Providence Jews Unite to Enforce Nazi Boycott

THERE SHOULD BE NO JEWISH TORIES

(EDITORIAL)

The Greeks had a word for it. Providence Jews apparently have no word for it. Americans, in 1776 had a word for it, again in 1861 they had a word for it. In the World War all nations had a word for it and now, in 1935, when Jewry is fighting a battle for very existence, it is time a word was found for it.

In 1916 the world called those who refused to rally to the support of their own Nationals, "slackers." In '61 the Northerners called them renegades. When the barricades were blocking the streets of Paris the French called them "Bourbons." The Italians had names for them when Garibaldi was leading his valiant legions, even Walker, the filibuster, had a name for them when he conquered Venezuela. Down through the pages of history, there have been words coined to describe those who, lacking the valor to take up arms with the despoilers of their countries, resorted to subterfuge to aid their country's enemies.

Perhaps the gentlest word to describe these people is the one coined by American patriots, when the Thirteen Colonies were facing extermination. The Pilgrims, the Puritans, the Quakers, united against a common enemy, called those who underhandedly aided that enemy, "Tories." The Jewish people of Providence, not having as yet coined a word for the saboteurs of their own race, may well adopt the word "Tory" as descriptive. It is a more charitable word than some of the others which have been used.

Every Jewish merchant in Providence who sells German-made goods is a Jewish Tory. There can be no mistake about that. The merchant who displays, or who in whispers, advances the sale of German-made goods is a Tory. And there are plenty of Tories in Providence.

This journal has at hand the names of many, far too many, Jewish merchants who support the Jewish cause by word of mouth and garrote that same cause by purchasing and selling German-made goods. The names are not those of isolated vendors. Some of them are on Dorrance Street, some on Snow Street, some on Pine Street, some on Broad Street, there are some on Fruit Hill, some on South Main Street, some on Weybosset Street, some on Westminster Street, — in short a street directory and nothing less would include the entire list.

What IS the reason for this state of affairs? What is the excuse for it? Why do Jews rally enthusiastically to the support of any humanitarian project that affects others and still be so indifferent, even callous to projects that affect themselves, even when the press of the world admits that Jewry has its back against the wall?

Jews, at least the majority of the 35,000 Jews in Providence do not fully support the anti-Nazi boycott. They do not support, except in isolated instances, what should be 100 percent movements against Nazi oppression. They do not support the Jewish press, their sole mouthpiece. They do not support Jewish merchants who endeavor to compete with the vendors of boycotted goods.

BERNSTEIN EDITOR, DIES

HERMAN BERNSTEIN

The funeral of Herman Bernstein, author, former editor, diplomat and leader among American Jewry took place in New York Tuesday. Mr. Bernstein, who was 58, died at Broadview, his summer home at Sheffield, on Saturday last. He had suffered from a heart ailment for some time.

Appointed by President Hoover, Mr. Bernstein served as envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Albania from February, 1930 to September 1932. In 1931 he negotiated a naturalization treaty between Albania and this country and an extradition treaty signed the following year.

His fame already nation-wide through his activities in behalf of the Jewish people, Mr. Bernstein gained further recognition from 1923 to 1927 when he sued Henry Ford for $200,000, charging libel as a result of anti-Jewish articles published in the motor magnate's Dearborn Independent. The suit was settled when Mr. Ford sent Mr. Bernstein his personal apologies and ordered a general retraction of the offending articles.

Vigorous Measures Being Taken by Local Jews to Ban from City's Stores All Traces of Nazi Goods

Jewish citizens of Providence will unite to enforce the boycott on German-made goods and Jewish households will head the movement. This became certain today after a volunteer committee had canvassed the city. Plans have been made for a monster meeting of protest, to be held in the immediate future at the Elks Auditorium.

Leaders in the movement which seems to have been spontaneous, following the editorial in the Herald of last week, expect 100 percent co-operation from Providence Jews and from assurances already received, they believe that local merchants who have been displaying goods of Nazi manufacture, will shortly be driven into line.

The campaign has been carefully planned. A list of Jewish merchants who display or sell German made goods has been compiled and placed in the hands of over 200 workers who have already started a house-to-house campaign. Merchants who are not adhering to the boycott are carefully checked off on the lists supplied to the workers in different sections of the city. This applies not only to Jewish merchants, but to Gentiles also.

The committee also has under consideration a plan to supply each merchant who agrees to support the boycott, with an insignia for display in store windows, identifying the store as adhering to the boycott.

