GJC Leaders Stress Need for Cash Now

In response to the plea of the United Jewish Appeal for $50,000,000 in cash before December 31, the special finance committee—recently appointed by the General Jewish Committee's Board of Directors—has swung into action in an effort to collect a substantial amount of cash for immediate forwarding to the UJA.

"The cash we give now may well mean the difference between a life in Israel and a life of misery," said Alvin A. Sopkin, GJC president, this week.

He pointed out that the UJA must get $50,000,000 in cash from America's Jewish communities—before the end of 1950—in order to:

- 1) Meet the critical immigration emergencies confronting a total of 75,000 Jews in Eastern Europe and the Moslem lands, of whom 35,000 must be rescued immediately from Iraq, Iran and Roumania.

- 2) Provide for the reception, care and housing of the 20,000 immigrants who each month pour into the Jewish state. More than 35,000 are now in temporary camps facing the severe hardships of winter.

- 3) Speed relief and rehabilitation aid to distressed Jews in Moslem lands. Needs are mounting daily in Libya, Tripolitania and Morocco.

- 4) Furnish expanded rehabilitation and resettlement assistance for Jewish displaced persons now

New York (AJP)—An agreement to speed the United Jewish Appeal on its way for 1951 has been reached, the American Jewish Press learned officially this week. The agreement, which assures a 1951 UJA drive, was expected to further dampen any hopes of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds for favorable approval of two much-attacked proposals scheduled for the agenda at this afternoon's (Friday, Dec. 1) opening Council conference.

Agreement for the 1951 UJA was reached between representatives of the United Palestine Appeal and the Joint Distribution Committee. Representatives of the United Service for New Americans also participated in the negotiations, AJP learned.

Beth-El Members to Discuss Ratification of Building Plans

Final approval of the building project for the proposed new Temple Beth-El will be sought, and the model of the buildings unveiled, at the annual meeting of the Temple, on Sunday, December 10 in the ballroom of the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel. Annual reports, election of officers, and other items "appropriate to the annual meeting" will be included on the business agenda. The choral group, directed by Benjamin Premack, will entertain.

A positive vote by the congregation on the matter of approving the building project is the last major step required before the actual building of the new Temple Beth-El is begun next spring. A resolution to complete plans and secure bids for the new buildings was passed unanimously at the last meeting of the Board of Trustees.

Lecture Audience Demonstrates Need For New Center

The need for a modern, centrally-located Jewish Community Center was pointed out this week by Mrs. Arthur Newman, president of the J. C. C. Women's Association, following last Sunday's lecture by Pierre Van Paassen, which attracted 500 persons to Churchill House.

Asserting that the large audience was proof of the popularity of the Center program, Mrs. Newman remarked that "The present Center couldn't hold 500 people even if that many wanted to go there."

"Here is the kind of example we have been waiting for," Mrs. Newman said, "to provide the answer of whether the Providence Jewish community needs and would support a centrally-located Center. We have presented in the past outstanding cultural programs such as that of last Sunday. When they were held in the antiquated Center on Benefit Street, the audiences were small. Take these programs elsewhere, however—to comfortable, modern, roomy surroundings—and Sunday's result is the answer."

"The people of our community have clearly demonstrated that they are interested in the Center program; but they have also indicated that proper physical facilities and atmosphere are necessary if they are to become and remain active Center members."

Action No Surprise To Veteran Zionists

NEW YORK CITY (AJP)—The resignation of veteran Zionist leader Louis Lipsky as chairman of the American Zionist Council came as anything but a shock to veteran Zionist officials here who said Lipsky had expressed dissatisfaction with the Council's lack of authority on numerous occasions and had voiced the possibility of his leaving office.

Lipsky, a prominent leader in the Zionist Organization and one of that organization's early presidents, attributed his resignation to an inability to cope with the "chaos" and confusion existing on the American Zionist scene.

Members of the Zionist Council's executive council went into special session the day following public disclosure of Lipsky's resignation, but it was unlikely that a successor or successors would be named until the Council's nominations committee could meet. Rumors here centered around the appointment of a presidium to succeed the veteran Zionist leader. The leadership, these reports said, would fall to Benjamin Browdy, the Z.O.A.'s president; Rose Halpern, Hadassah leader, and a leader of the Labor Zionist group. There were no confirmations forthcoming from Council headquarters.

