WIPE OUT JEWISH PACK IS WAR CRY OF NAZI MINISTER

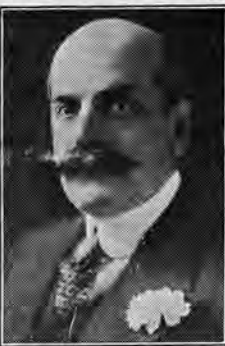

Will Ignore Foreign Protests on Anti-Jewish Policy.

Berlin (WNS)—Warning that the Nazi government will ignore foreign protests against its anti-Jewish policy, Dr. Hans Frank, minister without portfolio, in an address to the German Academy's Economic Council on the occasion of the third anniversary of Hitler's appointment to the chancellorship, promised that Germany would halt at nothing to wipe out the "Jewish pack of Bolshevistic preachers."

Asserting that "the Jew may do business in Germany unhindered, but he must under no circumstances deposit his intellectual excrement with us," Frank lauded Hitler for the "dignified and objectively justified" manner in which he has dealt with the Jewish question and declared that no fear of outside opinion would swerve the Nazis from their war on the Jews.

In defending the anti-Semitic program against foreign criticism he said that "foreign critics haven't the slightest idea about the vital necessities of the German people. Such Jews as came to live among us showed their gratitude by introducing pestilence into our spiritual life. The experience we've had with Jews is such that no foreigner would criticize our legislation if he knew the facts."

Felix M. Warburg

New York (WNS)—The chairmanship of the 1936 campaign of the Joint Distribution Committee's drive for $3,500,000 for overseas relief has been accepted by Felix M. Warburg. Mr. Warburg has named a committee of 40 leaders in all parts of the country to guide and supervise the conduct of the campaign.

MINISTERS MEETING SET FOR EMANU-EL

Dr. Stephen Wise Winter Conclave Speaker

Rabbi Israel M. Goldman and Temple Emanu-El will be hosts to more than 300 members of the Rhode Island Ministerial Association at their winter meeting which will be held at Temple Emanu-El on Monday morning, February 24.

The guest speaker for the occasion will be Dr. Stephen S. Wise. In view of the fact that this meeting follows the nationally observed Brotherhood Day sponsored by the National Conference of Jews and Christians, Dr. Wise has chosen for his theme "The Christian-Jewish Tragedy—Will It Never End?"

Rabbi Goldman will present Dr. Wise and will also conduct a brief devotional period at the Temple in which he will be assisted by Cantor Harry Bettman and Prof. Arthur Einstein. A Jewish liturgical program will be offered at this devotional service.

The Rhode Island Ministerial Association of which Rev. William T. Green is president, is an interdenominational organization composed of Protestant clergymen and Jewish rabbis from the entire state of Rhode Island.

BERGER LAUDED FOR ATTITUDE ON CONTRIBUTIONS

Rabinowitz and Reitter Add New Slants to Question.

Mr. Rabinowitz's letter follows: "BERGER FLAYS LOCAL JEWS' APATHY AND ANTI-SEMITISM"—This article by my very good friend, Dr. Berger, appearing in the 'Jewish Herald' of February 7th issue interested me vastly, as it should have interested every Jew and even though I am in hearty accord with some of his views, yet I must take issue on others.

"First of all the Doctor denies—the fact that the United Palestine Appeal Drive has not reached its goal of $10,000,000. Insofar as I know this campaign has not as yet ended, and I am in high hopes that by the time this article reaches press we will not only have reached our quota but gone 'OVER THE TOP'."

"When you take into consideration the campaign of two years ago when only $2000 was raised and which was effected jointly with the German Jews of this city of which amount only $9000 was sent to Palestine, as per mutual agreement, you will realize that we have done well, just by ourselves; for not only was our quota greater than two years ago BUT THAT PALESTINE WILL BE BENEFITED BY THE ENTIRE SUM, and not merely a portion. We ought to rejoice for the amount raised, up to date.

"The amount raised is not to be belittled, for only in October, 1935, exactly two months prior to this United Palestine Appeal campaign, the Jewish National Fund of this city raised the sum of $2000."

Paul Sandor, Europe's Leading Duelist, Dies

Budapest (WNS)—Paul Sandor, Europe's most famous duelist since the Napoleonic era, who fought more than one hundred duels, most of them in defense of Jewish honor, died here at the age of 75. A brilliant economist, he made a fortune before he was 30.

He was a pioneer in grain exporting and was founder and president of the Union of Hungarian Merchants. His industrial enterprises were numerous. Once he was head of the Budapest traction company. Learning to duel in the army, he retired at the age of 25 when he was captain of cavalry regiment. Sandor also served in parliament, having been its second oldest member at the time of his death. Offered numerous titles, he refused them all. He fought 103 duels against men who had insulted him because he was a Jew.

Olympics Restrain Nazis From Bloody Revenge

Berlin (WNS)—German Jews are thankful that the winter Olympic games are being held in Germany because the presence of large numbers of foreigners is virtually the only factor restraining the Nazis from taking bloody revenge for the murder of Wilhelm Gustloff, Swiss Nazi leader who was killed by David Frankfurter, a Yugoslavian Jewish student, at Davos. Fearful of what may happen when the winter Olympics are over and the foreign athletes and visitors have gone, German Jews are remaining within doors as much as possible.

