GJC Names Mrs. Archie Fain Chairman of Women's Division

MRS. ARCHIE FAIN

To Begin Work Soon on Drive

The appointment of Mrs. Archie Fain as chairman of the Women's Division of the 1951 General Jewish Committee of Providence campaign was announced this week by Joseph W. Ress, drive chairman.

Mrs. Fain, an active GJC worker since its inception, is secretary of the women's division of Brandeis University and is a member of the board of directors of the local Hadassah group.

Married and the mother of two children—a son and a daughter—she resides at 750 Elm Grove Avenue in this city. Mrs. Fain succeeds Mrs. Abraham Percelay, who has assured the local fund-raising agency that she intends to undertake an active role in the forthcoming drive.

As head of the Women's Division for the 1951 drive, which will be officially launched this September, Mrs. Fain will be confronted with countless problems of

Decision on Sessions Street Site for Jewish Center Expected This Week; Review Center Action

The above photograph shows the buildings located on Sessions Street in which the Center is interested. It is the location of the old Sessions Street Police Station.

A decision on whether the City of Providence will permit the Jewish Community Center to acquire the old police station and some adjoining property on Sessions Street is expected this week following a meeting of Mayor Walter H. Reynolds, the City Planning Commission and the Board of Recreation. Should the City dispose of the Sessions Street area in the Center's favor, it is understood that J. C. C. officials are prepared to offer their present property on Benefit Street to the Mayor for recreational needs in that area.

Included in the Center's request—made when the City announced its intention of disposing of the property some time ago—are, besides the police station building, a garage, field house, playground and a limited portion of the land now occupied by Browntown, soon to be dismantled.

Community Approves Plan

The mere report that the Center might move to Sessions Street proved sufficient to rouse considerable excitement in the Jewish community. A record number of Center directors approved the plan unanimously, and hundreds of persons pledged their support.

Center officials cautioned that while they consider the Sessions Street site as most desirable, located in the midst of the largest single Jewish population area in the state, such a move would not mean that a new building will be constructed immediately on the property. They stated that existing buildings would be taken over and remodeled with a minimum of expense. Preliminary examination indicated, they said, that the walls, floors and ceilings are sound. All that is needed, they claim, would be new windows, painting and heating and toilet facilities.

"Center Must Move!"

"The important thing to remember is that the Center must move," officers and board members stated grimly. "If we lose this opportunity we may never get another like it."

They reported that the police station building is larger than the present building on Benefit Street and contains more (and larger) rooms. It was indicated that, should the property become available, the field house would be used for a nursery and play school.

Emphasizing the need as well as the practicability of the move to Sessions Street, Saul E. R. Feinberg, president of the Center, pointed this week to the shift in population from the Benefit Street area to "the rapidly growing sections of the East Side." He stated:

"In 1934 the National Jewish Welfare Board study reported the imperative need for a more desirable location if community needs were to be met adequately. That was 17 years ago, but we are still on Benefit Street.

"For the past eight or nine years, the Center has had permission from the Community Fund, of which it is a member agency, to undertake a capital funds campaign for a new building. But the combination of almost prohibitive cost of downtown sites, the growing need for huge funds in Israel, and the impending construction of the Miriam Hospital have rendered such a program by the Center impossible.

"When the Sessions Street site came to our attention—with the abandoned police station building behind it—we were convinced that this was the greatest single stroke of good fortune that could befall our community. . . . We looked upon it as a 'once in a lifetime' opportunity. And we grasped it!

"Today a majority of our people live in the area around Sessions Street. It is the area where the major Jewish institutions (Temple Emanuel, Congregation Ahavath Shalom, Home for the Aged, Miriam Hospital and Temple Beth El) are and are being located. We

She indicated this week, however, that numerous policy meetings—which she intends to call during the Spring and early Summer—would “free our corps of highly skilled and enthusiastic workers for the major job of raising for such a glorious cause $100,000 or more this year among the women of greater Providence.”

Miriam Women Present Sulie Harand

A return performance by Sulie Harand, musical dramatist, who is noted for her rendition of “South Pacific,” will be the feature attraction at the 27th annual Nursery Equipment and Linen Shower of the Miriam Hospital Women's Association on Saturday, April 7, at 8:20 p. m. at Hope High School.