Although Lipsky would not elaborate on his short, curt statement of resignation other sources attributed the move to clashes with other factions, including the Jewish Agency for Palestine, over authority on the American scene. Lipsky felt, some said, that the Council no longer possessed the authority it required to remain a potent force. Financial difficulties were also cited as having lessened the Council's scope of activity.

GJC Request to Luncheon Wed.

As the 1950 fund-raising drive entered its final few weeks, Spencer Koch, chairman of the Trades and Industry Division, urged all workers and captains—with unpledged cards still in their possession—to contact their prospects in time to report at a Report Luncheon at GJC headquarters, 203 Strand Building, Wednesday noon, Dec. 6.

"Our efforts down the stretch will determine the final goal we attain," he said. "The majority of our voluntary solicitors have performed yeoman work thus far during the drive. If we can accelerate our card-covering activity during the next few weeks, we will achieve a total that will spell the difference between deliverance and despair for hundreds of ill-fed, ill-clothed and ill-sheltered refugees."

Old Orphanage Is Taking New Form

When the first issue of the MIRIAM HOSPITAL HERALD appeared on June 9 last, ground had just been broken for the new hospital on Summit Avenue. Construction was about to begin.

Since then, virtually no news has appeared regarding the new hospital. In a major part, this has been a deliberate action by its officers and board of directors. The reason was three-fold.

First, the summer vacation period came along to interrupt our long months of planning and preparation for the actual construction.

Second, with the end of summer came the start of the annual fund-raising campaign of the General Jewish Committee of Providence and the United Jewish Appeal drives of other Jewish communities throughout our state. In deference to the critical situation abroad, our own campaign to sell everlasting memorials for the Miriam Hospital was postponed.

Third, a similar delay existed during the annual Red Feather drive of the various Community Funds. Their work, too, was deemed of paramount importance.

Now these campaigns are about over, and once again the MIRIAM HOSPITAL HERALD makes its appearance, marking the resumption of full-scale activity on all fronts.

That is not to say, though, that the Miriam Hospital has been idle in the period since June 9. A ride past the building site will dispel that thought, if it does exist. The following is a brief resume of what has transpired in that time:

1. The renovation of the old Orphanage Building, which will form a part of the new hospital, has been going on at a steady pace. Considerable work has been completed, both inside and out. A complete report on that phase of the

When construction of the New Miriam Hospital is completed, and its doors have been opened to the community, there will be everlasting proof that more than labor and building materials went into its making. Memorial tablets will tell of the public spirit that hospital will be given in the near future.

2. Excavations for the new hospital have been completed and the way cleared for the erection of steel. Unfortunately, the military situation that developed during the summer has had the unhappy result of forcing the postponement of our contracted steel shipments. We have been assured that the steel will arrive this month; but until then, there is nothing further to report on that score.

3. The public response to the sale of memorials has been enthusiastic and steady. Thus, despite the suspension of an active campaign for almost six months, the Memorial Committee has been able to make a highly satisfactory report on its activities.

With this issue, we herald a return to active duty, so to speak, of all elements and forces of the Miriam Hospital. We look forward to a successful season, both as regards the sale of memorials and the progress of construction of the new hospital.

Memorial Committee Is Active Group

The Memorial Committee is the most active of all groups now functioning on behalf of the Miriam Hospital. Its members include Louis Fain, chairman; Samuel Rapaport Jr., associate chairman; Howard G. Brown, secretary; Archie Albert, Leo Bojar, Harry Blacher, Louis Garfinkel, James Goldman, Max L. Grant, Sydney A. Kane, and Walter I. Sundlun. Dr. Nathan A. Bolotow is an associate member of the Committee, representing the physicians, and Benjamin Brier is ex-officio.

Memorials Draw Community Interest

Considerable public interest has been evidenced during the campaign to sell memorials for the New Miriam Hospital, Louis Fain, chairman of the Memorial Committee, said this week.

