First Film Studio Started In Israel; American Directors Voice Interest In Project

TEL AVIV—The foundation stone was laid Sunday for Israel's first motion picture studio, in Herzlia, near Tel Aviv. The $600,000 project, covering 20 acres, will be rented to local or foreign producers.

American film companies, whose $600,000 earnings in Israel are frozen by currency restrictions, may make films here to utilize their assets.

The American Associates of Israel, film studio with branches in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, holds a 50 per cent interest in the enterprise and will ship equipment from the United States. Israeli partners will erect a laboratory and sound stages and the Jewish National Fund has allocated land from its public holdings.

Sponsors said applications for use of the studio already have been received from independent American producers including Andre Bohem, who holds an option on Thomas Mann's "Joseph and His Brethren," and Fred Zinne-man, who recently visited Israel and is working on a script for a sequel to "The Search."

The new enterprise has ties with Hollywood through an advisory council consisting of leading personalities. A technical committee, including leading laboratory men, sound engineers and cameramen, have examined plans for the studio and producers and directors will serve on a production committee to advise producers and help in the distribution of Israeli-made films. A third group of agents forms a financial committee.

At the ceremony Sunday, messages were read from William Dieterle, William Wyler and Roberto Rossellini, who said they would like to make pictures in Israel.

Israel-Jordan Deal On Refugees Hinted

TEL AVIV—There are strong well-founded indications here that Jews and Arabs, working independently of the Lausanne conference, are making progress on a compromise concerning the refugee problem. There are authoritative reports that some form of border control for civilian traffic will soon be announced.

At present there are but two authorized ways to enter Israel—by air to Lydda or by ship to Haifa. Because these are the only two points in Israel with passport control, any authorized Arab immigrants would have to enter that way. It is unlikely they would come by airline, and the only other way would be through Beirut to Cyprus and thence to Haifa.

It is believed that the plan now being considered would establish passport control points at least with Jordan, where old and new Jerusalem meet. How far the Israelis and Arabs, probably Jordanians, have gone with this plan has not been disclosed.

Youngsters Off For Two Weeks at Camp Jori

New Ledgemont Country Club Is Dedicated Before Record Crowd

Pictures on Page 8

The new Ledgemont Country Club was formally dedicated last Sunday afternoon with a record crowd of 500 on hand to witness the official opening of the beautiful estate in Seekonk, Mass.

The dedication ceremonies climaxed more than three years of planning and building of the new Ledgemont and followed by less than a year the ground-breaking ceremonies that were held on the site on September 19, 1948. The project was conceived in 1946.

Jacobs Is M. C.

Daniel Jacobs, chairman of the dedication committee, served as master of ceremonies. Among the speakers were Benjamin Brier, chairman of the finance committee; Leonard Levin, who was in charge of the construction of the golf course; Alex Rumpler, chairman of the swimming pool committee; Arthur Kaplan, member of the finance committee; Edward Adaskin of Fall River; Joseph Ress, building committee chairman, and Alvin A. Sopkin, president of Ledgemont.

Ress presented the key to the new clubhouse to Sopkin, who officiated at the flag raising ceremonies. Mrs. Marsha Pliner sang the "Star Spangled Banner" while the flag was being raised. Following the speaking program a buffet dinner was served to the overflow crowd, which occupied the dining room, lounge and open porches. Tours of inspection and dancing to Hal Rubin's Orchestra completed the entertainment.

Canada 2nd High in Accepting DP Jews

MONTREAL—Canada has accepted more than 11,000 displaced Jews during the past two years. Col. David Croll, Jewish M. P., revealed during an address here.

This makes Canada second only to Israel in the number of Jewish DP's it has accepted for resettlement. Col. Croll declared. Government statistics released in Ottawa recently disclosed that over 71,000 DP's of all nationalities and faiths have been accepted by the Dominion since April, 1947.

Says Mexican Jews Retain Religious Rites

NEW YORK—Professor Raphael Patai, who received the first Doctor of Philosophy degree conferred by the Hebrew University, has conducted a survey of several months' duration in Mexico, studying the village of Venta Prieta, whose Mexican Indian population includes both Jews and Catholics. It was reported in the Bulletin of the American Friends of the Hebrew University.

The Jews of Venta Prieta, Dr. Patai found, are pure Indian or Mestizo in their physical type, regarding themselves as the descendants of Marranos who came to Mexico with the Spanish conquerors at the beginning of the sixteenth century. The Marranos were Spanish Jews who pretended to accept Christianity in order to avoid persecution by the Inquisition, while continuing to practice Judaism clandestinely. These Mexican Indian Jews believe that they lost their original appearance as a consequence of several generations of intermarriage with the local Indians. Until he completes his study, however, Dr. Patai will not state definitely whether this contention is correct, or whether these Mexican Indians are actually descended from proselytes who were converted to Judaism at a relatively late date.

The Indian Jews of Mexico know little of Jewish religion, though they gather in their synagogues on Saturdays and Jewish holidays to pray (mostly in Spanish) and to sing hymns in Spanish and Hebrew. Their Jewish consciousness is very strong, however, and when intermarriage takes place between one of them and a Catholic Indian, the non-Jewish partner is usually converted to Judaism and brought into the congregation.

Israel May Take Arab Refugees

TEL AVIV—Thousands of Arab refugees may be taken back by Israel in the next six months, a well-informed source said Monday.

No official comment was available. A statement was issued that the "number of refugees from areas under Israeli control and economic factors affecting their resettlement" was among the subjects discussed today at a meeting of the technical committee on refugees of the Palestine Conciliation Commission.

The Israeli government believes the refugee resettlement question should await the writing of all peace treaties with the Arab states. However, reported pressure from the U. S. State Dept. during the past few days suggested the possibility of a compromise move before all treaties are signed.

Bank Denies Pressure on Israel

WASHINGTON—A spokesman for the Export-Import bank this week denied a London report that the bank would cancel further withdrawals from its loan to Israel because of American displeasure at Israel over the Arab refugee question.

Decline of the Yiddish Theatre

From The American Hebrew

The Yiddish theatre here offers an interesting example of how the best wishes in the world cannot stop the irresistible advance of new cultural forces. The theatre's decline is being artificially halted, but it is part of an inevitable, if awkward and uncertain, shaping of new patterns in American Jewish life.

