Jewry to Observe Rosh Hashanah

Rhode Island Jewry, looking back on a year of relative peace and notable achievement, both on the home front and in Israel, prepared this week to welcome the New Year 5712 starting at sundown Sunday evening. The High Holy Day period will extend from the evening of Sept. 30 until the conclusion of Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, on Oct. 10.

Services at the various synagogues and temples for Rosh Hashanah, as submitted to the Herald, follow.

SONS OF ABRAHAM

Rosh Hashanah services will begin Sunday evening at 5 P.M. Monday morning services will start at 7 A.M. Rabbi Abraham Chill's sermon, at 9:30 A.M., will be "The Apex of Determination." The same schedule will be followed on Tuesday morning, with

56 Page Issue Is Largest Ever

The 56 pages that comprise this issue have established a new record for the Herald. This is the largest single edition ever published by this newspaper.

To prepare and publish these 56 pages, three and a half times normal size, required also a record number of employees and man-hours, and, for the first time, the use of two presses, of which more will be said shortly. That is not to mention the staggering number of pounds of newsprint required to print seven 8-page sections in sufficient volume to meet the needs of every one of our constantly growing number of subscribers.

For world Jewry, 5711 was an event-crammed year — a year highlighted by the continued growth and development of the Jewish State of Israel. The year's activities started off with a bang when in late October delegates from American Jewish communities met in Washington to map plans for the strengthening of Israel. Among those leaders who addressed the delegates were Beryl Locker, Golda Myerson, Ambassador Abba Eban, and Eliezer Kaplan, Israel's Finance Minister (1).

Shortly thereafter, world Jewry was saddened by the loss of King Gustav, of Sweden, whose efforts on behalf of refugees saved thousands of Jewish lives during World War II (2); tired and reliable Henry Morgenthau, Jr., resigned as leader of the United Jewish Appeal during December after many years of great service and his successor, Edward M. W. Warburg, chatted with the "chief" at a U. J. A. confab (3); a one-time Hungarian immigrant, Anna M. Rosenberg, became Assistant Defense Secretary of the United States amid a hysterical anti-Jewish campaign aimed at smearing the former FDR protege (4); big news of 5711—the launching of American Jewry's greatest financial effort on behalf of the Jewish State—the epic $500,000,000 Israel Bond Drive. Ambassador Eban, Henry Montor, Mr. Morgenthau and former Ambassador to Israel James MacDonald, leaders of the drive, mapped plans (5); A non-party businessman of Israel, Yaa-kov Geri became the center of news from Israel when Ben-Gurion broke a cabinet crisis by appointing him Israel's Minister of Trade (6).

GJC Women Set Oct. 7 for M-Day

On Sunday, October 7, the Women's Division of The General Jewish Committee will wind up its campaign of the 1951 season with M Day. On this day workers from all over the city will assemble at the Narragansett Hotel at 9 A.M. Breakfast will be served, and after a short briefing, the workers, driven to various sections of the city by a motor corps, will cover all their cards in one day. Mrs. Lester Emers, chairman of M day, urges all women to remain home on Sunday morning, October 7, so that a minimum amount of "call backs" will have to be made.

On Wednesday, October 3, a dessert meeting for the workers of M day will be held at the Narragansett Hotel. The skit, "Queen for a Day" will be presented.

$8096 Contributed at Vital Gift Affair

by SELMA NEWMAN

"Israel must become a stronghold of democracy," said Miss Eva Le Gallienne in addressing more than 250 women at the Vital Gifts Luncheon held by the Women's Divisions of the General Jewish Committee of Providence and of the Blackstone Valley United Jewish Appeal held last Tuesday at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel.

(The Providence women contributed $8096.25 which represents an increase in giving by the same people last year. Figures for the Pawtucket group were not available at press time.)

Israel, though small in quantity of land is tremendously valuable in quality of spirit, Miss Le Gallienne said. "The hard and austere life by the Israelis is based on a vision of service and sharing. She has been willing to double her population under the most trying conditions. Her spirit is a symbol of freedom and of a new life. Her position at the crossroads of three continents is a beachhead of democracy."

She urged the women present to think of the hardships the Israelis have suffered. "We must imagine ourselves in their place and in so imagining must work harder today to place in their hands the help they need today. When there is bloodshed and great risk, it is easier to get funds," she continued. "Victory must not be an end, but a beginning. We must be aware of our blessings and we must open our hearts and our pocketbooks to make Israel strong. We must give while we live; we must be grateful to give," she concluded.

Mrs. Burton Finberg, of Providence, and Mrs. Hyman Cokin, of Pawtucket, were chairmen of their respective Vital Gifts Committees.

Mrs. Bertram Bernhardt read the prayer at the opening of the meeting. Greetings were extended by Mrs. Archie Fain, chairman of the Women's Division of GJC, and Mrs. Mitchell Glick, chairman of the Blackstone Valley Women's Division.

Mrs. Albert Pilavin, vice-chairman of the National Women's Division, UJA, and honorary chairman of the Providence Women's Division, introduced the guest speaker.

A play, "Queen for a Day," written by Mrs. Myles Alper and directed by Mrs. Charles Reitman was presented.

wind tour of the nation on behalf of the Israel Bond Drive. Afforded a tremendous ovation in dozens of communities, the Silver Knight was credited with selling $30,000,000 worth of bonds here (8); the war in Korea continued despite truce talks. And the Jewish State of Israel maintained its flow of medical supplies, to United Nations' troops battling tyranny far away.

Styles were different ... worries less and the world still at peace 35 years ago when Jews of the world's largest Jewish Community—New York City, U.S.A.—prepared to celebrate the advent of Rosh Hashanah in the pre-World War I era. But the hustle and rush on the eve of the New Year was the same then as now. Youngsters, attired in their finest were led to the synagogue by their elders. As Jewry prepares to usher in 5712 many of the youngsters in this rare collection of photos are leading grandchildren to the House of Prayer. Wearing their finest, adults and youngsters enter one of the Big City's larger synagogues as Rosh Hashanah approaches (1); immigrants still flocked to the New World in large numbers when these pictures were taken more than three decades ago. Here newly arrived prospective Americans don talasim at the dock to celebrate Rosh Hashanah (2); the holiday was not complete without the traditional wine for blessings. You brought your own bottle in those days and left with a full jug for the impressive price of a quarter or less (3); a group poses at the shofar blowing heralding the New Year in Old New York many years ago. FCC Insists On Guarantees Before OK On Richard's Stations

WASHINGTON (AJP) — The Federal Communications Commission indicated this week that it wanted guarantees of no news-slanting on the stations of the late G. A. Richards before it would restore the licenses to normal status.

The FCC made known its stand in a letter to Mrs. Frances Richards, executrix of the estate of Richards, who died in the midst of a long fight waged against him on charges of anti-Semitism.

The FCC asked for "clarification" of program policies given in the application filed by Mrs. Richards to take over control of the stations, KMPC in Los Angeles, WJR in Detroit and WGAR in Cleveland.

A statement in the application that current program policies would be continued "without change" was criticized by the FCC which said that in view of the proceedings against the stations, "additional information" on program policies was needed.

Civic Leader Awarded High Medal by Pope for Youth Work

KANSAS CITY (AJP)—A Jewish civic leader, active for many years in furthering youth activities of all faiths, this week became one of the few Jews to be awarded the Benemerinti Medal for distinguished service by Pope Pius XII. The medal, which was instituted by the head of the Catholic Church in 1832 as a reward for civic courage and achievement, was bestowed upon George L. Goldman at a dinner here last week.

The presentation to Goldman was made by His Excellency, the Most Reverend Edwin Vincent O'Hara, D.D., Bishop of Kansas City.

Goldman received the award for his civic activities which include youth sports projects, church benefits, Boy Scout activities and veterans work in the community.

Golf Finalists Set For Title Scramble

Dick Loebenberg and Julie Bloom moved into the final round of the first Division in the Jewish Herald Golf Tournament this week at Ledgemont Country Club. Loebenberg gained the final round with a victory over Murray Trinkle, while Bloom downed Gerry Shaulson.

In the finals of the second Division it will be D. Spangler and B. Gollis for the title. Spangler worked his way up by setting down Eddie Zaretsky in the semi-finals, while B. Gollis took care of Sam Chase Jr.

Meanwhile the third Division, which started with twice as many contestants, is now at the semi-final stage, with J. Robinson, F. Darman, H. Fain and F. Goldstein still in contention. These men defeated J. Bilow, M. Paynor, S. Marks and G. Reizen in the quarter-finals.

Cornelia O. Skinner To Appear Here

Cornelia Otis Skinner will bring Mansion On the Hudson, a play which is entirely her own creation, to Hope High School Auditorium, on Monday, October 8, at 8:30 P. M. under the auspices of the R. I. Wellesley Club.

Written, produced and acted in its entirety by Miss Skinner, Mansion On the Hudson has been hailed by critics as one of Miss Skinner's most impressive achievements.

Through six picturesque and dramatic scenes, the stage is filled with unseen characters who seem to walk and talk as Miss Skinner portrays the succeeding mistresses of "Tall Trees," the mansion on the Hudson from which the play derives its name.

MacIver "Poor Choice" To Make NCRAC Survey, Weekly Lashes

NEW YORK CITY (AJP) — The controversy in Jewish circles over the MacIver report on Jewish defense agencies moved into the Hebrew sector this week when Hadoar, a national weekly in that language, severely criticized the report.

The attack preceded a unanimous resolution by the evaluative study committee of the NCRAC praising Dr. Robert M. MacIver and flaying his critics.

Hadoar, which is published by Histadrut Ivrit, a society for the promotion of Hebrew, declared in a lead article that the choice of Dr. MacIver to make the study was "unfortunate."