This great response, Fain declared, is partly due to the fact that so many people realize that the supply of certain types of memorials is strictly limited.

"Beds and bedrooms are particularly desirable items on our list," Fain noted, "and we are having little trouble in disposing of them."

List Purchasers Of Memorials

Printed below is a partial list of recent purchasers, and additional purchasers, of everlasting memorials for the New Miriam Hospital since June, 1950:

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Bojar.
Mrs. Philip Cohen and Family, Fain's.
Mr. and Mrs. Abe C. Fine.
Mr. and Mrs. Raymond G. Franks.
Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Goodman.
Mr. and Mrs. Max L. Grant.
Mr. and Mrs. Burleigh Greenberg.
Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Schwartz.
Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Spear.

There are, in addition, several anonymous contributors to the memorial campaign, and the 200 individuals and families that purchased memorials in 1944.

Similar listings will be made in the near future.

its rising costs.

"These prices are extremely low," the Committee observed, "in comparison with the rates established in other cities."

Memorials purchased six years ago are still in effect. Revisions in these 1944 purchases have been made only in cases where the building plans, altered just prior to actual construction, interfered with the section or room for which the memorial was obtained; and where the individuals and families who previously secured memorials have voluntarily added to their purchases.

The latter instance, according to the Committee, has been a common—and welcome—occurrence in recent months.

Louis Fain, chairman of the Memorial Committee, extended an invitation to those who purchased memorials in 1944 to contact some member of the Committee if they have not already done so to make sure that their memorials still are in effect.

Miriam. While approximately $70,000 has been raised in this manner since the start of the campaign last June, about $200,000 more is needed to complete the hospital according to the plans and specifications, which will make it one of the finest and best equipped in the country.

Purchasers of memorials, therefore, accomplish two vital functions through their financial contributions. First, in accordance with the laws of Judaism, they honor their departed parents, families and friends. Second, they contribute to the health and well-being of the community in which they live by making it possible for others—and even themselves—to obtain necessary and expert medical care.

Memorials in the new hospital will be in the form of plaques conspicuously but unostentatiously displayed in the room or department or on the bed or other object for which they are purchased.

Their Memory Lives Forever

The purpose of a memorial is to keep alive the name of the departed. Noting this fact, the Miriam Hospital Memorial Committee reminded the community this week: "There is no place where the souls of the departed can better 'dwell in eternal life' than in the healing and life-giving atmosphere of a hospital—sponsored by the very descendants of those who are being memorialized."

"But it is not the departed alone who will be remembered by our community," the Committee added in its statement. "The names of all who purchase memorials will be inscribed in the golden book which will be maintained in the hospital lobby. Every purchaser of a memorial, regardless of the price paid, will be so honored. In this manner will we pay everlasting tribute to those members of our community whose contributions will have made possible this long-sought and much-needed modern, Jewish-sponsored hospital."

The Cost Is Low

Particular emphasis has been placed on the comparatively low cost of memorials now available. It was pointed out that prices of individual memorials are still at the same level as they were in 1944, when the memorial campaign was first started, well in advance of actual plans for the construction of the hospital, and

"May Their Souls Dwell In Eternal Life"

Memorials in the new hospital will bear lasting remembrance of cherished names, honoring both the donors and those in whose name the gifts are made. They will be identified by tablets engraved according to the wishes of subscribers.

Flames In The Night

(A Chanukah tale for children)

By BERNARD SEGAL

All along the sea shore little flames flickered in the night.

Hundreds and hundreds of little flames waved on the sand bars by the sea shore, and moved farther inside the sheltered valley, and up on the hillocks. Every wave that reached the shores brought more little flames. They skipped off the crests of the waves and moved on over the ripples of the sand to make room for new flames to be washed ashore by new waves.

Stars twinkling in the skies above, and bluish flames on the sands below.

Ships at sea turned away from their courses and came closer to see the strange sight.

Planes in the air circled over the valley of the flames to look at the wonderful view.

Watchers on high places gazed at the sea shore all through the night.

And the ships continued on their voyage to tell the tale of the little flames by the sea.