Only two major Yiddish acting companies remain to put on full-length productions in something of the old splendid tradition of the 1900's: Maurice Schwartz's and Menasha Skulnick's. The two are poles apart both in intention and achievement.

Maurice Schwartz has been striving for more than a quarter of a century to keep alive a serious stage. His productions, in classical Yiddish, whether adaptations of Shakespeare or of Sholem Aleichem, are infused with a high spirit of dedication. There is nothing frivolous about a Maurice Schwartz play. Unfortunately, he addresses himself to a limited audience—to the people from Eastern Europe.

The Yiddish Press—itsself in a decline—and Jewish organizations regularly deplore the decay of the theatre, and urge the Jewish population to support Schwartz and other serious artists. But the unalterable fact is that the audience for a Schwartz production is simply disappearing.

The Yiddish theatre has been reduced to a week-end enterprise for a few months a year. It remains open longer—it remains 'alive,' some observers have remarked, only because of 'benefits' which fill the theatres during the week and extend the season. An organization secures the tickets for the entire house, at lower rates; almost forces them upon its members, at regular prices; pockets the profits; and the show is able to continue. Since many members may not care to see the play, a theatre may often be nearly empty although all the tickets have been sold.

Pleas for attendance at a Maurice Schwartz production are often heard, not so much because of the quality of the play (which lately has been indifferent), but on the score that his comedies are not actually Jewish, that his Yiddish is a corrupt version of the language, and that he has yielded to cheap popular demand in his productions. He may be take himself to Broadway, where he has longed to appear for years.

Maurice Schwartz sends word from South America of having engaged Moshe Zamar to play the title role in his forthcoming production, "Yosele, the Nightingale." Sholem Aleichem's folk comedy with music by Sholem Secunda, which opens Oct. 17 at the Yiddish Art Theatre.

Besides the theatres housing Schwartz and Skulnick, there are several others, along Second Avenue and in The Bronx and Brooklyn, where small companies stage traditional Jewish melodramas, vaudeville sketches, and musical numbers, which are often alternated with Yiddish films. Many performers in Yiddish have taken to appearing at Jewish vacation resorts and at weddings and banquets, thus, in a sense, extending the walls of the theatre. A few have appeared in Yiddish films. The Yiddish cinema reaches wide audiences and contains in highly concentrated form the ingredients of popular Jewish drama.

It would be a mistake to limit the discussion of the Jewish theatre only to productions rooted in Second Avenue. Contemporary Jewish life has inspired a number of Broadway plays, notably those of Clifford Odets in the 30's, as well as Hollywood films (in which, however, the Jewishness has been considerably masked) and radio serials. "The Goldbergs" is an immensely popular "continued" radio play that has been going on for what seems like decades and has just now been transferred to television (with a little Irish girl playing one of Mrs. Goldberg's children). It has offered a serene, not unrealistic portrait of everyday lower middle-class Jewish life in New York. (Continued on Page 6)

MRS. ESTHER GOLD

The funeral of Mrs. Esther Gold, wife of Hyman Gold of 234 Saratoga Street, who died Sunday after a brief illness, was held

"because the theatre must be kept alive," and because a kind of homage must be paid to the commanding figure of Schwartz.

A great many young people went to see "Shylock's Daughter," last year's production which obtained for Schwartz much publicity in the general Press. (This was an interesting but far-fetched re-writing of "The Merchant of Venice," which brought the Shylock sub-plot into prominence. Shylock is awarded the pound of flesh but cannot take it, in spite of all provocations, "because he is a Jew.") During the performance, there was an undercurrent of whispered translation for the benefit of those whose Yiddish was rusty or non-existent.

The understanding of Yiddish is, of course, basic to the whole problem of Whither the Yiddish theatre? However vigorously the Yiddishists may argue that the language is alive, the stubborn fact is that fewer and fewer American Jewish children learn 'mamaloshen.' The supporters of the theatre became optimistic as the influx of refugees grew. It turned out, however, that few of them, especially those from Western Europe, knew Yiddish.

Menasha Skulnick's method of dealing with the problem of language is to produce musical comedies in a patois half-Yiddish, half-American—a jargon widely understood in New York. Also, his themes and settings are contemporary. He has been criticized for the tone of his comedies, which are not much above low-grade music hall. There are no cultural pretenses in a Skulnick play. A slight, sad-faced man, Menasha, as he is fondly called, has captured something of the quality of a folk-hero in his portrait of a frightened little 'shlemiel,' a physical and intellectual underdog, facing a world in every way superior to him. His only weapons are an ancient wit and an insouciant shrug of the shoulders. He is in the great tradition of sad clowns, a tradition he reinforces with the earthy wisdom of Yiddish humor.

Skulnick has not had a financially unsuccessful season in the last 15 years. Famous Broadway comedians have visited Second Avenue to study his style. But like Schwartz, he appeals chiefly to an audience whose background is in Eastern Europe, and has not enough to say to young Jewish Americans.

Yet Skulnick has been attacked

Are Jews Immune From Criticism?

Miss Dorothy Thompson has published a vigorous reply in the New York Tag, (in Dr. Margoshes' English column) denying accusations made against her in that, and in other Jewish newspapers of late, that she had turned anti-Israel, anti-Zionist, almost anti-Jewish because she had recently criticised certain actions of the Israelis and of American Zionists.

Miss Thompson dealt with a few specific cases of criticism which she had raised on various occasions. These were: (1) The shameful massacre by the Sternists and Irgunists of the Arab civilian population, including women and children, in the village of Deir Yessin in the beginning of the Palestine war; (2) The unseemly tumultuous reception given by American Jews to the terrorist and fascist Menachem Beigin; (3) The various antics of Ben Hecht in his vulgar, pro-terrorist and anti-British propaganda; (4) The campaign against "Oliver Twist"; and (5) The tendency among many Zionists and other nationalistically inclined Jews to classify themselves as a minority group in the United States. "Israel is a secular political state, subject like other states to criticism," Miss Thompson said and implied that not only Israel, but Zionists and even Jews are not immune from criticism.

It so happens that Miss Thompson has lately strayed far afield from many of her previous liberal views and much of the criticism levelled against her is fully justified.

