Ahavath Sholom To Install Officers

The annual installation of the officers and board of directors of the Congregation Ahavath Sholom will be held this Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the Synagogue. Rabbi Morris G. Silk will install the officers and board members and a prominent guest speaker will address the gathering. An appropriate program has been arranged, in view of the fact that this year's installation may be the last to be conducted at the present site.

Officers to be installed include Irwin Piest, president; Samuel Kasper, vice-president; Charles Lappin, treasurer, and Benjamin Winicour, recording secretary. Retiring president Samuel A. Kaplan will be honored. The Sisterhood is in charge of decorations and refreshments.

Check All Campaigns

The first month of this new year is about to be lopped from the calendar and as yet there is nowhere in sight any sign of relief for many of the problems that press so strongly upon the citizenry. One of these problems, that of rising prices, is not only unsolved but unchecked.

Conditions being what they are, it is increasingly imperative that families husband their financial resources. Toward this end, we believe there should be some method of checking into the need, the practicability and the worthiness of any and all campaigns to which the Jewish people are asked to contribute.

Since this is obviously a task that cannot be accomplished by each individual family, it would seem that some sort of agency should be established, to investigate and report to the public on campaigns which are planned or even those that are under way. Only in some such way can the populace make sure that its dollars are not squandered on campaigns that are not justified, or for which there is no pressing need.

The Chamber of Commerce conducts surveys of the kind outlined above and checks the propriety of fund campaigns and the uses to which the money received is put. It would be no less fitting—it is in fact, just as imperative—for the Jewish people, who are called upon to give so often and so generously, to have a similar organization to safeguard their interests.

Mayor O'Dwyer presents a gold replica of the Statue of Liberty to Herbert Lehman, former governor of New York, for transmission "to the heroic people of the Independent Jewish State." Youth's Freed in Assault Charge

LONDON—Gerald Flamberg and John Wimborne, who were charged with attempting to murder John Preen, a British fascist leader, were freed when the case was thrown out of court after the presiding magistrate described Preen as "a witness I cannot believe upon his oath."

On cross-examination by Sir

David Maxwell-Fyfe, former Nuremberg prosecutor, who acted as counsel for the accused youths, Preen admitted that he had founded the British Action Party and the Vigilantes Action League and was connected with the fascist publication "British Awake." However, he denied that these organizations and publications were anti-Semitic. Flamberg and Wimborne are members of the "43 Group," an organization of Jewish ex-servicemen which has as its aims the curbing of anti-Semitism.

To Re-elect Temkin JFCS President

JACOB S. TEMKIN

Dr. Himon Miller, consulting psychiatrist for the agency, will be the principal speaker at the 19th annual meeting of the Jewish Family and Children's Service to be held this Monday evening at 8:15 p. m., in the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel, according to an announcement by Louis Fain, meeting chairman. Dr. Miller will speak on the subject "Psychiatry in a Changing World".

Jacob S. Temkin has been nominated for re-election as president of the agency, it was announced by Benjamin Blacher, chairman of the nominating committee. Mr. Temkin has just completed his ninth term as president of the organization, which was formerly known as the Jewish Family Wel-

Suggest Need Of UN Army

LAKE SUCCESS — The UN Palestine Commission has agreed that the situation in Palestine is steadily worsening and will verge on chaos when the British give up control of the Holy Land about May 15, it was learned this week.

The commission gives this conclusion in the first monthly report that it is preparing behind closed doors for the UN Security Council.

The commission's report as now written also refers to the "need" for an international army to enforce the partition of Palestine against Arab objections. The commission will submit a separate, detailed report on this security problem.

Commission members, in reporting on two weeks of secret meetings, also will disclose:

Britain's Sir Alexander Cadogan said that the Jewish statement that they are fighting a purely defense war in Palestine is not tenable. The Jews, Cadogan said, are trying to consolidate their advantages by a succession of drastic operations designed to intimidate the Arabs and cure them of any desire for more conflict. Both Jews and Arabs, he said are attacking.

The Jewish Agency, in addition to asking the commission to speed formation of a Jewish militia of 30,000 to 35,000 men, also asked the commission for an air force. The Agency wanted two fighter squadrons (probably totaling about 30 planes), one reconnaissance squadron, two transport squadrons, one training squadron, and two air liaison squadrons. This force would total about 100 planes.