And the planes sped on their way to bring the news to distant lands.

And the watchers in the night hastened to their books and recorded in them the strange sight their eyes had beheld, so that generations to come might read and marvel.

But neither the ships at sea, nor the planes in the air, not even the watchers in the night knew what these little flames were or whence they came.

Only the stars in the skies knew, and they told it to little children in their dreams, and the children cried out in their sleep.

These little flames were the lights of the Chanukah candles that lost their Menorahs.

Once upon a time these flames were burning brightly and merrily in Jewish homes on Chanukah nights. The homes went up in flames. The Menorahs were lost. The Chanukah nights are in darkness now, and the little flames can find no rest. They come from distant lands. They are carried on the crests of waves across the seven seas. They are gathered from all corners of the earth.

Little Chanukah flames looking for a new Menorah, for new candles, for new lights of Chanukah.

In the stillness of the night, with the murmur of the sea, and the rustle of the wind, one flame whispers to another:

"I come from Warsaw."
"And I come from Berlin."
"I come from Vilna."
"And I am from Lublin."

A little flame on top of a sand bar speaks softly to a little flame below:

"I come from Prague."
"And I from Budapest."
"I come from Vienna."
"And I from Bucharest."

And up on the hillock, twinkling among the dry thistles, flame tells flame:

"Once I burned in a Chanukah Menorah in an old synagogue. On the last night of Chanukah the house was filled to the doors, and the cantor chanted sweetly. Then there was a sudden crash, and the roof came down, and the four walls crumbled into dust, and the chant of the cantor was stilled. I alone escaped."

Up on the bare twigs of a thorn bush, two little flames told one to another:

"I was once a candle in a Chanukah Menorah in a school. On the night of Chanukah all the eight candles were lit, and the children were all gathered around the Menorah and sang, and they were happy. Then there was a sudden roar—and showers of sparks poured down from above, and the night was lit up, and tongues of fire licked the walls and the doors and the windows, and the songs of the children remained hovering in the air. I alone escaped."

And down in the middle of the valley a little flame swayed to the east and swayed to the west and spoke:

"I was a flame in Grandfather's Menorah. On that night of Chanukah all the grandchildren were gathered in the house, and the lights stood high on the mantelpiece. Grandfather told a wonderful story of the First Chanukah, and grandmother gave each and every grandchild a lovely gift. I, too, bent over the mantelpiece to listen to the story, when suddenly the voice of grandfather was stilled, and the grandchildren were scattered, and the Menorah was snatched off the mantelpiece, and the story was never finished."

And all the flames in the sands by the shore, and up on the hillock, and all around the valley, began to sway to the east and then to the west and they asked of the stars in the skies:

"Where are the Menorahs?"
"Where are the synagogues?"
"And where are the schools?"
"And what of the songs?"
"And what of the unfinished stories?"

And then they raised their blue heads to the starry skies, and said:

"We alone escaped. We alone are all that remained of the songs, of the lights, of the tales, and of the joys of the nights of Chanukah."

And the flames swayed to the north and they swayed to the south, and they asked:

"Will the lights go up again?"
"Will the songs be heard again?"
"Will the tale be told again?"

The stars dimmed their light. The seas stood still. The moon waned and just then a wonderful thing happened.

A giant head broke through the blue waters of the sea. Then came the shoulders as broad as boulders. Higher and higher the man rose from the waters, and he was like a tower all hewn of rock. And he stood knee deep in the midst of the churning sea.

The stars above shone brighter, and the little flames below stood still and gazed at the man of granite rooted in the depths of the sea.

Then the man lifted his strong arms above his head, and in the palms of his hands he held aloft a huge Menorah. And the Menorah glittered in the moonlight, and the drops of water that dripped down from the Menorah were as brilliant as the stars.

Higher and higher the Menorah rose, and the waters swirled and churned at the feet of the giant man.

Then like birds taking sudden flight, the little flames floated upwards and began to flicker in the air. Gracefully they rose in a curve and turned their bluish heads towards the sea. Like a dust of light all the flames from the hillock, from the valley, and from the sands, swept upwards and alighted slowly on the huge Menorah, on the strong arms, on the boulder-like shoulders, and on the giant head of the granite man of the sea.