But in this particular case she was and is on perfectly legitimate, liberal grounds. Miss Thompson was not alone in her criticism of the acts enumerated above. Many other non-Jewish and Jewish liberals voiced opposition to every one of the issues mentioned by her. And for this criticism they, too, were denounced as anti-Israelis, anti-Zionists and anti-Semites.

In the case of Jews, they were shouted down as "traitors." Supersensitiveness to criticism is, unfortunately, one of the most morbid aspects of Jewish life at present.

Strangely enough, this morbidity is beginning to lose some of its intensity in Israel where good, strong frank criticism like that of Miss Thompson's is heard frequently and no one dreams of denouncing it as anti-Israelism, anti-Semitism, or as "treason," as is the custom in certain sections of Jewry here.

Career Counseling of Jews

from The Congress Weekly

By WALTER DUCKAT

One might assume that a person going to college or a vocational school should have a fair notion as to his vocational objective. But studies reveal the dismal fact that a large percentage of young people do not know which career to pursue. And many of those who have a definite goal are either ill suited for it or face bleak prospects of securing a job in the field for which they are preparing.

As a career counselor for the largest Jewish agency in the country, this writer has had the opportunity of advising thousands of young men and women concerning their vocational plans. Daily, there flow through the doors of our agency and through about a score of similar Jewish agencies throughout the country, numerous men and women of all ages who seek career guidance or placement. "I want to know what I'm best suited for," is their plaintive request, repeated with almost deadening monotony.

Confused and Dissatisfied
Millions of both non-Jews as well as Jews are vocationally confused and dissatisfied. But there is a difference. Frequently, because of the age-old problem of educational and economic restrictions, it is probably even more important for Jews to select their careers judiciously. Because of restrictions, the Jew often has less actual choice in his vocational preferences than the non-Jew.

Since Jewish parents are keenly concerned with the career problems of their children, it is hoped that the following may reveal how our Jewish communal structure attempts to cope with this universal problem.

Sound vocational counseling is desperately needed because with the tremendous growth of the occupational world there are now about 30,000 different vocations. Jews as well as Gentiles often prepare for vocations with little knowledge of their abilities, preferences, the requirements, the job duties, probable earnings and opportunities in their chosen field. For Jews and other minority groups it is especially important that careers be selected with care, because they still suffer from known restrictive educational and job hiring policies. While laws proscribing such practices may have reduced flagrant practices, it is folly to believe that any substantial dent has been made in this thorny problem.

Types of Problems
What types of problems do the Jewish applicants bring to a Jewish vocational agency? Broadly speaking, any problem of a vocational nature is within its province, but as vocational problems are so often linked with a variety of personal problems, the counselor will frequently refer his clients to pertinent social agencies. Clients may need financial aid, enrichment of their leisure time activities, medical care or a variety of other services.

This article deals mainly with the writer's own experience as a staff member of the largest Jewish vocational agency in the country. However, conversations with representatives of other agencies indicate that similar problems exist in various degrees throughout the country.

Who are the people coming to a Jewish vocational agency? Sam is a tow-head lad of sixteen in his second year of high school. Since the death of both of his parents in an auto accident, he has been under the stewardship of a child care association, which has referred him to us for career

Sam is doing poorly in the academic course which he dislikes so intensely that he wants to quit school and go to work. Should he, or may his interests be served best by transferring to another course or school?

Our discussions and test results point to the feasibility of Sam learning radio or television repair. A transfer is arranged to a vocational school and efforts are made by our employment division to secure him a part time job.

Fear of Discrimination
Julian is a tall, slender lad of seventeen. Engineering has long attracted him and he has read extensively on the subject. Now completing high school with an average of 95, Julian asks whether he should study engineering. He is worried because he has heard from relatives and friends that Jews often have a difficult time landing a job or advancing in this profession. His fears appear to be strengthened by the fact that several top notch schools of engineering have rejected his application.

Julian is informed that schools of engineering are now filled to the over-flowing point, that many colleges still seem to have quotas and a number of engineering firms appear to hire few, if any, Jews. Nevertheless, he is told that though advancement may be more difficult for Jews, many have forged ahead in this field. The incidence of discriminatory practices should not be the sole factor in abandoning a field for which one may be highly qualified.

Sam and Julian are fairly representative of two reasons why young Jews seek vocational guidance from a Jewish agency. Sam is an example of the vocational confusion bedeviling many young people today. They often drift from one course to another without knowing which career to follow. I have counseled hundreds of persons of all ages who were completely confused as to their vocational interests or plans. Our high schools have generally failed to make adequate provision for this much needed service.

Julian knows what he wants and has the capacity to realize his goal, but is frustrated by the existence of educational and economic barriers still barring Jews.

Dubious Choices
Many young Jews make dubious vocational choices because they are unfamiliar with their own interests and abilities as well as with labor market conditions. The result is that many persons often prepare for fields already overcrowded.

For example, at this writing, engineering which next to teaching is our largest profession, is still able to absorb most of the graduates of schools of engineering. Because of swollen college enrollments, the supply is expected to exceed the demand during the next few years. Similarly, bleak conditions are expected to prevail in accountancy, business administration, law, pharmacy in the large cities, chemistry, physical sciences, and in some other professions.

On the other hand, prospects continue bright in teaching, the health sciences such as medicine, dentistry, osteopathy, podiatry, optometry, nursing and in social work and librarianship. Unfortunately, few young people are aware of occupational trends and tend to prepare for fields already overcrowded.

Your Broadway and Mine:

Times Square Ticker: Sherm Billingsley sold his new $3,000 car to one of the Stork waiters. Latter owns a nine-story apartment house uptown, etc. ... Gypsy Rose Lee's mother, after three years, has shelved her autobiog. Publishers got nervous ... Isn't that Mussolini's boy, Vittorio peddling motor cars in Argentina? ... A Venezuelan oilman here has been relieved of $40,000 by a choline ... Elaine Stritch (of H. Stromberg Jr.'s new mystery, "3 Ladies") is the niece of the famed Cardinal Stritch.

Government insurance office is making a mint for Uncle Sam because so many G. Is are neglecting their policies.