The attack preceded a unanimous "pen-name," Shoshani, believed to be a well-known Zionist literary figure.

"Shoshani" wrote that he had read the report very carefully and that he felt it was "lacking in originality" and "constructiveness."

Meanwhile, the Synagogue Council of America, was scheduled to take up the report at a meeting Oct. 4. The SCA coordinates the work of all three religious groups.

The SCA meeting, it was learned, was expected to discuss a statement by the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, representing the Reform Temple of the United States, to the National Community Relations Advisory Council, sponsor of the MacIver report.

The UAHC told the NCRAC in a brief last week that it was ready to comply with a MacIver report recommendation that the UAHC take over all interfaith work in the Jewish defense field. The UAHC said also that it doubted that the Synagogue Council could do any work in the field, as suggested by MacIver.

In contending that Professor MacIver was not the best choice to conduct the survey, Hadoar expressed belief that a person more active in Jewish life would have provided a better choice.

USO Seeks Aid From Local Funds

An appeal to include the United Defense Fund, of which USO is the chief beneficiary, in the allocations of the Providence Community Chest was made last week by Sydney Hoffman, chairman of the Providence USO Committee, and Saul E. R. Feinberg, president of the Jewish Community Center.

The appeal pointed to the fact that even if peace in Korea is attained, there will be four million men and women in uniform next year, with a corresponding need for USO service.

Paul J. Robin is state USO chairman.

COMING—THE NEW HERALD

Drop Jake Goldberg On 'Red' Charges

NEW YORK CITY (AJP)—A National Broadcasting Company spokesman told the American Jewish Press that the network had no comment on persistent reports that Philip Loeb, who plays the role of "Jake" on "The Goldbergs," had been ousted on charges of Communist sympathies.

Among the veteran and other groups which have fought Loeb on these grounds was the American Jewish League Against Communism.

The NBC spokesman said that Mollie Berg, creator and star of the Jewish family program, was now in Europe and that she was the only member of the cast who has been signed by NBC which has grabbed the program from CBS.

The spokesman said that when Mollie Berg returns, the rest of the cast would be signed. He declined to reply to a question as to whether Loeb was among those scheduled for signing.

The latest issue of Red channels, a listing of alleged pro-Communists, charged that Loeb was affiliated in one manner or another with more than a dozen pro-Red groups and activities.

Loeb could not be reached for comment.

A spokesman for the American Jewish League Against Communism confirmed that group's assistance in opposing Loeb's radio role.

"I'll bet anything he doesn't appear on the program again," the spokesman said.

Discussion Group Hears Rev. Morton

Rev. Richard K. Morton, pastor of Smithfield Avenue Congregational Church of Pawtucket, and a member of the board of the R. I. Seminar of Human Relations, spoke on "Inter-Cultural Relationships" at a meeting of the Young Adult Thursday Night Discussion group at the Jewish Community Center last week.

Rev. Morton, who conducts a "This Is America" program over WPRO, replaced Prof. S. Elizabeth Campbell, whose appearance was cancelled because of illness.

Milton Rubin was chairman of the program, assisted by Paul Litwin, Barbara Solomon and Kay Markel. Dancing followed the lecture.

The organization, composed of unmarried men and women, meets on alternate Thursdays at the Center. Young adults are invited to participate. The next meeting will be held Oct. 4 with Morton Blender, local radio music commentator, as guest.

A. E. PI BOWLING By Jerry Freiberg

The first matches of the A.E. Pi Bowling League got under way Thursday night at the Bowldrome. The Bisons, with Captain Buddy Flink bowling a record breaking 361, three string total, defeated the Hornets 4 to 0. The Flyers defeated the Bears 3 to 1, while the Barons and Eagles, Mohawks and Indians tied 2 to 2 respectively.

High singles for the night were bowled by the following men: Buddy Flink, 130 and 124; Jerry Port, 126; Murray Hann, 125; Walt Weisman, 122 and 112; Donald Cohen, 117; Merrill Temkin, 116; Leon Temkin, 116 and 112; Warren Fish, 114; Lloyd Turoff, 113; Dick Klein, 112; Sid Dressler, 112; Saul Feinstein, 111; Jerry Frieberg, 110; and Howard Lapidus, 110.

Bowling high three in addition to Buddy Flink were the following men: Donald Cohen, 333; Leon Temkin, 332; Jerry Port, 331; Walt Weisman, 331; Warren Fish, 324; Lloyd Turoff, 322; Sid Dressler, 315; and Bernie Beider, 314.

Ruby Goldstein Leads Boxing Refs

By BEN FEINGOLD

In recent years, the fight game has seen the emergence of Jewish referees to the top strata of fistic officiating.

Ex-fighters, themselves, these boys are young, fast and alert. They know how to take complete charge in the ring.

Among the top-fighters are Ruby Goldstein, Mark Conn, and Maurice "Red" Goodman.

Leading lights in fisticiana acclaim Goldstein, "Ex-Jewel of the Ghetto," the best referee in the business.

Ruby, a crack liquor salesman in-between refereeing chores, is very popular in the trade because so many of them are fight fans. The top-notch separator speaks a fluent Yiddish and serves as a beckoning attraction at Jewish clubs along the Eastern seaboard in the capacity of a speaker.

Goldstein, who refereed the "Sugar Ray" Robinson - Randy Turpin bout for the middleweight title, was entirely justified in halting the scrap when Turpin was helpless, although there were a few declaimers.

Regarding this, Ruby told us— "Ten years from now, Turpin will thank me for having stopped the bout. It's better for him to have lost his title—than his life!"

And there, you have Mr. Goldstein.

Mark Conn, second of the young group of Jewish refs, is a former Golden Gloves lightweight champion. During World War II he rose to the rank of major, refereeing more than 1,000 bouts in the China-Burma-India theatre of operations.

Mark, a very handsome lad, has Celtic features, and because of his name and puss, is often mistaken for an Irishman.

His non-Jewish appearance led Conn to an interesting incident in Ceylon, India, one night years ago. Two GIs, an Irishman and a Jew, were opponents in the ring.

The Jewish lad had a habit of holding, and Conn censured for the offense several times. At each warning, the Jewish fighter, thinking Conn was Irish and favoring his opponent, would mutter under his breath, in sheer despair—"Gahargit zultu varin! . . . Gahargit zultu varin!"

Each time he would mutter the phrases, Conn would smile, but say nothing.

At the end of the bout, Mark walked over to the Jewish boxer's corner and casually remarked, "Yuss mainstu, mein keind—'Gahargit zultu varin?' Iz duss a shaina zach tst zugen?"

Needless to say, when the boxer realized that Mark was also Jewish, his face became redder than a beet suffering from high blood pressure.

Maurice "Red" Goodman has come along by leaps and bounds since first donning the gray shirt of a boxing referee.

He attended Seward Park High School on the East Side of New York City and it was there that fame of a nature first came his way.

For many years the school's football team had failed to score a single point. It had become known as "The Scoreless Wonders." It fell to Maurice's lot to tally the first touchdown for Alma Mater, an event often discussed when Seward Park Alumni get together to shmooos.

Maurice's appetite is prodigious, and it's a treat to see him put away a kosher meal in one of his favorite East Side restaurants.

Goodman's favorite meal, for the record, starts off with a plentiful serving of chopped liver with chicken fat. Then comes chicken soup with noodles and mondlin, flanken, steaming French fried potatoes, lima beans, sauerkraut, a sour tomato and pickle relish, tea, but in a glass, honey cake, a bottle of iced beer—and, oh, yes, six large slices of fresh challah. Gosh, we're getting hungry just writing about it;

Embarrassing, to say the least, was an experience "Red" had in his first refereeing assignment. At the close of the third round, Goodman developed a charley-horse in his left leg and was forced to quit. A sub-referee took over. Harking back to the incident,

Goodman recalled—"It was just one of those things. I had a charley-horse I couldn't kick!"

Opera Stars Are Chazanim During Jewish Holidays

A sentimental High Holy Day journey will be made to the synagogue this year by several world-famous concert and opera stars whose voices will be lifted once again in the familiar and haunting traditional Jewish liturgy.

Such headliners as Richard Tucker, Robert Merrill, Igor Gorin and Jan Peerce will return to the role of cantor in which their singing careers began. Though they have achieved stardom in the wider world, they have not forgotten the synagogue and return at least once a year to the bimah.

The source for both synagogue music and the men who chanted it throughout American Jewish history has been the European centers of Jewish life. The prospective chazan received his training from a practicing one, and from this tutoring system came virtually all cantors in American synagogues today.

When Hitler destroyed the great European Jewish centers, he also wiped out all the sources of cantors and liturgy. As in other matters, American Jewish religious leaders had to look to the resources of American Judaism.

Several years ago, an attempt was made to bring all the Jewish seminaries together to create one school of sacred music for all branches of American Judaism.

but the effort failed.

However, the Hebrew Union College, a leading Reform seminary, decided to go ahead, and established the Hebrew Union School of Sacred Music in New York, the only school for cantors in the world. The first class was graduated last June.

So, if a Jewish youth with a promising voice and a desire to use it in sacred music comes along, he can either seek out an established cantor and study with him, or try the HUC school.

Though it is a Reform-sponsored institution, the HUC school insists on complete freedom of religious expression and prepares its students to serve in any of the three groups in Judaism.

As Dr. Abraham N. Franzblau, dean of the school puts it, "Throughout the three years of its existence, it has adhered faithfully to its goal of serving Klal Yisrael, admitting students without restriction, calling to its faculty the outstanding talent of the Orthodox, Conservative and Reform fields, and serving all three groups when they called on it for student cantors or full-time cantors."

Cantors have traditionally had

Bernstein Directs Brandeis Art School

BOSTON (AJP)—Jewish conductor and composer, Leonard Bernstein, was named this week to the post of director of a new School of Creative Art established by Brandeis University, located at nearby Waltham.