Miss Harand's offering will feature “A Tribute to Grace Moore” and will include many of the songs made famous by the late opera star. Among these songs will be “Cribiribin,” “One Night of Love,” “Kiss Me Again,” “One Fine Day,” from Madam Butterfly, and many others.

In addition, she will perform excerpts from “South Pacific,” “The Jolson Story,” and “The Berlin Story.”

Sulie Harand began her serious musical studies as a scholarship student at the American Conservatory of Music. After studying drama, she appeared in many theatres and night clubs before beginning her musical dramatizations.

Called the “one woman musical comedy,” Miss Harand writes all her own material, is her own producer and impersonates each character in her cast. Included in her repertoire are such hit musicals as “Finian's Rainbow,” “Allegro,” “Kiss Me Kate,” and “Annie Get Your Gun.”

THESE MEMORIALS IN THE SERVE OTHERS AND PAY EVERLASTINGLY

(Memorials already established)

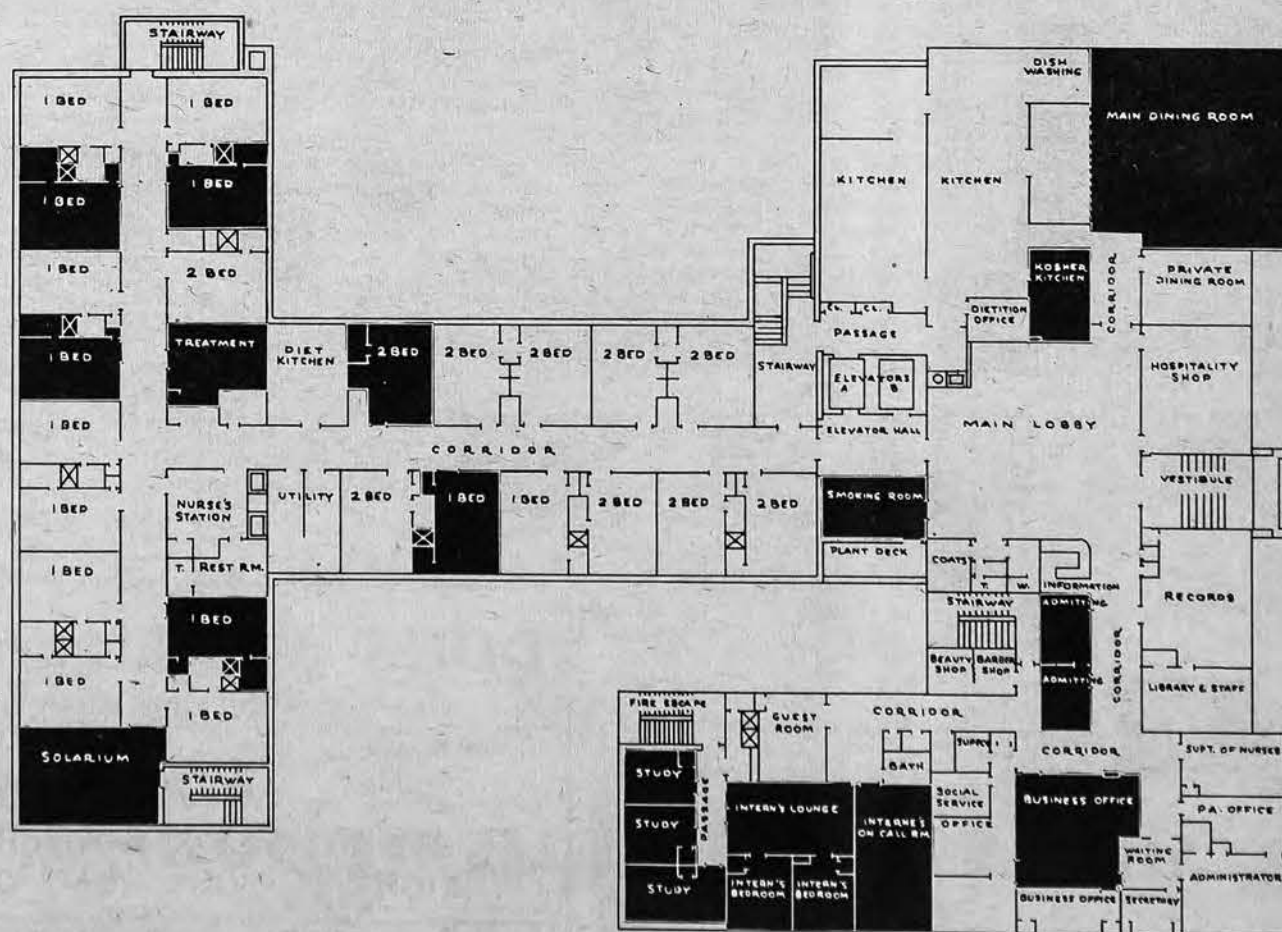

FIRST FLOOR PLAN

The Miriam Hospital is highly gratified at the response of the community to its memorial campaign, as evidenced by the number of memorials that already have been established (shown in shaded areas). Presented here, for the first time publicly, is the floor plan for the new hospital. Major services will be located on the first floor, thus lending particular significance to memorials established there.

SECOND FLOOR PLAN

There are still many outstanding opportunities for everlasting memorials on the second floor, as shown in this sketch. Among the available memorials are the main lobby, two kitchens, guest room, several administrative offices, library and staff room, records section and hospitality shop, beauty and barber shops, diet kitchen, social service office and several bedrooms, both single and double.

There are still opportunities to establish everlasting memorials to your loved ones — for full details write any member of the memorial committee.

THE NEW MIRIAM HOSPITAL A LASTING TRIBUTE TO LOVED ONES

(Bed areas are shown by shaded areas)

THIRD FLOOR PLAN

As the New Miriam Hospital gradually takes form, more and more interest is displayed in the type of hospital it will be when completed. Most inquiries, however, concern memorials, which will serve the living while also honoring the dead. Available on the third floor are a delivery room and two nursery rooms in the maternity section, diet kitchen, sun deck, waiting room and bedrooms.

FOURTH FLOOR PLAN