Not so long ago one of the "boys" (who long had been identified with the Capone syndicate in Chicago) decided he would open a bank ... As a kid he sold newspapers outside of one of the big banks on La Salle street ... To him the acme of achievement was the president who left his office every 4 p. m. and stepped into his chauffeur-driven car ... The newsboy, via the syndicate route, came into the bucks, and (having enough salted away) promoted his own bank and played the role of the banker in the chauffeur-piloted car. But when he applied to the controller of currency for his charter, he met with an unexpected rebuff ... Uncle Sam had been watching his career for quite some time and, knowing his background, advised he could own a bank, but he could not be identified with it in any official capacity ... He has the bank today, but his name does not appear on its list of officers or directors.

Midtown Vignette: Sidney Blackmer (of the legit, if you please) witnessed it in the foyer of a swank hotel ... A lounge-lizard greeted a pretty girl with one of those pick-up howdy-dos ... She turned on her best frigid glare ... He sarcasm'd: "I beg your pod'n, I thought you were my mother!" ... "I couldn't be," she ice'd, "I'm married!"

Paul Scheffer (agent of the German secret service and U. S. correspondent for Dr. Goebbels) now is working as a press agent! He is said to have planted stories in recent issues of two magazines about a self-styled German refugee-"scientist."

This little island called Manhattan is the summer resort supreme ... Never a mosquito, rarely a fly is seen ... Millions live high, where it's cool and rather quiet, except for the soothing and varied whistles of the boats and an occasional fire or police siren ... You don't have to be sociable with heterogeneous strangers or even your party-wall neighbors, whom you seldom know on sight.

If you want to sail, there are two magnificent rivers, the broad and sporting sound and the most breath-stopping harbor on earth ... If you want mountains, you go by magic elevators to the observatories in the Chrysler building. Radio City or the Empire State, where you get a magnificent view as soon as the suicides clear the railings.

Let's Talk Things Over

When young people get married, these days, one of their biggest problems is to balance the budget. There are so many things they'd like to have — perhaps a radio, a new automobile, a home of their own. Or simpler things like furnishings for the den or the spare room, new drapes, or even going to the movies. Yes, there are all kinds of ways to spend money, and all kinds of nice things to buy.

But let me tell the young husband something. He's going to be a whole lot happier if he knows he's taken care of the little lady should anything happen to him. Don't forget, sometimes young husbands die. And I'm not being morbid. It's just plain common sense.

So, young fellow, just you look into your budgeting right now, and put some of your savings into a Sun Life insurance plan that'll take care of the little lady you'd do anything for. She's worth it.

Whatever your income, I think I can tell you how you can go about it.

Let's talk things over—today!

Survey Shows Bias in Legal Practice

A distinct pattern of segregation in the practice of law as between Jews and non-Jews has been disclosed by Leon J. Obermayer, chairman of the B'nai B'rith Vocational Service Commission, in announcing the results of a B'nai B'rith survey of discrimination in the legal profession. Law firms in many cities are of three types, said Obermayer: so-called "Gentile firms," so-called "Jewish firms," and firms that are "mixed" in that they hire both Jews and non-Jews.

Fifty deans and professors in 33 different law schools throughout the country were asked by "depth" interviews of Elmo Roper to report anonymously on their experiences in placing their Jewish law graduates.

According to the survey, the "Gentile firms" have a definite policy of rejecting all Jewish applicants.

The law faculties offer several reasons for the policy of the "mixed firms" in hiring both Jews and non-Jews. Some credit a firm with a sincere desire to attract the best possible lawyers regardless of religion. Often a firm that has a "mixed" clientele considers it wise to have some Jewish lawyers on its staff.

"There are very few Jewish lawyers in a law firm unless they are solely Jewish law firms," suggested a professor. The specifically "Jewish firms" were reported to be numerous, especially in the large eastern cities. Apparently, they offer Jewish graduates the surest connection.

Young Jewish lawyers who can afford it, hang out their own shingles and gradually build up their own practices. Many make connections with small law firms. Others become salaried lawyers for a business, insurance company, or government agency. There was almost unanimous agreement among the professors in this survey that Jewish law graduates face less discrimination in government than in any other type of law work.

Notwithstanding the existence of segregation and discrimination in the legal profession, young Jewish lawyers experienced comparatively little difficulty in establishing themselves during the immediate postwar years. The law professors warned, however, that when the large postwar classes in law get their diplomas and start looking for jobs, there will be stiff competition in the profession. This may mean lower incomes for young lawyers as well as greater difficulty in landing a position—especially for Jews.

ISRAEL, NOT PALESTINE

NEW YORK—Israeli Consul-General Arthur Lourie this week warned all persons writing to residents of Jewish sections in Jerusalem that they must address their mail, "Jerusalem, Israel." Letters marked, "Jerusalem, Palestine," are liable to be delivered to the Old City of Jerusalem, which is in the hands of the Arab Legion, and will not reach the addressees.

Six Teams Gunning For Playoff Spots

When the Jewish Softball League schedule is resumed on August 17, interest will be focused on five playoff positions, rather than on first place. Miller's Delicatessen is assured of no worse than a tie for the top spot when its final two games have been completed, and one Miller's victory or one defeat for each of the three closest contenders will mean the flag.

The rest of the first division is a two-way scramble, with four clubs in the running for the advantageous second spot and two others fighting for the last playoff position. Actually, Fall River's Kavodians and Krasnoff's Creamery have mathematical chances for the playoffs, but a split in their remaining four games for Arden's Jewelry and Philip Dwares' Orioles would offset any good the other two might accomplish by winning their remaining games.

Fighting for second place are Mal's Comets, Richards Clothing, Jack's Old Timers and Cadillac Textile Olympics. The first three are all tied up, while the Olympics trail the trio by one game. Eash has four games to play. Mal's has much the better of the affair according to the schedule, for they play two second division clubs, Windsor Rhodes and Fall River. The Old Timers must face the Olympics and Richards Clothing; the latter, playing only .500 ball since leading off the season with six straight wins, also meet unpredictable Arden's Jewelry. The Olympics' other opponent will be another first division outfit, Dwares' Orioles.

It is a tossup between Arden's and the Orioles for the final playoff rating. Each meets weak Pinkerson's, which has yet to win a game, and one first division club. The Olympics, battling for a high finish, also are in the battle with the Orioles and Arden's. Sporting a two game lead over each, the Olympics could drop into the second division by losing their remaining games with the Orioles and Old Timers.

Deserving of mention is the Pinkerson's crew. Slapped around unmercifully by most of the teams they have faced, and realizing that they are hopelessly outclassed, the downtowners nevertheless have continued to show up in strength and put forth their best efforts. The fact that they do not belong in the league cannot hide their courage and determination.