The new school became the fourth curricular division to be created by the three-year-old Jewish-sponsored liberal arts university.

Bernstein is expected to direct
a week-long festival of the creative arts next June in connection with Brandeis University's first commencement.

The School of Creative Arts began operation earlier this week with the start of the university's fall term.

School Faculty Introduced At Meeting

At the first meeting of the Ladies Association of the Providence Hebrew Day-School, Mr. Zapinsky, principal of the school, introduced the faculty of the school to the assembled members and friends.
Mrs. M. Brodsky, president, presided. Mrs. P. Goldberg and Mrs.
N. Weiss were hostesses for the evening. Mrs. S. Popkin and Mrs.
J. Bell poured. It was announced that a dining room shower will be held at the next meeting on October 3 in the school building.

Sisterhood Names Committee Chairmen

At the first board meeting of the Sisterhood of Temple Beth-Israel the following chairmen were announced for the coming year:
Mesdames Harry Goldenberg, ways and means; Irving Beranbaum, dinner dance; Daniel Fain and Charles Coken, junior congregation; Samuel Deutch, book of life;
Morris Schussheim and Harry Krieger, gift shop; Aaron Cohen

brary; Minnie Nelson, flower fund;
Samuel Brier, sunshine; Albert
Coken and Marshall Marcus, program; Samuel Ernstof, Succoth and Lawrence Solomon, bowling.

CRANSTON BOWLING

By Lindy

The first night of the men's third season produced, in addition to assorted aches and pains from muscles long forgotten since May,
many good scores from both old and new members alike.

High single string for the night was rolled by Harold Aven with 130, followed by two newcomers,
Harold Warren, 127, and Ed Feinberg, 124. Doc Dreyfuss rolled 123, Herb Woolf, 120, Moe Cofman and Len Slavitt followed with 119 each. Other high strings were posted by Ed Lang, 118, Dave Hoffman, Moe Filler and Max Levy,
117, Al Levy and Bill Deitch 114,
Al Samdperil and Ben Mellion,
110, Al Cohen 109, and Mike Miller, 108.

High three string total for the evening was posted by Warren with 349, followed closely by Fein-berg's 343. Moe Filler rolled 329, just shading Herb Woolf's 328.

Mike Miller went 320 and Moe
Kessler 317.

First member of the Double
Strike Club this season was Harold Tregar who turned the trick early in his third string.

BETH-EL BOWLING

By Joe Gutterball

The largest and most enthusiastic turnout in the history of the league opened the new season last week. President Murray Trinkle reminds all bowlers to be at the Casino alleys not later than 8:45 each week in order to get the matches started on time.

Some good opening week scores were turned in. Doctor Dick Deutch registered the high single of 138, with Doctor Walter Nelson scoring 131. Dick Barber's team racked up a three-string total of 1575, of which Dick rolled 353, both high for the night.

Other high scores were: Morris
Feldman I, 344; Lou Shatkin, 343;
Vin DeCesaris, 336, and Jack
Bilow, 335.

WISH THEIR FRIENDS AND CUSTOMERS A HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NE WYEAR

To Rhode Island Jewry:

On the eve of our New Year 5712 the Rhode Island Zionist Region extends to you and your loved ones its sincere greetings and best wishes for a forthcoming year of blessings and happiness.

Israel is still fighting for its economic existence and facing a military crisis. Yet, Israel is bravely continuing her gigantic program of the "Ingathering of the Exiles". As true pioneers and by selfless devotion they are happy in their sacrifice. We must continue to let them know of our respect and admiration.

American Jews organized in the ranks of the Zionist Organization of America are keenly aware of conditions in Israel and are pledged to help alleviate these difficulties. The ensuing year presents an unprecedented challenge to all Zionists and indeed to every Jew in the United States.

Through our organized participation in the Israel Bond Drive, through the ZOA Projects Fund and our political efforts we are contributing tremendously to Israel's efforts to reach economic stability and independence. Our educational program must be geared to bring the message of "Israel Reborn" to all Americans.

There is much work to be done and to do it effectively we must mobilize every Jew. Numerical strength in membership is one of our greatest assets in creating public opinion in our favor.

The year 5711 which we are ushering out brought great improvement to Israel and prosperity to our American Jewish Community. Let us be forever grateful for this progress and let us pray that the year 5712 will bring us all happiness and peace and an era of prosperity and recovery to Israel.

Respectfully yours,

M. Louis Abedon

A Study of the Great In Acting

Maurice Zolotow certainly knows the entertainment field. As a reporter in show business, he is superb. His new book, "No Business Like Show People" (Random House, 457 Madison, N. Y.) proves it. Jack Benny, Oscar Levant, Jed Harris, Fred Allen, Ethel Merman, Tallulah Bankhead, Jimmy Durante and Frank Fay appear in interesting light in these studies.

"Are actors people?" the author asks. The answer is a clear one. Each of the studies reveals the human elements of the group. Some of them, in the author's analyses, emerge as morose, bitter, disturbed. Nevertheless, they are human. Most of them are warm-hearted, anxious-to-be-of-service, liberal—even kind.

Tallulah Bankhead and Jimmy Durante lead off. The first is the endearingly outrageous woman who continues to conquer her audiences; the second is the great entertainer who has risen to great heights despite bitter childhood.

Oscar Levant, "making enemies by acting surly, insulting, bitter and utterly egocentric," nevertheless rose to great heights as a pianist and as a wit. He was in the Gershwin orbit and became George Gershwin's "major satellite." In fact, he became completely dependent upon Gershwin. Then came a steady income at the piano and fame on the "Information Please" program.

Zolotow believes: "There is a streak of sadness sometimes mixed in with the sadism of Levant's humor. But the sadism is always there, always irrepresible. Recently, somebody said to Billy Rose, 'Billy, I think success has really mellowed Oscar Levant.' 'Yeah,' replied Rose, 'Oscar has mellowed—like an old pistol!'"

Jack Benny, comedian of the airways, who makes so many people laugh, is not such a happy person either. "He is a nail biter and a thumb rubber." Nevertheless, he is radio's outstanding success. Born Benny Kubelsky, in Waukegan, Ill., Benny had an interesting career before his rise to fame. His violin helped him a great deal. So did his wife, the former Sadye Marks who became the radio-famous Mary Livingston. They adopted daughter Joan in 1935. It is a happy family—and is hard-working to retain its well-earned status in the entertainment world.

"Benny is not discontented with his success and with the life he leads, a life that consists almost entirely of scheming and sweating to make his radio show consistently popular."

Will he make good on TV? Zolotow doubts it.

Jed Harris, born Jacob Horowitz in Vienna, is introduced as the great producer and director who "is closer to the childlike temperament of the actor than he is to the more placid nature which most Broadway producers possess." But Harris has a "hot and violent temper, and frequently has more fire than his actors."

"No People Like Show People" is, in its totality, a very good book—interesting, informative, entertaining.

TEEN TOWN

Aaron Schwartz was elected president of Teen Town, it was announced this week. Other officers are Joan Swartz, vice-president; Hilda Gilden, secretary; and Maxine Benjamin, treasurer. The club will meet every other Wednesday night in the vestry of the Synagogue at High and Jackson Streets in Pawtucket.

Orthodox Rabbis Refuse 'David, Film Ads; Reject Love Theme

NEW YORK CITY (AJP)—Two national Orthodox Jewish groups have rejected advertisements on the technicolor film "David and Bathsheba" for their official publications, one on the grounds that the film is "too sexy," the American Jewish Press learned this week.

Twentieth-Century Fox offices here have set up a special campaign to win cooperation of Jewish groups in promoting the movie. The rejections of the advertisements by Young Israel, a national youth group, and the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations, representing more than 500 synagogues, were the first rebuffs in the film company's campaign.

Rabbi Irwin Gordon, executive director of the UOJC, told the AJP that the advertisement for

"Orthodox Jewish Life," the UOJC publication, had been rejected because it was felt the picture was "too sexy."

A critical review of the film by Rabbi Shubert Spero of the organization is scheduled to appear in the magazine's next issue, Rabbi Gordon said.

A half-page advertisement for the "Young Israel Viewpoint" was turned down "on principle," a Young Israel spokesman told the AJP.

He said that his organization felt the Bible should not be used as a vehicle for film stories. He added that strong objections had been voiced to the story of David being transformed into a "love movie."

The Young Israel spokesman said the group also felt that too much time and effort was going into portrayals of Jewish historical and religious figures which emphasized their faults.

Neither organization had any plans for a boycott of the film. The Young Israel spokesman said that many members probably had seen the movie but that there was no reason for the organization to officially urge them to do so.

The film had come under critical Jewish scrutiny when it was first released here. Several Jewish organizations indicated that the portrayal of God in the film was likely to reinforce anti-Jewish religious stereotypes. These organizations, however, declined to take any specific action.

Arthur Szyk Jewish Artist Dies at 57

NEW YORK CITY (AJP)—Arthur Szyk, internationally famous artist who supported the extremist Irgun during the British Mandate in Palestine, died last week after a brief illness. He was 57.

Szyk was an active member of the American League for a Free Palestine, the chief front group in the United States for the Irgun. He dropped out of the organization shortly after the State of Israel was proclaimed.

He applied his talents for the new state in an illuminated scroll of the Israel Declaration of Independence. For many years, his work dealt with Biblical themes, many of them gracing the nation's foremost publications.

Born in Poland, Szyk came to the United States, explaining he wanted to live here because he regarded this country as "the inner bastion of democracy."

One of the most impressive achievements by Szyk was a series of illustrations for the Hagadah, on which he labored four years. It required the printers three years to complete its publication in 1940.

