. The former federal official, who returned lately from Washington to take charge of the State G. O. P. affairs, reviewed economic changes that have occurred since 1928, describing the "unseen forces" at work even while the nation appeared prosperous.

Attorney Joseph W. Ress, newly elected President, was in charge of the meeting, which was held in Eagles' Hall.

During the evening, reports of 25 members were heard at the annual meeting of the organization's advisory board in Zinn's Banquet Hall. Sydney J. Hoffman, retiring chairman, and Abraham Swerling were presented gifts by the board. The committee included Mr. Swerling, Alter Boyman, Simon Wolk, Mr. Ress, Samuel Shanbrun and Mr. Hoffman.

Speakers included Louis M. Grant, Jacob Licht, Bernard Abedon and Dr. K. Phillips.

French Marine Minister Blamed for Ship Burning

Paris, Jan. 20—(JTA)—M. Leon Meyer, the French Minister of Marine, is the target of attack by the entire Right Wing press, which charges him with responsibility for the fire which burned France's newest steamer, "L'Atlantique," two weeks ago.

First Jewish Ship In Palestine Has Woman as Captain

Jerusalem, Jan. 20—(JTA)—The first cargo ship in Palestine owned by a Jew was launched on her maiden voyage from Jaffa to Cyprus.

The first Jewish freighter is captained by a Jewish woman, Mrs. Israel Itan, of Tel Aviv.

The ship has been assigned the first license number issued by the Jaffa Port. It will carry merchandise between Palestine, Egypt, Syria and Cyprus.

Outlook Brightened by Moderate Rule of Von Schleicher Boycott Fight Lauded

Berlin, Jan. 20—(JTA)—The program outlined by the Chancellor, General von Schleicher, is a program also for our Jewish community in Germany, Dr. Alfred Hirschberg, Deputy Syndicus of the Central Union of German Citizens of Jewish Faith, says in a statement that has been issued here by the Central Union.

The history of the last decade has gone to show that all the troubles in political life and all the difficulties in economic life ultimately recoil with the precision of natural laws, upon us German Jews, he stated.

Situation Hopeful

"A Government program that seeks to moderate the political conflicts, and to alleviate the economic distress, must result in lessening the load that is pressing down heavily on the spirit of our people, and easing the sense of gloom and bitterness that is fertile soil for the agitators of prejudice and boycott. It creates a hopeful situation, of which we must take advantage, and in which we must co-operate. A program for finding work for the mass of the German people and establishing co-operation between all sections of the German people is a program which will also help German Jewry. It seems that at last the broad front of all decent and reasonable people is being formed for which the Central Union has worked and hoped for years. The overwhelming majority of German Jews are with it heart and soul. The recognition of the common aid and the common cause, in which there will no longer be hostile groups working each against the other, must result in destroying the prejudice and incitement that has been making the life of German Jews so difficult till now," declared Dr. Hirschberg.

Combats Prejudice

"It is not for us to discuss the Chancellor's economic and political plans in detail. It is the general tendency with which we are concerned. The combating of prejudice in employment is of the utmost importance to Jews. For in addition to the general unemployment we suffer from a specific unemployment, due to anti-Semitic discrimination. The boycott of Jew-

Accidental Lapse

By BERNARD M. GOLDOWSKY

As a general rule I am extremely careful not to expose myself to misinterpretation, but in writing of the annual meeting of the Jewish Orphanage of Rhode Island in the previous issue of The Jewish Herald, I muddled things. Inadvertently I remarked that the ladies would travel miles out of their way for a glimpse of me. Did I run into a hornet's nest?

However, I am thoroughly convinced that the "unusually splendid program the arrangements committee is providing for the annual meeting that will take place at the auditorium of the Jewish Orphanage on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 29th, will bring the women even if I were a Cyrano de Bergerac. And where the ladies go, the men are sure to follow.

So I appeal to you, ladies, who are mothers or willing to be. Arrange to have an early dinner on Sunday, Jan. 29, and see to it that you and your other halves are in your seats not later than 2:30 p. m.

