Philadelphia Man Appointed Superintendent of Home

Isaac E. Feinstein of Philadelphia will be the new superintendent of the Jewish Home for Aged, Samuel Magid, president, announced today. Mr. Feinstein, who replaces Manuel Outrow, who resigned several months ago to assume a similar position in Memphis, Tenn., will take active control on Sept. 1.

Mr. Feinstein has been prominent in Jewish social work in Philadelphia and for six years was superintendent of the Jewish Sheltering Home for Homeless and Aged. He was educated in Philadelphia public schools and graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, Gratz College, the Hebrew Normal School in Philadelphia and was Librarian of the latter institution.

At the entry of the U. S. into the World War, Mr. Feinstein was appointed Librarian for the Jewish Welfare Board, and later, after graduation from the Training School of the Welfare Board, was assigned to active field duty at Camp Dix, N. J., where he ministered to the spiritual and moral needs of the Jewish soldiers. Immediately following the War, Mr. Feinstein was appointed Community Organizer for the War Camp Community Service, Inc., at that time under the auspices of the U. S. Dept. of Labor, and after two years was called to become executive director of the Kearney Public School Community Center, an experiment in public school extension activities.

After serving in the latter capacity for three years, he accepted the call to become executive director of the Young Men's and Women's Hebrew Association of Plainfield, N. J., serving in this office for more than two years, returning later to Philadelphia to become superintendent of the Jewish Sheltering Home.

Mr. Feinstein is a member of the American Association of Social Workers, a member of the executive committee of the section for the care of the aged of the Community Council of Philadelphia, member of the executive committee of the National Association of the Jewish Homes for Aged, member of the Philadelphia committee for old age pensions, and campaigned actively for the passage of the old

With such speakers as Governor Francis T. Green, Father McCarthy, Herbert M. Sherwood, Joseph H. Gainer and Max L. Grant leading the protest movement against Nazi persecution of minorities in Germany, the R. I. Council, Jewish American Congress and the Seminar of Human Relations, will stage their mass meeting next Thursday night at the Elks' Auditorium on Washington St.

Among the thousands of invitations sent out were those of Senators Peter G. Gerry and Jesse H. Metcalf and Representative M. A. O'Connell. Within the past two days, several thousand indignant citizens have attached their names to a petition, which has been forwarded to Washington, appealing to the above legislators to secure action by Congress and the President to express to the German government the abhorrence and condemnation of the American people of its policy of oppression and persecution of Jews, Catholics, Protestants and all minor groups in Germany.

Reverberations of Rhode Island public opinion were evident during the past week when Senator Peter G. Gerry in speaking before the Senate said that American sportsmen should give "serious consideration" to the question of withdrawing from participation in the Berlin Olympic Games next year.

In discussing various phases of misunderstanding which might arise should an American Jew win an event, Senator Gerry said:

"It seems to me with conditions such as those which exist

Indignant Citizens to Voice Disgust with Hitler Policy

in Germany, with the animosities which are bound to be engendered, that it might be a serious matter, for example, if an American of Jewish extraction should win an important event in the Olympic Games or if there were some question of a dead heat involving an American and a controversy should arise on the decision."

Labor groups throughout the country are reiterating the stand of William Green, who as president of the American Federation of Labor demanded that the Federal Government take appropriate measures against the Third Reich.

"Labor in the United States," he added, "will join with others in taking such action that will enable it

"GERMAN JEWS" BECOME "JEWS IN GERMANY"

BERLIN (JTA) — The Hilfsverein der Deutschen Juden, German Jewish welfare organization, Monday changed its name to Hilfsverein der Juden in Deutschland, thus shifting the emphasis from "German Jews" to "Jews in Germany," in accordance with the order of the Nazi authorities who do not wish the Jews to identify themselves as German.

Reich Authorities Let Publication Resume

BERLIN (JTA) — Permission to resume publication of the Jüdische Rundschau, official Zionist organ in Germany, prior to the forthcoming Zionist Congress in Lucerne, Switzerland, August 20, was granted by the Nazi authorities this week.

The Rundschau was the most widely read Jewish publication in the Reich. Its circulation was estimated at more than 40,000. Its suspension on July 23 for three months practically left the Jews of Germany without any source of current information of Jewish life, since the Central Verein Zeitung, official organ of the Association of German Citizens of Jewish faith, had previously been banned.

Arrested for Saying His Best Friend Jew

BERLIN (JTA) — For privately dispraising of the Nazi regime, Gebhard Mosel, a naturalized British subject was arrested by agents of the Gestapo, Nazi secret police, Tuesday, and held for trial in a civil court.

Mosel, a London research chemist who was born in Munich, was arrested while visiting his birthplace. "He was overheard telling a friend, 'Why my best friend, my employer, is a Jew.'"

Meanwhile, all travel agencies in the Harz mountain district received a circular letter from Herr Klaggros, president of the Harz Transport to voice its indignation and its protest against the tyrannical and inhuman policies pursued by Hitler and the Hitler government of Germany."

Posters pasted on billboards in German cities and towns declare:

"Jews are unwelcome guests."
"Jews enter this town at their own risk."

"Association with Jews — expulsion from village and community."

"In this town there is no business for Jews."

"Jews have nothing to seek in this town."

"The Jews are our misfortune."
"Jews cannot earn anything here."

The above in addition to the brutal violence practiced on Jews and other minority groups is more than sufficient evidence that only by outside influence which will directly affect the economic status of Germany will Hitler and his apostles moderate their policies.

An effective boycott is only possible through the full co-operation of all Jews. Demonstrate your willingness to aid German Jews and other minority groups by attending the mass meeting next Thursday night and raising your voice with the thousands of others condemning Hitler and promising to fulfill your share in boycotting German goods and services.

The committee in charge of arranging the mass meeting includes Jacob S. Rabinowitz, Simon Silverman, E. Schwartz, Paul Robin, Morris Beeber, Robert Burstein, Alter Boyman, Maurice Hengel, A. Korman, A. Albert, Samuel Michaelson and Lie Berger.

Narragansett Track Continues to Draw Crowds

The second meeting of the popular Narragansett race track at Pawtucket began auspiciously last Monday and augurs well for the continued success of the track.

Although this current meeting came immediately upon the closing of Suffolk Downs, Rhode Islanders and other patrons looked forward to the present offerings of Walter O'Hara, managing director.

With interest running high at this time, and with the best stables in the country well represented the public is assured of some fine racing. Union, warning that local authorities must notify Jewish guests and tourists that they are undesirable.

Center Summer School Children in Annual Picnic

The highlight of the Jewish Community Center summer program was on Tuesday afternoon when more than 150 children were taken on the annual picnic to the Lincoln Woods. Throughout the day a program of athletics, including a baseball game and foot races of all descriptions kept the children occupied and entertained. Prizes were awarded to all winners including those who won special tournaments held daily at the Center.