Send Police Force Says Stassen

BURLINGTON — Harold Stassen proposed last week that the United Nations send a police force to Palestine to maintain order in that strife-torn land.

This force would provide the UN with "teeth" for the first time.

Speaking here, the GOP Presidential aspirant suggested that such a police force be used to "disarm the warring factions" and punish violence, "whoever commits it."

In Montpelier, at noon, Stassen called for a complete revision of Governmental purchasing policies and suggested a ceiling of $100,000 for "any individual speculating in food commodities."

Delay Law On Restitution

NEW YORK—American occupation authorities in Germany failed to utilize an opportunity to enact a law for the restitution of Nazi confiscated Jewish property and, as a result, promulgation of any restitution law has been delayed.

The American Jewish Conference reported last week that a restitution law in the U. S. Zone was rejected by Laenderrat, with suggested amendments which would have vitiated the purpose of the law. This left it open to the American authorities to enact the decree as a military government law irrespective of the opposition of German authorities. However, for various political reasons, such a course was not followed.

Instead, efforts were begun to achieve agreement among all four occupying powers on a uniform restitution law for the whole of Germany. Such an agreement among the Big Four has not yet been forthcoming. Chief stumbling block of a four-power agreement is the question of disposal of heirless Jewish property. The American Draft Law had envisaged turning such property over to an international Jewish organization. This was opposed by other powers who suggested alternatives ranging from turning it over such property to the German Laender, to turning it over to a non-sectarian international organization on which Jews would be given representation.

London Gives Danny Kaye Warm Welcome

LONDON — Comedian Danny Kaye was welcomed warmly by British newspapermen reversing what seemed to be a trend toward extremely critical treatment of American stars making appearances in this dollar-hungry land at huge salaries which they may take home from the country.

The sandy-haired stage and screen star, whose salary for a four-week personal appearance here was estimated at between $6000 and $12,000 weekly, charmed with frankness the same reporters who criticized Mickey Rooney and reduced Rita Hayworth to tears.

Rooney was treated roughly because of what the British called his "cockiness." His stage act was described as inferior to those presented by British performers sharing the bill at a fraction of his salary.

Miss Hayworth's pompous press conference, which included a liveried flunkey, all but ruined her

"He who reports in the name of him who said it, brings deliverance to the World". My report from the Poale Zion Convention at Pittsburgh was based on the above Jewish moral principle. The enthusiasm with which my Chaverim received that report gave me the idea that perhaps some of the remarks uttered by famous men in authority at Pittsburgh might or should be of interest to a wider circle than our own group.

The fact that in the time elapsed since the convention and the printing of this report some of the predicting statements are now facts, add more weight to the report as a whole.

Political

Berl Loker, Palestine member of Agency, speaking on the UN and Palestine said in part: "Dr. Herzl's prophecy that at the end of fifty years everybody will understand Zionism became true. A united people are for a Jewish State in Palestine and do not even know that they have changed their opinions. We must face realities. I am not too optimistic and not too pessimistic."

Bernard Joseph, Palestine legal advisor to Agency, said in part "There will be a Jewish State bimeirah beyomeinu; and if the big powers mean what they say we may conceivably be able to set up a State peaceably. After the State is established the Zionist organization will be of even greater importance. The responsibility of transporting and colonizing Jews from European and Arabian countries will be theirs."

Kaye, however, got a good send-off by the British Broadcasting Company, and the widely circulated Daily Express predicted his talent and intelligence would make him the "world's number one clown."

Among those at Kaye's press conference in the Savoy Hotel were executives of American film companies anxious to get a preview of what their own stars might expect when they come here for vaudeville engagements.

The personal appearances are regarded as important in order to keep the names of stars alive while the Hollywood embargo is still operating against the British 75 per cent movie tax.

Kaye answered all questions easily and frankly. He circulated from group to group, assuring inquirers that he and his wife, Sylvia Fine, still were good friends, and that while his salary admittedly was large, he would "do everything I can to earn it."

TEL AVIV LETTER: War Not Apparent There

(Ed. Note: Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Holzman and their child are now living in Palestine. Mr. Holzman, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Silverman, recorded his impressions of life in that country in a letter received in the Herald offices this week. The letter follows:)

Although communal fighting rages from one end of Palestine to the other, a visitor often finds it difficult to believe.