In little clusters like gems the flames clung to the man of rock, and their bluish heads swayed to the east and they swayed to the west, and then to the south and the north, and they raised their heads to the stars in the skies above.

Ships at sea stopped in their courses. Planes in the air circled overhead. Watchers in the night held their breath.

But neither the ships, nor the planes, not even the watchers knew what they saw in the night.

But the stars knew, and they told it to little children in their dreams. And the little children smiled in their sleep, and they listened to the song of the flames in their new Menorah, held aloft on strong arms, amidst the churning seas.

The unfinished song of Chanukahs past, and of Chanukahs to come.

Decries Jewish Fears

(The letter which follows was written in answer to a recent column by Bernard Segal, in which he deplored the lack of Jewish educational progress in Rhode Island during the past 25 years. Ed.)

Dear Mr. Segal:

The Protestants and the Catholics have built "fortresses for their convictions" because their efforts are not corroded by false fears. They are not afraid to stand up and say: "This is what we believe and this is what we will teach our young!" They are not afraid to "segregate" themselves. They are not afraid to be "different."

They believe that by being different and by segregating themselves voluntarily to study their religion, they are fulfilling a primary task in our democracy. They insist that true democracy means accepting these differences and getting along in spite of them.

Jews say they believe this, too; but because of false fears, they do not put their belief into practice. If they did, not only would there be institutions of higher learning such as you described in your column but also primary and secondary schools.

The Christian denominations sponsor such schools, ranging from the Quaker-inspired Moses Brown to the private school of the Portsmouth Priory.

Do Jews have such a school? Yes, The Providence Hebrew Day School.

But how many of the 35,000 Jews of greater Rhode Island sponsor it? Very few.

What prevents them from sponsoring it? Fear.

They fear the breakdown of the public school system.

They do not realize that in a true democracy both (private and public) systems must operate side by side.

By sponsoring a Jewishly oriented school as the Protestants and Catholics sponsor in their denominations Jews would be safe-guarding our democratic ideals. How? As long as there are many groups teaching many creeds, there will be no danger of one group teaching one creed to all. On the day when there will be uniformity of religious teaching and conformity as a State requirement, we can say ours is a totalitarian state. We will no longer be living in a free society. As long as there are private schools teaching maximum instruction of any creed, there is less danger of religion being taught in the public school.

If all the Protestant and Catholic private schools were closed down, eventually there would be religion taught in the public school and one Christian group would of necessity gain dominance over the other.

If Jews would only realize this they would lose their fear. They would understand that by expressing themselves Jewishly, they would not only insure continuity of the highest ideals of our Torah but would be guarding true democratic processes in our public schools as well.

You ask, "Is it too late now?" No, Mr. Segal, it is not too late. If Jews shed their fears, which are false and corrode their efforts to positive action, they can start now, today, by helping to put The Providence Hebrew Day School on a sound financial basis. Thus by contributing to it willingly will noted educator, writer and Professor of English at Brown University had to say when he was asked if there was a need for an all-day Hebrew school in our present educational set-up.

"There is a need in America today to maintain among our children the full tradition of Judaism now only partly supplied by the afternoon and Sunday school as these are organized at present. The aim of the Providence Hebrew Day School is to teach the tradition so that its pupils in their maturity will remain Jews, marrying and bringing up their children in full knowledge of and pride in a religion and morality that has sustained Jews for thousands of years. They will be the teachers and guides in Judaism of the generation to come. They will be a guarantee that Jewish life in America will not perish."

Broadening Concepts Of Old Age Care

The Eighteenth Annual meeting on Nov. 12, 1950 highlighted the changing concepts in the care of the aged. Looking back over the Home's history, Jacob I. Felder, president, noted that many changes have taken place. There was first the phenomenal expansion and improvement in the physical plant, which grew from a small primitive Home with an original bed capacity of eight, to our present fireproof, beautiful structure, with a capacity of ninety.