It won't hurt you to be Goyim that afternoon by—

Arriving on time and Leaving on time.

And what a glorious time there's in store for you.

You will see and hear your adopted children.

You will enjoy a splendid musical program, vocal and instrumental.

You will be thrilled with a masterly address delivered by the Superintendent of Schools Mr. Alexander J. Stoddard.

NO CHARGE FOR ADMISSION—NO SOLICITATIONS—NO COLLECTIONS.

All yours, and as free as a politician's promises before an election.

Will you spare one afternoon to encourage those who spend fifty-two weeks in every year in the interest of OUR children? I'll say you will!

THE YOUNG JUDAEA MOVEMENT

The recently undertaken expansion of the Young Judaea movement in Rhode Island merits whole-hearted support of all Jewish citizens in those communities where it is being introduced.

Already boasting thousands of members throughout the country, the movement, in the three short years it has existed in Providence, has taken a strong hold on Jewish young people here. In this city alone there are more than two hundred and fifty boys and girls interested in nearly twenty chapters. An examination of its aims and ideals, regardless of one's convictions on the Homeland question, reveals this movement to be of highest importance to Jewish life everywhere in generations to come.

The Young Judaea movement was established under the auspices of the Zionist Organization of America for the avowed purpose of creating and developing the love for the ancient Homeland of Israel—Palestine.

To this end clubs of Jewish boys and girls from ten to twenty years of age have been formed under the capable leadership of earnest Jewish young men and women who are keenly interested in their work. A wide field of discussion is thrown open to these groups which, in the ordinary course of events, would not be part of their educational experiences. They review the history of the Jewish people from ancient times down to the present, stressing, from a Jewish point of view, the glory of Judaea's past, the suffering down through the ages and the brilliancy of her many great men and women of the different eras.

It is unfortunate but nevertheless a fact that the Jewish youth of today is only too little acquainted with his illustrious forebears, particularly those great statesmen, authors, musicians and scientists that have stood out during the centuries since Biblical times. The Jewish young people of today—and even those of more mature years—have only the most superficial knowledge of the great Jews in modern history. The more outstanding ones they recognize by name and reputation only enough to be able to say: "Yes, he was Jewish." What these men were, what they stood for, what they accomplished, and how, all these are mysteries comparatively few have penetrated.

In the Young Judaea movement the opportunity is offered. So great is the indifference that prevails among the Jewish men and women, and so weakening has it become to Jewish life that any movement designed to educate the youth, even in this respect alone, gives strength to the cause of Israel.

From another viewpoint the movement is equally important, especially in the smaller communities. It provides a healthy Jewish environment for the young people by bringing them frequently together not only in pursuit of the study of Jewish life but also in creating the urge to seek pleasures and amusement in Jewish circles. Where, in the greater cities, the Jewish colony is so large that the young people are able to find enough varied doings to spend a good portion of their time in Jewish endeavors, often that condition does not hold for the smaller communities.

Plainly, the result is that Judaism, for lack of impetus, is minimized and indifference to Jewish ideals necessarily grows. Such a problem must be solved; else the people of Israel gradually will cease to exist as such. The synagogues and temples, with their kindred organizations, now—and rightfully—face this peril and are doing heroic work to combat it. The Talmud Torah is an extremely important ally. No less so is the Young Judaea movement, which supplements the efforts of Hebrew School and Cheder.

TIDBITS AND NEWS OF JEWISH PERSONALITIES

By DAVID SCHWARTZ

Technocracy and Anti-Semitism

After we had exhausted the possibilities of Technocracy—that is, of its discussion, it was only natural that we should come again to the subject of anti-Semitism.

"Why do the heathens rage?" asked X.

"Aren't you rather late in the day with such a question?" we asked. "Hope you are not going to spring any new-fangled theories about anti-Semitism. Maybe you're going to prove that Technocracy is the cure for anti-Semitism, and that it is caused by too much machinery."

"Don't try to get funny," replied X. "Your jokes are another depression to me. I am serious. We Jews have been discussing anti-Semitism for two thousand years, but we don't know what causes it yet. I'll give you four—five—six—oh, any number of guesses."