"The Palestine Post"—the country's only English language daily—devotes almost 50 percent of its news space to accounts of the disturbances, and the headlines leave little doubt as to the seriousness of the situation.

"One killed, 4 hurt in Haifa". "2 Villages Raided, 10 Arabs Killed". "5 Dead in Jaffa Area". "3 Jews Killed—Haganah Picks Off Arab Snipers". "Haganah Repulses Attack in Safed—9 Dead on Roads And In Towns." "2 Jews 10 Arabs Dead, 48 Wounded".

Tel Aviv Peaceful

Yet the visitor to Tel Aviv, for example, is hard put to credit such sensational items. He will stroll from his hotel, on the Mediterranean shore, past the fine shops on Allenby street to the center of town where Rothschild Blvd. crosses and see only the busy bustle that denotes a peaceful, thriving metropolis. Buses, trucks, taxis and motorcycles jam the thoroughfares and shoppers crowd the sidewalks. Newsboys hawk their papers ("Good news! Syrian cholera epidemic is growing") and school children fill the parks. Cafes have capacity crowds. A mile or so away, where the city meets Jaffa, is the Arab-Jewish "no-man's land", according to the newspaper. But, living inside the giant fortress of Tel Aviv with its 200,000 people, the visitor is likely to feel that strife is a thousand miles away.

The unseasonably warm winter weather brings thousands to the beach to sun and a few hardy souls to swim. At night theaters, cinemas and concerts boast standing room only. Dance music from the cafes fills the air.

Have to Hunt "Wars"

In Tel Aviv you have to hunt to find the "war". You have to wander on to the beach at night to find that the sunbathers have been replaced by serious teen-age boys and girls gazing toward nearby Jaffa with suspicious looking packages under their arms. These are youngsters of the Haganah guarding the coast, still forced to secrete their hand grenades because of Haganah's illegal status in the eyes of British authorities.

Only an occasional distant rifle shot lends credence to the reports of fighting on the Tel Aviv Jaffa border. But the crowds on the street stroll on seemingly unconcerned. It's hard to believe men are dying.

Jerusalem, Another Story

Jerusalem, of course, is another story. In that city there is as little law and order as in remotest China. A man takes his life in his hands when he walks out of his house. Public utilities periodically come to a standstill. Such things as the post office and telephone service—until they were taken over temporarily by the Army—just didn't function. The mails are not protected from armed Arab robbers and, as a result, people can neither venture on the roads nor trust the postal facilities for communication. At night the streets are deserted except for the snipers. Even the hospital cars rushing to the aid of the wounded and the funeral parties burying the dead are fit and, in fact, favorite targets. For three days the Jews in the Old City had no bread, for five days the Jewish dead lay unburied.

But the Tel Avivian knows little of all this first hand. True, he knows a man who just got through on the convoy from Jerusalem where two were killed and nine wounded in the very bus in which he traveled. Or he has a friend in from Haifa who witnessed the massacre of 41

Jews at the oil refineries. He hears stories from acquaintances in Haganah who have just returned from a tour of duty in the Negev desert protecting the colonies or the Jerusalem hills protecting the convoys. He has probably been called for his initial interview with Haganah himself.

Yet his own personal way of life has been little affected by recent developments. A "business-as-usual" atmosphere pervades the city. Few seem really concerned about its vulnerability to attack by sea and air should hostilities begin in earnest.

Actually the "war" reaches Tel Aviv each morning at about 8 when the headlines announce the previous day's toll. "Village Cafe Shot Up". "Jew Killed, 3 hurt in Jerusalem". "Buses Bombed In Haifa". "6 Women Hurt By Arab Snipers".

"One Man's Opinion"

Jewish Music

By BERNARD SEGAL

Berele's earliest recollection takes him back to a mild summer evening, to a dim room, and to a plaintive song of his mother as she puts him to sleep. It was a sweetly-sad tune which blended with the twilight outside of the nearby window, and it pervaded his whole being with a lightness of a dream world where all is peaceful and good and floating. Berele further recalls a day in a room full of little children, all sitting along a narrow table, with the Rabbi at the head. All are swaying and chanting the large Aleph Beth:

Kometz Aleph Oh,
Kometz Beth Boh,
Kometz Gimmel Goh.

The chant, and the voices coming from the outside, and the admonitions of the Rabbi, and the odors of cooking wafting in from the kitchen, all come back to him with the tang of early fall on the pasture across the brook.