Says Old Isaiah Scrolls Are Authentic

JERUSALEM—The "Book of Isaiah" scrolls found by roaming Beduins in earthenware jars in a cave in the Judean wilderness near the Dead Sea can be regarded as a safe proof for the authenticity of the traditional text of the Hebrew Bible, the Israeli archeologist Eliezer Sukenik of the Hebrew University says.

Asked about his latest investigations of these over 2,000-year-old leather scrolls discovered about two years ago, Prof Sukenik said that in the second part of the "Book of Isaiah" manuscript, not only the text but also the spelling is absolutely identical with the Masoretic version as brought down to us throughout history.

SYD COHEN:

Mixing The Seasons

It is time to get to work on our Jewish golf tournament if we are to have it at all this summer, and along those lines a suggestion has been relayed to me that might solve the matter very nicely.

Mention has been made previously that the Olympic Club is the only known organization in the community, outside of the country clubs themselves, that sponsors a golf tournament. For the past two years this tourney has been held as a closed affair, limited to a handful of interested club members. Now I understand that one member of the committee has suggested that the annual tourney be made a community affair, and for that I lit an extra sparkler on the Fourth of July.

A Co-Sponsored Tourney

I hope the man was not misquoted. I hope the powers of that club adopt the idea. I hope other organizations decide to do something along the same line. This column, in trying to promote a good sports program, is not trying to get glory and is delighted to see other individuals and groups get on the ball with worthwhile ideas. I want to see a golf tourney, but it doesn't matter a bit who sponsors it or what name is given to it.

As far as the golf tournament is concerned, if the Olympics will run a Jewish Open, the Herald will be happy to play it up and give it the news and publicity needed. If the club is interested, I invite them to see me. If not, here is a golden opportunity for some other organization to get some good publicity and a fine added activity—and, maybe, more members.

It's time to get started ... The planning will require at least a month, and we are already well into July.

Benny Friedman At Brandeis U.

You may have read the recent news item that Benny Friedman, former Michigan football star, has been appointed as director of athletics at Brandeis University, the nation's first Jewish-sponsored, non-sectarian institution of higher education. You may have been interested in the item only to the extent that a Jewish college has appointed a Jewish figure to build up its athletic program. To me it meant much more than that.

I consider it wholly incidental that Brandeis is adopting a progressive policy on sports and that it has picked one of the two greatest Jewish passing stars (Sid Luckman is the other) to lead the way. It goes without saying that if Friedman, who coached for years at the College of the City of New York, has consented to come to Waltham, Mass., he must have received assurance that every effort will be made to build up Brandeis as a sports power.

But this is all academic. My main interest in Benny Friedman stems from the evening when I saw and heard and talked with him several years ago; and since he has joined our New England family, I believe the incident, if it can be called that, is worthy of note.

Benny came to Providence nine or ten years ago as guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Men's Club of the Jewish Community Center. There is no longer a Men's Club at the Center, but there was then, and it has not been forgotten. Friedman was as unlike a star football player as you could possibly imagine. He appeared of average height and his hands seemed amazingly small (to me) for one of his passing renown. Yet, he made his impression on me and the rest of the large audience by his speaking ability and his message, far more than he did by the fact that here was a great Jewish athlete.

Football and Prayer

Benny spoke in a quiet, cultured, well-modulated voice. So quiet, in fact, that you had to keep exceptionally still to hear him. Yet, I don't believe anyone, except those who might have been hard of hearing, missed a word. What did he talk about? Football, to be sure, but not the way you would expect. He brought in his strict Jewish upbringing and the prayers that his mother had taught him, and the one prayer that she repeated every time he went out on the football field from his high school through his college and professional days.

The Michigan immortal asserted that these prayers must have had something to do with his being free of injuries throughout his career, and the way he told it, with the Yiddish phrases that he inserted, had his listeners convinced, too.

What is the point I am driving at? Well, during this reminiscing you may have noted the repeated references to his speaking ability. That is my thought. I would strongly recommend Benny Friedman as a guest speaker at any function. He is interesting, and different, and well worth listening to. I hope he is invited to Providence, and I hope his sports regime at Brandeis University is a happy and successful one, so that he will be in these parts for a long time.

Softball team of the week:
While no games were played this week, I think the Pinkerson's team deserves a boost. Mauled and battered week after week, this club kept its chin up and its colors flying—and wound up the spring campaign with two heroic, though unsuccessful, attempts to break into the win column.

Pool Resources For Better Buying

TEL AVIV — Israeli importers functioning in collateral fields have been requested by the Government to pool their efforts with a view to obtaining the lowest possible prices in world markets. This was disclosed here by Dr. Bernard Joseph, Minister of Supply and Rationing, in describing the progress of the nation's so-called austerity program.

Dr. Joseph, explaining that the importers would form into groups, not cartels, said that the Government would cooperate by making daily soundings of the various world markets by cable so that negotiations could be directed into proper channels without any waste of time. In this way, he said, all, including the ultimate consumer, would benefit.

In addition to lowering prices on more than 600 items during the last six weeks, Dr. Joseph declared, thousands of pounds have been saved by eliminating overlapping national and municipal functions that have affected the cost of living and, in one case, have done away with a costly middleman.

This middleman was actually a group of importers who charged the Government $360,000 annually for handling Government-bought wheat imports. This is now being handled by the Government itself at little cost.

Dr. Joseph said that the purpose of the austerity program was to lower the cost of living and create greater purchasing power for the Israeli pound, to offset recent inflation. He held that already substantial contributions had been made in this direction. The plan will carry on for two or three more years, "or until our national economy is well founded," he said.

Editor-in-Chief Jewish Telegraphic Agency

Zionist Trends: Jewish ship-owners who maintained shipping lines between Palestine and other countries in pre-war times are now studying the possibility of establishing a direct line between Haifa and New York. They are conducting quiet talks in New York with various groups and individuals with a view to securing financial aid for the acquisition of several ships. Israeli leaders arriving in the United States find that there is much confusion here about the housing problem in the Jewish state. Too much publicity is given here to projects for housing construction in Israel which are merely paper projects. They look good on paper, but they are still very far from realization. However, the publicity which each of these projects gets in America, tends to create the impression that the housing problem in Israel is being solved. This does more harm than good. The acute housing situation has not been eased a bit through the publicity given to plans which may or may not be carried out. Did you have a chance to read the collection of addresses by Dr. Abba Hillel Silver just published by the Zionist Organization of America? It is a volume which reflects very strongly the difference of views between Dr. Silver and Dr. Weizmann. And the notes by Harold P. Manson preceding each of Dr. Silver's speeches—as well as the foreword by Dr. Emanuel Neumann—reveal a good deal of what has happened behind the scenes in the Zionist movement during the last six years.