A mild taste of what would happen if the Nazi authorities gave the signal for revenge was seen in a sudden invasion of the Berlin Jewish quarter by a mob of Hitler youth. Shouting wildly "these are the murderers" and "revenge for our martyrs" the young Nazis contented themselves with terrifying the Jews of the Grenadierstrasse district. By and large, however, the Nazi press and Nazi orators have been much milder in their utterances than might have been expected.

Geneva (WNS)—Friends of young David Frankfurter, the Jewish medical student who assassinated Wilhelm Gustloff, Swiss Nazi leader, say that he committed the murder under the mental strain of broken health, grief at the death of his mother and brooding over the sufferings of German Jews. Suffering from an incurable bone ailment, Frankfurter had undergone six operations and was preparing for a seventh. Those who know him say that he was a retiring and morose individual who always kept to himself. He was neither a Zionist, Socialist nor Communist. As a matter of fact he had no known political or ideological preferences.

Nazis Jail Priest for Warning Girls of Peril

Oberursel (Special)—Warning girls against the dangers leading to unbridled motherhood is grounds for imprisonment, a Nazi summary court here has ruled. It imposed a six months' term upon a Catholic priest for telling girls in his religious classes to beware of the Nazi family welfare service because many girls who joined the Land Year and Land Help organizations were confusing labor service with labor pains.

Roumania Charges Nazis Are Financing Anti-Semitic Group

Mrs. Joseph Webber Extremists Are Disrupting Country's Peace and Order.

First president of the Kadimah Choral Society whose members consist of singers and music lovers interested in furthering and perpetuating Jewish music. The singers meet weekly under the direction of Arthur Einstein for rehearsal and plan a public concert in April. Complete story on Page 5.

Bucharest (WNS)—Continuing its war on anti-Semitic movements, the Roumanian government, through Minister of Education Costacescu, warned the country that it would not tolerate the use of Nazi funds to arouse civil war in Roumania. In a speech at Jassy, Costacescu charged that German funds are being used to support Fascist and anti-Semitic groups in Roumania.

"The extreme right parties are carrying on a terrorist campaign against their political opponents who are defending democracy and the personal liberties of Roumanians," he declared. "The extreme right counts comparatively few supporters and also lacks funds. There is no doubt that their propaganda and armed organizations are financed by German funds. We must put an end to German money's instigation of Roumanian citizens against each other. The extremists are endangering the country's peace and order. Their terror is directed against everybody who does not share their imported doctrines of Fascism and exaggerated nationalism."

Physician Demonstrates Starter for Heart

New York (WNS)—An "electric starter" to revive a heart that has stopped beating was demonstrated publicly for the first time by Dr. Albert S. Heyman of the Beth Israel Hospital, inventor of the device, before a group of physicians at the Naval Headquarters Hospital. Designed to resuscitate heart action when all other methods have failed, Dr. Heyman's device, which looks like a pocket flashlight, is to be made available to hospitals by Jacob Witkin, head of the Witkin Foundation for the Study and Prevention of Heart Disease.

Harvard Again Refuses Hanfstaengl Gift

Cambridge, Mass. (WNS)—An offer of a gift of $10,000 to Harvard University from Ernst (Papa) Hanfstaengl, Nazi press chief and close friend of Hitler, has been refused by the university. It is announced here. The grounds for refusal are the same as when Harvard rejected a Hanfstaengl gift of $1,000 in 1934, when Dr. James B. Conant, president of the university, declared that no gift could be accepted from one closely allied with a government that interferes with educational freedom. Hanfstaengl's new offer came as a result of a form letter requesting support of Harvard's 300th anniversary fund, which had been sent to 65,000 Harvard alumni.

SENIOR HADASSAH DELEGATES NAMED

Mrs. Sheer announced that the all-day annual meeting of the League of Jewish Women's Clubs of Rhode Island would take place February 24.

Delegates to the latter were appointed by the president as follows: Dr. Clara Loitman-Smith, Mesdames Sani Abrams, and Herman Swartz. Mesdames Nathaniel Lewis, Louis Abedon and Everett Cowen will act as alternates.

$1000 From Austin Levy Swells Appeal Fund

Headed by a contribution of $1000 given by Austin Levy, the united Palestine Appeal swelled to $9200. Dr. Ilie Berger, chairman, announced today. Pledges are still being solicited in order that the quota of $10,000 be reached. Contributions should be forwarded to headquarters, 214 Strand building, or to Bernard Goldowsky, treasurer.

Old Clocks Used Instead of New in Palestine

Jerusalem (WNS)—Palcor Agency)—Habit dies hard. The old pre-war orthodox Jewish community of Jerusalem is accustomed to timepieces showing the time according to the old Arab method of reckoning, which greatly differs from the time as we know it. The wardens of a Meah Shearim synagogue put in one of the new-fangled clocks in the lobby. But fanatic Agudath Israel youth objected to this because it showed a tendency of "heretical reform" like the Zionists. And when the wardens refused to remove the new clock, they smashed it.