Reasons For It

"Well," we replied, "anybody knows what is the cause of anti-Semitism. The cause of anti-Semitism, is that Jews are all business people—all capitalists."

"Guess again," said X. "Well, if that isn't why Jews are disliked, it is because they are mostly Socialists, Bolsheviks, radicals!"

"Wrong again. Guess some more," said X.

"Well," we replied, "maybe we are disliked because of our manners. We are too self-assertive."

"Guess again," said X. "Well, if it's not because we are too assertive, it's because we are too obsequious."

"All your guesses so far are wrong, but keep it up."

"Well, I should say possibly we are disliked because we are too international."

"Guess again."

"Well, maybe it's because we are too nationalistic—Zionistic and all that sort of thing."

"Guess again."

"Well, perhaps, we are too clannish, sticking together, and clinging to our own traditions."

"Guess again."

"Perhaps it's because we are too assimilative. We ape our neighbors too much. We adopt non-Jewish names, and some of us appear to be complimented when mistaken for a non-Jew."

"Guess again."

"Well, maybe, it's because we are too much of what Spinoza called a God-intoxicated people. We set too much a store upon religion."

"Guess again."

"Well, if that's wrong, you certainly can't deny that there are an awful lot of Atheists among Jews. Who is the President of the American Atheists Association. A Jew by the name of Lewis. And maybe this irreligious tendency begets displeasure."

"Guess again."

"Well, if that's wrong, you certainly can't deny that there are an awful lot of Atheists among Jews. Who is the President of the American Atheists Association. A Jew by the name of Lewis. And maybe this irreligious tendency begets displeasure."

can't pay such a debt, so the feeling which it would normally have against itself for this unrequited obligation is released by venting it against the Jew."

"It is not my theory, I would have you understand," said X. "The theory was propounded forty years ago, by Daniel De Leon."

"And by the way," said X, "you will note that the theory too has some relation to Technocracy. One of their premises is that the world is topsy turvy, because the world is laboring under too vast a burden of debt. So likewise anti-Semitism is just in the last analysis a matter of debts and credits."

"That ought to give you food for some thought," said X, searching for his cigar in his coat pocket, as he was preparing to leave.

The cigar, however, was placidly being smoked in our month.

"What's the idea?" said X. "Well," we explained, "we have a dislike for anybody who gives us intellectual insight without our being able to repay, so we stole your cigar. Toodle-de-oo."

A Rabbi Complains

A is a rabbi, very much respected by rabbis generally. We were talking to him the other day.

"Why are our Jewish spiritual leaders like that?" asked A.

"Like what?" we asked.

"Well, let me give you an instance. Some time ago, a distinguished Jewish savant, noted for his expertness in a particular field of Jewish Semitics, went into a tantrum, all because of what do you think?"

"Because of what?"

"Simply because another Jewish savant of lesser renown wrote an article on some subject of his speciality. How dare the other man, exclaimed this renowned man, presume to write on a subject on which he was the accepted authority!"

"And," we asked, "is that characteristic of Jewish theologians?"

"I won't say it is characteristic, but there is a surprising amount of that sort of spirit in the Jewish theological field for some reason or other. I don't think it is characteristic of Jews in other fields, but in theology, where one would normally expect just the opposite, it is far too prevalent."

"Let me give you another instance," said A. "Some time ago, in a temple, which at the time had two rabbis, a young graduate from one of the rabbinical colleges was added to the roster of the pulpit. The two senior rabbis were both men of great distinction and ability, but their relations with each other were marked by none of that spirit of brotherly love which you would expect. The young rabbi had to watch himself if he spoke over much with one of the senior rabbis, lest the other senior rabbi think he was coming too much under the other's influence. In fact, the cantankerousness between the two senior rabbis was so pronounced, that one of them when the young rabbi got his post spoke to him with the bitter humor of truth as follows:

"Rabbi X, you have been named—not assistant rabbi, but assistant to the Rabbis, that is to say, you are to help me and to help Rabbi B—and may God help you."