The movement has already gained such headway that its organizers believe it will be copied in most Rhode Island cities and in neighboring Massachusetts and Connecticut towns. Full details of the protest meeting with the list of speakers, will be published next week. A list of the proscribed merchants is in possession of the Herald, together with a list of German-made articles on sale in their stores. This list is available to all subscribers.

Elect Weizmann World Zionist Congress Head

LUCERNE (JTA) — Dr. Chaim Weizmann was named president of the World Zionist Congress after four years retirement as the 19th biennial World Zionist Congress closed here this week adopting a series of resolutions aimed at developing Palestine as a homeland for the Jewish people.

Resolutions were adopted as follows:

1. Urging opening of Transjordan to Jewish settlement to answer the Jews' "crying need for land" and as an economic benefit to the Arabs.
2. Asking government appropriations for Jewish agriculture, colonization, health institutions, education and a grant for a rabbinical law court.
3. Demanding revision of the immigration policy to permit entry of Jewish labor to the full extent of the country's absorptive capacity.
4. Calling on the new Zionist Executive to negotiate with the Palestine government for abolition of administrative difficulties in the way of Jewish land acquisition and appealing to the Jewish people to help provide new land.
5. Urging Zionist groups to combat speculation in Palestine; asking Palestine banks to withhold funds for speculative ventures.
6. Deciding to expel from the Zionist Organization Palestine employers refusing to hire Jewish labor.
7. Rejecting the Jewish State Party's demand to rescind the resolution of a previous congress recognizing the Histadruth as the only labor federation in Palestine.

They Reached The Top

By I. D. CLAIRE

When better sports pictures are taken, Izzy Kaplan will take them. Any newspaper photographer will tell you that. They are a jealous lot, the shutter men, but they recognize supremacy when they see it. And in the newspaper business the much-written about Izzy stands supreme. A real Knight of the Lens, always to be found where the action is hottest and always coming back with a picture.

Izzy immigrated from Russia 30 years ago. His father, who still lives in Brooklyn, is a Hasid and a stern disciplinarian. He is the mainstay of frantic city editors — unable to keep Izzy in line. One word from them and Izzy does as he pleases. One word from Papa Kaplan and Izzy gets the picture.

He learned the shutter business as a boy, saved enough money to start his own studio and for a time prospered. But there wasn't enough excitement in commercial photography so Izzy went back to the newspaper game. On the old Mail under Jason Rogers, before Munsey decided to murder a few New York newspapers, Izzy reestablished himself.

In 1925 he joined the shutter staff of the New York Mirror. Since then his fame as a sports photographer has spread to the four corners of the world. It was Dan Parker who nick-named him Izzy. Paul Gallico, Damon Runyon, even the very old Melnyre mention him in their syndicated columns. They tell many tales of Izzy, most of which are true.

There is the classic (and true) story of Izzy and Queen Marie of Roumania. Izzy was assigned to get a picture of the Queen with former Mayor Jimmy Walker. The group assembled on the steps of the municipal building. All the other shutter men were ready to shoot. Izzy stepped forward, Slapping the Queen on that portion of her anatomy upon which she usually rests when sitting. (Continued on Page Three)

Grid Gossip
It may be a bit premature to talk of the grand old gridiron game at this time when the teams in both baseball leagues are still fighting it out for the highly coveted pennants. However, since the New York Giants professional football team has recently signed two Jewish ball players with them this fall we'd like to break away from the ball parks, from Caultflower row, from the Grapefruit Circuits, and the Diamond alleys for a while and tell you something about Walter and Irving Singer, the twins from Syracuse University.

The fact that a big league football team has signed two more Jewish gridirers to play with them is no novelty in itself. There have been plenty of Jewish stars in the pro grid game, Harry Newman, Benny Friedman, Jack Grossman, Leo Mielziner, and Babe Scheuer are but a few of the many Jewish athletes who have made good on the gridiron—that is professionally speaking. But, the Singer twins are a novelty act by themselves. They not only have been the backbone of the Syracuse eleven for the past four years but they have been the cause of nightmares on the part of coaches, scouts and even their own teammates.

Both lads, alike as the proverbial peas in the traditional pod, tried out for the Syracuse frosh football team some four years ago. Irving, the center, was the first to report to the coach of the plebe eleven. He was tried out at the pivot position and made good. The next week, Walter, the wingman, came out for his first session. The coach, believing him to be Irving, put him in at the center post. Walter protested but it availed him little.

The coach was much disgusted with the performance of the player whom he had considered one of the best center finds at Syracuse in years. He called him aside and gave him the old rah-rah pep talk. The frosh grid mentor was nearly floored when Walter, after the language by the coach, admitted that there was another one at home just like him. He explained that Irving was the center but that the latter couldn't report that afternoon due to a late class. He was Walter, and he was trying to win the end position.