(Until Column is Named)
BY MAURICE HENDEL

On Tuesday, March 10, the people of our fair state will go to the polls to vote upon four momentous questions; shall there be a constitutional convention? If so, who shall we choose as our delegates? And shall we declare New Year's and Columbus Days as legal holidays? To insure a good vote on the two most important of this quartet, our Legislature decided upon adding the holiday questions. We are led to believe that the only reason for doing so is to get out the French and Italian vote.

Now, as a Jew, I feel more or less slighted! We comprise a goodly percentage of the population of this state, and some voters to our opinion might have been forthcoming from Capitol Hill. Think how nice it would be to have one of our own holidays made legal by act of the General Assembly! My suggestion, therefore, resolves itself upon this observation: Why doesn't the Legislature declare Yom Kippur a legal holiday in order to get out the Jewish vote on March 10?

On the other hand, it is quite possible that they did consider this momentous query, but being inspired with the memory of the late "Jake Eaton", they probably realized that there is no need for artificial stimulation so far as our opinions are concerned.

We have been virtually swamped by the avalanche of suggestions for a name for our column. One has tickled my fancy. Our friend and colleague, Sam Finegold, dubs it "Hendel Bars"! Can you better it? Write us care of the "Herald".

Berger Lauded

which sum went in its entirety to Palestine.

"Speaking of the campaign brings to mind the Palestine picture which was shown in this city and which to my mind aroused the interest in the greatest number of Jews; for as far back as I can recall I know of not one single Zionist activity that drew an audience of three thousand people in one day.

"I agree and uphold Dr. Berger's statement that the wealthy Jews of our city contribute very little or none at all to the various campaigns. This fact is deplorable but nevertheless true.

"The doctor suggests, they should be exposed by any manner within our means. Their names should be placed out at all our gatherings and places of worship; they should be listed in our newspapers as moral traitors. With or without my help, PALESTINE WILL BE BUILT.

"From this campaign we have learned a lesson—that is not to depend upon the few wealthy Jews who can, if they wish, contribute a large portion of the sum sought; but, to rely upon the small contributors who give gladly from their hearts. This does not mean that we do not want or seek large contributions; on the contrary we welcome them just as we did the one thousand dollar check which was sent to us, voluntarily, just a few days ago. May there be more like him.

"This campaign has also clearly indicated to us that anything conducted or undertaken by the Zionist Organization has the backing of the Jewish masses, and so I say—cry not—for there is no need. The campaign aroused, as no other Zionist activity in this city, the funds that in the work of raising the funds the force of the Zionist outlook on life must play an important part.

JACOB S. RABINOWITZ.
A second letter from Lues Reitter reads:

"Editor—Jewish Herald":
"Through your columns I read the criticisms by Dr. I. Berger, accusing that the Providence Jew does not contribute enough money for their quota to help redeem 100,000 Jews from Hitler's Nazi Country.

"This certainly is no news to me; for you can go back in the early 60's when Jewish prisoners were brought into Rome, the rich Jews of Rome refused to redeem them, so some good-hearted Romans together with some of the poorer class Jews found a way to redeem every Jewish prisoner aboard ship.

"When Jerusalem had famine in the early 30's, it was the Greek or people of the Greek origin that sent corn and dried figs into Jerusalem to be distributed among the people.

"Let us not be surprised to see these wealthy Jews of Providence who refuse to give with a free hand that they may too, reach the stage to receive instead of being privileged to give, for that has happened to the poor German Jew of today. They at one time refused to help the Russian, and the oppressed persecuted Polish Jew in time of need, but instead named them "Bollocks".
"Truly 'Providence' does not give warning to such creatures that 'slum wisdom' is theirs.

LUES REITTER.

Benny Leonard Tells How He Began Boxing Career

Undeclared Champion Will Speak Before Center Men's Club Thursday Evening.

When I was a boy I lived on the lower east side of New York city at 8th Street and Avenue "C". There were more than fifty boys living in my block, and they were scrapping all the time among themselves and with boys from other streets, and believe me, you had to know how to defend yourself in that neighborhood—that is, if you wanted to hang onto your marbles or buttons.

As for me, I didn't have any marbles or buttons, for I was a timid, shy little kid, like most other average boys, and my uncles were continually urging me to get up a little gunnison and fight for my rights. These uncles of mine belonged to a club, formed by the young working men in the neighborhood, and they took me over to this club and taught me boxing, and by the time I was 11 years old I was champion of my street—8th Street.

11-Year-Old Champion
I'll never forget my 11th birthday. I had met and beaten the champion of several of the other streets, but there was one kid named Joey Fogarty, champion of 6th street, who had quite a reputation as a fighter. The athletic club members thought I was pretty good so they arranged a match between Fogarty and me for their own amusement. The afternoon of the contest the members of the club took up a collection among themselves and got together 50 cents for a purse—30 cents was to go to the winner and 20 cents to the loser. (Concluded Next Week)

Isaac Feinstein Will Speak at Beth-Israel

At regular service this (Friday) evening at Temple Beth Israel at 8 o'clock, Isaac Feinstein, superintendent of the Jewish Home for the Aged, will discuss "Responsibility of Israel". Though considerable effort is expended by the community on this particular project, an analysis of the social nature of this problem has rarely been presented, the appeal usually being emotional rather than intellectual.