Each of the 240 copies of the limited edition sold for $500.

duties other than their chanting, and the HUC school trains its graduates to serve as directors of religious schools and as teachers of Hebrew, in addition to the specific training for chazzanuth.

For these varied services, what can a would-be cantor expect in working conditions and remuneration? Well, a cantor is a community servant, with all the complications that frequently attend such a position. Most full-time cantors earn between $4,000 and $8,000 a year, with some exceptionally gifted ones in the major Jewish centers earning as much as $15,000.

A Kiddush and reception will be held by the Cranston Jewish Community Club in honor of Rabbi Raymond Laiman directly after the evening services Sunday at Legion Hall, Cranston. Services will start at 7:30 P.M. instead of 5:30 as previously announced.

Family Service Hits Black Market Baby Racketeers

DENVER (AJP) — A Denver Jewish family service was credited this week with uncovering a black market in babies.

According to information unearthed by the Jewish Family and Children's Service, childless couples in Denver were disclosed to have paid up to $5,000 to out-of-town racketeers for babies, some of which turned out to be suffering from incurable diseases. One was blind, another feeble-minded and a third weighed only 18 pounds at the age of four because of illness, the Intermountain Jewish News reported.

The readiness of parents to deal with black marketeers was highlighted by a report that the Jewish family service can satisfy only one childless couple out of five seeking to adopt children.

Discuss Physical Education Program

The season of new activities was planned at the Jewish Community Center's Health and Physical Education Committee meeting held last week under the chairmanship of Harold C. Sydney. Others present were Dr. Phillip Cooper, Al Miller, Isadore Wolfe, and George Koninsky.

Sydney suggested that the Committee broaden its program plans so that all age groups in the community will become involved. Charles Glovin, Director of Health and Physical Education at the Boston Y.M.H.A., pointed out the importance of a well-planned program for all age groups. He also elaborated on the need for community leaders to take an active interest in the Health and Physical Education program.

Vet Blasts Adoption Of German Youth

DETROIT (AJP)—A "leading Jewish citizen" of Mt. Clemens, Mich., was sharply criticized last week by an overseas Jewish war veteran for adopting a German boy "to show him how democracy works."

The adoption by the Mt. Clemens man, whose name was not given, was reported in a letter from Nathan Litvin, to the Jewish News of Detroit.

Enclosing an article from a paper in Mt. Clemens, a suburb of Detroit, Litvin wrote that as a "veteran of four years fighting the German Nazis, I was quite shocked to see the enclosed article which states that a so-called leading Jewish citizen of St. Clemens has adopted a German boy for one year to show him how democracy works."

JUNIOR CONGREGATION

The Beth David Congregation, 145 Oakland Avenue, will, for the first time in its history, conduct special children's services on both days of Rosh Hashanah. Conducted by the principal of the Sunday School and Hebrew School, Mrs. George Bernard Schwartz, the services will be held in the Synagogue vestry room at 11 A.M.

PLAIN • TALK

By ALFRED SEGAL

We Get $150,000

Our Mr. Hillel (Hillel Widget Corp.) dropped in to say goodbye. He was going on vacation. He felt just too tired of widgets and he said, when you feel that tired of widgets, it's time to quit and run away from them.

What practically wore him down and out was an overwhelming order for widgets from the Surplus Assets Administration. That's the department that sells things that the government bought and doesn't need anymore.

"Why," I asked him, "does Surplus Assets need to buy widgets? Just to increase the surplus of things not needed?"

Mr. Hillel guessed that a Surplus Assets Administration needs surplus assets in order that the department may be kept going. What's a Surplus Assets without surplus? Therefore, surplus widgets.

He, a patriot if there ever was one, tried to argue the matter with the officials but they said No. Surplus Assets must have a surplus and Mr. Hillel's widgets were the very things to make surplus.

So, Mr. Hillel put his factory to work, day and night, making surplus widgets. The widgets were piling up and when the pile came to be more than he could endure he decided to run away to vacation. To hell with widgets. He would get as far away from widgets as he could.

"But, Mr. Hillel," I said, "it may be an embarrassing question but I'm asking you: Are you running away from the profits of all those widgets?"

"Precisely," he replied. "The widgets are surplus and so the profits will be surplus which I don't need." In fact, that was one of the things he had called to speak with me about. "I want you to take all the profits on those widgets. Not for your own benefit of course, but for good causes, preferably Jewish. You may use the money as you charitably see fit."

"How much will it amount to, Mr. Hillel?" He made a rough calculation.

"Oh, it's about $150,000," he finally replied. "I am sure you will distribute it wisely."

I could see the strain of heavy burden falling away from Mr. Hillel's broad shoulders. He relaxed. He had put it all on me. "I leave it to you," he said, as he shook my hand in farewell.

At first I felt flattered to have $150,000 thrust into my hands to give away charitably to the agencies of Jewish life. Then a horrible realization struck me as between the eyes: All the terrific ordeal of having $150,000 to hand out!

Thinking of this, I tossed on my bed all that night and even phenobarbital provided no sedation. Brief lapses of slumber brought me only nightmares in which I was beset by solicitors of all the Jewish organizations, bearing brochures and brief cases. One after another they were at my doorbell . . . "Your attention please, Mr. Segal."

They were tracking up the living room rug and my poor wife, a meticulous housekeeper, was beside herself. She looked out of the window and, seeing the crowd that was gathering there she drew back.

"Let's run away from all this, somewhere, anywhere."

"But where?" I asked.

She thought maybe Alaska.

Even at that moment a gentleman in a fur parka injected himself into our living room. He left snow tracks on the rug.

"I," he said, "am from Alaska. I am the president of the Yukon League Opposed to Anti-Semitism. Our purpose is to propagate good will among the Eskimos up the Arctic circle. Of course, we need the money."

I went on this way all through the night. All Israel was plucking at my coat tails. Between nightmares I took more sedatives, occasionally a cup of warm milk.

Yet there occurred also an incident flattering to my vanity. I had been an obscure man in the Jewish fold of our town. My wife frequently had said that my tux would be eaten up by moths, considering how little I used it.

By this she meant reproachfully to say that I am never invited to sit at the speakers' table where tuxes are worn at the Jewish affairs . . . "I don't see why you ever bought that tux," she said frequently.

But now, as a man in the money, ($150,000 worth) I was in demand. I became happily aware of this when from among the doorbell ringers there appeared a committee from the Anshe Giorim Burial Society.

"We have come," the chairman explained, "not to ask anything of you but only to honor you. We should like to have you preside at our grand annual dinner at the Pavilion Caprice Hotel. That night we are starting our campaign to raise money to buy deeper and better graves."

At this my wife couldn't help exclaiming: "Now you can wear your tux!"

Our pleasant contemplation of this was interrupted by uproar outside. I flung open the door . . . "What's all this?" . . . Out of the tumult I gathered there was a furious debate going on between the representatives of organizations as to which of them was better entitled to my money. They were the Friendly Society to Encourage Good Will Among Hotel Clerks Toward Jewish Travelers; the Society Against Saying Some of My Best Friends Are Jews; the Association to Promote Love for Jews in College Fraternities.

Oh, my $150,000 was fomenting disunity in Jewry! Divided Jewry would fall into fragments and Jewish history would put the guilt on me. Against this prospect I slammed the door shut with a loud, frightened bang. The sound awakened me; the early dawn of summer was in the room.

I went to the telephone and dispatched a telegram to Mr. Hillel at his vacation place: "Please take back your $150,000."

What NOT to Do At Holiday Service

With the High Holidays here, let's look at our congregational manners. The beauty and dignity of worship on this most solemn occasion in the Jewish year can be ruined by thoughtless worshippers. Don't be one of them.

For instance, every Jew should be in the synagogue, but that ideal doesn't necessarily include unpredictable year-old infants. A squalling, kicking baby—as cute as he or she might be in the coziness of the living room—is a distraction that only enemies of the rabbi would wish upon him. Children racing up and down the aisles, thus converting the synagogue or temple byways into a speed track, hazardous for all others, are no credit to parents, either.

Two certain ways to delay services have a wide vogue. One is to congregate in front of the synagogue. Another is to arrive late and trample a lot of feet before finally getting seated. Sometimes, it isn't possible to avoid being tardy but what's the excuse for the other breach of decorum?

Now for the matter of clothes: Every congregant wants to look nice at services. It's both natural and admirable, but there is such a thing as overdressing, a point for the mindful women to ponder. Why make your friends resentful? And a memo to the younger generation: deposit the bubble gum at home—not on the synagogue bench. In other words, don't chew at services.

In a majority of American synagogues, the head must be covered. Try to remember to bring your own yarmulke. The poor, hurried shammos has plenty to do without hunting up a skull cap for you.

Once you are in the house of worship, keep your greetings to friends confined to a cheerful nod and a smile. A great big loud and resounding "Hello, how are you?" is fine—after services are over and you and your friends have left the synagogue or temple.

Of course, talking, whispering or applause are totally out of place during services. You wouldn't do such things, but some of your fellow-worshippers do. Maybe they'll read this.

Most important of all is your obligation to follow the services closely. Worship is a cooperative procedure, in which the rabbi and cantor jointly participate with the congregation. Naturally you can't keep your place if your attention is wandering.

Prayers during the New Year services have been a vital part of the bonds which have kept the Jewish people together through the centuries. Don't be a weak link in the chain.

It is not too late to have your New Year greeting published in the Herald. Just call GA 1-4312. But don't delay—do it today.

By MILTON FRIEDMAN

Harry Houdini was a Jew who specialized in getting himself out of chains and tight places. Harry Rosenfield is a Jew who specializes in getting thousands of people out of chains of red tape and such tight places as displaced persons camps. Rosenfield is probably a better magician than Houdini.