"Of course," said A, concluding, "I do not say that this spirit is characteristic of the rabbinate as a whole, but there is more of it than there should be."

French Marine Minister Blamed for Ship Burning

Jewish plot to burn the vessel. The "Tog" commenting upon this attack, which is rare since it applies to high government officials, who have been free from the allegations of even the extreme anti-Semitic press in the past, asserts it is due solely to the fact that Minister Meyer is a Jew and that two members of the commission are Jews.

It is held unlikely that either the Socialist majority in the Parliament or Premier Paul-Boncour will be influenced by the attacks on the Jewish Cabinet Minister.

The "Tog" says, however, that it is symptomatic that even in a calamity of such a character, the press is unscrupulous in capitalizing it for agitation against the Jews and for sounding the cry of danger to the entire French marine so long as it is headed by a Jew.

The "Tog," Yiddish daily, published in Paris, has suspended publication, it was announced.

The suspension is of a temporary character, it was stated.

Transjordan Land Reported Leased

stood, which may ultimately develop into historic significance but these steps cannot be made public at present, the Jewish Telegraphic Agency understands.

The problem of the Jewish position in Transjordan and the total exclusion of Jews from that territory has been repeatedly discussed at most of the Zionist Congresses and the sessions of the Permanent Mandates Commission of the League of Nations ever since September, 1922 when the Council of the League approved certain exceptions to the Mandate in the form of an Annex to the Mandate.

This latter document excluded Transjordan from the operation of those provisions of the Mandate which related to the Jewish National Home. It has been since pointed out, and notably in a memorandum submitted by the Jewish Agency to the British Government in May, 1930, that the "Annex to the Mandate . . . relieves the Administration of Transjordan of the obligation . . . to encourage Jewish immigration . . . but it certainly does not admit the establishment of conditions depriving Jews of equal rights with all other inhabitants of Palestine, or all other nationals of States Members of the League."

Nevertheless, although movement of Arabs from Western to Eastern Palestine (Transjordan) and vice versa has been unrestricted, the Transjordan Government has made it impossible for Jews to purchase land or develop industries in that territory.

Official Communiqué Halts Anti-Jewish Slander at Riga

Riga, Jan. 20.—(JTA)—An official communication was issued by the government recently denying the charges directed by the press against the Jews in connection with the accidental death of a policeman at the hands of an inebriated Jew who was a close friend of the policeman.

The communiqué stresses the accidental character of the policeman's death. The agitation, inaugurated by the press, was taken up by the Council of Ministers as well. The latter declared itself satisfied with the communiqué of the government.

The government organ, Central Bals, joined in the anti-Jewish agitation. The editor of the paper explains that the accusations appeared during his absence. At the same time he withdraws the allegation against the Jew, previously published in his paper.

A FEMININE COL. HOUSE

By HELEN WOLFSON

With the passing of Mrs. Belle Moskowitz, a chapter in New York history was closed, for almost at the moment of her death, Herbert H. Lehman, for whose election she had given so much of her political genius and experience, was inducted into the office of Governor of New York State.

Only the sentimental eulphisms of a Fannie Hurst could do justice in describing the multitudes, flocking from the heterogeneous life that is New York, to pay their last tributes to a woman who had devoted her life to politics, as such, only because it furnished a broader avenue for the social amelioration of the down-trodden, and a truer justice for a people who were often too helpless to help themselves. But Fannie Hurst was present at Temple Emanu-El to pay her respects, not in words, but in person, to an admired friend, and as she passed the bier, she rubbed shoulders with a little, shawled woman from the lower East Side, who was too timid to attend where such notables as Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Lehman, former Judge Joseph Proskauer, Abram I. Elkus and Mrs. Charles Sabin had passed before her.

Chief among the mourners was former Governor Alfred E. Smith, who has never been known to hesitate to acknowledge the vast debt he owed to Mrs. Moskowitz, his political mentor, who has been so closely identified with his achievements and triumphs, that one cannot find her feminine equal in the annals of American history. It was her vision, her keen political sense, and her organizing ability that made her an unique political force, and a power behind the throne.