Distinctive memorials are still obtainable on every floor of the new hospital, and will serve the purpose of keeping alive forever the names of the departed. A study of this floor plan will reveal many types of memorials that will suit the desires of every family. On the fourth floor, for example, are treatment, waiting and utility rooms, and several single bedrooms. Larger bedrooms, if desired, may be found on the lower floors.

The Center and Sessions Street

For the first time since its inception 25 years ago, the Jewish Community Center faces the possibility of a move to a new building in a new location; and while the contemplated move hinges upon the decisions of the City administration regarding disposition of the Sessions Street police station building and surrounding property, the mere thought of moving from undesirable Benefit Street has been sufficient to rouse the Center's officers and board of directors to more concerted, enthusiastic action than has ever previously been evident.

The matter of the Center's moving is a serious issue. For more years than it is pleasant to contemplate the institution has suffered because of its poor location, from crowded, cramped quarters, from an utter lack of parking facilities. Because of this location it has been impossible to attract young people—the same young people who, in other cities, flock to the Center for the fulfillment of their cultural, social and athletic needs. Boston, Bridgeport, Springfield, Lynn—and many other cities—have fine Center facilities in attractive locations which are the central meeting place, the hub of Jewish activity.

In Providence the Center has been forced, because of circumstances beyond its control, to live an apologetic existence. The Jewish community has long since transferred to other locations; further, this same community has taken its synagogues and temples along in the re-location process.

But the Center, presenting a program that should normally have natural appeal for all elements of the community, has been forced to stay behind, swallow its disappointment and work harder, more despairingly, in an effort to serve its purpose and justify its existence.

While the mayor of the City of Providence has looked favorably upon the acquisition by the Center of the Sessions Street site, no definite action has been taken, and no commitments made. The matter still hangs somewhat in the air. There is thus the opportunity to analyze the situation, evaluate the move and think in terms of what it will mean to the Center and the Jewish community of Providence.