Along with the change in the physical setup, there was a noticeable change in the type of service which the Home was called upon to render. In the early days the applicants were the homeless and poverty-stricken, who needed shelter and food. With the increase of life expectancy and the introduction of life-prolonging new medicines, an ever increasing number of older people applied who needed care away from their children.

Many were ill and infirm, and could not be cared for adequately in their own homes or in those of their children. Another group lacked companionship, or felt unwanted in children's homes. A third group needed the religious atmosphere and religious activities, to which they were accustomed, but which they could not obtain in their own neighborhoods.

As these aged came from all walks of life the Home could not deny admission to those who had financial resources or those whose children were capable of paying for their maintenance. While the Home gives preference to the poor and indigent, there are at present eighteen residents who pay their way and are not a burden to the community. Yet, they need the Home for religious, medical or social reasons.

Also, the concept of institutional care for the individual has undergone significant changes. This was clearly brought out in Mr. Alexander's remarks, "Instead of giving comforts, we like to make them comfortable in body, as well as in spirit. Instead of care, we like to give them loving care, and instead of mere shelter we want to give them a Mokom M'nuch, a haven of rest. Above all, we like to give them the feeling of being wanted, that they still count in the scheme of things, that they are needed." The aged, he said, have a need to be needed, intensified.

It is part of the philosophy of the Home's staff that the aged need a double measure of kindness, understanding, and patience.

The residents "do not live by breath alone", and modern institutional care includes in its program projects that go beyond shelter and food and physical comforts, such as recreation, occupational therapy and social service.

Sees Increasing Need For Funds

With the Home for the Aged operating on a budget of $100,000, the need for funds is daily becoming more acute, Harry Blacher, chairman of the membership committee, said this week as he urged prompt payment of membership dues.

"Not only have operating costs continued to climb," Mr. Blacher explained, "but the high quality of the service provided for our residents must be continued at the highest possible level. Indeed, our staff is constantly striving to improve that service. A talk with any of the residents, or a visit through our beautiful Home, will prove conclusively how well that job is being done."

"The reminder to our members to pay their dues was never more timely or important," Blacher asserted, "for the income derived by the individual payment of dues is doubly needed."

Coming Events

Chanukah Parties

The lighting of the first Chanukah candles will take place at a party to be held Sunday evening, December 3. Rabbi Morris Schussheim will participate in the program, along with the junior choir of Temple Beth Israel, under the direction of Benjamin Premack. Mrs. Esther Glassman will be accompanist to the choir.

Malavsky Family Choir

The Malavsky Family Choir, which will be presented at Veterans Memorial Auditorium Monday evening, will appear at the Home in a special performance Monday afternoon at 2 P. M. Their appearance will be sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rosen and is made possible through the courtesy of the Jewish War Veterans, Department of R. I.

A Chanukah party, under the auspices of the Ladies Association, will be held on Monday, December 11 at 7 P. M. at the Home. Mrs. Samuel Ganzer is chairman of the evening, while Mrs. Jacob I. Felder is chairman of the hostesses. Cantor Jacob Hohenemser of Temple Emanuel will light the candles and entertain the folks with Jewish and Hebrew songs.

In Memoriam

ADOLPH COLE

Adolph Cole, formerly of Woonsocket, passed away on Friday, October 28, after a brief illness. A resident of the Jewish Home for the Aged for nine and one-half years, he devoted much of his time and energies to our religious activities and was the Gabbai of the Home's synagogue.

He also will be remembered as the keeper and caretaker of plants and flowers. He took great delight in raising and maintaining flowers in and outside the Home.

Through his cheerful disposition and willingness to help, he endeared himself to all residents, who spontaneously decided to do something to perpetuate his memory. Already fifty dollars has been contributed by the residents for the purchase of a suitable memorial to be placed in the Synagogue, to which he devoted so much of his time and energy.

Death cancelled plans for the 60th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Cole, planned for November 16. To his widow, children, and grandchildren, the Home expresses its sincere sympathy.

We gather here to praise and bless
This place of peace and love,
Where all who live within its walls

Thy tender mercies prove,
The Home so dear, so richly blessed,

With every passing year,
We pray Thee that our aged friends

May find a haven here,
Help us by sacrifice and prayer
The vision to uphold;

Let us keep faith to make their years
Secure and happy when old.