The playground opened on July 8 and during the past six weeks hundreds of children have participated in the varied activities. The playground is equipped with all types of apparatus such as baby swings, see-saws, sand-box, maypole, slide and merry-go-round. Every day competitive contests were staged in basketball, volley ball, baseball, ping-pong, checkers and other games carried out under the supervision of the staff.

Each day, the children waited for the milk hour at three o'clock at which time they could obtain a half pint of milk at a price less than cost. This program varied each Thursday when the children were permitted to purchase ice cream.

During the playground schedule records show that more than 6200 children attended, a high peak for the Center.

The closing week of the playground was a busy one for the staff members. All the finals in the various tournaments were played off and prizes awarded. The high spot was the presentation of a two-act operetta "The Lonely Princess" before a large group of children last Tuesday afternoon and repeated in the evening for parents and friends.

Those taking part were Bertha Ehrenkrantz, Benny Barel, Betty Wilk, Rose Rice, Ida Diamond, Victor Cleiman, Esther Simofsky, Maurice Greenstein, William Gregor, Alfred Litwin, Paul Litwin, Eli Markoff, Evelyn Coffman, Elaine Morrison, Kathleen Feinberg, Bernice Perlow, Dolores Koret, Minnie Corich, Minnie Gurwitz, Beatrice Corich, Rosella Iwanstein, Bertha Gluck, Bessie Berko, Anna Barles, Zeld Kloner and Minnie Cleiman.

JEWISH SPORT NOTES

By MORRIS WEINER

Seventy thousand people were watching one of the final games of the World Series last year between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Detroit Tigers. From the box seats to the bleachers — from the flag pole to first base, every inch was lit up on the batter who had stepped up to the plate.

They roared and cheered as the man at the plate swung, connected, and poled a hit far into the deep outfield. A hit for certain. Maybe a two-bagger and with a little luck, perhaps a triple. They screamed and yelled as he rounded second and came tearing on to third base at the same moment when the man on the hot corner batted. He hit. They were still cheering when the dust began to lift. The field, the spectators, the chiselers from the nearby rooftops all became silent when they finally saw the runner safe on third and the third baseman stretched out senseless on the ground.

Immediately, spontaneously, the crowd, as one, rose to its feet and boomed. The cheers of a minute ago turned to jeers at the man who had dared to "play dirty" in the national game. It took ten minutes to restore order.

But, when the runner returned for his shift in the outfield, he was bombarded with beer bottles, pop bottles, in fact everything but the bleacher seats. It took 20 minutes to clear the field of debris — but the crowd of 70 thousand people were not satisfied until the runner had been removed from the game.

It was amazing, it might be incredible that so many people would take a mere action of a runner deliberately running into an infielder and hurting him so seriously. Yet, perhaps it does not seem so incredible when we stop to think that most Americans are sportsmen. Their credo is, "Let the best team win. Above all, win cleanly, fairly, with no blows hit in the clinches."

Therefore, it is equally unbelievable that these same American sportsmen can sit back idly, twiddle their thumbs and watch the appalling dirty play of a nation to its subjects. It is astounding how the American people stand on the side lines and watch the punches, and rough tactics, which are being dealt to the Jewish and Catholic athletes in Germany and still do nothing about it.

However, because we believe that the 70,000 people who throw pop bottles at an offending player — in order to give vent to their outraged feelings for sportsmanship and fair play — are typical of the 100,000,000 Americans in this country, we believe that the 1936 Olympic Games will not be held in Berlin in 1936.

It is our sincere opinion that the sport loving American public, Gentile or Jew, will stand for so much dirty play and no more. It will follow, perhaps not as ardently as follows A, but the American nation will not sanction a team to participate in the 1936 Olympics if they are to be held in Nazi Germany. The pop bottles are very much to fly and fly they will very shortly.

Should America Participate in Olympics

This question of American participation in the 1936 Berlin games has been kicked around by the press of this country very much in the same fashion as Minnie the Moocher kicked the gong about. Minnie had a good time doing it and for a while the press felt that way too. Perhaps this little incident will serve to refresh your memories.

In the late fall of 1933, Avery Brundage, the presiding officer of the Amateur Athletic Union of America, meeting in solemn conclave in Pittsburgh, was duly instructed to convey the following resolution to Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic Committee: Resolved that the Amateur Athletic Union will not certify any American athlete to participate in the 1936 Berlin Olympics.

In the late fall of 1934, Avery Brundage, chairman of the investigating committee of one on "The German discrimination of Jews in sports" returned to America after a two months tour of Germany.

At another solemn meeting of the American Olympic Committee, Chairman Brundage delivered his impartial report to President Brundage and the other members of the American Olympic Committee. Presiding officer Brundage said, "In view of the impartial report Chairman Brundage has given us, showing no actual discrimination against Jews in sports, I move we vote. Don't discuss the question too long, I've got to catch an 11 o'clock train for Chicago."

Last December, Brundage, as president of the A. O. C. the body which had adopted the stern resolution of the year before and sent it to the A. O. C. (of which Brundage was the president) called the meeting to order. As the head of the A. O. C. he was obliged to answer the charges implied in the adopted resolution. But, the main topic of discussion on the floor of the convention was the resignation of Brundage as chief of the A. O. C. Not a word was said in connection regarding the Olympic games, despite the fact that 14 Jewish delegates had been specifically instructed to bring the matter on the floor and Mrs. Brundage for a vote on the matter.

The question was tossed out on its ear after the news leaked out that the 14 Jews had met in secret session and had decided not to bring the matter up for discussion. But what about the Catholic and Protestant papers in this country clamoring against the German games, something more can be done about it.

Brundage of the A. O. C. will see to it that no matter how atrocious are the reports of Jewish and Catholic persecution in Hitlerland the games will be held.

The issue will be settled once and for all at the coming convention of the A. A. U. which will be held in New York in December. It is then we believe that the sportsmanship of the American public will come to the front. A vote will be taken. The country will demand it. And it's dollars to doughnuts that the A. A. U. will uphold its resolution of 1935. The sportsman of this nation can take so much and no more. After that point the pop bottles start sailing.

British Military Plans in Palestine Rumored

BERLIN (JTA) — The German press this week printed a sensational report that the British Government intends to transfer its Near East military base from Malta to Haifa, in Palestine, thus making Palestine the most important strategic center on the Mediterranean.

According to the report the British Government will build a railway from Haifa to Aqaba, thus establishing a direct outlet to the Red Sea which will make it possible to reach the Orient without passing through the Suez Canal.