Mrs. Moskowitz' association with Al Smith, which ultimately ripened into friendship, dates back to 1918, when he first ran for Governor of New York State, and until the day of her death, the relationship continued unbroken.

It was the duty of attending a conference with Mr. Smith that sent Mrs. Moskowitz forth on a cold, slippery morning a few weeks ago; a conference she never attended because she tripped and fell down the steps in front of her house, which ultimately resulted in her untimely death.

During Smith's gubernatorial reign, she was nominally his publicity director. Actually she was the "Colonel House of the Smith Administration," whose counsel the former Governor sought on matters of prime importance. It was upon her judgment that Smith relied for decisions, big or small. She was the unofficial ambassador whose portfolio was a lamentable-looking "sac-d' affaire" that made its appearance at important civic and labor meetings, and which invariably carried back to Albany the information required by the Governor upon which he could base his legislative recommendations.

Yet, for all the glamorous implications of enjoying a position of power behind the throne, Mrs. Moskowitz remained her surprisingly prosaic and matter-of-fact self. True, it is but a dubious compliment to characterize any woman as a practical, reliable, efficient person. One immediately conjures a picture of a thoroughly unattractive woman one would rather hear about than meet. But Mrs. Moskowitz was no ordinary woman. She was a character to be reckoned with. And though she was a practical, reliable and efficient person, at the same time, for all her excessive avoirdupois, she was a vitally attractive one. Decidedly a woman one would have wanted to hear about as well as meet—if she had not made such a fetish of obscurity—for she was an amazingly diffident and retiring person. She had practically expended as much energy in keeping Al Smith before the public eye, as she had in keeping herself out of it. If in the art of ballyhoo she had shown remarkable ability in exploiting the former Governor to the point where he was news every day in the week no matter what he did, she had shown an even greater facility in creating an air of mysterious obscurity about herself. An attitude her friends attributed to her innate reticence, her criticisms to her shrewd political sense.

Even among her friends few knew her intimately, for when she did venture to reveal herself to any one person, unwomanlike, she revealed only as much as she thought fit, and not a fact more.

Whether Al Smith enjoyed her confidence as an intimate friend was a matter of speculation, but that she had won his deepest regard as his personal confidante and advisor can only be demonstrated by their common business association, which, until the time of her death, was broadly speaking, the Empire State Building. With offices on the 41st floor of the tallest building in the world, Mrs. Moskowitz, as President of Publicity Associates was conducting "a public relations practice in New York City," primarily in the interests of Al Smith.

It was indicative of the woman's character that though she was probably responsible for the Empire State Building's slogan that it was "an internationally known address," her own offices were modestly listed in the telephone directory as being situated at 350 Fifth avenue.

Like McCooley, Mrs. Moskowitz also "drifted into politics quite naturally." Endowed with the racial passion for social progress, it was inevitable that as a young girl fresh from college she should turn to social work for a career. As a social worker interested in the welfare of the working girl, she soon realized that only by legislative measures could there be any improvement in their industrial and social conditions. Therefore, it was equally inevitable that as a Jewish woman, with a tremendous capacity for work, she should apply her native shrewdness and excessive energies towards the betterment of the more obvious evils.

She had her first legislative experience in 1909, when she formed the Committee on Amusement Resources for Working Girls, which was really the result of her experiences as a Director of the Council of Jewish Women.

From the beginning of Mrs. Moskowitz' career, all lines seemed to have led from the Educational Alliance, where she held her first position. As Belle Lindner, the daughter of a poor watchmaker, she began her work as Director of Entertainments and Exhibits at a salary of $530 a year. But it was significant of the woman's subsequent progress that by the end of the first year she was earning $1000.

It was at the Educational Alliance that she met her first husband, Charles H. Isaacs, a nephew of Joseph Isaacs, the Dutch painter, and married him in 1903. Early widowhood, however, forced her to earn a livelihood for herself and three children, Carlos, Miriam and Josef.