And there is the memory of a midnight walk with his father in the moonlit streets, with houses and trees casting long shadows across the square where the four houses of worship of the town stood with light blazing through their windows. Wide eyed Berele looked at the familiar walls and ceiling, benches and tables, and the Holy Ark, now so strangely different in the brilliant light of a Selichoth night.

He recalls standing and listening in rapture to the singing of the Hazan, not the home Hazan who chants the prayers the year round, but a stranger, who came to town with his boy's choir for the Holidays. The voice of the

Returns From Service

DR. PHILIP BARON, son of Rev. and Mrs. Jacob Baron of this city, arrived in New York recently after three years of service as a physician in the Medical Corps of the U. S. Army. Dr. Baron, who served as a lieutenant in the Pacific and European theaters of operation, is a graduate of Johns Hopkins University and the University of Rochester Medical School. He intends to further his studies for another year before taking up his residency.

Hazan, tall and powerful, and the soft tremble of the boys standing by the cantor's desk ring in the ears through the mist of years.

Who was the dark figure sitting on the floor lamenting? Was it father, or maybe grandfather, or the memory of both merged into one? A subdued light in the kerosine lamp, deep shadows in the corners of the room, a flickering flame of a candle on a small wooden box at the feet of the figure dressed in drab grey, and a mournful voice pining for the city once so full of people, now desolate; for the daughters of Zion once resplendent in their beauty, now dragged into slavery; for the youths of Judah once so princely, now finding no rest among the nations.

The darkness outside the window deepening, the little boy pulling the cover over his head, and the lamentation from the next room penetrating into every cell of his body.

Tunes, and melodies, and chants, and voices, and colors, and odors blend into a pattern of a life far away and long ago.

There are those of the Sabbath, Eve, and those of the Seder feast; those of the wedding march under the stars, and the Hasidim greeting their Rabbi; those of the little children reciting the story of Rachel and Jacob, and of youths bending over the folios of the Talmud; those of tailor's apprentices at their work, and those of girls combing their hair; those of the blessing of the New Moon under the evening skies, and those of boys returning from Cheder swinging their lit lanterns as they sing.

All of these are the symphony of Jewish music to Berele. This to him, now that he is no longer a child, is the essence of Jewish music.

Now in his adult life as he listens to discussions of the meaning of Jewish music, he drifts back to the Jewish symphony of his childhood. He listens to talks of tonal modes, of melodic chords, and of oriental versus Eastern European influences, and he keeps his peace. He is well aware of the shortcomings of his musical knowledge. But he nevertheless clings to his own criterion and to his very own definition of Jewish music. Though unable to analyze it in terms of the musical experts, he knows Jewish music by the chords it strikes in his heart.

And this year, as in previous years, as the Jewish Music month rolls around, and there is talk and sound of Jewish music in the land, he will again listen, and while listening will judge it by the way it affects his spirit, rather than by the name of the composer.

Which, in the last analysis, is the only way to judge art in all its forms, music included.

Camp Whitman Has Novel Approach

A summer co-ed camp that features a novel approach to its chosen task is Camp Walt Whitman, which will be operated next summer by Sherwin J. Kapstein and Arnie Soloway of this city. The camp, formerly known as Tahoma and Tawasi is located on Lake Armington, Pike, New Hampshire, in a region which has an interesting history of its own.

Parents who send their children to Camp Walt Whitman are assured that the children will be treated like growing human beings, instead of like puppets, as is too often the case in many camps. At Whitman there will be no high tension competitive sports program in which each camper is forced to participate. Instead, the emphasis is on a healthy amount of physical activity supplemented by a program designed to give them self reliance and bring out each child's natural interests and abilities.

Mr. and Mrs. George Levine

Created to sell at $10, this black straw braid cloche accented by a spray of red roses has a definite feel of Spring. The nation's milliners were on hand to look at new styles.

Described as a delicate sailor of pale blue, this bonnet has matching wings around the flower laden brim. At retail it will cost Macame $10 around Easter.

Novelette: She was a faithful employee in a household for many years. They never missed a thing from their jool boxes or apparel closets. A good woman who had no vices whatever. When the master of the house had card games real money was used. The other week-end (for the first time) they were playing with chips when dinner was announced. They left their reds, blues and whites on the card table. When they returned an hour later every chip was gone and so was the maid. They haven't had a trace of her since.