The Center must be moved! That is the crux of the matter. And since the cost of purchasing property and erecting a building in a downtown location would run prohibitively high—in the direct neighborhood of a million dollars—it becomes necessary to reach out for some existing property located in a more desirable area, such as Sessions Street.

In location, Sessions Street is far superior to Benefit Street. It is in the midst of the largest single Jewish population area in the entire State of Rhode Island. It is directly accessible by bus line to all other sections of the city. Far from being remote, it is only a short distance from Hope High School, which attracts high school students from South Providence, Elmwood, and the North End.

The site is in an open area that will provide fresh air and sunshine for all children, in sharp contrast to the restricted semi-canyon that is Benefit Street. This element alone makes the move a desirable one.

Physical facilities are substantially greater in the old police station. There are more rooms—and larger rooms. There is ample parking space, no crowding. Adjoining the Browntown village that is being dismantled, the area is in close proximity to such public buildings as Nathan Bishop Jr. High School, Marvel Gymnasium, Brown Stadium, Temple Emanuel. It is open enough so as to afford little, if any, nuisance, to neighbors.

But most important is the single statement—Sessions Street is far superior to Benefit Street. That is the basis on which the Center's officers and board are proceeding with their campaign.

They realistically insist, however, that the hoped-for move does not represent a large investment or the determination to construct a new Center building on the Sessions Street site. The existing building, with a relatively small expenditure; will suit the Center's needs until the time when a decision can be made concerning expansion.

Plans also are being developed for the promotion of Center sponsored and directed activities in those sections of the

BY BERNARD SEGAL

Dollars and Values

One of the most prominent women in our community is quoted as having said in a public address:

"For one thousand dollars we can provide shelter for a DP family in Israel. For less than that we can rescue a homeless child and give it a home. For 500 dollars we can care for a rescued child for a whole year. How then can we divert a single dollar for any other purpose?"

This she said after a visit in Israel where she walked among the dismal rows of tents in the "tent villages", where the rescued dwell. She spoke to the men and women in the tents, and she watched the rescued children being mothered in the children's homes, and their childhood being given back to them.

Now this lady is on the board of directors of our General Jewish Committee, and her influence on the allocations of funds is considerable. One is therefore a bit puzzled by reading the list of agencies and noting the amounts allocated to them from the funds of the G. J. C.

Let us take up once more the Year Book published by the G. J. C., and mailed to contributors in the campaign of 1949-1950. There, on page 6, under the heading, "Where Your Dollars Go," we find:

American Jewish Congress. Working since 1917 for the purpose of the social, civic, political, religious and economic rights of the Jewish people in America and throughout the world, $7,000.00.

Read carefully the services of the Congress, and then ask yourself:

"Am I so ignorant in Jewish affairs? How come that I know so little about so important an institution?"

But don't feel too bad about it. You are not alone in this ignorance. Your friends and your neighbors know just as little about this Jewish Congress that protects your social, civic, etc. rights in America and elsewhere. You just try and ask ten people in your club, or synagogue, or family circle, whether they ever knew of the existence of such a Congress and of the functions thereof. If you strike an average of one to nine you may consider yourself traveling in very well informed circles.

The Congress was organized in 1917, and then reorganized in 1922. Those of us whose memory goes back to that time will remember the high hopes that were placed on this Congress. The young people of today will hardly believe it when they are told that we went to the polls to vote for representatives to the Jewish Congress, and that candidates conducted lively campaigns for nomination and election.

Today the Congress is only a wan reminder of a great promise. Today the Jewish Congress is little more than a paper agency. It, too, deals in "defense", in Anti-Defamation. In vain will you look for the part the Jewish Congress played in the most fateful years of our times. That name is entirely left out in the annals of our days, these most crucial days of horror, death and rebirth of a people. What little the Congress attempts to do in defense, and in the two publications, Congress

Weekly and Congress Record, is not important enough to the price of 7,000 dollars out of the funds of the Providence G. J. C.

Next on the list on the same page of the Year Book is an item which reads:

American Zionist Fund. Conducts a program of Jewish and Zionist educational and cultural activities, including publications, speakers' bureau, radio program, film libraries and fellowships at the Hebrew University in Israel. $5,625.00.