Her son, Josef Isaacs, II, was associated with her in her last undertaking at the Empire State Building. When someone ventured to suggest that she was training him to follow in her footsteps, she emphatically stated that that was not the case at all. "My son is my business associate—my partner," she said, and with this racial gesture of maternal confidence in her young son's ability, she aligned herself with countless other Jewish mothers who are apt to boast in their own characteristic fashions that their son . . .

In 1914, the widowed Mrs. Isaacs married Dr. Henry Moskowitz—the Dr. Moskowitz, who is Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Ort impartial Chairman of the Men's Clothing Industry. For all of Mrs. Moskowitz' activities in connection with her work as Personal Relations Council for Alfred E. Smith, she still found the time, when she was not busy replenishing her larder with homemade preserves, to serve as honorary chairman on various Ort committees, whenever necessary, as she continued her interest in the Council of Jewish Women, Jewish Board of Guardians, the Lakeview Home for Girls, the Educational Alliance, and the Madison House Society.

It was while she was at the Alliance, too, that she met Joseph M. Proskauer, the same Proskauer who was later one of the members of Smith's famous "Kitchen Cabinet" dubbed so by political wits because Mrs. Moskowitz played such an important role. At that time Proskauer was leading one of the boy's clubs, and it was he who recommended Mrs. Moskowitz to Judge Abram I. Elkus as the likely person to organize the Woman's Division to help elect Al Smith, Governor of New York State. It was during this Smith campaign that she had her first experience of being asked her opinion on politics by a prominent politician. She was absolutely awed (as much as it was possible to awe a woman of her poise and self-assurance), when she was called into the inner sanctum, where the leaders of the party were, and asked to state frankly her opinion on certain subjects. Actually, no friendship developed between the candidate and Mrs. Moskowitz at that time. She was a woman in charge of the Woman's Division, and in such capacity she was consulted. As the campaign progressed, Al began to rely more and more upon the opinion of the woman whom he considered the "brainiest woman he knew." That was in 1918 and it marked the beginning of their strange association, broken only by the death of Mrs. Moskowitz, which Smith considered "a disaster."

Whether Mrs. Moskowitz had encountered any anti-Semitic discrimination during the course of her career, it was difficult to tell. Hers was not the temperament to tolerate any nonsense. One could almost see her squelch any outburst of bigoted hysteria by the mere force of her placid level-headed manner. She claimed that she had never found racial prejudice standing in her way for the simple reason that she never paid any attention to it. In fact, she dismissed the entire subject by saying:

"I do not carry a Jewish chip on my shoulder. I have no social ambitions, never have had, and have

SPORTING WORLD

NEWS WRITTEN FOR THE JEWISH HERALD BY GEORGE JOEL

Jeby to Fight for Middleweight Crown; Was Always a Battler
Morris Benjamin Jebaltosky, better known in the ring as Ben Jeby, is pugilistic proof of what may be accomplished by hard work. Hymie Caplin, one of the game's most astute managers, called the 22-year-old son of a lower East Side painter, a "cluck" when he started. The crowd that hangs around the fighters' gym shook its collective heads and thought that Caplin was slightly dizzy for bothering with Jeby. It was their expert opinion that the Jewish boy was too awkward. But Hymie saw further than the gang and admired Jeby's intemperance of purpose. His reward is that he has one of his fighters boxing for the middleweight championship of the United States. The bout comes off at the end of this week at Madison Square Garden. It is scheduled for 15 rounds and the other fighter in the ring will be Franklin Battaglia, the reigning champ.

Jebaltosky, who shortened it to Jeby for ring purposes, was born on Broome street. He was champion of his block. He had spent a year and a half in high school after graduating from P. S. 188 and was employed in Scheer Jebaltosky's paint shop when he whipped a fair sort of an amateur in a street fight. That caused him to take up boxing.

He had started 20 times as an amateur when he bumped into Caplin at Broome and Norfolk streets, five years ago. He stated briefly what he was and what he wanted and requested that Hymie watch him that night at the St. Francis Xavier Club in Greenpoint. Caplin did and has had him since.

