YAD One-Day Solicitation Set For Sunday

Final plans are now being made for the YAD one day solicitation to be held this coming Sunday. A crew of more than two hundred workers have signed up to work that day.

The day is to start at the Narragansett Hotel, where breakfast is to be served. The workers will be addressed by State Senator Frank Licht. Harold Ratush, chairman of the General Division, YAD, will show the workers how to fill out the cards. Transportation has been arranged.

All workers on this one day solicitation as well as those that have worked on the Initial Gifts Division will be given tickets to the 7-30 at 7-30 Dance to be held that night. Each ticket will admit a couple or one of a sex to the dance. Each worker will carry tickets to the dance with him and every contributor of $7.30 or over will be given a ticket to the dance. All previous donors have already had tickets sent to them.

The dance will be held at the Sheraton Biltmore Hotel Ballroom with George Jaffe and his orchestra providing the music. Bill Morton of the Sheraton staff has promised the appearance of the headline act at the Biltmore, if they stay in town over the weekend, there being no show in the Garden Room Sunday night.

Menuhin Explains Playing in Germany

BERLIN — Yehudi Menuhin, noted Jewish violinist, took time out during one of his concerts here, to explain why he performed before an all-German audience.

Mr. Menuhin, who gave his tenth concert in Germany since the end of World War II, pointed out that he began by playing for concentration camp survivors and he continued to return to play for everyone.

"Irrespective of creed," he stated in a prepared statement made during the intermission of his concert, he shared with Germans the music of the German masters. The violinist then proceeded to read a letter from a former Hitler Youth Leader who declared that, after hearing Mr. Menuhin perform, he had changed his mind about Nazi anti-Semitic race theories. The violinist said that as long at the Germans invite him to play and show a friendly attitude toward his people, he will return to Germany. However, should this friendly attitude stop, he said, he will discontinue performing in Germany.

Truman Firm on Israel, Daniels Writes

NEW YORK—A new book on President Truman considered a "semi-authorized biography" throws new light on the U. S. Government's shifts in Palestine policy prior to the establishment of Israel.

The book, "The Man of Independence," by Jonathan Daniels, puts the onus for the Palestine policy shifts on subordinate officials in the State Department.

The volume notes, for example, that suspension of the U. N. partition plan was proposed on March 19, 1948, when the then Secretary of State George C. Marshall, was in California and Under-Secretary Robert A. Lovett was in Florida.

Mr. Daniels says that President Truman was steadfast in his resolve to see Israel established and implies that the President was "imposed upon" by those who were "manipulating" policy in the State Department.

The author says that Dr. Chaim Weizmann—who was in Washington during this period—had full faith in Mr. Truman but believed that the President "did not know on Thursday what was going to happen on Friday."

Converts to Judaism Dedicate Altar

WEST OLIVE, MICH.—Several hundred men, women and children from various parts of Michigan and neighboring states—all of them former Christians who have adopted Judaism — congregated here last week on the estate of Lewis A. Goodin and in ceremonies reminiscent of Bible days dedicated the first Biblical altar constructed since the destruction of the Temple in Jerusalem.

Jewish families from Grand Rapids, Muskegon and Grand Haven—including Rabbi M. Ostrowsky, of Muskegon—also participated in the ceremonies, which marked the entry of 50 new converts to Judaism into the Jewish faith. An announcement by the United Israel World Union, sponsor of the event, said the ceremonies marked the "return to the mother faith of Israel of American Christians who have come to recognize themselves as the true lineal descendants of the ten lost tribes of Israel and now seek union with the Jewish people under the Mosaic banner."

He told correspondents that he is eager to conduct the works of Wagner and Strauss, whose compositions have until now not been played in Israel.

Trace Poison Pen Letters to 21-year-old

NEW YORK — A 21-year old youth was apprehended this week as the signer of anonymous threatening notes to the Jewish residents of Rockville Center, L. I.

The arrest concluded a two year search for the writer of the anti-Semitic letters. The youth, Joseph E. Britt, was discovered following a police check on the handwriting of the letters against files of the signatures of high school students in the community. Britt was arraigned in a district court at nearby Mineola, L. I.

Top Israeli Finance Official to Visit U. S.

To Report on Economic Position

NEW YORK—Eliezer Kaplan, Minister of Finance in the Government of Israel, will make a special trip to the United States to report on his country's economic position to the National Planning Conference for Israel and Jewish Reconstruction, which will be held at the Statler Hotel in Washington, D. C., from October 27-29, it was announced this week by Dr. Nahum Goldmann, chairman of the Arrangements Committee of the National Planning Conference.