THE WEEK IN JEWISH NEWS

GERMANY: Bitterest Month
"August must be made the bitterest month in the history of the German Jews!" was the curt order that went out from Nazi headquarters to party members throughout the country early last week.

Immediately a drive was launched in provincial cities to stave out the Jews. Food dispensers were prevented from serving non-Aryans. In many towns, Jews were arrested wholesale. In one town, storm troops raided a home for children and aged.

All over the country a rigorous boycott of Jewish business was enforced.

Refugee Jews began to pour into Berlin, hoping to lose themselves in the metropolis, but city officials took steps to bear down on them in the capital too. Food restrictions were contemplated and Police Chief Wolf von Helldorf was considering removing Jews from relief rolls.

Meanwhile, Nazi officials, in numerous addresses throughout the country, fulminated against the Jew and defied American Jewry to assist their brethren.

Olympic aspirants were not spared in the Nazi drive, and a number of incidents were reported of discrimination against Jewish athletes. Nazi officials seemed torn between a desire to persecute the Jew and the desire to keep the Olympics in Berlin.

They reached a happy medium—on one hand they freely practiced their persecutions. And then they tried to prevent correspondents from sending out the news.

The campaign started a wave of suicides throughout the country. Amid all this, the German Zionists scheduled to attend the Lucerne Congress wavered. They feared that somebody might step up against the Nazis at the Congress and that on their return they would be made the butt of reprisals.

UNITED STATES: Nazi Reverberations

Practically all the important Jewish news in this country was affected in one way or another by German developments. A widespread movement got under way for boycotting the Olympics. Church organizations, youth groups, newspapers and prominent persons got behind the drive. A split was seen developing in the American Olympic Committee on the question. Meanwhile, it was learned a delegation of Americans was attending the Hitler World Youth Congress in Berlin which launched an intense anti-Semitic propaganda drive throughout the world. The 50 to 100 there from America were mostly college students.
In Washington, it was indicated

Rabbi Ferdinand Isserman would not get a visa for a contemplated tour of inspection in Germany.

SWITZERLAND: Zionist Congress
With emphasis on the importance of Zionism, last-minute preparations were being made for the 19th World Zionist Congress. Labor, with 200 out of 421 delegates, is expected to dominate the Congress.

PALESTINE: Hitler Honors Jew!
Believe it or not: Hans Davidsohn, Jewish hotel proprietor, was awarded the Hindenburg Cross by Reichsfuehrer Hitler. It was conveyed to him by the German consul in Jerusalem with a laudatory citation.

Jails were in the Palestine news last week. The 32 Communists held in Jerusalem and Haifa for alleged illegal political activity, sacrificed their ideals to their hunger and gave up a hunger-strike which had been in progress two weeks. Meanwhile, Aha Achmeier (not to be confused with the Communist) was released from jail where he had been serving a sentence for complicity with an alleged Revisionist terrorist organization.

In addition, it was learned that from now on persons held for illegal entry into Palestine must languish in jail while they await trial. Bail is forbidden.

ALGERIA: "Anniversary"

On the anniversary last week of last year's anti-Jewish rioting, diabolical broke out in the town of Sidi Bel Abbes when Jews were taken down some anti-Semitic posters. Christian natives were embroiled in several affairs with Jews which broke out in various parts of the town. No deaths were reported and the number of injured could not be learned.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME

By PAUL A. PETERS

Jersey Justice
New Jersey emphatically didn't do right by the Fisch family (remember, they came over from Germany on invitation of the "sheeter" state to testify in the Hauptmann trial) . . . The Fisches, I am reliably informed, are in a pretty desperate plight back home in Leipzig . . . The head of the family, Pinus, brother of the late Iddor who was cleared of suspicion in the case, says his business was ruined as a result of his long absence . . . Strong pressure is being brought to bear on Atty. Gen. David A. Wilentz, Hauptmann prosecutor, to see that Jersey puts the justice back into its name by paying the Fisches in full for the expenses they incurred by coming over . . . A personality of international renown has interested himself in their case.

Resignation Note
With the Falashas (Ethiopian Jews) being brought into an unpleasant sort of spotlight by the imminence of an Italo-Ethiopian conflict, here's an item that might cause some eye-brow lifting . . . Jacob Greenberg is expected to resign as chairman of the active Pro-Falasha Committee . . . Mr. Greenberg, an associate superintendent of schools in New York, is too busy with his official duties to give the Falasha post all the attention he would like . . . Speaking of Falashas, Dr. Jacques Faitlovitch, executive director of the committee, may be on the high seas en route to Adis Ababa, as you are reading this . . . He wants to be on the spot when and if hostilities start . . . Nor is he a stranger to the land of Haile Selassie, being a frequent visitor.

People to Keep Your Eye On
Adele Gutman Nathan . . . A dynamic person who knows more about railroads than most railroad men themselves . . . She has written books about them for children . . . She was the only woman to make the transcontinental trip on the famous Zephyr, first of the streamlined trains . . . Helped in the technical details in the RKO film based on that trip . . . She's now at work on a novel based on the rise of the iron horse.

A Cow for Hightstown
Those Hightstown homesteaders, former New York City garment workers, are assured of at least one cow when they finally settle down in the New Jersey plains . . . The League for Labor Palestine is collecting a fund for that purpose, with which they'll purchase the finest Guernsey the money can buy.

Stop Press Flash
Sam Lampert, big cotton man in New York, seems to be raising a family of newshounds . . . Two of his daughters are operating mills (city room lingo for typewriter) on two metropolitan papers . . . Felicia writes for the Journal while Sarah churns out copy for the Post . . . Thousand pardons to Louis Popkin . . . We called him Martin last week by mistake . . . The Joint Distribution Committee has appointed a committee to survey the situation in Poland . . . Alexander Kahn is chairman . . . Other members on it are David M. Bressler, David M. Brown, I. Edwin Goldwasser, E. I. Kaufman, Sol Lowenstein, Rabbi Jonan B. Wise and Joseph C. Hyman.

The Penology Parley
When Samuel Untermyer hears this he'll fly back from that Mediterranean vacation . . . Mrs. Fanny Sachs Long of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., has been appointed a delegate to the penology conference scheduled for Berlin later this month . . . She's the only Jew on the delegation.

Feed
John L. Spivack doesn't like Dorothy Waring, self-styled Secret Agent No. 1 for the House Nazi investigators and biographer of Dickstein . . . The author of "America Faces the Barricades" gets a double-barreled load of his chest in the latest issue of New Masses . . . What annoys John is that the Congressman "had to pick for his biographer a woman who entertained and worked with anti-Semitic Nazi syndicates, a woman who helped distribute Congressman McFadden's vicious anti-Semitic speeches" . . . While on the subject of biographies, there's a hot time in the old town when the same New Masses referred to above, in its next issue prints an article by Paul Navin, managing editor of the Freiheit, Yiddish Communist daily . . . The title of the article is announced as "The Illeg and Fall of Abraham Cahan."