Mr. Feinstein will outline the many details involved in the work connected with the aged. It is hoped that the nature of the talk will attract many members of the community who will thus get a more intimate insight in the working of this institution. This Saturday morning services for the Junior Congregation will take place at 10 o'clock.

Members are also reminded of the daily morning service at 7 o'clock and evening service at 6 o'clock.

MRS. MINNIE YOZELL
Funeral services for Mrs. Minnie Yozell, mother of Mrs. Sydney Marcus of Eames street, were held last Sunday from Temple Beth-El, Lynn, Mass. Burial was in Peabody, Mass. Other survivors are seven children, 19 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

THE FORCING PRINCIPLE

A player makes a forcing bid when he wishes to be sure that he will have another opportunity to bid... After a forcing bid has been made the partner must make some response no matter how weak his hand, except when the adversaries have injected a bid. This intervening bid relieves the responding hand from the necessity of bidding, since it is now being kept open. Any bid the partner chooses to make now is a free bid and shows some strength about 1 HT. There are two types of forcing bid (1) forcing for one round, and (2) forcing to game.

Forcing for One Round
1. A takeout in a new suit by the responding hand cancels the original opener to bid once more. (Simple takeout discussed last week.)
2. An opening two-bid, a jump takeout, or forcing rebid (to be discussed) when there is part score, even though the bid made is enough to go game.

3. A one no trump takeout with part score of 30, 40 or 50.
Forcing to Game
1. An opening two-bid (see opening bid).
2. A double raise in partner's suit except when responding hand originally passed. (See column on raises.)
3. A two or no trump takeout. (See no trump takeouts.)
4. A jump (or forcing) takeout. (Discussed today.)

There are several other game-forcing bids which we shall mention here but which shall be discussed at a later date. Beginners will do well to omit the next few to avoid confusion.

5. A bid in opponent's suit.
6. A three, four, or five no trump overall over opponent's pre-emptive bid.
7. A jump rebid in a new suit by opening hand when partner has made a response.
8. A jump bid in a new suit by a player who has made a takeout double.
9. A double jump takeout of partner's suit bid in a new suit.

Items 5 to 9 will be discussed later, if we don't get tired before then.

The Forcing Takeout
The principle of force is based on the 4-5 rule (remember?) which says that game is usually assured when the combined hands hold about 6 HT. Therefore when your partner has opened the bidding and thereby announces that he holds 2 1/2 HT, to insure that game will be reached, make a FORCING TAKEOUT with 3 1/2 HT and a rebiddable suit. (2 1/2 plus 3 1/2 equals 6.)

A forcing takeout is a bid of ONE MORE THAN NECESSARY. Examples. Two spades over one heart. Two hearts over one diamond. Three clubs over any one bid. One more than necessary; so don't be asleep at the switch when you hear a forcing takeout, and stop to think twice before you make it so as to be sure you have JUMPED the bidding.

Now since any suit takeout is forcing for one round, do not make a forcing takeout unless you are sure game is positive and slam possibilities imminent.

With 4 or more HT and support for your partner's suit, a forcing takeout may be made with a four-card biddable suit. With very strong support for your partner's suit and 3 1/2 HT, you may make a forcing takeout in an unbiddable suit (even three cards) if it is of lower rank than the suit opened. A forcing takeout of one no trump requires less because there the opening bidder has shown at least 4 HT. You may make a forcing takeout of an original no trump with 2 HT and a five-card biddable major.

TOURO TOURNAMENT
Apparently failing to fully read the distinct announcement that the bridge affair for Tours would be a Duplicate Tournament in Contract, over a hundred couples were disappointed who came to play Auction. Others who wanted to enter the tournament came late (as most of us like to do) and were excluded so that in all every body is pretty sore at the way we handle chairmanships. Of the eight couples (four tables makes a nice tournament) who survived the sifting process, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Miller emerged with top score. They scored 24 1/2 points against a field where 21 was average. However, all were very much enthused about this novel method of playing bridge and want a repetition of it as do many others who became acquainted with the mechanics and purposes of duplicate that evening. The future of such tournaments is up to the powers that be.

DEXTROSE

דורך די הילף פון דעקסטראז ווערט דאס לעבען צופרידען

An eminent physician published this startling statement after he had observed scientifically that Dextrose is the primary substance of body energy—that neither our bodies nor our minds could function without Dextrose; we would die.

If you ask your own doctor “Where do I now get my daily supply of Dextrose?” he will answer, “From the car-bo-hy-drate foods you eat. These are converted by digestion into Dextrose before your body can use them as energy.”

Producers of Quality Foods and Beverages Use Dextrose

Dextrose is a sugar. In recent years, science has learned how to make Dextrose. Its chief source is Corn—Golden American Corn. Today, Dextrose is made in both dry and liquid forms.

When the great value of Dextrose as a vital source of energy was established—and Dextrose was made available—many progressive producers began to use it in their products. They found that Dextrose improved the quality of the foods and beverages they make.