The projected visit to this country of Israel's top fiscal officer was characterized by Dr. Goldmann, chairman of the American Section of the Jewish Agency, as "an indication of the critical importance to the Jewish State" of the three-day Washington conference which will be attended by more than 1,000 outstanding American Jewish leaders representing all elements in the Jewish community.

The National Planning Conference has been convened by the 50-man American delegation to the Jerusalem conference, held in the King David Hotel from September 3-6, at which Prime Minister David Ben Gurion of Israel disclosed the extent of the economic problems facing the Jewish State as a result of the mass transfer to Israel of homeless Jews from Europe, North Africa and the Moslem countries.

GJC Campaign Reaches $511,680

As it passed the half million dollar mark in cash and pledges, the 1950 fund-raising campaign of the General Jewish Committee of Providence looked forward this month to a jam-packed program of activities in every one of its many divisions.

The audited total stood at $511,680.50 as this issue of the Herald went to press, and campaign officials were expressing pleasure at the significant percentage of increases in virtually all brackets.

These increases were reflected in comparisons with last year's figures at the same stage of the drive. While the Men's Division was 14.9% below the 1949 total, the Women's Division was racing along with a 8% increase and the Young Adult's Division had piled up a 9.2% increase to date.

Joseph W. Ress, campaign chairman, stated this week he was "most gratified at the drive's status thus far, but our campaign will reach a successful conclusion only if all cards are covered and increases in the lower brackets follow the same heartwarming pattern demonstrated in the middle and higher brackets."

Vowels in Hebrew Print Now Possible

HAIFA—A system adapting Hebrew language linotype machines for the setting of vowel signs, thus simplifying the reading of Hebrew by those learning the language, has been perfected by two printers here, it was disclosed this week.

Although it has a complicated vowel system, Hebrew is printed without vowels. The new method will permit newspapers and publications using mechanical typesetters to include the vowel signs, thus facilitating the study and reading of Hebrew by new immigrants.

ROOMS for TODAY'S LIVING

CONTEMPORARY, or what many call modern, styling, can be in excellent taste and perfectly at home in any area of the country. Designed by T. H. Rabsjohn-Gibbings, these furnishings were styled especially with the north-central and New England states, in mind. Many of the forms adapted and conceived by the designer, had their beginnings in the homes of early days. But they have been simplified, and their proportions scaled to our present mode of living, so that they are comfortable, very attractive, and again, easy to maintain and keep clean. These Widdicomb pieces are available in open stock.

Whether you're thinking of furniture for your home now—or "some day"—come in and let us show you our charming new displays—both modern and traditional. Be sure to ask for your complimentary copy of Modern's magazine for homemakers, The Stylist, illustrating home furnishings for you who love the best. Modern is open Mondays all day, Friday evenings until 9 P. M. and Wednesdays until noon.

"The continued welfare of the family is a 'must' in good government," says

FRANK LICHT

(First Senatorial District of Providence)

Democratic Candidate for Re-election

for STATE SENATOR

Himself the father of two young children, Senator Licht knows that what benefits the family unit is legislation that benefits all members of society—regardless of politics, race, color or creed. That is why:

- He fought and defeated a bill which would have endangered your health by lowering the standards for admitting doctors to medical practice!
- He introduced the resolution creating a 10-member commission to study long-range programs to create steadier employment for Rhode Island breadwinners!
- He introduced the bill requiring out-of-state husbands to support their wives and children deserted in Rhode Island!
- He gave of his time and his talents to serve as an advisor to the Model Legislature, at which school children take over the General Assembly for a day!

If you live in the First, Second or Third Wards of Providence, you can vote for Frank Licht and his Democratic colleagues by pulling down the large lever at the top of the first and second columns on the voting machines!

The State of the Press

The current celebration of National Newspaper Week is designed to remind Americans of the vital role that a free press plays in the life of a democracy.

By this time it should be obvious to all—with the exception of those apologists who attempt to justify the absence of an unshackled press in communist lands—that the free flow of information is on the one hand indispensable to the well-being and future of democratic countries, while on the other, the totalitarian regards a free press as among the greatest threats to his existence, and, of course, can not and does not tolerate its being.