In other words, the G. J. C. allocates money for the purely administrative machinery of the Zionist Party. This, mind you, has nothing to do with money for the rebuilding of Israel. This is money used by the Zionist Party of America to conduct its party affairs, for purposes of party propaganda, for party publicity, and for party maintenance.

But this is not all.

On page seven we find listed two more items of the same nature. The General Jewish Committee gave 500 dollars to the Rhode Island Zionist Fund, which is for the administrative needs of the Zionist Party of the state, and 3,000 dollars for the Zionist Youth Commission of Providence. Yes, 3,000 dollars to finance the programs of the Zionist Youth groups in the city!

All together the Zionist Party gets the sum of 9,125 dollars out of the funds collected by the G. J. C. for the United Jewish Appeal!

By this time, all but the dullard know to distinguish between the Zionist Party and the land of Israel. Israel is the care and the worry and the joy of all of us, Zionist or non-Zionist. The party is the concern of the members of the Zionist Organization of America.

What justification, in heaven's name, is there for that allocation? Can you reconcile such allocations as those given to the Jewish Congress and to the Zionist Party with the words spoken by the lady upon her return from Israel which we quoted in the opening paragraph?

Let me clarify right now that I am not opposed to allocations for local needs and for institutions here at home. My name is not counted among those who advocate that every dollar is to go to Israel. My objection to these allocations rests entirely on the relative merits and the comparative importance of home needs. If the G. J. C. is to allocate some funds for home needs, one wonders at the item on page 7, which reads:

Providence Hebrew Day School. On April 20, 1950, the Board of Directors of The G. J. C. after careful consideration voted an emergency one-time grant to the Providence Hebrew Day School in order to help this local institution meet an urgent financial crisis. $6,000.00.

Why, one asks, all this lengthy apology? Why must the Hebrew Day School plead poverty before an emergency grant is given to it, with a reminder that it is only a "one-time" grant, while no such apologies are offered, and no such strings are attached, to the other grants? Whether one is in full agreement with the Hebrew Day

School in Providence or not, one must admit that it merits financial aid no less than Hillel, and Anti-Defamation, and Zionist youth clubs.

What we are after is not denying funds to this or to that agency at home but a re-examination of values. Place one beside the other and determine which is the more important of the two. Put defense on one scale of the balance and education on the other scale, and then watch the tipping of the scales carefully.

Weigh and measure the merits of one applicant against the other not in terms of influence, but in terms of Jewish spiritual values. View them from the perspective of Jewish tradition, and let this be your guide to decide "Where Your Dollars Ought To Go."

A.Z.A. MEETING

The Roger Williams Chapter A.Z.A. #283 will hold its next meeting on Tuesday, April 3 at 8 P. M. at the Jewish Community Center.

Editorial

City that would be considered too remote for daily program commuting.

In short, the Center seems to have approached the situation logically, being careful to include in its deliberations all problems that may be expected to arise.

It is significant that the meeting called to discuss the move attracted a record number of board members and resulted in a unanimous vote of approval. Members of various organizations—as well as disinterested members of the community—have expressed their approval of the move. Deterring voices have been in the minority.

Nor may it be forgotten that the Center has offered to turn over to the community its present building and gymnasium. This laudable proposal should prove interesting to the City, and other agencies which have used Center facilities part-time for their programs, and now may take over the entire property. These present facilities are more than adequate to serve the vital needs of the Benefit Street area.

There is only one conclusion to be drawn from the foregoing.

That is this: It is to be hoped that Mayor Reynolds, his planning commission and his recreation board will agree to turn over the Sessions Street property to the Jewish Community Center. As a public agency performing a necessary service to a substantial portion of the community, the Center is definitely worthy of such consideration.

Such a gift by the City would not be without precedent. In the past, various agencies such as St. Joseph's Hospital, Veterans Hospital, CYO and others have been granted the private use of public land.

The HERALD joins the Center and the community in urging the Mayor to make this long-awaited move possible.

Plan Neighborhood Little Leagues

The third in a series of meetings to bring Little League baseball to Providence will be held Monday at 8 P. M. in Room 201, Journal Building. The meetings are sponsored by the Comets Club of the Jewish Community Center, in co-operation with Syd Cohen, sports columnist of the Herald, and Webb Youlden, director of sports promotion for the Providence Journal-Bulletin.