That is why you will find Dextrose in so many fine foods such as breads, candies, ice cream—and choice beverages such as ales, beer and soft drinks.

Obviously, an abundance of Dextrose in your daily diet means an abundance of reserve energy in your body—which helps to banish fatigue, increase physical and mental activity—and balance the wear and repair of body tissues.

Whenever you find a food or beverage which contains Corn Sugar . . . Corn Syrup . . . Cerelese . . . Dextrose . . . nutritionally all one and the same . . . you may be certain it is rich in food-energy.

THE DAVOS TRAGEDY

It is futile to protest against the inevitable, and childish to refuse to bow to the inescapable. The assassination of the Nazi leader Wilhelm Gustloff by the Jewish youth David Frankfurter at Davos, Switzerland, is one of those deeds which apparently had to be committed. The young Yugoslavian student, whose own career was cut short by the Nazis and who is possessed of one of those intensely emotional natures which make it impossible for a man to stand idly by while his people are being tortured, personifies the pent-up feeling and indignation of world Jewry against the Nazi regime.

Although as a people we Jews are a priori opposed to violence of any sort, we cannot as human beings withhold our sympathy from young Frankfurter. True, he committed murder. But his act was a courageous one; he did not try to escape justice, but gave himself up, ready to take personal punishment.

The assassination of Gustloff will most probably have unfortunate repercussions on the status of German Jewry. If this were not the year of the Olympiad the German government would make no efforts to curb acts of reprisal against the Jews of its country. But it is not for us to judge David Frankfurter, his deed or its consequences. We merely bow our heads and weep at this tragedy—the tragedy of an intolerable situation which drives even our finest sons to commit deeds of violence.

And we cannot help feeling that the condemnation of his act by the Central Union of German Jews is one of those disgracefully stupid moves that ever and again stress the anomalous position of those elements in German Jewry who still believe that protestations of loyalty to the Nazi regime will save them from inevitable destruction.

Mrs. Charles Brown Urges Support for Luncheon

With new impetus gained from the fine display of interest in their fourth annual luncheon, the Ladies Association of the Jewish Home for the Aged will be entering the final stage of their campaign to raise funds. A specially appointed staff of canvassers by the large attendance at the preliminary tea last week, the Ladies Association of the Jewish Home for the Aged have entered the final stage of their campaign to raise funds.

Mrs. Charles Brown, general chairman of this year's major undertaking, in commenting on the progress of the campaign states "In view of the institution not being an affiliated charity of the local Community Chest Fund, the worthiness of our appeal for these old folks must evoke a sympathetic response from every charitable-minded woman in the community, we feel confident our request for aid for these unfortunate who, in the declining years of life, find themselves without sustenance, will not be regarded as just another unheeded appeal, but considered on its own merits, rather, as one of the most deserving of all humanitarian causes. Surely it is a privilege to help them!"

An executive luncheon committee meeting has been arranged for Monday at 2 o'clock in the Narragansett Hotel, when all final plans will be discussed.

A Short Story

By HARRY BROADMAN

"No, Sarah—it's never too late to get out of prison," he concluded in a very determined tone of voice.

Of course he did not go to the school that afternoon. He had spent some time in the barber shop leaving behind him on his floor the pride of his past—a nicely trimmed blond, Nordic beard—and came out a new man, both outwardly and inwardly, at last emerging from that thick shell of hoary tradition, decaying customs and intra-racial prejudices which had held him prisoner all his life.

"Any wonder the term 'Mister Moscovitz' was such sweet music to him when he heard it for the first time in that many years, on that morning, in 'Blaverman's'?" "And nothing, but Mister Moscovitz it shall remain as long as the sun and the moon shall endure," said Moscovitz to himself right there and then, the greatest moment in his life when he felt the equal of his fellowmen.

Moscovitz invested his life's savings in a cigar store here, one of those earlier stores which were constantly guarded by a large wooden Indian outside the door and always exhibited a stack of finely shredded golden brown tobacco in the window.

In the beginning he lived socially a very inconspicuous life, trying hard to outlive his past and to become accustomed to respond more naturally to the "Mister Moscovitz," but who in several years later, branched out into the wholesale business under the firm name of "A. Moscovitz and Sons, Importers of Fine Tobaccos," and was the owner of several parcels of valuable real estate. "Mister Moscovitz" came out and bowed to him—almost breaking its back, for not only was he now one of the wealthiest among them but what is more significant, he looked more like a Nordic, a typical blond Aryan, than an ordinary Jew.

Since country clubs and golf courses did not exist in the life of our fellow Jews on this spot of the earth in that recent past, elderly men of means found the card table a highly satisfactory outlet for their pent-up energies, and Moscovitz, who had never before broken with his religion when he tore himself out root and all from that life in New Jersey, now found in pinocchio a new religion and began to worship daily at its shrine.

His marriage to a foolish selfish Jewess who snobbishly despised the Jew he did not help him. He became a member of Parliament but found even among the members of his own party an insincerity which made men forgetful in the Florida sun. But after he had spent several weeks there and had failed to improve, it suddenly dawned on him that his life's sun was already setting. He began to think of the thought sent an icy chill through his system.