What is the state of the press in this country? Numerous surveys have been made of American newspapers, studies to determine how great an influence advertising revenue plays in dictating policy and to what extent the individual owner uses his newspaper as a vehicle for advancing his own particular ends. These studies serve a very useful and specific purpose, since, in effect, their examinations are one way of keeping vigil over the readers' right not only to expect truthful reporting but to encounter the publisher's opinion where it belongs: on the editorial page exclusively.

By and large, praised be, our newspapers conscientiously make a clean distinction between their news columns and editorial pages, reserving their opinions for the latter while they report the news accurately as possible, letting the chips fall where they may. For every Chicago Tribune, whose publisher's weird prejudices and insular attitudes too often find expression in that paper's news columns, there are dozens which scrupulously play the game in the best tradition of American journalism by abjuring the slanted story.

Within the field of English-Jewish journalism we find a number of special problems, some of which are shared by all weekly newspapers. Judging from the publications which arrive in this newspaper's office, we find many suffering from what appear to be endemic difficulties: a small staff, inadequate news services, awkward but exigent deadlines, the pressure of special interests represented by national Jewish organizations and/or special community factors.

A goodly number of these weeklies obviously make an extraordinary effort to give their readers the best possible service, while, let it be said, others aren't worth the paper they are printed on. In this last category we find a few shady little journals whose editorial appeal too often verges on both the hysterical and libelous.

Here also it should be noted that there exists the American Association of English-Jewish newspapers, to which The Jewish Herald belongs, one of whose primary purposes is to raise the level of journalism and police our own backyard.

In general, the instances of venality in either the daily or weekly newspapers are comparatively infrequent. Those few which pander to questionable interests and purposes are numerically and qualitatively in the minority; most of them, to this country's good fortune, realize the responsibilities they bear not only to their readers but to the cause of freedom everywhere in the world, a cause which depends utterly on the ability of men to learn and know the truth.

Care of children has long been a major activity of the Philadelphia Jewish community—dating back more than 95 years ago when it established the Association for Jewish Children. Since 1855, its history has been a mirror of changing trends in child welfare practices, moving from mass care of children in institutions to emphasis on other forms of care.

Today, the modern practice is to keep the child in his own home unless there is some serious condition that makes it impossible for him to stay. In that case, there are two alternatives: (1) To place the child with a foster family possessing the most home-like and nearly normal environment possible, until the youngster can be returned to its own home. (2) To provide special facilities for children who need experience in group living.

To overcome a gap in this second category of service, the Philadelphia Association for Jewish Children has started the construction of a two-story cottage style building which will house 18 boys and girls in need of group living. The cottage has been so designed as to do away with "institutional atmosphere" and to make the children feel as though they are living in their own homes.

Accordingly, there will be single rooms for older children or those who need privacy, while others will be limited to three children. Each room will have study space; there will be no mass "study hall." The colors and decorative schemes of the rooms will vary; windows will have bright curtains and Venetian blinds. There will be a rumpus room on the ground level, with provision for indoor recreation, and there will also be an individual locker there for each child. The outdoor play area will have tennis courts and other facilities, and a covered space for bad weather.

One novelty of the cottage is the provision for children to enter the kitchen to help if they wish, or to fix snacks.

The Association for Jewish Children, in addition to serving

"One Man's Opinion"

By BERNARD SEGAL

Up In Meshanticut Park

You take the bus marked Oaklawn and you drive along Cranston Street; you cross the city limits into Cranston, and then up Haven Avenue, where on the crest of a hill stands the church of St. Mary. You have entered Knightsville.

The bus turns left and into the business bloc of the village. Familiar shops and stores line both sides of the street, like those of every main street in thousands of American towns and villages. The furniture store featuring television sets, the competing super markets, the five and dime stores, a barber shop or two, florists, beauty shops, bakeries, and at the end of the block, the corner druggist.

Familiar American institutions.

But on the side streets and on the unpaved lanes radiating from the main thoroughfare the little bungalows are set in the midst of vegetable gardens, and the vines of grapes climb on the poles and cover the rustic arbors. This too, is a familiar sight in Italian neighborhoods all over the land.

The bus stops for the traffic lights at the combined Town hall, police and fire stations, and rolls on toward a wide rotary and into a quiet, tree-shaded avenue, with the unmistakeable suburban flavor. Neat lawns in front of white cottages, flowers along the walls and beside the cement walks, and a small unobtrusive church, standing silently in the midst of undisturbed silence.

It is Meshanticut Park, and not a store, not a shop, not an office dares to intrude upon the residential mood of the neighborhood.