The Domestic Scene: The recently established committee to check multiple fund-raising campaigns, which is working under the direction of the Jewish Agency in New York, scored another victory this month. It prevented the Agudas Israel from launching a separate $2,000,000 drive in the U. S. to support religious activities in Israel. In opposing this proposed drive, the committee asserted that the Jewish Agency has already spent $1,500,000 in behalf of Agudah groups and allocated another $750,000 for the remainder of the budgetary year for these groups. Since these sums were obtained through the United Jewish Appeal and similar organizations in other countries, the committee considered that there was no excuse for the Agudah to start a separate campaign. And it was ready to come out with a public statement to this effect. After the leaders of the Agudah learned of the contents of the prepared statement, they realized that a separate campaign could do their work more harm than good. And they quickly withdrew their decision to launch a separate fund-raising drive. The Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds is now determined to be represented at the annual U. J. A. contract negotiations and to play a role in setting U. J. A. policies. Letters to this effect will probably be sent soon on behalf of the Board of the CJFWF to the United Jewish Appeal and to its main partners, the Joint Distribution Committee and the United Palestine Appeal. An interesting analysis prepared by the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds shows that over $8,300,000 was spent in 1948 on national fund-raising and promotion by individual national and overseas agencies. That is over and above the campaign and collection cost of local welfare funds, which actually solicit and collect the money.

Notes: The Jewish Publication Society has been distributing about 150,000 copies of its books each year during the past few years. About one-third went to the nearly 12,000 members of the Society. The American Jewish Committee has now started the publication of a news bulletin in Yiddish, in order to acquaint Yiddish-reading Jews in Latin American countries with the nature of its activities. It has also started the publication of a digest in English of the Israeli press, giving summaries of views expressed in editorials and special articles in the Hebrew newspapers. This is the first time in the history of the organization that attention is paid to Hebrew publications, not to speak of the fact that the Committee never before published anything in Yiddish. A daily digest in English of everything of importance that is published in the Yiddish press has been issued by the American Jewish Committee for many years. Its distribution is restricted to important members of the organization and to the staff. The Joint Distribution Committee also publishes a daily English digest.

Mrs. Goldberg's language is a heavily accented English, with occasional Yiddish words. An interesting point about the hazardous development of the Yiddish theatre is that whenever a production or personality on Second Avenue has achieved a wider appeal, Broadway or Hollywood has often stepped in. Several of Schwartz's productions received the approving attention of Broadway critics. Molly Picon recently appeared in a Broadway play. (She is scheduled to return to Second Avenue next season.) And two other widely-known players, Paul Muni and John Garfield, came from Second Avenue. The Yiddish theatre may not be dead, but it seems obvious that it cannot long survive, even in its present attenuated form on appeals to nostalgia and a vague duty alone. Perhaps, Skulnick's compromise is not the happiest one, but many think that he has taken a step that is helping survival.

False Panel Keeps Gold from Nazis

*VIENNA—A young Austrian Jew who was detained in a Nazi concentration camp soon after the Anschluss, but who was later released and proceeded to Australia, returned here this week to retrieve his family's small fortune in gold coins. He found them intact in the secret hiding place where he had cached them—a false panel beneath a window frame in his former home. The entire building was occupied by Nazi air force personnel during the war. Vienna police authorities who accompanied young Franz Klausner to his pre-Anschluss home, and who stood open-mouthed as he calmly extracted the gold coins from their vault, said they would permit him to keep the family treasure.

YES:

Anti-Semitism Growing in U. S.; Legislation Must Be Passed

By William Levner

The question "Can anti-Semitism be controlled by law?" applies, of course, only to the United States and Western bloc orientated countries such as Britain and France, since it is common knowledge that the Soviet Union and the new governments of Eastern Europe have already outlawed anti-Semitic manifestations along with other forms of racial chauvinism. There, remedial legislation is no longer a debatable issue. Its efficacy is proved in the Soviet Union by the disappearance of anti-Semitic behavior, while in Eastern Europe anti-Semitism is rapidly becoming past history together with feudalism and fascism.

Here in the U. S., effective measures against anti-Semitism have long been frustrated either by a policy of hush-hush or by far-fetched speculations over civil rights and freedom of speech. Indicative of the prevailing confusion is the debate published in THE DAILY COMPASS June 22, on the question, "Should the Group Libel Bill (H.R. 2270) be passed by Congress?" Mr. Will Maslow of the American Jewish Congress, proponent of group libel legislation, took the affirmative; while Mr. Herbert H. Levy of the American Civil Liberties Union (reflecting also the views of the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League) took the negative.

Under Mr. Levy's attack, the proposed law sponsored by the American Jewish Congress falls like a straw man. Under analysis, it develops that H.R. 2270 would actually prevent effective legal action against Jew baiters. Reluctantly conceived and without real faith in any legal remedies, H.R. 2270 hopelessly compromises the possibility of subjecting anti-Semites to legal restraints. Not one of its provisions even hints that it is a measure against anti-Semitism.

While it purports to defend all minority peoples, its effect would be quite the reverse. Under this law the courts would be bound to uphold any anti-Semitic libels provided the propagandist claimed he believed them true. Thus H.R. 2270 would present anti-Semites with a positive mandate to spread their libels with judicial sanction. Furthermore, other weaknesses in construction make this Bill a potential threat against the Negro people and labor unions.

While neatly demolishing the American Jewish Congress Bill, Mr. Levy fails to make a constructive proposal of his own, but piles confusion on confusion in promoting the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League viewpoints. Anti-Semitism is regarded as a form of speech unrelated to the inevitable substance of its consequences. He fails to recognize that anti-Semitic propaganda is, in itself, an overt act.