Life had been entirely too sweet to him in late years to face the end unflinchingly, and the more apparent it became to him that he was nearing the end of the trail the more he wanted to live. He had a chance, a tiny, barely—and the thought of a destiny of utter nothingness, like that of any other creature on earth, made him still more miserable.

He soon secluded himself in his apartment where he would sit for hours the back of his head resting against the wall, his eyes shut as if asleep, muttering: "Dust—dust—!" as he was taking inventory of his life. The farther he went back in his life the greater grew his apprehension of the future and when he finally began to fear the existence of God, one whom he may have to face when he dies—"who knows, after all?"—he decided to play safe, for he had nothing to lose and perhaps a lot to gain, and quickly withdrew into the old shell of pinocchio.

At last spring came and so did Moscovitz—but only in name. That clean-shaven, that immaculately dressed, that aristocratic-looking Moscovitz—Moscovitz the pinocchio player, the lover of burlesque, the apostate—no one ever came back. This Moscovitz was growing a beard, as yet a thick dirty-white stubble around a pale and melancholic face but one of great promise. His clothes were old, wrinkled and baggy. He was stooped and bent, never erected any one, and walked with his eyes fixed to the ground as if to avoid the gaze of an astonished public.

Darwin, Ingersoll, gay pinocchio parties, those pretty damself with their shavenly bare limbs in astute, no theatre, these were now only a source of incessant torture of remorse. In their stead he spent his time over the musty pages of his resurrected dusty bible, searching for more evidence of the existence of a hereafter and forever praying and making amends for that gay though brief interlude in his pious life.

To cap the climax, Abraham Moscovitz tore his wife away from what he nearest a woman's heart, her children, and left her penniless, not to contribute his share to the upbuilding of the Homeland, this did not concern him, but only there to spend the rest of his days; again in the synagogue; again at the head of a long table, forever agonizing by putting this time by hearded old men with motormouths listening intently to him as he was again extolling the bible and trying to drive the fear of God still deeper into their old hearts—again a melancholy.

BOOK NOTES

By Esther Levine

"The stars look down." By A. J. Cronin. (Little Brown).

Perhaps the most remarkable feature of this very fine novel is the intricacy of its design. There are several stories within the main story and many characters. Dr. Cronin has skillfully woven all the different threads together.

The action opens in a coal mine town in England. The miners, led by Robert Fenwick, have been on strike for three months. Conditions are pretty bad. Credit is exhausted, starvation very near. Ostensibly the aim of the miners is a higher wage. However, Robert Fenwick has the safety of the miners in mind. He believes that they are working too close to the old unused works and that sooner or later they will be flooded.

Richard Barras, the owner, is hard and unyielding. The strike has cost him a lucrative contract. He is in an autoer both at home and at the works. When the men return to work, he has them begin in another spot.

Later, however, when a new contract comes his way, he weighs the safety of the men which he could assure by additional pumps, against his profit and, although he has the plans which show how dangerously close the men are to the abandoned mines, he does nothing.

One day the water broke through and every man caught below was killed. Barras tried to organize a rescue but it was useless. An investigation followed and Barras was not only exonerated of all blame but was praised for his efforts at rescue.

David Fenwick, whom his father had sent out to college on the hope that he might escape his hardship, was fired by the tragic deaths of the miners to help their cause. He became a union organizer and succeeded in getting through some minor reforms.

His marriage to a foolish selfish Jewess who snobbishly despised the Jew he did not help him. He became a member of Parliament but found even among the members of his own party an insincerity which made men forgetful in the Florida sun.

But after he had spent several weeks there and had failed to improve, it suddenly dawned on him that his life's sun was already setting. He began to think of the thought sent an icy chill through his system.

Life had been entirely too sweet to him in late years to face the end unflinchingly, and the more apparent it became to him that he was nearing the end of the trail the more he wanted to live. He had a chance, a tiny, barely—and the thought of a destiny of utter nothingness, like that of any other creature on earth, made him still more miserable.

He soon secluded himself in his apartment where he would sit for hours the back of his head resting against the wall, his eyes shut as if asleep, muttering: "Dust—dust—!" as he was taking inventory of his life. The farther he went back in his life the greater grew his apprehension of the future and when he finally began to fear the existence of God, one whom he may have to face when he dies—"who knows, after all?"—he decided to play safe, for he had nothing to lose and perhaps a lot to gain, and quickly withdrew into the old shell of pinocchio.

At last spring came and so did Moscovitz—but only in name. That clean-shaven, that immaculately dressed, that aristocratic-looking Moscovitz—Moscovitz the pinocchio player, the lover of burlesque, the apostate—no one ever came back. This Moscovitz was growing a beard, as yet a thick dirty-white stubble around a pale and melancholic face but one of great promise. His clothes were old, wrinkled and baggy. He was stooped and bent, never erected any one, and walked with his eyes fixed to the ground as if to avoid the gaze of an astonished public.