As U. S. Displaced Persons Commissioner, Rosenfield has not only gotten 250,000 out of Europe, despite a spitefully unworkable DP act, but has also succeeded in defeating the Iron Curtain ideas of Sen. Pat McCarran. Rosenfield's theory is that immigration is not only healthy for the immigrant but also for America; that America doesn't build immigrants as much as immigrants build America. Testimony to the truth of Rosenfield's theory is seen in the magical change he helped bring about in the governmental attitude toward immigration. Instead of finding ways to keep people out, the government is actually trying to find ways to bring them in.

While Rosenfield was busy trying to bring homeless refugees into the U. S., Sen. McCarran was equally busy trying to keep Rosenfield out of the D.P. Commission. As one of the three-member commission appointed by President Truman, Rosenfield drew the most difficult job. He was and still is the legislative liaison member. The attitude of many legislators toward DP legislation is well-known while the attitude of Senate Judiciary Chairman Pat McCarran is even more infamous. If Houdini worked miracles, then Rosenfield's ledger-deman surpassed even that.

Rosenfield fought for a liberal DP program on the grounds that it is much more dangerous to build an Iron Curtain mentality than it is to allow free access to America subject only to individual screening. His idea is that it is difficult to maintain peace in the world unless the displaced persons are placed. He called the DP program "America's Arsenal of Peace."

When the DP Act of 1948 was written, its terms were so stringent that pessimists said not only would no DP's be admitted but that it was doubly certain that not a single Jew would make it. Actually, the DP Commission worked the "unworkable" act, got it amended in 1950 and more recently it was extended. To date about 20 percent of the DP's have been Jewish, representing approximately 50,000 of the 250,000 admitted.

Rosenfield helped implement reforms in what was this country's first large-scale experiment in selective immigration. These reforms included giving DP's the right to a review of the rejection of their visa application; establishment of the basic principle that stepchildren and adopted children should be considered legally as children of immigrants; the democratization of the law by taking people on the basis of what they can contribute through their worth as human beings rather than by using the wealth of their sponsors as a criteria for selection, and other liberalizing changes.

JEWES IN SPORTS

By BILL WOLF

The number of Jewish players in Big League Baseball this season has been depleted with the sale of pitcher Marv Rotblatt of the Chicago White Sox. The move came as a complete surprise, just when Rotblatt seemed to have earned for himself a niche in the Chicago setup. The Sox announced that Marv was going to the club's Memphis farm team. The explanation given was that he was sold to cut the club's roster to 24, one under the player limit.

Being shipped out of the Big Leagues came as a blow to Marv's hopes for a career in the majors. At best it is a severe temporary setback. When Rotblatt was in New York early in the season he said that he expected to stick around with the Sox now that he was up there. However, his word of caution now comes to mind. Marv warned that you never could tell what would happen.

And so it was in his case. You couldn't tell. From outward appearances it seemed as if he had an excellent chance to stick. The guy was turning in good performances. He saw action in 24

LaGuardia. Rosenfield figured prominently in LaGuardia's inner group of personal aides. He also taught at New York University's School of Education.

He married Leonora Cohen, daughter of the late Morris Rayfield Cohen, who was the only Jewish president of the American Philosophical Society. Mrs. Rosenfield is an assistant professor of French at the University of Maryland. She recently won a faculty fellowship awarded by the American Council of Learned Societies. Rosenfield says his only child, eight-year-old Marianne, "runs the family."

Rosenfield left New York in 1942 to come to Washington as principal attorney for the Federal Security Administration. He served as assistant to such men as Paul McNutt, Oscar R. Ewing, and former Commissioner of Immigration Watson B. Miller. He was called on to aid President Roosevelt in the drafting of some of the most memorable State of the Union and welfare messages. In 1948 he was appointed by President Truman to membership as a U.S. delegate to the United Nations Economic and Social Council (UNESCO) at Geneva, Switzerland. He was later appointed to the DP Commission. Although the confirmation of his appointment was delayed through the influence of Judiciary Chairman McCarran, the administration has stood squarely behind him.

games, many of them as a vital relief hurler. For the season his record was four victories against two defeats.

He roomed with one of the season's outstanding Jewish stars, Saul Rogovin, and together they played a role in the White Sox's history-making spurt that took the club into first place before the Chicagoans finally were stopped. Perhaps some day they'll be team mates again.

Irving Mondschein, considered to be one of the top Jewish athletes in the world, got a grand send-off on his mission to Israel at a dinner on August 2 under the auspices of the U. S. Committee for Sports in Israel. In an interview with this columnist, Irv had a few important things to say concerning his assignment.

For one thing, he has strong hopes of being able to improve track in Israel by strengthening field events. He explained that coaches in Israel use many systems and go off in numerous directions without any kind of unified method. Applying American techniques, he hopes to develop some kind of consistency in techniques by instructing respective Israeli coaches.

"The most important thing," Irv said, "will be working in connection with a normal school under the Ministry of Education. I hope to be able to get across American methods in training and conditioning athletes and a little of the underlying psychology in highly competitive American athletics." Irv will also play an important part in whipping an Israeli Olympics team into shape.

4,300,000 Jews Quit
Europe Since 1850

NEW YORK CITY (AJP)—An estimated 4,300,000 Jews migrated from Europe to the Western Hemisphere and elsewhere during the past 100 years and today the trend is a continuing one with Jews from the Low Countries and France seeking new homes abroad, a study by an agency of the World Jewish Congress disclosed this week.

The study, undertaken by the Institute of Jewish Affairs of the WJC, disclosed that most of the 4,300,000 emigration occurred before 1939. An estimated 71 per cent of Jews remaining in Europe at the start of World War II died, according to the survey. Approximately 200,000 were recorded as having fallen in battle while 5,800,000 were murdered by the Nazis.

The tremendous decrease of European Jewry was illustrated in a comparison of world Jewish population over a 100-year period. The survey estimated that 88 per cent of world Jewry lived in Europe in 1850 while only 24.5 per cent resided on the continent in 1950.

The influence of European Jewry appeared further lessened in view of the fact that of the 2,750,000 Jews reported living in Europe in 1950, the majority resided in the Soviet Union and were isolated from the rest of the Jewish people.

Our Film Folk

BY LEON GUTTERMAN

Three years ago film-makers Emeric Pressburger and Michael Powell presented ballet on the screen in an entirely new way. Their film, "The Red Shoes," won international success among ballet critics and laymen alike. It also presented to the world Britain's most talented young Jewish ballerina, Moira Shearer.

Conducting the music for that ballet was Sir Thomas Beecham. It was his first association with the cinema for many years, and his first association with Powell, a Christian, and Pressburger, a Jew. Sir Thomas suggested that if they were thinking of putting opera on the screen as they had ballet, "Tales of Hoffmann" would be an ideal choice. They agreed.

Pressburger and Powell wanted to use their original "Red Shoes" cast: Shearer, Massine, Helpmann and Tcherina. They wanted Beecham to act as supreme musical director. They wanted to assemble the best English-speaking cast of singers available. It was not until two years later that all these conditions were possible.

It was decided that "Hoffman" should be a composed film: the whole film to be recorded in sound first, with artists afterwards interpreting the visuals in mime and ballet to a recorded playback. This is reversing the usual order of film-making but logically in an opera-film the music was of prime importance. With the cast provisionally decided upon, production was on its way and a new milestone in screen entertainment was on the point of being realized. Six full months of cutting, arranging, scoring, transposing and condensing followed. The opera was cut from three to two hours in length.

It is doubtful if in the entire repertoire of music there is a song more universally known and loved than the Barcarolle from Jacques Offenbach's operetta, "Tales of Hoffman." Its lilting cadences have been played, sung, whistled, recorded in every corner of the world. This was the work of that genius of the light opera theatre, Offenbach, the son of a German-Jewish cantor, who became, for a generation, the musical rage of Paris.

To put Offenbach on the screen wasn't easy. With an Offenbach operetta "the music is the thing" and a visual interpretation of the airiness and grace of its libretto had to harmonize perfectly with this luxurious music. Happily, the former was in the very capable hands of Sir Thomas Beecham and the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, while the latter was in the equally capable hands of the Powell-Pressburger directorial (Continued on next Page) team. And to interpret those bewitching characters with which Offenbach's librettist peopled the operetta, the directors chose an unsurpassable cast including Moira Shearer, Leonide Massine, Ludmilla Tcherina, Robert Helpmann, Pamela Brown and Robert Rounseville . . . to star in this elaborate super-production in Technicolor.

Emeric Pressburger, the Hungarian half of that unbeatable "triple-threat" writer-director-producer combination typified in the by now famous phrase: "A Michael Powell-Emeric Pressburger Production," an artistic "wedding" of the cultural heritages of London and Budapest, was born in Miskolcz, North Hungary. From playing the fiddle in a movie "pia" during the days of silent film in Stuttgart to his current status as one of the screen's foremost creative talents is a long way and one that was fraught with all the "picturesque vicissitudes of 'la vie Boheme,'" which included outwitting suspicious land-ladies, writing short stories (three a day to pay for each meal), sleeping on park benches (in the summer) and in station waiting rooms (in the winter) between dinner and breakfast, and dreaming fitfully of "the big break."

A friend, producer Alexander Korda, a fellow Hungarian, rescued him and put him under contract. Through Korda he met Powell and the rest became notable screen history, twelve years of fruitful, distinguished collaboration marked by such successes as "The 49th Parallel," "The Invaders," "Colonel Blimp," "Stairway to Heaven," "Black Narcissus," "The Red Shoes," and most recently, "Tales of Hoffman," with which they have crowned a decade of almost unmatched achievement.

Yank Westerns

Draw Israelis

WASHINGTON (AJP) — Israel movie theaters are doing boom business but except for American westerns, the fans stay away from U. S. films.