Note to Monsters
Peter Lurie, player of sinister roles in movies, is a Dutch Jew who made Germany his home until Hitler said kxay . . . Lurie explains the divorce from Germany this way: "There wasn't room in Germany for two such monsters as Hitler and I."

Expansion
If Germany throws up the sponge in the next few weeks, you'll know they've heard that Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League is expanding . . . The League has outgrown its old quarters and is moving to much bigger space . . . Their new address is 20 West 47th Street . . . An enlarged staff of research workers is being taken on.

Vacation Notes
Going to Europe has become so commonplace, it's refreshing to hear of someone who's spending his vacation hereabouts . . . Prof. Hiraee Kallen likes Blairtown, Conn., for some reason . . . Carl Sherman, former United States Attorney, went to Mexico, suddenly got a desire to go fishing and hustled up to Canada . . . He's back in New York again . . . Mayor Fossey of Miami, the city with a copyright on the sun, is taking his pen in hand any day now to invite Prof. Einstein to spend his winter vacation in the Florida metropolis . . . Tip to Fossey: Guarantee the professor that he can swim in Florida waters without running afraid of sandbars and he'll probably accept . . . Abe Aronowitz, City Solicitor of Miami, is a frequent visitor to N. Y.

Hittner-Hayman Nuptials Sunday

An attractive wedding took place Sunday evening when Miss Sally Hayman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Hayman of 189 Jewett St., became the bride of Victor Hittner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Hittner of 191 Jewett St. The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Osher Werner at Mayfair Inn in North Smithfield.

The bride who was given in marriage by her parents was gowned in white lace train and her tulle veil was caught with orange blossoms. Miss Faye Hittner was maid of honor and wore peach color satin and carried tulipman roses. Mr. Hittner who was escorted in the line of march by his parents, had Al Hayman as best man. The ushers were Jack Cohen, Sol Moskowitz, Jack Aloff, Jack Gleckman, Benjamin Hayman, Mrs. Hittner, Bernard Hittner, and Sherry Shatrin.

Mrs. Hayman, mother of the bride, wore a gown of old rose lace and a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Hittner was gowned in blue lace and had a corsage of red roses.

After a trip to Atlantic City, Mr. and Mrs. Hittner will reside on Smith St.

NEW YORK LETTER

A cause celebre just up and walked out on the local Nazi red-tops when Paul Kress, who for one brief week was the anonymous and mysterious "Mr. K.", pulled up his stakes and shipped to Germany and rub-a-tub life as a laundryman. Mr. K., it will be recalled, had been refused a license by Mayor LaGuardia to practice his rub-a-tub trade in New York.

And the Hitler adherents here had publicly given the Mayor a rowdy howdydo, in which the phrase "Jewish Mayor" was quite prominent. Privately, however, the Nazis were elated over the unlooked for opportunity to get into the public prints in a big way.

Here's what Mr. K. and Mayor LaGuardia, willy-nilly (and mostly nilly at that) did for the expiring suds-sippers: Gave them reams of publicity. Excited public sympathy in many quarters where they had never had it before. Gave the Friends of New Germany between 300 to 500 new members. Brought delinquent dues-payers trooping in with their dimes and quarters which they could have put to much better use in buying seals of the foamy. Brought their meetings from desultory, poorly attended affairs, into the overflow stage.

In short, the entire incident gave the Hitler lads over here one of the best selling points they have had in a long, long while.

The big-wigs of the movement were drunk with glee over it all. They went at the innocent Mr. K. like a pack of wolves for hare. Their plans for him were colossal. They'd make him the spearhead of a renewed drive against Jews over here.

Mr. K. evidently has different plans. A Seventh Day Adventist by creed, he wanted nothing to do with the hotbeds and their plans for him. He merely wanted to make a living — and make it decently. But being a meek sort of fellow, he was forced by the big-voiced, big-threat boys who front for Hitler over here, to attend a few meetings and say a few words.

When he saw his chance, however, to get out from under it all, he took it.

He left the Nazi movement here without its cause celebre. And the local leaders are now gnashing their teeth looking for a new one.

So, an avowal, Mr. K. And if you don't care for the chilly reception you get in Germany, come right back and maybe Mr. LaGuardia will reconsider his refusal, alien or no alien, German persecution of Jews or no persecution, permit you to rub American and German-American backs to your heart's content.

With a couple of strokes of the pen, one of the nation's finest cartoonists singlehandedly plunged two great governments into what is diplomatically known as an international incident. The governments are Japan and the U. S. The artist is William Gropper, whose daily job is doing cartoons for the Freiheit, Yiddish Communist daily, and who in his leisure moments dashes things off for such bourgeois publications as "The New Yorker and Vanity Fair."

It was in the latter smart, beautifully turned out periodical that the piece of art that caused the cables between Nippon and American to burn made its innocent appearance.

Gropper depicted Emperor Hirohito pulling a cart. The cart carried a document standing for the Nobel Peace Prize. It was very funny. The chances are 99 to one — and if I were a gambler, I'd offer 100 to one — that Hirohito privately had a good laugh over the cartoon. But every King has a circle of advisers, defenders and other specimens of the stuffed-shirt brigade. It was probably one of these who took offense at the Gropper cartoon and began international incidenting about it.

The net result was probably: One annoyed Japanese Ambassador Saito to who, to satisfy the honor of Nippon had to come to hot Washington from his cool retreat in Connecticut; an increase in Vanity Fair's circulation; a flock of quotations in the press from Frank Crowninshield, urbane editor of the magazine; a bigger flock of words about Gropper, the result of a newswound descent on masse upon his office at the Freiheit; and considerable publicity for the latter newspaper.

As for the cartoonist, who's been at it many years without making the headlines, he was amused. "If that cartoon of mine," he said, "puts us into war with Japan, I'll gladly shoulder a musket. The significance of that, of course, is that Gropper is a pacifist."

The American press has frequently been derided because it has succumbed to syndication and has thereby lost its former individuality. But papers now and then do show signs of being operated by persons of radically different temperaments, views; and of reflecting the individual "nose for news" of its editors.

Recently, the Christian Century, an important Protestant periodical with a large national circulation, announced editorially that it wanted the Olympic games shifted from Berlin to some other city.

The editorial blasted the Nazis rather beautifully.

The New York Times gave the story a column. Its review in the conservative field gave the same story one short paragraph and buried it at the bottom of the page.

Editorial policy? I don't believe it. It was merely a question of news sense, the desk man on the Times realized the full worth of the story. The desk man on the Tribune probably didn't.