Walter, at the wing post, proved just as capable as Irving was in the middle of the line. The two were selected as co-captains of the frosh team. Syracuse had great prospects for its varsity the next year.

Gave Coach Headaches

Many times in practice, and for that matter during the actual games, the coach would say, "Irving, start at center, Walter, play end," and so on until the lines would be completed. And because the Singer twins liked to kid everybody about their own identity, Irving the pivot man, would play end, and Walter would start at center. It sounds complicated. It proved even worse. It gave the coach headaches and it gave the fans laughs. Finally, in sheer desperation, the coach had one of the Singers wear light stockings and the other dark. It was the only way he could keep from going nuts.

Both of these chaps were selected by this writer on his annual JTA Jewish All-American eleven for 1934. We made no mistakes about the positions. For that matter, had we placed Irving at end and Walter at center, nobody, not even us, would have been able to tell the difference. New York will have a grand time this fall when the Singer twins take to the field.

Did You Know That?

The odds along Broadway, the betting center of the nation, are two to one against Maxie Baer, the former heavyweight champion of the world, for his fight against Joe Louis... Slow motion movies of the Levisky-Louis fight have dispelled all rumors that the Kingfish took a dive... The films show the actual blow nearly knocking the head off the big contender from the Windy City... There will be three women tennis stars entered in the United States women's singles championships this year who are Jewish... They are Mrs. Blumenthal (the former Baroness Mand Giacomo Levi), Bonnie Miller, and Millicent Hirsch... There is talk that the wife of Herr Von Cramm, the outstanding tennis ace of Germany, is "non-Aryan"... It is for this reason, some claim, that Van Cramm was not picked on the German Davis Cup team... For the first time in the history of organized baseball, a Jewish star is leading the leagues in the number of home runs clouted in... Needless to say, his name is Hank Greenberg.

Have You Heard That?

The next Amateur Athletic Union convention will be held in New York City... However, the Philadelphia report happened to make the statement, the damage, it is believed here, has already been done. There is little doubt but that anti-Semitic publications and organizations throughout the world will pick it up and give it the worst possible construction... Not so many years ago, the sidewalks, boardwalks and prairies of Yaphank, L. I., echoed to the tread of thousands of feet shod in United States Army brogans... But times have changed. The other day, 5,000 stalwart foamblowers, many of them dressed in Nazi uniforms, lifted their hands in a well-known foreign salute and pledged loyalty to a foreign ruler... The 5,000 are members of the League of Friends of New Germany. They had come to Yaphank, where once American Doughboys trained to fight in a war in which Germany—to which the 5,000 were making obeisance—was on the other side. # NEW YORK LETTER by H.W.

Top the beautiful Heckscher Building at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-Seventh Street stands a golden chandelier. Its rotet is a rod piercing the cerulean. As the wind veers, so veers chandelier. Its beak is open, its neck is arched, but no sound comes from its throat.

Below the chandelier there are hundreds of offices. Many of them are occupied by Jewish lawyers, book publishers, art galleries, and a dentist or two—and, if we're not mistaken, several physicians. The man who is responsible for that beautiful silent chandelier, for the handsome building it graces, for many benefactions to charitable causes, returned from Europe the other day. He returned on the Europa, a German liner.

August Heckscher was born in Germany way back in 1848, which makes him one of eighty-seven years old. A ripe old age. So ripe, indeed that much a man of that age says should be passed over as never having been said. Except, of course, when what he says happens to have done some irreparable injury. And even then, perhaps, people are inclined to lean over backwards and say, "Oh, well, forgive him; he's old and he didn't know what he was saying."

Heckscher's chandelier is silent. But August who created him was not like his rooster when he returned on the Europa. August, who admits being of Jewish extraction, opened his mouth when approached by reporters and sounds came forth which made unpleasant reading for New York's Jewry next morning.

First the reporters asked him whether he had seen many German Jewish exiles in London. Mr. Heckscher replied he had seen most of them in New York. Then he put a question to the reporters: "Now what," he asked, "is going to happen in New York?"

"Do you mean in respect to the Jewish situation?" he was asked. "Why, yes I do," he replied. "I think that we may have a problem like that (of Germany) right here. How many of our doctors and judges are Jews? A very great percentage in proportion to the population. A situation like this is bound to cause trouble. That is our problem of the future."