Israeli fans are such movie-lovers that in the larger cities it is necessary to make advance reservations to get a seat, a report of the National Production Authority's motion picture photographic products division disclosed.

To meet the demand, which fills all the 70,000 seats now available in 110 theaters, additional houses are being built, with a super 2,500-seat theater being erected in Tel Aviv.

Prices range from 25 cents to $1.18, the division reported.

Victor Bernstein: From Seaman To Public Relations

(An American Jewish Press Feature)
Back in 1926 a green young cub reporter who didn't know a topping winch from a bower anchor found himself in 'Frisco, part of a winding line of seamen waiting for berths on a round-the-world voyage aboard the President Garfield of the old Dollar Line.

The shipping agent stamped the words "deck hand" beside the name of Victor Bernstein. What was not contained in his seaman's papers, he carried in his seabag. The contents included, among others, a Columbia University degree in journalism.

But newspaper jobs were as scarce then as ever, the cub reporter found. What's more, the travel bug which had moved him to give up a promising berth as a reporter on a Providence sheet and pilot a jalopy out to the West Coast and a waiting ship, was still very much alive.

Had anyone told Bernstein then that one day he would be the Director of Public Relations for an outfit called the Jewish Agency; that the biggest yarn in his career would be the story of a country called Israel, he would probably have replied, and with justifiable amazement: "Who—me?"

His disbelief would have been heightened even greater were he informed that six million Jews were doomed to slaughter in Europe; that as a war correspondent 20 years later he would be among the first Americans to see their bodies piled high like kindling in the ditches of Germany and Eastern ETO.

But the world of 1926, what with its jazz and bath-tub gin, was still a fairly stable place in which to live. Mass murders were a relic of the Dark Ages and a country called Israel was about as possible as a Democrat becoming.

NEWARK, N. J. (AJP)—If all goes well with two housewives, who are active members of Temple B'nai Jeshurun here, the Library of Congress in Washington will soon be the recipient of the first braille copy of a new Jewish book which will be published throughout the country next week.

When the two women, Mrs. Alvin Levine of South Orange and Mrs. Bessie Ross of Newark, learned that their rabbi, Ely E. Pilchik, was completing the manuscript of the first English biography of Hillel, they decided at once they would transcribe it into braille, thus making it available to less fortunate blind readers of all faiths who would be interested in learning of that great Jewish sage of the first century.

Actually, the idea for the transcription first occurred to Mrs. Ross, who is a member of the Temple board and wife of the president of the Reform Temple, Mr. Michael L. Ross. Her braille teacher, Mrs. Levine, thought the idea "a natural" and immediately sanctioned the project. Needless to say, Rabbi Pilchik was delighted with the project and gave it his blessings.

The transcription of important books into braille is not a new effort for Temple B'nai Jeshurun women. According to Mrs. Levine, who was certified as a brailist by the Library of Congress more than 20 years ago, the braille department of the Temple, of which she is a co-chairlady, has been recognized nationally for its outstanding contribution. The B'nai Jeshurun braille group includes twelve women, each of whom studies braille for four or five months and then volunteers her services in making available braille texts of important manuscripts.

Mrs. Levine herself has trans-

NEW YORK CITY (AJP)—Two outstanding Jewish attornies, one of them the famed U. S. prosecutor in the atom bomb spy trials, were named early this week as Democratic nominees in the November elections for State Supreme Court justices' posts in the First District, covering New York and Bronx Counties.

The choices are U. S. Attorney Irving H. Saypol and Justice Martin M. Frank of Municipal Court. Saypol, 46, has been U. S. Attorney for the Southern District of New York since 1950. If elected, he would replace another Jewish jurist, Justice Aaron J. Levy, retiring because of age.

cribed such major works as "The Brothers Ashkenazi," and "Three Cities" (by Sholem Asch), and is now busily engaged in preparing "A Dreamer's Journey," the autobiography of the late Jewish philosopher, Morris R. Cohen. "I love braille work now as much as I did at the start 20 years ago. I feel I haven't wasted my life," she said wistfully.

Under the mentorship of Mrs. Levine, Mrs. Rose will do the actual braille transcription of "Hillel." She is already scanning an advanced copy of the book, made available by the publishers, Henry Schuman, Inc., in order to determine how complicated are the Hebrew letters and the punctuation, and the complexity of word contractions.

Mrs. Rose, who is considered "an outstanding" braille student, began studying in March. The course called for her to take one lesson a week, but she confesses rather modestly, "I'm a little ahead of myself; I've been taking two at a time." And almost like a pert schoolgirl, she adds, "They tell me I'm a good pupil. My teacher is proud of me."

Mrs. Ross is now working on a test manuscript of 50 pages which, when completed, will be sent to Washington for examination by braille authorities. If accepted, she is authorized as a certified brailist. Mrs. Levine unhesitatingly declares: "I am sure she will be approved, she is a wonderful and outstanding pupil."

It is more than likely, Mrs. Levine points out, that another braille copy of "Hillel" will be made available to the Library for the Jewish Blind in the Bronx which she characterizes as "the only one of its kind in the East."

ing "Mr. Big" in the White House.
He Saw the World

Young Bernstein sailed across the Pacific on the Garfield, saw Manila and the exotic spice islands of the East Indies. He steamed through the Suez Canal and into the blue Mediterranean. Life aboard ship was rugged in those pre-union days, especially for a guy with a name like Bernstein. A pair of fast swinging fists and a sense of humor saw Bernstein through.

When the ship finally docked in Jersey City Vic had had his full of the sea-farer's life. But he was still required to complete the final lap of the voyage back to San Francisco.

While he was visiting with his family in New York City the Garfield sailed and Vic Bernstein found himself in the role of an unintentional ship-jumper with everything he owned in the world still aboard ship. His father, a druggist, staked him to a train ticket to Key West and an overnight boat to Havana which was the Garfield's next port of call.

Vic got to Havana but the Garfield got stuck on a sand-spit in the Bahamas and his status was altered from ship-jumper to beached seaman, a breed for which the American Consulate had little sympathy. Bernstein hocked his overcoat and lived on beer and pretzels until the ship was towed loose and arrived in port.

He Made It

"When I got back aboard I was a big man," he recalled. "My ship-mates figured that anyone crazy enough to spend his own good money to catch up with the ship must have a good reason. They were convinced that my reason was jewels smuggled aboard in the Indies and safely stashed in my sea chest."

"I let them go right on thinking that way and had the guys falling all over themselves to be my pal on the last leg of the voyage," Bernstein said.

When Vic left the Garfield at Frisco he had long since vowed that his next ocean voyage would be made as a passenger. After working for a time on a West Coast paper, he moved to Woodland, a small town near Sacramento and joined the staff of the local paper, the Woodland Democrat. Paul Leake, then the paper's editor and now Collector for the Port of San Francisco, became his good friend.

"Another pal of mine," he said, "was the fellow I roomed with—a Roman Catholic. We became friends when we found out that our landlord was a Ku Klux Klaner."

News that his dad was ill brought Victor back East. And for a year he helped out at the drug store jerking sodas, delivering medicine and selling magazines. Then his first big break came: a berth with the Sunday Times magazine, writing features and travel pieces on a retainer basis.

International Stuff

In 1937 the first inklings of world disaster were felt from Europe and a Jewish news service sent Bernstein to Germany to get the story. His dispatches from Berlin and Munich confirmed the worst fears of American Jewry for their co-religionists stranded in the Reich.

"When I got there," he related, "the speed-up was on full-blast against the Jews. It was Hitler's plan to destroy German Jewry before marching on the neighboring countries."

A tip-off from a friendly American Embassy official that the Gestapo was framing trumped-up smuggling charges against him saved Bernstein from a possible taste of Nazi prisondom. He left Germany for Austria, arriving in Vienna in time to cover the Hitler Anschluss. Then early in 1939 he witnessed the fall of Czechoslovakia, the dismal prelude to a war Chamberlain said would never come.

Joins PM Staff

Returning to the States on the eve of the war, Bernstein, now a seasoned newsman, joined the staff of PM, a new, liberal New York daily financed by Marshall Field, Chicago department store tycoon. He was assigned to the foreign desk, concentrated on war news and handled an occasional yarn on race relations and Fascist activities in the U. S.

Married, and just a shade above draft age, Bernstein stayed with PM throughout the war and, early in 1945, was assigned to cover the Allied advance into battered Nazi Germany.

Describing the liberation of Dachau, Mauthausen and a dozen smaller but equally horrifying Nazi death camps, he said:

"We saw bleached skeletons by the thousands and partially decomposed bodies half covered with snow.

"But the worst were the latest victims, those who had not yet died but were left only half buried by the fleeing Germans, writhing and squirming in their death agonies atop the piles of already dead."

The full gruesome picture of the Nazi blood bath in Europe was revealed to the reporter in hideous detail at the international war criminal trials at Nuremberg, which Bernstein covered for PM. The trials were the basis of his book, "Final Judgment," published by Boni Gaer in New York City in 1947.

"Before the war in Germany I saw the beginnings," Bernstein said. "Now, all over Europe and at Nuremberg, I saw the end. It was the shock of the ghastly cycle that made me fully aware that as a Jew I was not only an individual, but part of a hapless, tortured people."

Events in post-war Europe convinced Bernstein that if surviving Jewry was to be saved, it would be largely through their own efforts. He was convinced also that their only salvation lay in Palestine.

Visits Palestine

As PM's correspondent with UNCOF—the U.N. Special Committee on Palestine—he made his first trip to the Holy Land in the summer of 1947. That autumn he covered the momentous sessions of the General Assembly in New York, climaxed by the adoption of the partition resolution of November 29.

Bernstein became Chief U.N. Correspondent of PM and later of its successor, the New York Star. Then, while he covered the General Assembly in Paris, in the winter of 1948, the Star closed.