Would any reasonable person differentiate between the guilt of those who promoted Nazi race theories and those who put them into practice through war and genocide? In our modern world, anti-Semitism and anti-Negro propaganda are weapons of destruction as real and potent as the gas chambers of the Nazis and the rope of the lynch mobs.

The excesses of our native anti-Semites are thus far limited only by the resources at their command. This must not lull us into a false sense of security. Anti-Semitism is increasing by leaps and bounds in the U. S. Its fountainhead is reaction at home and imperialism abroad. International anti-Semitism is rapidly shifting its center of gravity from Germany to the U. S. American money and influence through the Marshall Plan, the Truman Doctrine, the Atlantic Pact and our overall foreign policy of coddling reaction as a bulwark against the alleged threat of Communism, serves to perpetuate and intensify anti-Semitism abroad. Our "de-Nazification" program in Germany is a case in point.

Recognizing that anti-Semitism is not only an overt pattern of behavior but also a "clear and present danger" we must conclude that legislation against anti-Semitism is long overdue. Such legislation is entirely within the framework of our Constitution which guarantees each of us the "right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." Lesser evils have been dealt with successfully by our Government through legislation and departmental regulations. The Post Office, for example, can and does prohibit the dissemination of lewd and lascivious matter through its facilities. Is anti-Semitic propaganda a less potent or less reprehensible evil?

The technical and legal problems involved in formulating a Bill to cope with anti-Semitism have already been solved in the Barrett Bill H.R. 3908 now in the House Judiciary Committee of the 81st Congress. This Bill supported by the American Jewish Labor Council, the Jewish Peoples Fraternal Order, the American Federation of Polish Jews and six international unions, is entirely consistent with the spirit and letter of our Constitution.

In easily understood and direct language, the Barrett Bill states: "Congress hereby finds that anti-Semitism and bigotry are potent weapons in the hands of the enemies of this country." It then proceeds to proscribe the dissemination of anti-Semitic and anti-Negro propaganda through the mails or through other forms of interstate and foreign commerce.

The campaign for the passage of the Barrett Bill points the way to an effective program against anti-Semitism. It clears the confusion which has befogged the atmosphere thus far. In precise language, painstakingly developed by constitutional authorities, the Barrett Bill places legislation against anti-Semitism on the order of the day. All men of good will, all opponents of fascism and anti-Semitism should give it their unstinting support. Anti-Semitism can and must be outlawed.

Question:

Can anti-Semitism be controlled by law?

The initial discussion of the Klein group libel bill (H. R. 2270) on this page is having repercussions, and, having given the one bill the benefits of this forum, we now find ourselves involved with another and very similar piece of proposed legislation—the Barrett bill (H. R. 3908), introduced by Rep. William A. Barrett (D-Pa.) on March 30. Before we are through, we may be analyzing the bills of Rep. Walter A. Lynch (D-N. Y.) and Rep. Harry J. Davenport (D-Pa.).

Not only are all these bills worthy attempts to curb organized anti-Semitism, but they also have a curious intellectual fascination, because emotion seems to have replaced clear reason in their contexts. The Barrett bill seems preferable to the Klein bill in that it is not so hedged that convictions could not be secured if it became law, but it has a serious defect (pointed out by Jacob Grumet in Section 563 which would make it a technical crime to even discuss a piece of hate literature for the purposes of preparing a denouncement of its perpetrators. This joker is contained in a phrase making it a crime "to read" such material "to others."

The Klein bill has already caused a split between the American Jewish Labor Council and the American Jewish Congress. In fact, AJLC and the Jewish Peoples Fraternal Order were expelled from the Congress for refusing to support the Klein bill. The Barrett bill is their answer.

William Levner, who defends the Barrett bill is director of organization for AJLC and secretary of the Joint Committee to Combat Anti-Semitism. Formerly a farm laborer, teacher, and union organizer, he spent four years in the U. S. Army. He is also immigration consultant for the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society.

Jacob Grumet, 47, is a graduate of CCNY and Columbia Law School, who is now in private practice as an attorney in New York and before the U. S. Supreme Court. He is chairman of the civil rights committee of the Anti-Defamation League. Formerly one of Governor Dewey's bright young men when the latter was named special rackets prosecutor in 1935, from 1942 to 1948, Grumet was Assistant District Attorney in charge of homicide in N. Y. County and prosecuted and helped to convict the "Mad Dog" Esposito brothers, Madeline Webb, Wayne Lonergan and other notorious killers.

—Clip Boutell

The problem of anti-Semitism continues to disturb many of our leading educators. The Herald here reprints a discussion on this subject as it appeared recently in the New York Compass.

NO:

Barrett Bill Spells Censorship, Would Violate Bill of Rights

By Jacob Grumet

Anti-Semitism is not just the dissemination of materials containing false or distorted statements likely to engender hatred of Jews. The term also includes acts of discrimination against individuals provoked by anti-Semitic prejudice.

There are many ways in which anti-Semitic or other racial or religious, discriminatory manifestations can be and are being controlled by law. There are numerous state laws banning acts of discrimination based on race or creed by places of public accommodations (hotels, swimming pools, theatres, restaurants, etc.). There are state laws barring such discrimination in employment, and in two states there are laws barring such discrimination in education. It is, therefore, well settled that here in the U. S. we can, by law, bar overt manifestations of an anti-minority prejudice where such acts result directly in the denial of equality of opportunity to members of minority groups in the essential aspects of community life such as employment, housing, education, and access to places of public accommodation. In fact, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith is proud of the fact that it has always sought to expand and strengthen legal action in these directions.

But that is not the essential question at issue here. The question here arises out of a consideration of H.R. 3908. This bill would make it a crime to send or receive through the mails or through any channel of interstate commerce any document which exposes Jews or Negroes as a nation, people, or any substantial portion of them to hatred, contempt, ridicule, or obloquy. Hence, the issue is the constitutionality, the feasibility, and desirability of this specific legislation.

The Barrett Bill has five sections. The first section recites a Congressional finding that anti-Semitism and bigotry are weapons of the enemies of this country; declares it to be the policy of Congress to prevent the spread of anti-Semitic and anti-Negro propaganda. The second section makes it unlawful to bring into the United States or circulate in interstate commerce or through the mails any publication exposing Jews or Negroes as a people or any substantial portion of them to hatred, contempt, ridicule, or obloquy. The third section makes it a crime for any person to receive any such publication through the mails or interstate commerce with intent to distribute it or read it to others. The fourth section makes a violation of the act a crime punishable by up to five years imprisonment and $5000 fine. The fifth and last section is a technical legal provision and is not pertinent to this discussion.