Mr. Heckscher, whose mother was Jewish, whose income undoubtedly comes in large measure from Jewish sources, whose chandelier is very silent and who is himself quite vocal despite his silence, probably meant no harm whatever by his remark. Perhaps, to put the most favorable construction upon it, he was merely showing the reporters how liberal he could be on such a question despite his Jewish extraction. However, the Philadelphia report happened to make the statement, the damage, it is believed here, has already been done. There is little doubt but that anti-Semitic publications and organizations throughout the world will pick it up and give it the worst possible construction.

Not so many years ago, the sidewalks, boardwalks and prairies of Yaphank, L. I., echoed to the tread of thousands of feet shod in United States Army brogans. WANDERING WONDERINGS
Wonder if Mr. Waiter in the New England bus terminal picked his name — it's appropriate — and that diminutive waiter in the Port Arthur — who quits work at 8 p. m. and therefore pushes patrons out of the place at 7.55 — even if they have $4.00 checks — and the courteous clerks at the P. O. who go out of their way to be nice — something new to a wanderer who has been in many P. O.'s in many places — and that cop at the corner of Dorrance and Westminster who didn't mind getting his feet wet in order to help a little old lady cross the street Friday last at 3.16 p. m. in the middle of the shower.

ODD OBSERVATIONS
Joe Koletsky, the New Haven, Conn. lawyer, who defended Olympia Macri, has a fetish — he insists on carrying a cane given him by a scion of the Borden (condensed milk) family whose wife he got admitted to this country by a special act of Congress — Ulrich was the name and, accompanying the cane was a check for $100,000 — real money, we suspect — Joe spent the week-end in Providence with the new Missus, and is she a honey.

Former Atty. Gen. Ben MacLynman cogitates in a moving picture palace — he doesn't see the picture but he does think . . . and speaking of lawyers, Bill Crossley of Fall River, former district attorney bumps into us on our way to Narragansett — and Atty. Archie Smith followed by a boy toting two bags, one of golf clubs, heads for Hyannis, Mass. — says he'll break par which the last time we were there was 70. Good shooting, Archie.

ADD PAINS-IN-THE-NECK
We don't especially mind being bawled out over the phone, it's so easy to hang up — but when a man bawls us out in the a. m. and refuses to give his name (never mind, Mr. Whiskers, we know it) and then has his wife call up in the afternoon to tell us that she is a member of all the Jewish societies and that after we are tarred and feathered, drawn and quartered, ridden on a rail, excommunicated, embalmed, ostracized and shipped to New York in a box, brethren and sisters that is too much — especially when the bawling-out is couched in the patois used by the lady. After all, if one has to submit to a bawling out, said bawling out should be in language intelligible to the average ear. And while our schnozzle may be a trifle over-sized, our ears are regulation — and capacious — and average.

Born at Neustadt-Scherwindt, Russia, Sept. 21, 1886, Mr. Bernstein came to the United States in 1893. As special correspondent of the New York Times he was in Europe from 1908 to 1912, founded the Day, a national Jewish Daily, in 1914 and was its editor for two years.

Mr. Bernstein visited Europe in 1915 to study the condition of Jews in war-stricken countries and the following year became editor of the American Hebrew, a post he held for three years. While in Russia in 1917 as special correspondent of the New York Herald covering the revolution he published the "Wilby-Nicky" telegrams, secret correspondence between Kaiser Wilhelm and Czar Nicholas that attracted international attention.

Mr. Bernstein's duties as correspondent for the Herald subsequently took him with the A. E. F. to Siberia, to peace conference at Versailles. He also published a special investigation of the pogroms in Poland. He was editor of the Jewish Tribune from 1925 to 1929.

Mr. Bernstein's literary works included poetry, novels, plays and social and political studies. In his "The History of a Lie," he characterized as a forgery the so-called "Protocols of the wise men of Zion," on which the Dearborn Independent based several of its anti-Jewish articles.

In 1920 Mr. Bernstein bought the old Capt. Mudd place on East Road and the family spent several months each year in the residence, which is in the outskirts of the town. The Bernsteins also own a home in New York City.

Surviving Mr. Bernstein are his widow, the former Sophie Friedman of Moscow whom he married on January 1, 1902; a son, David, editor of the magazine The New Talent; and three daughters, Mrs. Dorothy May and Mrs. Violet Wilhelm of New York and Mrs. Hilda Gitlin of Chicago.

ting down, Itzel said, "Move over will you, Queenie, getta little more closer to Jeemy." And the Queen "got a little more closer to Jeemy."
"Then there is the story of Itzel taking a punch at Jack Sharkey when the then world's heavyweight champion was training at Gus Wilson's Orangeburg place. And the one about the time Lawton Witt, center-fielder of the New York Yankees, sent Itzel a LIVE PIG for a Christmas present — and the pig was delivered to Itzel's father's address. But the best one is the one you have been waiting for. I laughed at the time and I'll guarantee you will laugh now. Here it is.