Darwin, Ingersoll, gay pinocchio parties, those pretty damself with their shavenly bare limbs in astute, no theatre, these were now only a source of incessant torture of remorse. In their stead he spent his time over the musty pages of his resurrected dusty bible, searching for more evidence of the existence of a hereafter and forever praying and making amends for that gay though brief interlude in his pious life.

To cap the climax, Abraham Moscovitz tore his wife away from what he nearest a woman's heart, her children, and left her penniless, not to contribute his share to the upbuilding of the Homeland, this did not concern him, but only there to spend the rest of his days; again in the synagogue; again at the head of a long table, forever agonizing by putting this time by hearded old men with motormouths listening intently to him as he was again extolling the bible and trying to drive the fear of God still deeper into their old hearts—again a melancholy.

the sufferings of those whom they had set out to help.

The World War has a far reaching effect upon the various characters. Arthur Barras who has idolized his father is completely upset when he discovers the truth about the mine disaster. He refuses his father's urging that he fight, and goes to prison as a conscientious objector. He comes out to find his father the victim of a shock. He rejoices at the opportunity to make amends by installing safety devices and raising wages. Ironically enough, the men suspect his aims and, in the end, he is betrayed by other mine owners into the hands of Joe Gowlan, one time pit-boy, now war time profiteer.

Gowlan is the only character who grows, who he wants. Thoroughly scrupulous, dishonest with both men and women, he makes his way up the ladder callously and ruthlessly. He defeats David for Parliament and as the crowd cheers his success he stands looking down at them.

"They were his—all his, they belonged to him, for his use, to his purpose. The earth was his, and the heavens . . . He was only beginning. He would go on. On. The fools believe he will help him. He would mount to the heights, crack the world with his bare hands, split the sky with his lightning. Peace and answered to his call. Money belonged to him. Money, money, money . . . and the slaves of money. Raising both hands toward the sky in a gesture of supreme hypocrisy he began:

"My dear friends . . ."

"The stars look down" is a bitter, despairing book, terribly realistic. Hopelessness pervades it, sometimes to the extent where one resorts to and looks for relief elsewhere. Human beings can't stand too much oppression. However, it can't be denied that here is an honest and stirring book.

WAAD HACASHRUTH AND HEBREW FREE LOAN MAKE REPORTS

The yearly reports of two of our most important and worthwhile organizations were made public this past week, namely the Waad Hacashruth and the Hebrew Free Loan Association. Those of us, who even in this generation prefer that the meats that we eat be kosher should thank, the Waad Hacashruth, and it truly is one of our very important communal bodies, functioning only in the public interest and without profit.

Organized seventeen years ago by a group of men headed by Morris Feinberg, Jacob Conn, and Rabbi David Bachrach, it today has a yearly budget of expense of nearly $24,000 all expended in the payment of salaries to Rabbis, schoetim, and inspectors whose duties are to see that all meats for the Jewish community of Providence and vicinity are kosher and that the cattle to be used are slaughtered in clean and inspected places.

Harry Leach, President

The work of the organization is directed by a board of directors and Harry Leach has been the president for the past 4 years with Morris Feinberg functioning as chairman of the finance board since its inception, 17 years ago. At the present time there are 17 individuals on the payroll consisting of rabbis, schoetim and inspectors. The inspectors visit every kosher butcher shop at least twice a week to see if the meat offered for sale bears the official stamp which also bears the initials of the inspecting rabbi.

The organization also built the baths on Candace street. Its income, or 90 per cent of it, is derived from the wholesale cattlemen who pay specified fees for the slaughtering of their cattle or fowl. . . every chicken, fowl, etc., must be killed by an authorized licensed schoetin and even if you were to purchase your own live chicken from a farmer and then had it killed on Willard avenue or other places the fee you would pay would go into the funds of the Waad Hacashruth.

As long as this organization exists, Providence Jewry is assured that the meats that it purchases at the corner butcher shop will be nothing else than kosher. The organization also pays an annuity to the wives of deceased rabbis formerly on its payroll.

GEMILATH CHESED HEBREW FREE LOAN ASSOCIATION

Another worthwhile organization which functions also in the public interest and without profit is the Hebrew Free Loan Association which on Sunday last has issued its annual report and also presented its yearly report and a mighty interesting one. This organization which makes loans to individuals up to $250; has lent during the past twelve months over $70,000 a neat sum and as I said in the over the interesting report I note that more than 400 people received money to tide them over a troubled period. They were business men and probably men and women in every profession who without the aid of this association might have found the times very tough.

Many a practicing physician or attorney was helped to complete an education by the Hebrew Free Loan and many a young man in college today is being helped through the means of a loan from the Hebrew Free Loan. Since its inception 34 years ago it has loaned over a quarter of a million dollars. Its income is derived chiefly from dues from its hundreds of members and a few hundred dollars gained from its annual dance and picnic.

It is interesting to note that only $211.25 is listed on its report as uncollectible—a mighty fine record. The organizers 34 years ago were 9 men, namely, A. Altrich, A. Golden, E. Goldstein, H. Katz, J. Kelman, J. Kroll, Harry Lyon, William Rabinowitz, and Isaac Woolf. During the past few years the active work of the organization has been directed by a group of younger men of the community and the president for the past year was Morris Waldman, a local young attorney.