Sponsors and playing areas were found to be the principal needs of the moment at the second meeting, held Monday evening. An informal poll disclosed that there are several men in the city willing to devote their time as umpires, managers and other Little League officials. The Little Leaguers cannot be properly equipped and uniformed, however, unless sponsors are found.

Little League baseball is played by four team leagues, composed of boys from 8-12, living in the same neighborhood. Tentative plans call for the creation of separate leagues on the East Side, North End, South Providence and Crans-

Brodsky Heads Enrollment Campaign

The annual membership enrollment campaign of the J.C.C. gets underway Sunday, April 15. A series of house parties are planned throughout the community which will culminate in "C" day, Sunday, April 29 when a corps of volunteers will visit homes throughout the community.

Mr. Brodsky, a long time leader in Jewish communal affairs, considers this year's membership effort as one of the most important in the history of the Center. He believes that "the time has come for every Jewish family through Center affiliation to register support of the new building planning of the Center and the expanding program serving hundreds of Jewish young people and adults.

"I invite our many friends throughout the community to join with us in our efforts to enrich Jewish community living through a finer Center."

SYD COHEN:

Fore! . . .

Harry Platt sat counting his money, and considering that this was post-income tax time, it might have seemed surprising that he had any left. This particular pile of cabbage was slightly rusty, as if it hadn't been used for some time—and such actually is the case.

Anyway, Platt finally finished his audit and came up with the announcement that there is roughly $25 left in the kitty for the golf association that was formed a few years back. It was time, he guessed, that something constructive be done with it.

It was back in 1949 that Platt and a few others—I remember Lou Chase among them—worked up a Jewish Open Golf Tournament with this column. The tourney was held in due time, and it attracted a substantial number of contestants. Each golfer chipped in his registration fee. It is this money that is now under discussion.

Now Harry is set to organize the golf tournament again. There was no action last year but considerable interest has been generated and it seems certain that a flourishing tourney will be staged. Here are a few of Harry's ideas on the subject.

Don't Worry About Scores

The Jewish Open will be up the alley of just about every golfer who patronizes the various links, whether in the 70's (well, we can hope, can't we?) or over 100. The handicap system will chop everyone down to about the same size for tournament purposes, and no one need feel that he will be embarrassed because he shoots a fairly high score.

Platt envisions a division of all golfers into three classes: for instance, one grouping might include those who normally shoot 85 or lower—another might contain linksmen with 85-100 ratings—and the third could be for 100-up. That way, golfers would be competing directly with other golfers of similar aptitude, on a fairly even basis. Handicaps would bring them all to the same level.

Knowing a trophy is at stake, several of the boys might deliberately report a padded score, to make it seem that they are worse than they actually are. This would result in reducing their handicaps and place them in a more strategic spot for the tournament.

There are a couple of answers to that one, says Harry Platt. First, playing several qualifying rounds would lessen the tendency to fake a high score. No golfer worthy of the name is going to cheat consistently when he has a limited number of times on the course. A once-a-week golfer, for example, is intent on improving his game, not worsening it just for the sake of winning a trophy. And he certainly should have enough pride to report as good a score as possible.

Second, there is what Platt calls the kickers' tournaments. These actually are qualifying rounds, but with something extra added. That extra is a trophy—sort of a door prize—awarded to the golfer who posts a particular score which is selected in advance, but kept secret by the judges.

Here is how it works. A qualifying round is announced for the purpose of compiling averages and determining handicaps for the big tournament. Before it is played, the specially appointed judges may decide that 82 is the lucky number, or even 102. The golfer who posts that particular score wins the prize. Shooting blind, so to speak, each player might as well do his best, for his best might result in winning that prize.

After the qualifying rounds are completed, each contestant's scores are figured and averaged. Then the handicaps are awarded, and the tournament is held. Platt suggests starting about a month from now, and having the Open Tournament in late June. That, he says, would insure that all available golfers have a chance to compete before the summer vacation period.