"My wife and I were awakened at 7:30 o'clock one cold morning by a cable which read: 'no job.'" And for the second time Bernstein was beached in a foreign land!

Returning to New York early in 1949, he was asked to head the Public Relations Department of the Jewish Agency's newly re-organized American Section. Printers' ink was in his blood and newspapers were his first love. But with the picture of decimated European Jewry still fresh in his mind, Bernstein accepted the post in which his talents and skills could be used to Israel's best advantage in helping resettle homeless, oppressed Jews.

Still A Journalist

As PR director, Vic Bernstein is still a practicing journalist. The story he covers is as exciting and suspenseful a one as was ever spread over the front pages of big city papers. It is the tale of the rebuilding of a people and a nation, of Israel. It is a story which must be told, Vic feels, because there are still too many who lose sight of Israel's true purpose; too many who are fearful that support of Israel casts doubt upon their Americanism.

To them, the newsman who flung aside convention to board an ocean liner years ago as a deck hand to really learn what makes people and places tick, says this:

"In my judgment Israel is a concrete, living nation, it is bigger than any party. You and I are entitled to take a dislike to the policies of this or that Israeli, but our faith in Israel is something else again. It should be above and beyond any party issue. Faith and support of a struggling democracy is part of America's tradition.

"To be pro-Israel," he concludes, "is to be a better American."

Toast of Gay
Tel Aviv Becomes
Rave of Broadway

The pulsating songs of a throbbing-voiced daughter of a Yemenite rabbi may not have been exactly what Zionist thinkers had in mind when they wrote about the cultural benefits of a Jewish State but American Jews who have heard sultry Shoshana Damari are enthusiastic of this Israeli export.

Shoshana, the first Israeli artist, to win a top spot in New York's night life circuit, so far has been heard only by New Yorkers but she is scheduled to start a nation-wide tour next month under auspices of the Zionist Organization of America.

The dark-haired singer's triumph is particularly unique in that she is drawing a general Broadway audience despite the fact that she sings entirely in Hebrew. She entered New York entertainment circles via the Habibi, a cafe aimed mainly at Israeli-conscious Jews. Soon, however, it became evident that her appeal had no language or national barriers and she was signed for the Village Vanguard, where she attracted so many customers that her original two-week contract was extended for two months.

Her earthy, exciting handling of Biblical lore and of modern Israeli stories registers without benefit of a translator, though they are something completely new to Manhattan night club devotees. Shoshana has her own explanation for this profitable mystery.

"When people have hearts," she explains, "they understand. It is this way all over the world."

The beautiful Israeli artist introduces her own songs briefly in her own quaint English. Her expressive hands and striking delivery do the rest.

Shoshana, who is married and mother of an eight-year-old daughter, finds America, or at least the portion of it she knows about—the New York area—a wonderful place. Her dark eyes flash as she talks about American audiences, particularly about American men.

The lush life of America's most powerful metropolis is a long way from the dusty Jewish community in Yemen, where she was born. At the age of three, she rode on a donkey across miles of scorching desert. Her father and mother walked. Their destination was Palestine.

The vivacious singer can remember she became very sick. She remembers that her father and mother prayed and she recovered.

Growing up in Rishon Le Zion, she worked hard, meanwhile soaking up the folk songs she heard in the Rishon vineyards and in the villages. She began to study music at 13 and made her stage debut a year later. At 15, she got a radio job with the Palestine Broadcasting Service in Jerusalem. Later came recordings with the Israel Symphony Orchestra. During the Israel War of Independence, she sang to the soldiers in the front lines.

Now the "Sweetheart of Israel" is becoming the "Toast of New York."

Join the nation's defense effort. Buy U. S. Defense Bonds, U.S. and the U. S. will both benefit.

"Listen, all you wonderful people..."

SAYS EDDIE CANTOR

"Defense is our job, too!"

That guy you see coming over the hill behind me represents — the best security for you in the world today — the great new U. S. Army. An army built, trained and equipped for a single purpose ... to defend us and all of the things we hold dear!

But folks, defense is our job, too! Those U. S. fighting men need our support. And one of the best ways to give it to them is by buying U. S. Defense Bonds regularly. For by buying bonds you're saving money that can make you and your family financially independent. At the same time your bond money helps build the great economic strength that backs up our armed forces. And remember, peace is for the strong.

It's a wonderful feeling to be part of the greatest success story in the history of America. For when you buy a U. S. Defense Bond you become one of the millions of Americans who now own more than 57 billion dollars in bonds. And you're putting your money in the safest place in the world today. For Defense Bonds are as safe as America.

The U. S. Defense Bonds you buy give you personal financial independence

Remember that when you're buying Defense Bonds you're building a personal reserve of cash savings. Money that will some day buy you a house or educate your children, or support you when you retire. Remember, too, that if you don't save regularly, with Defense Bonds or other forms of saving, you generally don't save at all. So go to your company's pay office—now—and sign up to buy Defense Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan.

Don't forget that bonds are now a better buy than ever. Because now every Series E Bond you own automatically goes on earning interest every year for 20 years from date of purchase instead of 10 as before! This means that the bond you bought for $18.75 can return you not just $25—but as much as $33.33! A $37.50 bond pays $66.66. And so on. Bankers recommend Defense Bonds as one of the safest forms of investment!

There is no safer investment in the world today—
Buy U. S. Defense Bonds!

Get on the bondwagon—today!

This is the month when we citizens can do our bit for defense by buying an extra Defense Bond. So sign up to buy that bond during the big September Defense Bond Drive. For defense begins at home! And keep on buying bonds regularly by joining the Payroll Savings Plan where you work, or the Bond - A - Month Plan where you bank.

Tasty Tips on Holiday Dishes

By LEAH LEONARD

Author of "Jewish Cookery"
(An American Jewish Press Feature)

It is good culinary custom in Jewish homes to prepare for the high holy days by stocking the pantry with every kind of "nasherei" possible. Pastries like Shtrudel and Komishbrodt can be baked long in advance, stored in covered containers and brought out at a moment's notice. What would Rosh Hashonah be without these time-honored holiday goodies?

Here is a recipe for making Shtrudel and suggested fillings to suit a variety of tastes and budgetary requirements. Instructions for making the stretched dough are given in detail so that even the novice can follow them and succeed.

HOLIDAY SHTRUDEL

Stretched Dough:

2 cups pastry flour (or 1 $\frac{3}{4}$ cups all-purpose flour)
2 tablespoons salad oil
1 egg, slightly beaten
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup lukewarm water (approximately)
 $\frac{1}{8}$ teaspoon salt

Sift flour into a deep mixing bowl. Combine the slightly beaten egg with oil and add about half the amount of lukewarm water and salt. Stir the mixture well before pouring it gradually into the center of the flour, working it in well with a knife until it begins to form a ball of dough. Add a little water at a time while forming the ball of dough firm enough to knead but not too hard. Turn the ball of dough out on a floured kneading board and knead it till smooth and elastic. Warm the mixing bowl and turn it over the ball of dough to keep it warm and soft while preparing the filling. Let stand about 30 minutes before rolling out the dough on a lightly floured cloth until it is as thin as possible. Roll from the outer edges toward the center for an even dough.

Brush the surface lightly with oil or melted shortening and begin the stretching process by placing the hands underneath the dough and working from the center toward the outer edges. Do this slowly and carefully until the dough is stretched evenly and paper-thin. Before spreading the filling cut away any thick edges of dough around the circumference or outer rim. It is now ready for filling and rolling up. With the point of a knife cut the stretched dough into desired widths, place the filling lengthwise along the center of each length and roll up as lightly as possible but carefully folding the filling inside. Cut the filled rolls to fit the baking pan or use a cookie sheet. Brush the tops of each Shtrudel with melted shortening and bake at 375 F for 40 to 50 minutes or till nicely browned and crisp. Cut each length into $1\frac{1}{2}$ or 2 inch pieces diagonally if desired. Separate the pieces and return to the oven turned up to 400' F for about 5 minutes to brown the cut sides. Or, make wide Shtrudels by using the stretched sheet of dough as follows: Cut the dough in two halves. Place whatever filling you desire on each half either by scattering the filling or making it a wide and thick row in the center. Lift the cloth from the outer side of the half-round of dough and start the filled dough rolling toward

By DR. HAYVIS WOOLF

At a recent Board meeting at the home of league president Ed Lang, teams were selected, captains for the season were announced, and plans drawn up for the booklet containing schedules and rosters which will be mailed to all league members. Membership is now upwards of 90 men, permitting two new teams to be added, making a total of 14.

Captains of this year's teams are Joe Agar, Ed Berman, Moe Bernstein, Bob Baker, Sam Feingold, Bernie Goodman, Seymour Kriss, Ben Lerner, Ben Mellion, Joe Potemkin, Leo Sackin, Al Silverstein, Wallie Schwartz and Charlie Strauss.

Anyone still interested in joining the league should communicate with league secretary Ben Wexler, 302 Auburn Street, Cranston for full details.

CJCC Women's Bowling

THE PLAIDS

by Lillian Woolf

The season got off to a roaring start at the Legion Bowladrome on Park Avenue, Cranston Monday night.

Sixty-nine bright and shining faces appeared ready to bowl which made the league twice as large as it was last year. The teams are made up of five girls with one spare on each team; the spares will bowl for the first three weeks for average.

High single honors for the night went to Bertha Davis with 112; Jeanette Silverstein walked away with high three of 278. Edith Litchman made her all-time high of 105 along with Ann Snow. Other high scores were: Evelyn Lerner 101, Pauline Freedman 99, Sophia Potemkin and Beverly Sugerman 98, Cookie Schwartz 97, and Ida Falk 95.

the cut side. Do this slowly and carefully so that it will not pack down. Brush with shortening and bake in lengths or form into rings any size desired, and cut when serving.