AMERICAN WITHDRAWAL FROM OLYMPICS

With a growing belief that it was entirely proper for diplomatic officials to call to the attention of foreign governments the fact that suppression of religious beliefs may create unfriendliness and discord, it is gratifying to note that Senator Peter G. Gerry in his speech before the Senate suggested that American sportsmen consider withdrawing from the Olympic Games scheduled for Berlin next year because it "might create bad feeling in view of the extenuating circumstances."

Senator Gerry's opinion is one that speaks for thousands of Jews in this country who believe that by effectively boycotting Germany, socially and economically, it will be possible to force Nazi Germany to change its policies towards minority groups. Hitler is depending heavily upon the success of the Olympic Games; it will aid him materially in respect to money and propaganda.

Sympathetic response by other statesmen to Senator Gerry's remarks will go a long way to fixing the decision of the United State Olympic committee who now are in an indecisive mood. Rhode Island once more leads the way in public action.

THE "WHY" OF MASS MEETINGS

The numerous reasons why an effective public demonstration in protest of the suppression by the Nazis of Jews, Catholics and Protestants and labor groups is necessary is evident when the following facts are considered. The dictatorship of the Nazi party in Germany now has absolute and exclusive control of all governmental functions. It is gathering within its power the entire economic life of the people of Germany. It has effected the complete suppression of free speech, free religious worship and practices. It is pursuing an insensate and relentless vendetta against all its Jewish citizens.

Reports from reliable sources clearly show that Hitler and his henchmen have set up against German Jews, outstanding victims of its policy, a contrived philosophy of race hatred, which provokes punitive measures against all the members of that race, whom it brands as enemies of their native land, to be suppressed with brutal violence to the point of expulsion, extermination, or segregation to ghettos of the middle ages. It has deprived all Jews, regardless of political or religious views, of their rights as citizens and reduced them to the status of Pariahs. Against these unprotected citizens it has systematically directed the attacks of its controlled press, of its controlled radio service, of its hired propagandists and its organized storm troopers. The pogroms of recent date, which have shocked the conscience of the world, are the inevitable consequence of a situation prepared by the Hitler Government, and their repetition in more brutal forms may be foreseen and anticipated.

This destructive power, unchecked and uncensored, moves in the direction of the leaders and followers of the Catholic Church, who are now also the victims of the insane policies of the Nazi leadership. The Third Reich thus proceeds inevitably to a debacle in which will be consumed the culture and civilization of a great people.

Against this immoral power the voice of civilization must be raised. The influence of public opinion must be organized in order that a wall of resistance may be created against the spread of this menace. But the voice of public opinion is insufficient without the re-energizing of organized society, acting through its government.

Providence Jews have assumed their part in this worldwide protest. More than two thousand signatures have been attached to a petition that has been forwarded to representatives in Washington. By attending the mass meeting next Thursday night, our Jews will forge another link in the chain of public opinion that will snap the trap on Herr Hitler and company.

Scores Brazil, Argentine for Attitude to Refugees

NEW YORK (JTA) — West-coast nations in South America have shown themselves more generous to German refugees than the great eastern nations, Brazil and Argentina, said Dr. Samuel G. Inman in an address this week. He accompanied James G. McDonald, League of Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, on a recent tour of investigation.

"The Argentine and Brazil feel that they are big enough countries to ape the United States," Dr. Inman asserted. "They have passed laws restricting immigration, similar to those in this country, despite the fact that they have no over-population problem. But they are bound to realize that this attitude is a mistake. This immigration may be a blessing from God. Think of what may result from the influx into South America of 100 of the world's greatest scientists!"

Russian Author Tells of Pogrom

BY MAXIM GORKY

EDITOR'S NOTE: The famous Russian author paints a portrait, seared in the mind of a bystander, of the organic terror in a race-hating mob. "The Pogrom" is presented by the Jewish Telegraphic Agency by special arrangement with the publishers of Esquire.)

This was many years ago in one of the towns along the Volga. Beginning at dawn on a hot June day I had been at the bank of the river caulked a raft with tar, and now it was time for lunch. Then suddenly, from the outskirts of the town, I became aware of a muffled and angry sound, like cattle bellowing with rage.

At first, busy with my work, I paid little attention to this distant hum, though it took on volume and intensity, and I saw a plume of smoke from a fire. Over the village a dense cloud lay suspended in the torrid air. I turned away from the river and immediately seemed to see harsh noises, mixed with dust, rise from the east and west. The sound rolled up in gray spirals, the dusts became more and more strident, more and more varied, while the air trembled. I shuddered, a prey to lugubrious presentiment.

Leaving my work I climbed the sandy bank. From the top I saw people running pell-mell from all directions. In an excited mob they poured like lava down the street toward the town. Dogs and children sagged their hot, frightened, jaegers vulpines over their heads. Cackling chickens fled from beneath their feet. I, too, touched by the general madness, began to run, unaware of the cause of the excitement.

"There's fighting in the Eliashbinski!" one of the crowd shouted at me. A carter ran along the unpaved road whipping his horse furiously and crying with all the force of his powerful lungs:

"They're fighting us! Come on, you workers!"

I squeezed into a narrow alley and stopped. The mob choked the cul-de-sac like a bag full of grain. Again, I heard shouts and screams of violence, strong and breaking. Windows tinkled plaintively; heavy blows resounded; something broke, fell, and rolled. The noises became confused, each new one blanketing the last like clouds in autumn, heavy masses of agonizing wallowing air. The suddenly unbreathable air.

"The Jews are getting theirs!" came the pleased voice of a little bit of a man, a well dressed and distinguished-looking old fellow. He rubbed his little eyes and added:

"That's fine, that is! I'm glad. I elbowed my way out, obeying a strangely exciting and irresistible impulse. The terrifying uproar drew me on and every one with me, sucking me in like quicksand. Human faces, dimmed with intense and base malice, eyes shining eagerly, passed before me as in a dream. The mob flowed forward in a heavy and compact mass, ready to tear down walls or barricades should they be met with. Each man searched to climb over the man ahead, to trample his body, to crush him under foot.

I rushed into the courtyard of a house, then jumped the fence into the court next door, repeating this feat again and again until I found myself once more in a dense mass of humanity.

They yelled like demons, heads thrown back, faces red, teeth flashing in their open mouths. They waved their arms, and each other, climbed on the roofs of the buildings, slid to the ground and then, without stopping or being, climbed and climbed again! Despite the confusion of movement there was something strangely homogeneous in this swarming mob. Each man seemed to have become the arm of a single huge body, driven by the powerful mob against which there could be no resistance.

High above their savage and beastly pack a tall, thin Jew clung to the roof of a house. With his shriveled fingers he tore bricks from a chimney and threw them down on the scorching mass below, all the time yelling in a voice shrill like a scull. His long white beard quivered on his breast and his white trousers were covered with red splashes. Violent cries were hurled at him from below.