Knightsville and Meshanticut Park, only ten minutes ride from Providence, and within a stone's throw from one another, living amicably side by side.

This little world was recently disturbed by a note of distrust that will leave a scar in the minds of the inhabitants, and may take years to heal.

The incident was reported in the daily press.

The Meshanticut Park public school, it seems, is overcrowded, while the school in Knightsville has room to spare. The school department of Cranston, therefore, decided to transfer the Kindergarten and the pre-primary grades of the Meshanticut school to Knightsville.

The decision was like to a stone thrown into the middle of a quiet pool. The telephones in Meshanticut were extremely busy. Neighbor calling neighbor.

"Have you heard? Of all things! The nerve of that school board!"

What was it that aroused the dwellers of Meshanticut out of their suburban placidity? The transfer involved no hardship on the youngsters, since a school bus was to pick them up at the door steps of their homes. No objection to the school building at Knightsville, since the school authorities were satisfied with the facilities. Certainly no quarrel should be picked with the program of studies, since the school maintains a good standing in the Cranston school system and is under the supervision of the school department.

The one great fault of the Knightsville school in the eyes of Meshanticut—an unpardonable fault—is the fact that there are "too many Italian kids there".

So they protested. They objected. They threatened. And they prevailed upon the school department to reverse its decision. The hall of the Meshanticut Volunteer Firemen will be remodeled to house the Kindergarten. Anything but Knightsville!

Meshanticut is saved! The two bloods will be kept apart. The fence will be mended. Keep the two worlds apart. Sleep peacefully, Meshanticut. No Italian kids will disturb your slumber.

Good material for comic opera, were it not for the sinister specter lurking in the background. In itself the incident is puny, but as a symptom of a disease it is disturbing.

Keep them apart . . . Build the fences higher . . . Separate Meshanticut from Knightsville . . . White from colored, Jew from gentile, East from West, dwellers of the heights from the dwellers of the lowlands . . . Always remember the boundary . . . Do not dare to remove the barriers . . . Put people into categories. Favored and tolerated . . . Upper and lower . . . Superior and inferior . . . Native and foreign . . . Meshanticut and Knightsville.

They are at work everywhere, the guardians of the high fences, the builders of the barriers, the champions of Keep them Apart. There is one in every hamlet, in every village, in every ward. It is a mental state, and it knows no limits. It works in Meshanticut and in a world-wide scale.

What did Knightsville do about it? What are all the knightsvilles to do in such circumstances?

The first thing that Knightsville did, and it seems to hold a lesson for all of us, was to hit back. No hushing up. No taking it on the chin.

Said one mother of "Italian kids," who is a member of the school committee:

"My kind are just as good as they are."

Said the PTA of the Knightsville school:

"Meshanticut Park people showing ill feelings towards us should be ashamed of themselves. No one is at fault because of his nationality."

Some were ashamed. They hastened to declare that it is not the attitude of the entire community. In letters to the press they said that they were very much upset by the incident, and asked that the whole community be not condemned for the opinion of a few bigoted parents.

That is good. The sinister specter must be dragged out in bright daylight for the whole world to see its ugly visage. No hush-hush. No hiding.

The Knightsville - Meshanticut school incident is puny in itself, but it is a reflection of a diseased state of mind that prevails. The way Knightsville reacted to the incident may well hold a lesson for us and for all who are in danger of being hurt by this state of mind.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS—A recent survey completed by the Gary Jewish Welfare Federation recommended: (1) A community-wide program of recreational and cultural activities to be sponsored by the Federation. (2) The Federation to undertake as its responsibilities: community planning, fund raising, budgeting, community relations, promotion of Jewish education and other local services. The initial step in implementing the report was taken by the Federation when it decided to engage, for the first time, a professional executive director.

. . . An Inter-Agency Council consisting of Hospitals, Community Center, Family Agency and Home for the Aged and Chronically Ill, has been formed by the Paterson Jewish Community Council. The purpose of the Inter-Agency Council will be to provide a medium through which the efforts of the agencies can be more effectively coordinated and to promote greater community planning in the health and welfare field. At the present time, the membership of the Council is made up of President, Vice-Presidents and Executive from each of the different agencies.

. . . The memory of Fred M. Butzel, late community leader, will be perpetuated by the Detroit Jewish Welfare Federation. An office building to house the Federation and its member agencies will be acquired shortly and named after Mr. Butzel. In addition, a Fred M. Butzel Memorial Award for outstanding civic service will be established.