Big town Vignette: The Communist newspaper (in N. Y. C.) assigned an office boy to become a handicapper when the editors tried to jazz up the rag a few weeks ago. The kid who never witnessed a horse race in his young life) picked 16 nags on the nose. Then got himself a job with a racing paper.

Sallies in Our Alley: Charles Irwin (one of vaudville's best bequests to Movieburg) relays this one by comic Harry Gordon, of Scotland. Gordon, discussing the big difference between entertainers in the U. S. and Britain, said: "Over here you have Benny, Allen and Hope. Over there we have Attlee, Bev- and no hope!"

Some Local Comment

Young Montreal Is Back

To the younger sports fans in this vicinity, the name of Young Montreal may mean nothing. To those whose memory of sports events and figures dates back about 15 years or so, however, it is one that still commands attention. The boxing game knew that name well. Young Montreal was one of the better boxers of his day and a favorite in local circles.

Now he is back in the news, according to information reaching my desk. Marty Klitzner, a youngster at the Jewish Community Center, has been taken under the veteran's wing and is being trained for a boxing career. I understand that Marty may box under the name of Young Montreal when he is matched in the near future. The boy can learn a great deal from the former boxer and it will be interesting to follow his career.

Speaking of boxing, Abe Lobel, sports director at the Center, is planning a new innovation in the form of a boxing and wrestling class. Abe plans to start the class very soon and is hopeful of getting a large enrollment as an indication that he is heading his expanded program in the right direction. A knowledge of the fundamentals of boxing is a valuable bit of learning for any boy to have. The class should prove a popular one.

Sunday Gym Class

The weather being what it is, there has been a serious dearth of athletic activity available in this vicinity this winter. Bowling is undergoing a rough season with many keggers unable to combat the elements successfully and the attendance in general a bit on the spasmodic side as a result. There is little of any other kind of activity.

All the more reason to put in a word for the excellent "Business Men's Gym Class" conducted at the Center every Sunday at 10 o'clock. Until the outdoor season arrives these Sunday morning classes are one of the few means a fellow has to stay in condition. . . . The class includes handball, volleyball, basketball, and instructions on how to keep fit by proper exercising. The program is just getting into full swing and there is room for more enrollees. . . . Good chance to get in shape for the spring.

Still Plugging

I'm still hopeful of seeing a softball league organized this spring—assuming we have a little of spring between snowfalls. There has been an informal league ever since the war, so there shouldn't be too much difficulty in organizing a regular league. It is not too early to get started on the formation of the league.

After all, the hibernating season for ball fans and players is about over (look at the calendar, bub, not out the window). Remember what the man said: If winter comes, can spring be far behind? Well, winter most definitely is here. . . .

Emanu-El Bowling

By JACK PLATKIN

It was quite a build up the writer received last week and he feels like a helper who is ordered to go out and do a mechanic's job. Muddy Waldman's work in the past was beyond any criticism and many of us agree that the scriptures in the past were well done for most of us, but there are always a few who like it rare, and they got it.

Here's hoping that your former correspondent will not miss any more court action Tuesday mornings because of having to write an article on bowling.

The half way mark finds the Indians on top; high single belongs to Lou Chase, and high three to Leo Miller. High team single and high three belongs to the Browns, 632 and 1587 respectfully, and we don't think anyone is going to catch up with these figures. High three for the night was Dr. Woiler, 347, good shooting, Doc.

What bears watching and is most interesting these days is the hot race for bowling supremacy between Lou Chase and Leo Miller; nary a point separates these boys, and time will tell whether Lou can still maintain that top bowling spot he has enjoyed for so many years.

I predict that the team presently at top in the standing, will not be there at the season's end. Good luck Joe.

Beth Israel Bowling

By SAUL HODOSH

In a very tense struggle, and despite its Captain Barney Coken, Brown took 4 points from Cornell, climaxing a steady uphill struggle for first place. Princeton and Dartmouth by virtue of being on the receiving end of 3-1 losses, slipped to second and third places respectively.

High single went to Oscar Dressler with 129 and Sam Segal and Abe Marcowitz placed and showed with 126 and 120. Ed Berger forgot himself and must be congratulated on a fine string of 117.

Sam Segal who was consistently picking up the elusive "marks" took high-three with 346, followed by O. Dressler with 331 and Jack Epstein with 318.