Back in February, 1927, the Baseball Writers Association had its annual meeting in Baltimore. Itzel, of course, was present. They couldn't have a meeting without Itzel. Present also were some baseball luminaries, Babe Ruth, Jumping Joe Dugan, Whitey Witt, the late John McGraw, Lou Gehrig and others. Well, it was a regular baseball writers' party. And Itzel entered into the spirit of the occasion. Maybe it was the herrings he consumed or maybe it was a Mickeyfin compounded by Babe Ruth and Joe Dugan. At any rate, Itzel suddenly passed completely out of the picture.

Now the baseball writers have a sense of humor. If they hadn't, they wouldn't last long at that job. They put their heads together and decided that as Itzel was dead to the world, a funeral was in order. The late Mr. McGraw paid for the coffin. The undertaker who supplied the coffin, assisted at the obsequies, Itzel, being already "embalmed," needed no expert attention. They just stripped him, put him in the coffin, naked as he was born, and after buying a ticket for him, put him in the baggage car of a train for Manhattan Transfer. Lou Gehrig wanted to pack him in ice, but that was voted down.

Itzel slept until he reached Manhattan Transfer. There the shutting of the cars awoke him. He didn't know where he was. He lifted the lid of the coffin and thinking that he was in his room in the Stabler, started to climb out. The baggage man standing nearby, gave a startled shriek and leaping out of the car door, started for points South at a speed that would do credit to Arthur Duffy when Duffy was a flash instead of a fat man.

Itzel started to follow, thereby increasing the baggage man's speed. Realizing the situation as the cold night air struck his legs, Itzel tore the seat lining out of the coffin, wrapped himself in it, Mahatma Gandhi fashion and finally cornered the terrified baggage man. Of course explanations were in order. And explaining was hard but Itzel did it. The baggage man loaned him a nickel and he called his sister. She rushed to his assistance with a suit of clothes and a pair of shoes. . .

LET'S GET BACK TO WORK

For most people Summer ended on Labor Day. With weeks of ideal weather still in prospect, the opening of schools, the necessity of getting affairs in line for the cold months to come and the urge to express some of the energy stored up during the vacation period, all combine to bring thousands back from the beaches and the mountains.

Theatres, closed during the Summer, are reopening. Stores are displaying their new Fall and Winter lines. Coal and fuel oil dealers are displaying more pleasant faces. Children through the streets going to or returning from school. Housewives fill the markets and stores. Businessmen and even bankers, are more optimistic than at any time since the blight of the depression first struck. Those who take advantage of this general feeling that the coming year will see a return to normalcy, will profit thereby. The year will undoubtedly be a prosperous one. Are you doing your share toward getting your share of the new business that inevitably begins at this time of the year?

Poor Al Smith

The sympathies of a disturbed Democracy go out to former Governor Alfred Emmanuel Smith, defeated candidate for the Presidency, frustrated aspirant for a second chance, proprietor of the White Elephant of Fifth Avenue, the Empire State building, discredited Mahatma of Tammany and ousted editor of the Outlook. It would seem that the erstwhile Happy Warrior had borne enough. He has suffered with the patience of Job. And now he is the victim of the worst affliction that could possibly strike him. He has been nominated for the Presidency by William Randolph Hearst. Please omit flowers.

The Happy Warrior, now in his declining years, the famous brown derby no longer tipped at a rakish angle, may have cherished ambitions for a return to political prominence. He had been mentioned as a candidate for mayor of New York. He had been mentioned for the Governorship of the Empire State. It had also been intimated that after Farley had felt out the Roosevelt sentiment throughout the country, it might be found expedient to push Smith forward as a candidate for the Presidency. All-in-all, things were looking up for Al, when Hearst did to tip over the applecart.

Whether Hearst did it deliberately hoping that by killing off Smith he would advance the prospects of the "Kentucky Kernel" Frank Knox or whether he was just repaying that old Albany grudge, is immaterial. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. Hearst's advocacy of Smith's candidacy was tantamount to nullification. Al can now consider himself removed from the political picture. He can retire to the cloistered shades of the Empire State building and pensively ponder on the problems of his life insurance job. It took Hearst a long time to get even. But if revenge is sweet, Willie must be satisfied.