"Shoot him!"

"Get a run! Stone him!"

"Go up there and get him!"

The windows of the house were filled with people. They broke the window frames with cold fury and threw any object at hand into the court and into the street. Window panes vibrated and shattered. A thin strapping lad with powerful shoulders and curly hair appeared in one of the windows holding a mirror.

"Look out below!" he cried in a loud voice as he pushed it through the window. Catching the rays of the sun for one dazzling moment, the mirror somersaulted in midair and fell to the ground with a resounding crash. The young man leaned far out the window to see it. On his high cheek-boned face was a serious, almost pensive, expression, totally void of any selfishness.

In another window appeared a robust and black bearded muzhik, a pillow in his hand. With a deft movement he ripped it open letting a thick snow of white feathers float out into the air.

"It is snowing! Be careful of your noses, you children!" he cried as he watched the little white feathers turning over and over, falling toward the sea of human faces below. Meanwhile in the courtyard someone was yelling at the top of his voice:

"Come here! We've just found some little Yids in a barrel!"

"Beat them! Kill the little bastards!"

"Bash their heads against the wall!"

"Listen, you old Yid! Come down and make it quick! We've found your brats!"

"Get off that roof or we'll kill them!"

The terrified shriek of a child rent the air like a flash of lightning against a cloudy sky, a streak of dazzling brilliance against the dull roar of the crowd. The hubbub softened for a moment only to spring up stronger than ever.

"Don't touch them!" someone shouted.

"Don't touch the children!"

"Stick to the roof!"

And then another shriek from the child. Sharp as hail it cut to the heart and drowned out all other sounds.

"God damn it!" a voice cried out.

"Hit 'em on the head!"

"You dirty kike!"

"He's mashed my feet with a brick!"

"Come one, Antipe, let's get the Yid!"

Two laborers from a nearby building elbowed their way into the crowd, looked up, and began to climb to the roof. Again the serious faced lad with his rosy cheeks appeared. Struggling, he pushed a large wardrobe into the open window.

"Hey, you kid, catch the dishes!" he shouted to the crowd who greeted him with frenzied joy.

However, the wardrobe would not go through the space of the window frame, so the young man waded it back. His head disappeared behind it but reappeared almost at once over the window ledge. Slowly, like the bay of a wolf, he shouted:

"Look... out... be... low!"

A pile of dishes, unwinding like a great multi-colored ribbon, fell to the ground, followed by a samovar flashing in the sunlight. Below, the crowd ran in every direction, covering their heads with their hands and laughing in great guffaws of mirth. A red-headed youth picked up the samovar and, raising it above his head, threw it to the ground again with all his might, stamping on it and crushing it with his feet.

From the roof came an inhuman wall of despair. The crowd looked up to see a piece of iron fall with a sound of thunder. On the edge of the roof a large body balanced for several seconds, screamed, shrieked, broke away, and was cast into the air... Only a noise remained, soft and disgusting.

Harried, I left the courtyard pursued by their savage cries of triumph.

"Aaaaaah!"

"That's right!"

"At last, we get 'em..."

In the last few people were breaking chairs, tables, boxes, gleefully ripping up clothes. Feathers floated in the air. From the windows of houses facing on the court there came avalanches of pillows, baskets, furniture, rugs.

A number of incredible statures passed before me, bareheaded, shirt torn. From his disordered hair thick blood, almost black, ran over his cheeks. He waved his arms, smiling the sickly smile of a gluttonous animal.

Suddenly he put his arms around a lamp post, and pressing the iron pipe against his chest, he began to rock it back and forth. The globe tottered, came loose from its socket, and fell to the ground.

"Down with it!" cried another muzhik turning up to the same lamp post, which he too embraced and began to shake with all his force.

From somewhere, like a dove in a swirl of smoke, a young girl plunged into the crowd, her dress torn from top to bottom, her hair streaming over her shoulders. She ran, head thrown back and in her face, pale with misery, her eyes seemed immeasurably huge.

"Beat up the Yid!" cried a voice and in the blink of an eye the young girl disappeared in the dense mass of beings as a minute piece of sugar vanishes under a cloud of flies.

"Gangway! Here comes Zelmann! Get back, you!"

Shouts came from a group who dragged something along the pavement. It was a man, or rather a corpse, half naked, dry, disheveled, hunched, covered with blood and mud. By a rope tied in Zelmann's leg they dragged the unhappy man the length of the street. A little river of blood flowed from his mutilated body, leaving a zigzag track on the pavement. His long dried-up arms wavered in the wind and wedged between his arms where they joined the shoulders, was a frightful head, a bloody ball, hitting against the paving blocks.

Zelmann had been a rich contractor of public works. I had often seen him alive but there was nothing of the rich man about the rag that lay before me. It did not even resemble a human being.

Bewildered by all that was going on around me, choked with dust, I followed the crowd, pushed here and there like a chip of wood swept on by a torrent. It was like a horrible dream.

Brandishing a saber, a policeman runs around as though lost. They laugh at him. They cry after him.

"Stop! Hold him!"

"Catch the boss!"

Someone throws a broken box at his feet. The policeman trips, somersaults, and falls. General laughter shakes the street. Happening to glance down at my feet I see a piece of bloody skin stuck there, a tuft of hair still clinging to it. I shudder.

"Hey, you people! Come here!"

The cry comes from a neighboring courtyard, and the mob in a wave washes in obediently. They cry, shout, and sniff. Like leasht they grovel.

At the entrance of the court horses' nostrils surge unexpectedly; the blue caps of the cossacks swing to and fro; their short whips crack as they skim the backs of their animals. A loud voice intones commands:

"By threes... in close formation... at a trot... forward!"

"Throw bricks at the cossacks!" someone shouts from above.

A woman, half naked and covered with blood, throws herself at the feet of the horses. Appearing suddenly from nowhere as though the earth had spit her up, she seizes the leg of the first cossack she encounters and clings to it like grim death.

Suddenly they rear, snorting. The crowd, too, pauses, looking at the cossacks.

"Dismount!" is the command.

The surging mob shouts and waits. To the rear, at the other end of the street, detachments of police and infantry bat retreat. Then, at last, people begin to jump fences and walls, to flee through the courtyards, the cossacks at their heels. Before, the mob were brutes who, without reason or pity, tortured others just as unhappy as themselves, and now they, too, are beaten without reason or pity. Now they are merely cowards trying to save themselves from the lash of the whips wielded by experts.