The Jeby-Battaglia battle is an even money betting proposition, but Ben believes he would be a favorite had he not been officially knocked out by the Italian Ketchel in Chicago last April.

Admits Battaglia Can Punch, But Expects to Turn Tables

Jeby admits Battaglia hit him the hardest punch of his career. It struck him squarely on the jaw right under the gun, as he was breaking from a clinch.

"It was the first time I was ever knocked down," explains Ben. "but my head was clear and I was on one knee and had picked up the count at four. I started to think of what I had best do on getting up and guess I thought a bit too long. I'm certain, though, that I was up before the referee counted ten. So was the crowd, judging by the protest and the newspapers, and whatnot that were chucked in the ring."

Caplin sat down in illustrating to his three-year-old son, Melvin, how Jeby had fought. The baby still goes through the act every time he sees the fighter. Ignacio Ara, the Spaniard, gave him his toughest battle at the Queensboro Stadium a year ago last summer. He considers his best fight the one in which he ironed out My Sullivan in his Chicago bow last spring. He is proudest of his victory over Len Harvey in the fight that made him.

Izzy Grove was the only amateur to beat him. He has dropped four decisions, been kayoed the one time and held even on another occasion in 53 tries as a professional.

Strong for Novels and Movies; Expects to Marry a Show Girl

Jeby has an older brother and a younger sister. His mother takes a keen interest in his work and has watched his workouts. He has been keeping company with a show girl for two years and contemplates matrimony.

He reads realistic novels. He rarely sees a play or musical show, preferring pictures. Helen Twelvetrees is his favorite feminine star, Paul Muni his pet actor. He still is fond of his stable-mate, Al Singer, but didn't like the way he bowed out in the Tony Canzoneri scrap.

Next to boxing he likes basketball best and played it well for the Educational Alliance. Four years ago a team of boxers, Sid Terris, Ruby Goldstein, Charles Rosen, Sammy Dorfman and Jeby, organized for one night, beat the Henry Street Settlement squad, champion of the Inter-Settlement League. Nat Holman, hoop coach of C. C. N. Y., is Ben's favorite athlete.

Jeby owns a 16-cylinder car and will drive miles to attend a benefit or do a favor.

Haymakers of History

The New York World-Telegram is running a series of stories about famous ring knockouts. The following is an account of the fight between the Jewish Joe Choyanski and the colored Joe Walcott:

"They claimed afterward that the California Crysanthemum had been forced to fight despite a broken rib, but the fact remains that 140-pound Joe Walcott made ring history when he stopped the 165-pound Joe Choyanski in seven rounds at the Broadway Athletic Club back in Feb. 23, 1900.

"A terror among the heavyweights of his day, Choyanski was a 2 to 1 choice over the five-foot negro welter.

William A. Needham to Address Beth-Israel Men's Club Monday

On Monday evening a pleasant and interesting meeting is in store for members of the Temple Beth-Israel Men's Club and their friends.

Joseph Schlossberg has been fortunate in securing William A. Needham, a prominent attorney and secretary of the Republican committee, to speak on "The Workings of the Navy." The talk will be illustrated with motion pictures relative to the subject. Interesting apparatus used by the navy will also be demonstrated by a petty officer of the Navy Department.

At a recent meeting, remarkable results were shown in the drive for increased membership. Dr. Raymond M. Rosen was appointed chairman of the publicity committee. The principal speaker of the evening was M. P. Ostrow, Superintendent of the Home for the Aged.

In fact, wagers were made at odds as high as 50 to 1 that Walcott would not get the decision.

Only six days earlier Choyanski had whipped Peter Maher, a full-fledged heavyweight, at Chicago. The betting public, knowing nothing of the injury reported after the fight, couldn't concede little Joe a chance.

"But Walcott wasted no time in changing their minds. In less than a minute he had Choyanski on the floor for the first time, the victim of a crashing right to the jaw. He got up at nine, but he was flat on the canvass twice more before the bell ended that opening round.