I am happy to bring the work of these two organizations to your attention and may they function in the same spirit of service for generations and generations to come as they were formed a noble work. We salute the Waad Hacashruth and the Hebrew Free Loan Association.

Council Valentine Dance Attended by 400 Persons

Some four hundred persons attended the third annual Valentine dinner-dance of the Providence Section, National Council of Jewish Women, last evening in the ball room of the Providence Biltmore. Ultra smart winter formal evening gowns of the women were offset by the conventional black and white attire of their escorts. Decorations were carried out in the Valentine motif. Red and white were effectively used to give the ball room a brilliant, colorful, and festive appearance. The tables were brightened with red lighted tapers in red holders and red cupids and hearts were attractively placed against the whiteness of the table cloths.

The tables were arranged in cabaret style around the ball-room with space left in the center for dancing. There was no formal arrangement for dinner, and individual parties were made up at will. General dancing began at 7.30 and continued until 2.00 o'clock, interspersed with special musical entertainment features.

Preceding the dinner, a receiving line headed by Mrs. Jack Davis, president, greeted the guests in the foyer. Assisting Mrs. Davis were: Mesdames Samuel Markoff, Joseph Gartner, Isaac Gerber, Samuel Wachenheimer and Louis B. Wolfenson.

HOWARD-DAVIS IN "PETRIFIED FOREST"

Delores Del Rio Stars in Second Feature at Majestic

Robert Emmet Sherwood's stage hit, "The Petrified Forest," which ran all last season on Broadway to crowded houses, comes to the Majestic Theatre today, in the screen version produced by Warner Bros.

Leslie Howard and Bette Davis, who gave such sterling performances in "Of Human Bondage," are again playing the stellar roles in this picture. They are supported by a brilliant cast which includes Genevieve Tobin, Dick Foran, Humphrey Bogart, Joseph Sawyer and others.

The story is set in the picturesque and colorful background of the Arizona desert, the scenes taking place in and about a wayside gas station and eating house a few miles from the real Petrified Forest.

In this strange locale are gathered a group of the world's misfits, held there by a band of killers who are hiding from a posse searching for them awaiting their chance to escape over the border into Mexico.

At this strange gathering, Howard, in the role of an unsuccessful author, disillusioned with life, awakens to the fact that he can escape of some use in the world by dying to give the girl he has suddenly fallen in love with, a chance to realize her thwarted desires. Howard had this same role in the stage production.

Miss Davis is the erotic, discontented girl who longs for a fling at life, which her misfit father and her crabbed, miserly grandfather deny her.

Social Security Secretary to Speak at Center

Abraham Epstein, executive secretary of the American Association for Social Security and a leader in social welfare movements, will speak at an open meeting of the Providence Council of Jewish Social Workers Monday evening, February 24, at the Jewish Community Center. Mr. Epstein will discuss "Has the United States Met the Challenge of Security." A question and discussion period will follow the lecture. Guest card admissions are 25 cents each.

Carl Laemmle

Thirty years of service to the entertainment world will be marked on February 24 by Carl Laemmle, founder and president of Universal Pictures Corporation and a pioneer in an industry which has risen to big business proportions in a single generation.

BOROD-HASSENFELD

Announcement is made today of the marriage of Mrs. Esther Borod to Hillel Hassenfeld. The ceremony was performed in New York City last Friday by Rabbi Louis I. Newman of Temple Rodapha Synagogue.

Mr. Hassenfeld is a prominent leader in the communal activities of this city. Mrs. Hassenfeld is a past president of Providence Section, Council of Jewish Women.

The couple are spending their honeymoon in Florida and upon their return will make their home in this city.

"INVISIBLE RAY" AT FAY'S TODAY

"Night of Love Revue" Stage Presentation

None of the world's great laboratories have ever seen such spectacular scientific experiments as are shown in "Invisible Ray," the Universal drama of mystery, science and adventure which comes to Fay's Theatre today with Karloff and Bela Lugosi in the starring roles.

The story is laid in the year 1937, so as to include accomplishments on the very threshold of which science finds itself at the present moment. Perhaps the most spectacular of these is a development achieved by Scientist Karloff in his isolated laboratory atop the Carpathian Mountains, where he is able to fill the great glass dome of the building with an actual reproduction of the movements of suns, stars and other heavenly bodies exactly as they were millions of years ago.

"The Invisible Ray" was directed by Lambert Hillyer, and produced under the supervision of Edmund Grainger. The original story was written by Howard Higgin and Douglas Hodges, with screenplay by John Colton.

ABOUT $15 BILLIONS OF NEW INSURANCE IN 1935

Life Insurance is one of the safest and most convenient ways to provide for the future — to create an estate for your family immediately. Experience has taught the lesson that Life Insurance proceeds left in a lump sum should be protected by wise investment and management.

A Life Insurance Trust with Industrial Trust Company is an ideal way to make certain that the proceeds of your policies will be wisely invested and competently managed by an institution of long experience and demonstrated ability. Ask any of the officers of our nearest branch office for complete details or send for booklet "The Life Insurance Trust".