There Should Be No Jewish Tories

The Jewish press in New England is strong, influential. Jewish merchants are leaders in their various communities. Yet the press and the merchants wage single-handed battles. Jews who read the hand-writing on the wall are concerned over the situation. The time has come for people of the Jewish faith to assert themselves. They can best assert themselves by reading their own newspapers, by patronizing merchants who do not handle goods of German manufacture and by impressing their beliefs on those who show a tendency to become "Tories."

Let us stand with those who stand for us. Let us fight with those who fight for us. Let there be no Jewish Tories. Support the boycott and prove to the world that we are a united people, as staunch in our own cause as we have been in the righteous causes of other peoples since time began.

U. S. Representation in Olympics

America shall not be represented in the Olympic Games scheduled in Berlin, Germany, in 1936, if the consensus of Rhode Island is right.
Over 600 ballots were received within the past two weeks with the following results:
NO—614.
YES—3.

The readers of the JEWISH HERALD have an opportunity to send in their ballots to show the American Olympic Governing Board just what they think of the proposal to send a team of athletes to Berlin.

When the winter sports of the Olympic Games took place at Lake Placid, in 1928, Irving Jaffee, a Jewish skater, who came in first five times at this meet, was ostracized from sleeping and eating with the other German contestants.

Now, would you wish to have Irving Jaffee and Abiel Kivat, a Jewish runner, compete in these games for America at Berlin, Germany?

Here is your last opportunity to send in your ballot.

Catholic Clergy Jailed and Fined by Nazi Officials

BERLIN, Germany, Sept. 6 — Nine Catholic monks were given heavy jail sentences and fines today on charges of smuggling marks abroad.

Brother Wilhelm Brinkmann, their leader, was sentenced to six years in jail and fined 100,000 marks (about $40,000). He also was assessed damages of 184,000 marks. The other defendants were sentenced to an aggregate of nine years and seven months, fined 110,000 marks ($44,000) and assessed damages of 200,000 marks ($80,000).

The Catholic church today was in open conflict with the Nazi government over the church question. Faithful were ordered to renew their resistance to the "outburst of a new paganism" in a letter read from Catholic pulpits yesterday. At the same time, it was revealed, a strong protest was sent to Adolph Hitler, following the conference of bishops at Fulda on Aug. 30, warning him of the danger of using pressure on the Christian faith.

Jewish Art Dealers Must Liquidate

(Special to the Jewish Herald)
BERLIN, Sept. 6 — Dr. Paul Goebbels pushed his anti-Semitic campaign another step forward to-night when he ordered that non-Aryan art dealers liquidate their businesses within one month.

Art authorities estimate that about 70 firms situated at Berlin, Munich, Dresden and Frankfurt-on-the-Main were affected by the order which was attributed "to a lack of feeling of responsibility toward the people and the State."

Goebbels pushed his anti-Semitic campaign an exhortation to several score Nazi district leaders at a special Berlin meeting to "be ready for any situation."

"You must prepare for eventualities," he said, "For we need a unified party and a unified people. The people remains unified if the party remains unified..."

Criticizing persons who regard the State as a provider to whom no responsibility is due, he urged the "little man" to have "more courage in economic matters."

Art authorities expected that the protests of the foreign consulates would bring about revision and possible withdrawal of the order.

CARNIVAL HEADS MAKE HOLIDAY HEADQUARTERS AT BETHLEHEM

Of course, the coming great carnival for our Jewish Home for the Aged is on everyone's mind at the present time and well that it is, because it is a statewide Jewish event and its success is of vital importance to all of us. Imagine my surprise upon arriving at my favorite vacation place, Bethlehem, N. H., over the holiday week-end, when I discovered that the major domos of the carnival committee, namely General Max Siegal and his unusually able assistant, Ted Max, had already arrived and were settled comfortably in a hastily improvised camp at Maplehurst, where I found carnival paraphernalia, typewriters busily at work and these two gentlemen submerged up to their necks completing plans for the carnival which begins on Monday, Sept. 16.

In this spot, more than 200 miles from the scene of action, much important work was done and guests at the hotel coming from every section of the country are now fully acquainted with the fact that Rhode Island Jewry intends to offer full support to this worthy affair which will take place on the grounds of the home and will continue for a full week. Messrs. Siegal and Max took me into their confidence a "bit" and the unusual attractions which will be offered will be of the sensational variety. I can truthfully say that it will be the most unusual event ever promoted in behalf of any of our institutions.

FRIENDSHIP

Friendship either finds us or leaves us equal; that is, a certain common level is necessary between friends and if it does not exist at first it must be discovered at last.