O may Thy light shine on this Home

And guide us by Thy love,
'Til this dust spot on earth becomes

Like unto heaven above.
We thank Thee, Lord, for all
Thy care

And love to those in need,
And offer Thee our heartfelt prayer

From grateful hearts indeed.

SYD COHEN:

A Light In the Hot Stove

The death of Grover Cleveland Alexander a few weeks ago brought back into print the old stories about that immortal pitcher's famous relief job in 1926 and his drunken sprees. Usually forgotten or ignored in the rehash of the life of Old Pete are the reasons for his drinking—plus the fact that many experts consider him the greatest pitcher of all time.

It is not generally known that Alexander developed some sort of epileptic disease during the first World War, and it was because of the pain and anguish he suffered that he took to drinking. Even then, he was so superb a pitcher that he continued to win in the majors—sober, drunk, or sick—until he passed his 40th birthday. Just to recall that he won as many games as Christy Mathewson, and holds most of the records for shut-outs, low hit games and earned run average, is enough to prove his greatness.

But here is an added item. Eddie Collins, whose life story in the Sporting News was concluded just a week before Alex died, rated him over Mathewson as a pitcher—and Eddie faced both men. So much for this column's tribute to a great pitcher and unfortunate man—Grover Cleveland Alexander.

About Boudreau

It may not seem in order for the author of a weekly sports column to take issue with several writers who make baseball their livelihood, but then again, since when did a real baseball fan let anything at all stop him from speaking his mind? So . . .

I refer to the Boudreau controversy still being waged in Cleveland and all over the baseball country. Lou now has a job with the Red Sox, but it is still hard to figure what right the scribes have in frying in typewriter oil the management that decided to let him go.

The charges are that Lou should have been given his notice after the World Series so he and his coaches could go out and make new deals. The owners are trying to explain that they considered only Al Lopez as their manager and if they couldn't get him they would have re-hired Boudreau. They didn't get the go-ahead to talk to Lopez until the week before he was hired. Baseball being what it is, the coaches got a tough break; but not too tough, since the December meetings are around the corner and they can still make connections for next year.

As for Boudreau, he could have been traded to another club that would have sent valuable player strength to the Indians. It was out of respect to Boudreau's long service that the Indians passed up this rightful opportunity and released him. Lou for weeks had his choice of several jobs paying $45,000, so why the pity? And the Indians could have gotten Vern Stephens and plenty more from Boston had they been commercially minded. They are the ones who deserve the pity—for being sentimental fools. Pennants are not won that way.

The foregoing is only a summary of commonly known events. But the writers don't let it rest there. They are praising Boudreau to the skies as a player, mastermind and good fellow—but they cautiously admit that he mishandled Boone, forcing Ray to play Boudreau style instead of in his own natural way. Lou, they say, treated Boone like a puppet image of himself, ignoring Ray's speed and ability to cover ground.

To demonstrate the affection that his men had for Boudreau, one writer said that the players never became angry when their manager made a mistake — they just laughed. That one has me scratching my head. I dunno—when a team laughs at the manager's mistakes, it would seem he should have been thrown out long ago. That sort of team would sound too complacent and self-satisfied, with not enough "mad" or determination in its make-up—sort of similar to a certain major league club in New England.

One thing more about Boudreau. In answer to the tribute that he masterminded Cleveland to its first pennant in 30 years. Red Sox fans will agree that the Sox blew the 1948 pennant in the first half of the race, that the Indians won because the Sox were so bad for so long, not because Cleveland was so outstanding.

Now add the chorus of Yankee fans who admit their team played incredibly bad baseball that year and who claim that their team was mis-managed into defeat.

Add the two scores—plus the claims of Boudreau's inspired play and leadership. Conclusion: If the Indians were handled so well, how come they had to go to a post-season playoff game before they won the pennant?

Nope, no pity for Boudreau here. My sympathies are with Hank Greenberg and Ellis Ryan for the unfair beating they are taking, over at Cleveland. And I admire their guts in firing him in spite of the typewritten and public clamor.