SYD COHEN:

A Day In the Bleachers

The train came roaring out of the subway and into the elevated station directly beyond the confines of Yankee Stadium, and a few hundred fans got off and hurried down to the street. It was exactly 7:07 A.M. at that moment, and it was 7:08 when this fan joined the line outside the bleacher entrance. At that time there were about 1500 persons ahead of me.

All my life I had read about these World Series bleacher lines, where the fans begin to assemble long hours and even days before game time. I had heard about the spirit of the bleacher fans and the fun and excitement involved, and it was tops among my list of "must" experiences.

I have seldom enjoyed a day more than this one.

You've heard many times that the real fans are in the bleachers. Well, that is true. The fun, the excitement and the intimacy that pervade the bleacher area are just not to be found in the box and reserved seats. The ball game is one thing, but the game from the bleachers is entirely another.

Here you meet all kinds of people—but I do mean all kinds—every conceivable nationality and color, and all ages—from a little three year old kid who was slightly bewildered by it all, to a Phillie fan of maybe 70 who looked like Connie Mack's kid brother and was affectionately named the Whiz Kid by the fans in his area.

Here you have the corny signs—"Let's Go Yanks!" and "Fightin' Phillies" and many others—and here you get the cowbells and raucous whistles and bugles and a hundred and one assorted noises. Phillie fans tell the Yankee fans what they think of the American League champs, and the New York rooters lay down an explosive counter barrage about the minor leagues and the hick town of Philadelphia.

Two negroes perform a soft shoe shuffle in the aisles, and one old codger with a gaily ornamented hat, containing every conceivable kind of decoration since the Civil War, demonstrates how to smoke a cigarette through his nostrils. The alternate cheers and boos when some fan does something to get attention—all this adds to the flavor of the occasion and makes the hours fly by.

But let's go back outside the Stadium walls and see conditions as they exist before the gates are opened. The first sight that greets you as you reach the street level is a human line more than a hundred yards long. At its head are fans in sleeping bags, blankets, wooden boxes and crates, makeshift chairs and the like. They are armed with portable radios, box

Song, Dance Artists to Appear Here Next Week

BILL JOHNSON AND SONYA

NACHUM AND DINA

Center Presents First Program in Cultural Series October 22

The adult cultural program at the Jewish Community Center gets underway in outstanding fashion on Sunday evening, October 22 with the presentation of Bill Johnson and Sonya in a festival of folk songs of many lands, and Nachum and Dina, creative and interpretive dancers.

Bill Johnson, a bass baritone, will be making a return visit to Providence. He appeared before a highly enthusiastic audience at the Center a few years ago. Johnson is a master of folk songs interpreted in their original languages. He sings delightfully in Yiddish and Hebrew, Russian and Hungarian, while also including in his repertoire negro spirituals and other songs. His program is unusually different and has been featured in recent years throughout the East.

Sonya Austin, his accompanist, is an accomplished pianist and accordionist whose talents add much to the artistry of the performance. Too much praise cannot be given this artistic couple.

Nachum and Dina, appearing on the same program, are creative dance artists who depict the struggles, sorrows, hopes and accomplishments of the Jewish people in Palestine. Their dance is the dance of a growing nation based on centuries of tradition, and reaches its climax in the rebuilding of Israel.

Nachum Yehudin, 19, is a veteran of the dance stage. He has appeared at Carnegie Hall, Madison Square Garden and Boston's Symphony Hall and is a director of his own dance groups.

Dina Yisraeli is just 18. A native of Boston, she has devoted her talents to the challenging purpose of creative Jewish expression. She dances with charm and convincing earnestness.

An Open Invitation To Center Members

The Women's Association Invites you to attend its annual dance to be held at the Narragansett Hotel on Saturday, October 28 at 7 P. M.

This dance will start the 25th Anniversary celebration of the founding of the present Jewish Community Center.

Plan Outdoor, Indoor Athletic Programs

The Athletic Committee, under the chairmanship of Harold Sydney, has plans for the coming season that will interest all age groups. The outdoor program that proved so popular and successful for boys last season will be continued. But now "Operation Baseball" gives way to "Operation Touch Football" in South Providence, the North End and East Side. Later the youngsters will be brought indoors to continue the extensive intramural program which will include basketball, volleyball, ping pong, etc.

Adults will again be able to get in shape in Sunday morning activities under the leadership of Abe Lobel and an able corps of assistants provided by the J.C.C.