This bill, which is almost identical with bills introduced by other Congressmen in earlier Congresses, has fatal constitutional defects. Our Constitution, recognizing the importance in a democracy of protecting legitimate discussions of public questions so that an enlightened electorate may determine intelligently all questions of public policy, specifically included provisions intended to safeguard freedom of discussion. Any statute imposing punishment for the circulation of statements that tend to expose any racial or religious group to public hatred or contempt obviously constitutes a threat to legitimate discussion of public questions. Any bona fide discussions regarding the activities or characteristics of racial or religious groups—which no defender of democracy would desire to curb—may thus be subject to censorship.

The apparent simplicity of the phrase, "Let's pass a law against it" has a dangerous appeal. But we should beware of being entrapped by its appeal. We must be careful not to endanger all our democratic rights while seeking the apparent benefits which may seem to derive from a law directed against some minor evil. That "noble experiment," prohibition, should have taught us our lesson.

A careful reading of the Barrett Bill discloses that it contains no protection for truthful criticism of Jews or Negroes. Thus, it would make it a crime to mail a truthful critical analysis of a Jewish or Negro group. Clearly, the Supreme Court would declare unconstitutional any law which makes the utterance of truthful statements a crime. Further reading of the bill discloses that it proposes to punish every distribution of what calls anti-Semitic or anti-Negro propaganda even if such a distribution is for scientific, academic, or investigative purposes. Under this bill, if one member of an organization fighting anti-Semitic or anti-Negro prejudice hands an anti-Semitic publication to another member for the second to read and analyze, he is violating the law. Similarly, if he delivers a copy of Gerald L. K. Smith's publication, "The Cross and the Flag" to a librarian for retention for research purposes, he is nevertheless violating the proposed law. Such a provision is clearly improper and would be struck down by any court. Furthermore, the bill nowhere clearly defines what is "anti-Semitic" or "anti-Negro" propaganda.

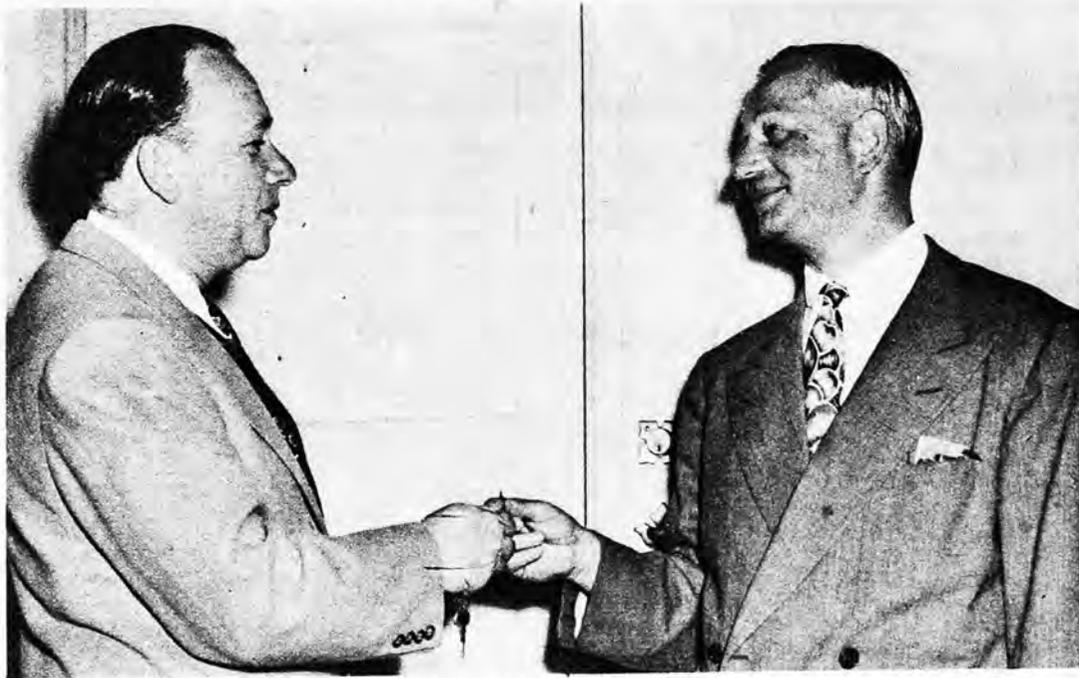

Another major defect of the bill is that it is special legislation in behalf of special groups. Legislation giving special privileges to any one group in preference to another violates the basic concepts of our democratic system. In order to escape being struck down on this ground, the statute would have to be redrawn so as to cover attacks not just on Jews or Negroes, but on any racial or religious group.

Hence, it can be seen that, while the law can and should be used to combat discrimination based on anti-Semitic prejudice in employment, education, etc., it cannot be invoked to prevent circulation of statements which may have an anti-Semitic effect unless we are willing to violate long-standing constitutional safeguards.

was headed by Hyman Cotton; E. Harold Dick was in charge of decorations and Harold Kahn headed the house committee.

The new Ledgemont features an 18-hole golf course that was completed in 1947, a swimming pool measuring 30 x 60 feet and a modern clubhouse combining the finest features and fixtures with the comfort and beauty that make it one of the finest of its kind.

The U-shaped, two story building is of modified colonial design, and contains on the ground floor a grill room, men's and women's locker rooms, pro shop, storage and mechanical facilities.

Upstairs are the cocktail lounge, dining room, meeting rooms and overnight guest rooms. The kitchen is acclaimed as the most modern in New England and the large porches are enclosed with glass venetian blinds. The building was designed by the firm of Howe, Prout and Ekman.

Urge Extensions for Shanghai Refugees

The World Jewish Congress this week urged special action to permit a group of between 200 to 300 Jewish refugees from Shanghai, now in the United States on transit visas, to remain in this country.

The letter pointed out that these persons would be eligible for admission as immigrants under Section 3B (2) of H. R. 4567 passed by the House of Representatives, but which, unfortunately, has not yet been enacted into law. It was asked that their stay be extended by a general administrative ruling until the bill becomes law.