A LETTER FROM CALIFORNIA

A few weeks ago in this column I mentioned that my good friends, the Abraham P. Workmans, were now residents of Los Angeles, Calif., and in behalf of all of us from our little state sent them our greeting and words of affection. The Jewish Herald has since reached them, 3,800 miles away from their old home, and the following letter which arrived this morning explains itself: Mr. Joe Finkle Jewish Herald Providence, R. I.

The opening will take place tomorrow. Mrs. Grossman has been prominent in Jewish circles for many years.

Many thanks friend Finkle for your kind greetings. I can't tell you how much my family and myself appreciate it. The weekly arrival of the Herald is an event of great joy to us and we literally devour every word of it. Judge Phil Joslin was a recent visitor to Los Angeles and with Mrs. Joslin was stopping at the Ambassador Hotel. I was really thrilled to hear his voice over the telephone. Great fellow Phil — never forgets a friend.

May I convey through you our greetings and best wishes to all our friends in Providence, we miss them all a great deal. Thanking you again, I remain yours, A. P. Workman.

The above letter from an old friend and one who was one of the first Jewish settlers in Providence makes me very happy and I know it will bring back pleasant and happy memories to hundreds who were residents of our city. Of course we all know that Sam Workman is your son.

HOLIDAY TATTLES

My spies were not as active this past week-end as I would have liked and these observations are my own. . . Bethlehem this week-end seemed as though a part of Providence had been removed there en masse . . .

Among those seen were the Max Siegals with son Jimmie and daughter Edith, the Ted Maxes, Harold Gertz, the Max Strasmichs, Bernie Goodmans, Charles Colitz, Ed Finbergs, Barney Kenners . . . and Mrs. Kenner surprised us most agreeably when she sang at dinner on Sunday . . . others seen were the B. Chasets, Phyllis Litman, the J. W. Brenners and Lou Macktaz from Woonsocket, Al Brenner and Lou Brenner home on vacation from Philadelphia School of Osteopathy.

Mayer Narva from East Greenwich, Bida Samuels, Syd Granoff, Lennie Richter, the Sam Cohens . . . the Lou Abends with the Walter Levis and all of Lou's family . . . Abe Press, Eather Goldsmith with her brother and sister-in-law, the Maurice Goldsmiths . . . Jack Levitt with his mother and the Joseph Madowskys from Fall River — she the former Rhea Levitt.

I also noted the Fred Israels from Woonsocket and she is the former Cecile Kantrowitz of our city . . . Dr. Harry Dimond also saw Bethlehem for the first time, but Valencia Lipsitz was not in the offing . . . and they tell me that popular Julius Abrams that big automobile man from East Greenwich took a prominent part in the "kiddie party" held at the hotel last Wed. . . . It is possible that I have omitted a few names but this list will probably give you some idea of how well our state was represented.

HEREABOUTS

Joe Schlossberg and friend wife look refreshed and happy since their return to town from that insurance convention at White Sulphur Springs, West Va., and Joe sang so well that he is booked for a return engagement next year . . . while in the vicinity, Mrs. Schlossberg visited her relatives in Huntington, W. Va., and also stopped off at Cleveland to see Mrs. Joseph Blazar, formerly a prominent resident of our city, active in the affairs of Temple Emanu-El . . . By this time Doc Max Biderman must be on his honeymoon — the happy event took place in New York on Sunday and the bride was a resident of that city.

I nearly forgot to say that I also spotted the Barney Hochbergs and the Morris Sacketts together at Bethlehem — Morris tells me that he visited this place last on their honeymoon . . . Saw Mrs. Ben (Pauline) Poulsen the other day for the first time in months and she looks happier than ever since the arrival of an addition to the family.

The broadcast presented over WPRO last week in behalf of our Jewish Family Welfare was entertaining and interesting and also brought out the dramatic abilities of some of our well known individuals — amongst the voices which I recognized over the air waves were Arthur Levy, Jessie Jozelowitz, Jerry Cohen, Selma Smira, Milton Ernster, and Eva Waxberg . . . this radio program, depicting work of the society, was presented in conjunction with the Providence Community Fund . . . and now till close with the unusual familiar words, "I'll be seeing you all next week."

ETHIOPIAN JEWS MENACED BY WAR

Majority of 60,000 Falashas Dwell in Territory Which Lies Directly in Path Italians Would Take

By DANIEL L. SCHORR

A great number of the 60,000 Falashas — Ethiopian Jews — live directly in the path the Italian army is expected to take when it penetrates into Ethiopia in the imminent war.