TEEN AGE CHARM SCHOOL

A Charm School for teen-age girls will be conducted at the Center one hour a week for ten weeks under the direction of experts in makeup, fashions and modelling.

Registration for Adult Programs

Many requests have been received for adult programs at the Center, with the requests covering the following activities:

Sewing, Jewish cooking, Beginners classes in Ceramics, Metal Craft, Duplicate Bridge, Square Dancing, Ballroom Dancing, Leadership training in Parliamentary Procedure, Public speaking, and Holiday Workshops.

lunches, thermos jugs, books, pillows. Don't forget—arriving at 7 o'clock makes you a lazy loafer—these people have been here all night or at least since before dawn.

Newspaper photographers appear at frequent intervals to take pictures (which reminds me—I must buy a Journal-American to see if I made any of them); card games were in progress to help while away the time; and up and down the line marched the hawkers, selling sundry items.

There were late edition newspapers, and special score cards, and buttons and caps and ornaments. One fellow advertised binoculars for 50 cents which he swore would cost a dollar on the inside—and, would you believe it, he was right. One restauranteer dispensed hot coffee and doughnuts, which he insisted on calling "crum-buns."

And a character went around selling magazines. Here was a real representative of the hobo cult. He needed a shave, wore baggy, torn jacket and trousers, spoke in a gravel-hoarse voice and looked as if he had just arrived via private berth on the rods beneath a freight car. What was he selling? The Hobo News!

At 8:50 the gates were opened and the lines moved quickly through several entrances. We early birds got choice seats—in the section formerly known as Ruthville, the first section of bleachers, just beyond the Yankee bullpen runway. The view is unsurpassed and I was surprised to find that you could see a game so well from that distance. These bleacher fans are no dopes.

There, too, we got a pre-game show. Al Schacht, all dolled up in top hat and tails—under which he had on baseball uniform and spiked shoes—marched out to the center field flagpole where a band was blaring out military marches and other appropriate music from 10 till 12 (they were followed by Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians). Al took the baton, led the band in formation to our section and entertained us for some 15 minutes. Then he led the band over to center field and entertained the fans there. Shortly before game time he did a stint for the higher-paying customers, too.

An old man wearing a baseball uniform which advertised him as "Slow Motion Shorty" got up in the aisle and went through a routine whereby he pretends to pitch to a batter who socks a home run off his delivery—all this in slow motion. Then he passed his hat and took up a collection.

In the right field grandstand, just across the bullpen runway from the bleachers, one of the Stadium vendors held up a "Fightin Phillies" pennant that he would be selling when the reserved seat clientele arrived. He was promptly pelted with an apple. There followed a torrent of oranges, pears, plums, peaches and apples until the pennant peddler wisely retreated to a more strategic position.

A few minutes later, unobserved, he was back with reinforcements recruited from among the other vendors—and they pelted us with the same fruit which had been heaved into their section. The war was fought to no decision.

Mostly, though, the bleacherites talked baseball—and for a real intelligent analysis of the game and its personalities you can't beat them. When the teams appeared on the field for pre-game practice at 11:30 it was hard to realize that you had been there for four and a half hours. When the game started at 1 o'clock you were surprised to find yourself refreshed, raring to go and completely untired—save for the sitting portion of your anatomy.

It was a great experience, and I would have done it again had there been a game the following day. But I don't recommend it unless you have lots of patience and stamina, a hearty sense of humor, an interest in the antics of your fellow human beings when they let their hair down, a real love of baseball—and can't get a reserved seat.

Emanuel Speaker

BENNETT CERF

"A supersalesman is one who can sell a man with a Phi Beta Kappa key a double-breasted suit" quips Bennett Cerf who found himself a lifetime member of Phi Beta Kappa when he graduated from Columbia University in 1920. Mr. Cerf, a humorist who has given readers of his five collections of jokes, humorous stories and anecdotes many hours of hilarious reading time, will speak at the opening meeting of the Temple Emanuel Men's Club, Thursday evening, October 19 in the Temple.

But Mr. Cerf will offer his audience some serious thoughts from the lecture platform. As founder and president of Random House publishing company, Bennett Cerf is a busy man who in reality has little time on his hands for just sitting around and thinking up funny stories. "I am a book publisher by choice;" he says, "I would rather be remembered as the publisher of Eugene O'Neill, Sinclair Lewis, William Faulkner, and James Joyce's ULYSSES than a facile raconteur or anthologist of other people's bon mots."

Mrs. Charles Potter will be chairman of the afternoon.