Afterwards—say, in September and October—there might be a doubles tourney, or any one or more of the six or seven different types of tournament that are played in these parts.

The 1948 tournament was held at Louisiquisset; this year's may be held there or any other place that is convenient and/or available. That can be decided by the committee that is appointed to plan and administer the affair.

The important thing is registration. If all interested golfers would indicate their intentions of taking part right away, definite plans could be made, and the qualifying rounds could be scheduled at an early date.

It must be repeated that no golfer need be ashamed or afraid to enter the lists. The group divisions and the handicap system will equalize the tourneys and give everyone a chance. No one is going to laugh at anybody else.

It is now up to the boys who like to follow the fairways. Just call or write Harry Platt, 1542 Broad Street, Cranston, or this writer, and register for the tournament. Later, you will be asked for your registration fee of $1. Simple enough.

Is this to be the year that golf really is organized? Here's the chance many have been waiting for. The rest is up to you.

Providence Bank Held First in East to Offer Free Life Insurance to Savings Depositors

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 20.—The Plantations Bank of Rhode Island has followed in the wake of the Bank of America in the West and of other banks in Kentucky and Florida to provide free life insurance for regular savers. The innovation is said to be the first such in the East.
To gain the insurance coverage, the depositor agrees to make monthly deposits of $2 to $20 over a period of fifty months so that he will have savings of from $100 to $1,000 at the end of the period.
The Plantations Bank then insures the life of the depositor, thus guaranteeing the entire savings program should he die before the fifty-month period is completed. Interest is paid at the regular rate and the insurance remains in force as long as depositors do not allow their savings payments to lapse. They are allowed a thirty-one-day grace period during which the insurance remains in force. Failure to make the deposit results in the insurance being terminated.
... and it's still

Planning for the Aged

by MRS. IRVING L. SOLOMON

Too often we use the expression "Planning for Our Aged" in abstract terms, not realizing that the aged, for whom we are planning, are we, ourselves, ten, fifteen or perhaps fifty years from now. When we say, "Serving the Home today will insure your security tomorrow," we are not using an empty phrase. It may come as a surprise to you to learn that 32 women who are residents of the Home are still active members of the Ladies Association. Two of them are charter members of the Ladies Association. Two of them are charter members of the original Home on Orms Street.

Even if we ourselves may not benefit from our service, what we do for the aged is of benefit to all groups in our community. If we can make the lives of our parents, our neighbors and friends, more comfortable and happy, we thereby benefit their families by easing strains and stresses which the presence of an aged person often causes.

As you watch the play "Fabulous Females," which will show "love-romance-tears and strife" among women, you may notice that the author left out an important phase, viz: Women's eternal quest for improvement of social conditions, and their unselfish devotion to the welfare of the aged and the infirm. It may be true that women will never change their womanly characteristics. It is definitely true of their interest in the field of humanitarian and philanthropic endeavor, and as long as there is human need and human suffering, and as long as there are the aged in our midst, women will continue to serve and assist them.

(Excerpts from Mrs. Solomon's address given at the Ladies Association Donors Luncheon at the Narragansett Hotel, March 6, 1951).

The coming of April brings with it the reminder that the new membership year at the Home begins on May 1. There are still many unpaid membership accounts, and we should like to request those who are in arrears to pay their dues by the end of this month.

Pledging a membership is only a promise and promises won't buy food, comforts, and care for our aged residents.

Please remember that our Home cannot discharge its responsibility to the people under its care without the cash which you and other members have promised to pay. The Home depends for its continued and efficient service, on your membership contribution.

Won't you please send in your membership contribution today and have that grand "paid-up" feeling and the satisfaction that you are helping a worthwhile cause.

Incidentally, Harry Blacher, chairman of the membership committee, announces plans for the Home to publish a year book including the names of those members who are in good standing.

SYD COHEN:

What Is A Slider?

The dance floor was crowded; and this, you may say, is a heck of a way to start a sports column—but wait! Despite the soft music and dimmed lights, the lady was talking sports, trying to persuade her escort that she has a pretty good knowledge of sports in general, and baseball in particular.