The Falashas are a peace-loving people, Jewish to the core and deeply religious, but they are girding themselves for the war that seems certain to break as soon as the seasonal torrential rains let up next month.

Military tacticians agree Mussolini's forces will strike at the town of Adowa first, just across the Eritrean border. The fiercest battles will be fought in the northern section of the country.

It happens that that part of the country contains the densest Falasha communities.

In the wake of the Italian army will follow disease and devastation. As a last resort, the Ethiopian army will poison the wells. The lot of the Falashas will be the lot of the Belgians in the World War — the land on which their homes stand will be the battlefield.

In other ways, Jews of the world are affected by Mussolini's plans for Ethiopia.

Thanks to the Ethiopian crisis Hitler is breathing easier. Germany is placed diplomatically in a much stronger position. The possibility for an international boycott of Germany, which seemed a definite possibility as a result of Hitler's violation of treaty obligations, has gone up in a puff of smoke.

Today, as a result of the new alignments engendered by the Ethiopian situation, European nations couldn't get together for a tea party, much less an international boycott.

The situation is a maddled one. There are complicated and far-reaching ramifications. But out of the writer of events one thing becomes clear: Mussolini's projected conquest augurs ill for the Ethiopian Jews.

This does not take into account the fact that the Ethiopians themselves may be related to the Jews — and there is a wealth of evidence to support such a contention.

For instance, the head of a province in Ethiopia is called a "ras" which is similar to the Hebrew term for head, "rosh." The Ethiopian year begins at the same time as the Jewish. Objects are used which are similar to the Jewish "mesuzoth." Some Ethiopians practice circumcision, and in the temple graven objects are forbidden. (The official religion in Ethiopia is Coptic, a form of Christianity.)

There is much more such evidence. But it has not been enough to convince authorities that the Ethiopians are definitely ancestrally related to the Jews, and so we will turn our attention to the Falashas who are beyond all shadow of a doubt a Jewish folk.

The war — if and when it occurs — will be a life and death struggle as far as the Falashas are concerned. From an authority who knows the Ethiopian Jews intimately, we learn that the Falashas will not surrender under any conditions.

The Falashas, like Jews in other lands, have been decimated by a series of religious crusades, and it is nothing new to them to fight valiantly against overwhelming odds.

The reign of the last two emperors of Ethiopia has been liberal. The Falashas have been permitted to practice their religion freely and to live their own Jewish life. As a result, they are intensely patriotic, and are pledged to support Emperor Haile Selassie.

One of their fears is that if the Italian conquest succeeds, the Catholic church will begin a campaign of proselytization among them. It is certainly likely that if Ethiopia is conquered, Catholic clerical influences will attempt to dominate the religious life of the country.

And if this were not enough, another potent factor spurring the Falashas on to rigorous preparation for defense is the fact that their communities lie in the probable war zone. Their homes may be razed and their fields devastated.

The Falashas are prepared to fight to the bitter end. They are drilling side by side with Ethiopian tribes. Mountain fastnesses are being fortified. Sadly short of arms, they are making every effort possible to prepare for the imminent war.

A rich Hebrew culture faces annihilation. The Falashas are by no means Negroes. Their skin is dark brown; they have fine-cut lips, thin noses and quick dark eyes.

The Falashas are devoutly religious, observing all the biblical holidays. They observe the Sabbath scrupulously and have a great background of traditions surrounding Pesach, Rosh Hashanah, and Yom Kippur observance. They do not call themselves Falashas but "Beta Israel" (House of Israel) and claim descent from Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. They are Zionists, too, and many of their prayers include expressions of hope that they be returned to Palestine.

Culturally far above the Ethiopians among whom they live, the Falashas live in secluded communities. They establish themselves at a distance from other inhabitants and surround their settlements with enclosures.

The "Dabteras," or learned men, receive special veneration from the Falasha community, and are ranked next to "Kahen" or priest.

They have in each locality a "Mesgid" (house of prayer) and they observe a strict form of kashruth.

Family life is dignified and patriarchal. The moral code is high, in marked contrast to that of the Ethiopians. Mixed marriages are forbidden.

The Falashas are the only people able to follow with any skill the trades practiced in the country.

It was only recently — at the end of the 19th century — that the Falashas were discovered. They were first found by Jules Hulevy, a French explorer, whose pupil, Dr. Jacques Faitlovitch is now carrying on educational work among them.

One of the guiding purposes behind Dr. Faitlovitch's work is to teach them their kinship with the Jews throughout the world. This idea they have accepted readily. Hebrew, which was little known until Dr. Faitlovitch began teaching it to them, is now becoming an increasingly popular language.