BACK HOME AGAIN

Again this reporter greets you all from local territory as I return to my labors freshened in spirit and really eager to tackle the work at hand. Vacations are great and a change of scenery still better. I enjoyed my few days away and met many interesting people from many different states. I welcomed the opportunity to exchange my thoughts with others but on the other hand I maintain as always that Rhode Island is my favorite spot and the familiar landmarks of Little Rhody were a welcome sight to my eyes. I learned on my arrival at home that your truly was not the only person that was away if postcards bearing many foreign views mean anything. August is the month of going away for many and the local scene is very quiet which will probably be the case until Labor Day.

Brandeis.

Harry Greenspan, our druggist golfer, is showing fine form at Ledgement and contenders for the club championship will have to be in fine shape to beat him this year. . . . Harry is also a handball player of no mean ability. . . . Violet Marks, program director of WPAI showed the natives how the piano should be played during her two weeks' stay at Bethlehem — twenty years ago, French rabbi decreed that because of the difficulty in small communities of obtaining a minyan, women can be counted in cases of need. . . . well I suppose it will be Narragansett Pier on Sunday and maybe we will all meet again.

German Jews Being Settled in Palestine

JERUSALEM (JTA) — About 200 German-Jewish families will be settled in two new villages near Petach Tikvah on which work was begun this week.

The two villages will be known as Maimonia, to commemorate the 800th anniversary of the birth of Maimonides, and Kfar Yehosh in honor of the late founder and leader of the Socialist Zionist movement, Dr. Nachman Syrkin.

They will cost about $70,000 (approximately $350,000). The money will be contributed by the settlers, by the Keren Kayemet, Jewish national land redemption fund, and the Jewish Agency.

Addita, addita and additta which in English means hello. Again I make a few mistakes while dabbling out the news of the week which indeed has been centered on some few.

Down the way of the Hills Grove territory we saw one of the Sweet twins and their similarity has made it hard for me to tell which one, but my idea was that it was Evelyn. And while I am out that way I might remind you that the sweet partner of our good friend Bert was Charlotte, not to forget Bernice who also showed her merit as an excellent dancer; an orchid to the crowd. Also there was Evelyn Hyman at the table with Sylvius. The boy friends have been little seen about town so I cannot tell you about them.

Out the Narragansett Pier way Evelyn Bernstein is still to be seen around the beach; yet the great athlete is not always present. Saulie Miller who is at present vacationing from his regular job in Pawtucket of course makes his frequent visits to the beach, and on Sundays he is not usually by himself.

Mutterings from the Barrington way bring the greatest assortment of names and deeds. First to be greeted is Irving Wattman who is now very much occupied raising that cute bit on the upper part of his lip, and it is, indeed, very becoming. We wonder whether Milt Cokin has decided to do some work when we see him behind the counter at the candy store. Sitting in his car by the way at the beach was Sonny Tabor. And not far off pacing the highway was Rose Chitnosky of Taunton fame. My, my, my, what the moonlight will do to some people.

Betty Chitnosky, by the way, is still one of the nicest whose popularity never seems to have the diminishing way. Seen visiting and being escorted around is Bertha Shore who seems to be attracting her bit too. Summer romances are the sweetest thing, aren't they? But lo, and behold as our ancestors would say, they turn into something very serious.

Seen at Dutchland on the Fall River road was Seymour Bedrick, who still ranks with the topnotchers when it comes to smooth pickings. Ira Nulman bought sandwiches, half of which I ate, Rosalind Weiner is very nice, don't you think? Hampden Meadows had its representative in person of Francis Gorfine. A good sport is Francis to help the novelty machines in their quest for nickels. For those who are interested Gerald Weinberg has just moved from his former residence on Evergreen Street and we wonder how close the new residence will be to the desired location.

Police Refuse to Heed Warning of Nazi Riots

DANZIG (JTA) — Proof that authorities had advance warning of the Nazi riots in the Rumeplatz market last week in which 20 Jews were wounded was furnished by the owner of a large wholesale house.

The wholesaler said he had officially warned the authorities before the riot occurred and asked that precautionary measures be taken.

Several of the Jewish shops pillaged during the attack are owned by Polish citizens who are instigating legal proceedings against a number of rioters, some of whom are well-known Nazi leaders.

It was charged that police stood by while the band of Nazi youths wrecked shops and forced Jewish tradesmen to leave the market.

Japanese 'Dumping' in Palestine May be Curbed by League

GENEVA (JTA) — The question of Japanese "dumping" of exports in Palestine came to a head this week when the League of Nations Mandates Commission demanded to know why Japan, which left the League last March should enjoy the special rights in Palestine guaranteed League members.

The commission, in a report to the forthcoming session of the League Council made public this week, raised the question whether Japan can still operate under Article 18 of the Palestine Mandate which reserves equal export rights in Palestine to League members.

Although Japan quit the League last March, her representatives are still serving on a number of technical bodies of the League.

The commission's report, containing a general outline of special obligations, views with satisfaction the favorable economic and financial position of Palestine and the growth of cooperation with the Arabs.

The Palestine government's decision to introduce measures protecting women and children in industry and looking toward establishment of a minimum wage scale drew the approval of the commission. The report further recommended inauguration of factory inspection and a leave of absence of rest, especially for dock laborers.

The report approves measures adopted by the Palestine government to prevent illegal immigration into the country. The promise of the Mandatory Power to immediately establish a free demilitated area between Transjordan and Hedjaz, and to hasten construction of a harbor at Akaba, are noted with satisfaction.

Some concern for the Arabs is expressed in various parts of the report. The Mandates Commission expresses the hope that the government will solve the problem of the landless Arabs, and recommends establishment by the Palestine government of dwellings for Arab workers.

The report requests fuller information on the administration of Transjordan, particularly as regards the political situation, labor conditions and the traffic in drugs and spirits.

Around The Town

With JOSEPH M. FINKLE

BACK HOME AGAIN

Again this reporter greets you all from local territory as I return to my labors freshened in spirit and really eager to tackle the work at hand. Vacations are great and a change of scenery still better. I enjoyed my few days away and met many interesting people from many different states. I welcomed the opportunity to exchange my thoughts with others but on the other hand I maintain as always that Rhode Island is my favorite spot and the familiar landmarks of Little Rhody were a welcome sight to my eyes. I learned on my arrival at home that your truly was not the only person that was away if postcards bearing many foreign views mean anything. August is the month of going away for many and the local scene is very quiet which will probably be the case until Labor Day.

GLEANINGS FROM HERE AND THERE

Four Jewish students at Michigan University have been requested by the President of that institution not to return to school because of their anti-Fascist work on the campus last year. Dr. N. Rosen of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton and a graduate of the Chelsea Talmud Torah is aiding Professor Albert Einstein in his scientific studies at that University.