The routine questions were easy for her. How many men on a team—how many innings in a game—what is an out—what is a fly chaser, etc. Yup, the gal knew her baseball... even though she admitted never having seen a ball game.

And then the villainous interrogator slipped in a teaser: "What is a slider?"

It didn't seem possible that the answer could be so contrary to the expected reply, so it was decided to try the question on other female experts. The opportunity came sooner than expected, at a public affair, during a chat with a pair of sisters. These gals demonstrated an extensive knowledge of the game, and one of them even argued the merits and demerits of a recent column here about Ted Williams.

Again the sneak query: "What is a slider?"

The opinion was unanimous... the same as the answer on the dance floor.

It's amazing what television has done to the women. As far as sports are concerned, I mean. It has given the distaff element a new talking point around the household as if, of course, they ever needed a new talking point—or is that hitting below the belt?

For instance, take the fights over TV on Wednesday and Friday nights. No matter where you go, hardly a gal dares lift her head who does not know the fighters' names, ages, weights and capabilities. Furthermore, they are highly qualified to serve as referees.

The lady of one house came home boiling mad one recent Wednesday because Ezzard Charles had been awarded a unanimous decision over Jersey Joe Walcott. It was unfair, said she, and grand larceny. The referee was blind or crooked or both. Walcott won that fight by a mile. It was fixed!

Then she listed her points. Walcott hit harder and his punches did more damage. He seemed more aggressive. He unleashed a couple of flurries that had the champ worried.

And this vehement outburst and appraisal from a girl who for years has been the kindest, gentlest and most considerate of mothers. Once upon a time she used to find it difficult to keep up with the baseball talk around the house. Now, in the baseball season, she calls the office when something spectacular happens on the field during a broadcast, and has the day's scores on hand when the menfolk arrive. Now she knows all the fighters, and analyzes boxing styles.

And worse! Now she is a wrestling fan.

It is an awesome thing to talk wrestling with the average woman these days. The girls know the names, favorite holds and dispositions of the grunt and groan artists better than they know the names of the latest husbands and wives of their favorite movie stars.

Listen to them sometime, unless you go through it yourself every Saturday night. The Baron is a mean so-and-so; they hope he gets ground into the mat. The Beckers are good guys—Moto is a villain.

Souls of Compassion

But let's not be unfair. These women have tender souls full of compassion and decency, even if they do watch the rasslers regularly. It hurts them to see one man seemingly get his arm snapped off or another get kicked in the face. Headlocks make them wince. They grunt and groan and sympathize with the poor devil who is caught in a hammer lock from which there apparently is no escape. (All the while the all-knowing male sits back smugly, proclaims the entire exhibition a fake, and then moves into a position which provides a clearer view of the screen).

Recent Bar Mitzvah

JORDAN LEONARD RICHMAN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richman of 24 Gallatin Street, was Bar Mitzvah recently at Temple Beth Israel.

It kills them to watch, these angels who wouldn't even swat a fly in season. It's nerve-wracking and distasteful and they don't see how the poor devils can stand it, and isn't that a horrible way to have to make a living?

But, somehow, these girls—who rush to the first aid cabinet at the first sign of blood from a tiny cut—somehow, they manage to swallow their agony and discomfort on Saturday nights between midnight and 1 A.M. and thrill and chill with the gladiators in the squared ring.

Podner, that takes guts, or my name ain't Hopalong — or is it Beany?

Yes, the woman who used to complain because the man of the house used to want to go out so much to the fights and the ball games, now becomes indignant if they can't stay at home and watch a pair of nondescript featherweights on the TV screen.

Previously, the master couldn't get out because the little woman wasn't interested in sports. Now he can't get out because she is.

Thus has been born a new society of sports fans.

With all this new-found information regarding the athletes, and their self-avowed expertness in such matters, the gals still maintain their charming feminine decorum; and so, while it may be startling and amusing to hear what answers you get to the question: "What is a slider?" it really should be comforting to us TRUE experts, who have been withering on the vine in the face of all their feminine sporttalk.

It shows us that way down deep our women haven't actually changed, God bless them. They are still trusting and naive, still don't know the "inside" of sports.

How can it be otherwise when they maintain that a slider is a man who slides into a base?