"Choyanski's handlers did a smart job on him, and he actually came back to win the second by a shade. He outboxed the negro in the third also. But from the fourth on it was a slaughter. Walcott battered his man methodically and relentlessly. He was the Barbadoes Demon at his best, and the Pacific Coast light-heavyweight was simply being cut to ribbons.

"Maybe it was the fractured rib, supposedly sustained in a fall on icy pavement the day after the Maher battle. Maybe it was merely a little man too good for a big man. At any rate Choyanski was helpless from the start of the seventh. The referee stopped it after he had been battered all over the ring for two minutes and had been dropped once with a terrific right to the head.

"The story of that final round: The spectacle in the seventh was pathetic, it was so one-sided a fight. The big Californian, almost out of his senses, staggered toward Walcott with arms upraised to protect his battered head and face. Walcott sprang at him like a bulldog attacking a mastiff. Sensing the impending kill, the squat little black man rushed the distressed Choyanski into a corner and showered lefts and rights to the head. Finally a right to the ear bowled him over, and he was so far gone that he struggled up without taking a count. The black tiger was at him again, pounding viciously away at a man who couldn't raise his arms, when the referee stepped in to award it to Walcott on a technical knockout."

Chatterings

You should know that the basketball game between the undefeated C. C. N. Y. and St. John's team ended in a victory for St. John. The score was 32-28. It was as exciting and close a game as expected.

never pretended to be anything I am not."

Nevertheless, she did admit that her children had met up "to some extent with some racial discrimination at the schools they had attended. But those always solved themselves." She was probably referring to the fact that her eldest son, Carlos, failed to make a fraternity at Amherst — a source of keen disappointment to the boy.

For all her confident self-assurance, Mrs. Moskowitz was far too modest to acknowledge the extent of her influence in the grooming of Alfred E. Smith in his political career. In her matter-of-fact, serene voice, she was apt to dismiss her diverse activities under the guise of literary adviser and friend, and let it go at that. But she almost always made it a point of necessity to explain in her precise manner that she did not write Smith's speeches. She merely gathered the data for him to express as he saw fit. Only when there was the possibility of the former Governor making "an unfortunate reference" did Mrs. Moskowitz venture to suggest a change.

Belle Moskowitz may be said to have administered in her career the sterling character of so many Jewish women who, some in greater obscurity, have successfully and self-effacingly worked for causes they had at heart. And it is, as such, that she will be remembered by her own people.

Miss Lasker, who had been sojourning in Palestine for more than two years, illustrated her talk with pictures taken on her trip and stressed the friendly relationship existent between the Arabs and Jews there. She mentioned in particular her visit to Meier Shefaya, the orphan home, which is maintained by Junior Hadassah, and of the great care and attention shown the children. An attractive wedding reception was held Sunday afternoon, at the Mayfair Inn, when Miss Belle Mamis daughter of Mrs. Lena Soren, of this city, was united in marriage with Mr. Maurice Silverman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Silverman, also of this city. Rabbi Joshua Werner officiated.

Mrs. Soren, mother of the bride, was attired in black chiffon and lace and Mrs. Silverman wore black velvet, both wearing corsages of red roses.

The bridegroom was attended by George Kronson as best man. In the bridal party were the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Simon and her brother, Samuel Mamis.

Guests were present from Boston, Hartford, New York City and Providence.

ish employes and firms is ultimately the consequence of the general disruption and bitterness which has divided up our German people into hostile camps.

"A great deal has been done by the Central Union to combat the anti-Jewish boycott by taking the offenders to the law courts. The Jewish lawyers in Germany are acquainted with the files of the verdicts obtained by the Central Union, about 250 in all. But the Chancellor's condemnation of prejudice is more important, and the movement to find work for the people is more important, for we know that the rights of equality of German Jews and our peace and security are not dependent on the strength of the police and the ability to intervene on our behalf of the soldiers of the Reichswehr. The feeling among the masses of the people is a stronger guarantee to our equality of rights than the police and the Reichswehr. We German Jews are in complete agreement with the Chancellor when he says that not boycotts but the co-operation of all the people will pull Germany out of the present troubles. And we shall be able to look forward beyond this temporary truce to a permanent period of civic peace."