Sid Silverman, John's boy, postcards from Oak Bluffs of the attractions there. Lou Green is very proud of the attractive new scenery at his popular Hunter's Lodge on Westminster St. seen on the Main Stems of our village. Doc Sam Kenison and lawyer Man Art Levy in earnest conversation. Laura Winograd on Westminster St. in deep thought or was it Ann Arbor? Al Strauss who is putting Cranston on the map through his many civic labors greets me with the usual smile — you know Al is the president of the Chamber of Commerce in our neighboring city. The best of wishes to the Irving Nagers on the news of that new arrival — this popular young couple have made a host of friends since their arrival from Mass., but a few years ago.

You probably know by this time that cinema actress June Knight, Sylvia Sydney, Patricia Ellis, Joan Blondell, Sari Maritz and the newest sensation Luis Rainer are suspected of going to the same place of worship as you and I, and of course Elizabeth Bergner speaks our language too — and did you know that Dick Powell also of the silver screen sang in the choir of an orthodox synagogue in his home town for years. Yes the screen stars who are represented by members of the race that Herr Hitler hates. Buddy Zetlin, the Phil Nathansons, the Lyon Marcus' Irving Winograd, Mrs. Morris Beeber Mrs. Arthur Einstein, the Lipsones, the Hays' Powlers, the Frank Slepkoys and Max Leach were local seen at Bethlehem during the past week. Mrs. Harry Pinkerson and sister Esther Bagg of Boston were seen boarding the train here on Sunday last for a few days in the big city. Isaac Moses thinks well of the Republican victory and says that with a few thousand or more votes he would have returned the victor — well, we are awaiting his next campaign when he makes the run for Mayor of our city. Archie Smith and Syd Rabinowitz charmed and thrilled the natives with their eloquence during the political campaign but their efforts were for naught as the results show.

Phil Glanzman, our very versatile athlete did a nifty piece of backstopping on the single men's side in the baseball game which featured the annual outing of the local lodge of Elks last week — Phil also shoots a good game of golf when he manages to get away from his busy business duties. Marion Rubin, that comely Woonsocket miss, postcards from Bay of Naples of her pleasant time there while Dot Waldman is singing the praises of Cedars which was her vacation spot for the past week — Dot thrilled us all with her fine voice at the last Center Opera.

The Malahel Koppelman who just arrived from Palestine after five years spent in the Homeland are greeting all their old friends. Mrs. Koppelman is the former Rose Fineman and her two-year-old daughter born there is seeing this part of the world for the first time. We want to congratulate our good friends Harry Loeb Jacobs and Gardner Jacobs on the opening of their beautiful new Bryant College which is now considered one of the finest business schools in the whole United States with students from every section of the union.

Ruth Brenner surprised us all with her fine clog dancing at Maplehurst. While Rae Blecher also of Woonsocket is also at the same place for the season and making conquests. Marion Soforovko, Ruth Silverman and Eunice Goldsmith found Bay of Naples a great vacation spot. My scouts report that among those seen at Casco, Maine during the past fortnight were the Ben Alperets, the Abe Flinks, and the Lew Forstems, seen at West Shore Camps were the Herman Bernsteins. Narragansett track is sure one popular sport of our locals who are seen there every day and Venedi Lapazit too finds the horses interesting.

Ted Max and Max Siegel report glowing progress thus far on their coming carnival for our Jewish Home for the Aged. Dr. Ilie Berger says that the anti-film mass meeting planned here on Thursday, Aug. 22, will be one of the greatest demonstrations ever seen locally. Reports from New Haven tell us that our local son Harry Shulman is one of the most popular professors at Yale Law School. This young man who gained his education by selling newspapers on our downtown streets captured nearly every honor at Brown University and was one of the brightest men ever turned out of Harvard Law School — before being appointed to the faculty at Yale he served for a year as secretary to Justice Louis D. Brandeis.

Harry Greenspan, our druggist golfer, is showing fine form at Ledgemere and contenders for the club championship will have to be in fine shape to beat him this year. Harry is also a handball player of no mean ability. Violet Marky, program director of WPAR showed the natives how the piano should be played during her two weeks' stay at Bethlehem. Twenty-five years ago, French rabbis decreed that because of the difficulty in small communities of obtaining a minyan, women can be counted in cases of need. It is supposed we will be Narragansett Pious on Sunday and maybe we will meet again.

VACATION AT RIVERSIDE
Hyman Koplan vacationed last week-end with his mother, Mrs. Rose Koplan, at Riverside after returning from a brief stay at Block Island.

German Jews Being Settled in Palestine

JERUSALEM (JTA) — About 200 German-Jewish families will be settled in two new villages near Petach Tikvah on which work was begun this week.

The two villages will be known as Maimonides, to commemorate the 500th anniversary of the birth of Maimonides, and Kfar Syrkin, in honor of the late founder and leader of the Socialist Zionist movement, Dr. Nachman Syrkin.

The settlement cost about £70,000 (approximately $350,000). The money will be contributed by the settlers, by the Keren Kayemeth, Jewish national land redemption fund, and the Jewish Agency.

Disfranchisement of Jews Is Nazi Aim

BERLIN (JTA)—The German Jews will be relegated to the status of colonial natives or subjects in the new citizenship law now reported in the process of preparation.

Authoritative quarters here indicated this week that the intensification of the anti-Semitic campaign is a Nazi move to propagandize the German people in preparation for a publicists on the reported new law. Meanwhile, the latest step in the campaign is to cut the Jews off from the life of Germany was the demand this week by Judenkenner, violent anti-Semitic publication, that the German Jews be imprisoned in re-

Determined to Hold Olympics in Berlin

NEW YORK (JTA)—The International Olympic Committee is perhaps the one body that could force Reichsfuehrer Hitler to curb his anti-Semitic campaign, said William M. Henry, technical director of the 1932 Olympics, returning this week from Berlin.

Henry said that Hitler had reinstated Dr. Theodor Lewald as chairman of the German Olympic Committee after ordering his dismissal on the grounds he was a non-"Aryan."

He expressed the opinion that the games are so dear to Hitler that he would modify the Nazi campaign if there were any threat that the games would be moved.

But, Henry said, there is no such threat. He quoted Count Baillet-Latour, president of the International Olympics Committee, as saying:

"There is no Jewish question in the Olympics Games for 1936. We do not speak of Jews, Catholics or Protestants regarding the athletes who are entering to compete in the next year's game."

"You can say when you go back to America that nothing will stop the Olympic games that are scheduled to take place in Berlin next summer and they will be a great success."

tallation for the anti-Nazi campaign abroad.

The publication also launched an editorial campaign against the Jewish Telegraphic Agency for cabling reports of the renewed anti-Jewish drive in Germany.

"We demand that for each German abroad suffering morally as a result of the anti-Hitler campaign, a Jew in Germany be jailed," the newspaper said.

In many parts of Germany Nazi storm troopers vied with each other in brutality of Jew-baiting.