Suggestions for Shtrudel Fillings
Sliced Apple:

- 8 cups thinly sliced tart apple (or shred the apples)
- 1 cup finely cut or chopped seeded raisins or currants
- 3/4 cup sugar mixed with 3 tablespoons dry crumbs
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- Dash of nutmeg
- 4 tablespoons shortening

Cheese:

- 1/2 cup chopped seeded or seedless raisins
- 1/2 pound dry pot cheese rubbed through a sieve
- 2 eggs beaten with 1/4 cup sugar
- 4 tablespoons dry crumbs mixed with 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 tablespoon grated lemon rind

Kasha:

- 2 cups cooked KASHA (of buckwheat Groats)
- 1 onion, finely diced and browned in
- 4 tablespoons melted shortening (or omit fried onion and add 1/2 cup chopped Greben)

Liver:

- 1 pound beef or calf's liver, broiled and chopped fine
- 1 onion, diced fine and browned in
- 4 tablespoons Schmaltz or other shortening
- 1/4 cup dried bread crumbs or Matzo meal
- 1 teaspoon salt

Raisins and Almonds:

- 1 1/2 cups seeded raisins
- 1 cup finely chopped or cut seeded raisins
- 1/2 pound blanched almonds, finely chopped or ground
- 4 egg yolks
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon grated lemon or orange rind
- 4 tablespoons dry bread or cracker crumbs, optional

Komishbrodt:

(Also called Mandelbrodt)

- 1 cup sugar
- 3 eggs
- 6 tablespoons salad oil
- Grated rind of 1 lemon
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 1/4 teaspoon almond extract
- 2 3/4 cups flour
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup coarsely cut blanched almonds (peeling removed)

Beat sugar and eggs till light. Stir in the oil and flavorings. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Combine, adding almonds while stirring together to form a ball of dough. Knead on a floured board and form into rolls one inch thick and three inches wide when flattened. Bake 40 to 45 minutes at 350 degrees F or till light brown. Remove to a bread board and slice while warm into half inch wide cuts, slicing diagonally. Place the slices cut side up on a cookie sheet and slip under the broiler flame for quick browning, or return to the top shelf of oven till browned on both sides.

Yields approximately 36 to 40 slices.

Culinary customs that have become associated with our Holidays must have had their origin in ancient days. For instance, it is customary to place a bowl of honey on the table in honor of the "beginning of the year," Rosh Hashonah. And there is a beautiful connotation in that custom—the deep, heartfelt yearning for a happy year full of sweetness which this holiday ushers in. In some families it is customary to place a bowlful of sliced apples alongside the bowl of honey, passing both bowls together so that sliced apples may be dipped in the honey and eaten.

Another food custom associated with this Holiday is the serving of Carrot Tzimmes, a delectable combination of meat, carrots, potatoes and sweet potatoes, cooked with plenty of sugar or honey till it is golden brown. Or, a succulent pudding containing carrots and the usual "sugar and spice and everything nice," becomes the special holiday dish. The Prophet Nehemiah is said to have introduced the Persian custom of eating something specially sweet on this High Holy Day, saying: "Eat the fat and drink the sweet."

During the Babylonian days of residence of our people, the ancient Hebrews borrowed the Babylonian custom of serving a whole sheep's head for the main course of this Holiday meal. The sheep's head signified "the head of the year, or the beginning of the year." Another interpretation of this custom is said to commemorate Abraham's sacrifice of a ram in lieu of his son Isaac. Whatever the origin may be, the custom today is to have honey on the table and Tzimmes for the main course on Rosh Hashonah.

Tzimmes of Carrots:
5 large carrots
5 medium white potatoes
3 sweet potatoes
2½ to 3 lbs beef brisket
1 teaspoon salt
½ to ¾ cup brown sugar
Water as required
1 onion, diced or cut into (optional)
2 tablespoons chicken schmaltz or vegetable shortening
2 tablespoons flour
Scrape the carrots and slice into thin rounds. Pare and quarter the white potatoes. Pare and slice the sweet potatoes into 1-inch thick rounds. Sear the meat on all sides in the pot to be used. When the meat is well browned, add the vegetables, salt, sugar and enough cold water to cover. Cover and bring to a boil. Uncover and skim well, then cover and simmer 2½ to 3 hours or till the meat is tender. Do not stir the contents of the pot or the result will be a mashed and unappetizing dish.

Dog Does Tricks,
Only If You Ask
Nicely In Yiddish

MINNEAPOLIS (AJP) — If you ever visit the home of Sam Cook in Minneapolis and want to get friendly with the family dog, speak to her in Yiddish. She ignores English and the Cooks say the pet hasn't forgotten her native tongue.

The canine linguistic novelty was reported by Louis Greene, columnist for the American Jewish World.

He reported also that "Tippy is looking forward to Rosh Hashanah, when the Cook home becomes a center for worshippers from nearby synagogues who visit during intermission in services. Tippy, who also "understands" Russian, then gets a chance to polish up on her knowledge of Yiddish in various dialects, according to Greene.

Skolsky Predicts
Winters for Award

NEW YORK CITY (AJP) — A prediction that a Jewish star would be the second in a row to win the Academy Award was made by a Hollywood columnist this week.

Sidney Skolsky asserted that "I want to go on record and say that on the basis of all performances I have seen this year to date, Shelley Winters will win the Oscar for the best performance by an actress."

Judy Holliday won the award last year for her performance in "Born Yesterday."

Yiddish 'Bagel' Show Gets Critic's Razz

NEW YORK CITY (AJP) — A New York daily critic turned thumbs down recently on "Bagels and Yox", the first Jewish revue to hit Broadway in more than a decade.

Richard Watts, Jr., writing in the New York Post, said that "the humor of the new show is of the rough-and-tumble type, and it must be said on its behalf that there is no attempt to make it seem anything else. No one can accuse 'Bagel and Yox' of being a polished show."

The critic said that the Yiddish jokes in the revue were "rarely comprehensible" to him "but there are a number of jokes in English and unless the Yiddish comedy is far superior, I wasn't missing a great deal."

Watts said he was surprised at the warmth of the first-night audience reaction.

"I didn't have much fun myself,
but it certainly did appear that the audience was enjoying itself," he commented.

"All I can say is that this is no
show for critics."

AHAVATH SHOLOM

Frank Konovsky, chairman of the membership committee of Congregation Ahavath Sholom, announced that satisfactory results have already been obtained for the membership drive now in progress. As membership in the Congregation will be limited to seating capacity, he urged both present members and new applicants to enroll at once. His committee will sit weekdays from 7:30 to 9:30 P. M. and Sundays from 10:30 A. M. to noon. The office will be open daily for inquiries.

Registrations for the Hebrew and Sunday Schools will be accepted at the same time.

Just shake the pot from time to time to prevent sticking or scorching. A little water may be added if necessary during the cooking process until the meat is tender. If an onion is used for additional flavor, it may be cut into to permit the juices to flow freely and added with the vegetables then lifted out before it is cooked apart. If diced onion is used, it is best to add it when the meat is seared and stirred until lightly browned. When the liquid in the pot has been reduced by half or less, turn the contents of pot into a baking dish or casserole, arranging the meat in the center so that only part of it is exposed. Make an einbren by browning the flour in hot melted fat and stirring in some of the liquid for about one minute before adding to the Tzimmes. Shake the baking dish or casserole to distribute the thickening and bake 30 minutes at 350 degrees F or till nicely browned on top. Serve hot. Serves 6.

PRESSURE COOKER TZIMMES

For those homemakers who are fortunate enough to know the value of the modern time-saving kitchen device, the pressure cooker, there is a shortcut to making time-honored Tzimmes of Carrots. This method also saves much of the nutritional values in the vegetables as well as the meat which compose this delectable dish. So, try it this way:

Sear the meat in the bottom of the pressure cooker, turning till nicely browned on all sides. Add the vegetables, salt, sugar, and 1½ cups of cold water. Adjust the gauge for 15 pounds pressure and as soon as the required steam has been raised, turn down the heat as per instructions which come with the cooker you are using. Cook 30 minutes. Remove from heat and cool under running water before removing gauge and cover. Brown flour in hot melted fat and stir in some of the sauce to make the Einbren. Turn the Tzimmes and thickening into a baking pan or casserole and slip under the broiler flame to brown evenly on top a few minutes before serving time. Or, bake in the oven 20 minutes at 375 degrees F till browned.

NEWSPAPERS IN ISRAEL

By DANIEL SPICEHANDLER

The citizens of Israel are voracious readers and of course they read their many daily newspapers closely and carefully. In the little state there are twelve Hebrew and ten daily foreign language papers. From the extreme rightist Herut to the extreme leftist Kol Haam, the piles of newspapers are stacked in front of the kiosk stalls or bookstores. Those who wish to save the twenty-eight prutot (about six cents) can sit leisurely and read a paper in any cafe. But many Israelis buy a paper from the ever-trotting and yelling newsboys who, to the amazement of every newcomer, seem to have a knack of pulling out your paper from a mixed stack under his arm. "Haaretz-Davar-Haboker?" Out it comes and with it the nervous hand waiting to be paid.

Ever since 1863 when the Halevanon, a religious monthly published in Jerusalem, appeared, the newspaper business in Palestine began to flourish. The Hebrew press alone has more than 200,000 readers. In the past few years, the foreign language press also has grown. This big boom, of course, is due to the great influx of immigrants, who read anything and everything, from Hungarian to Arabic.

The press in Israel, like its counterpart in Europe, is a political press. Each major party owns a newspaper. Even the few so-called independent papers are of one political leaning or another. Mapai, the largest party in Israel, has been publishing Hador, a daily afternoon paper, for about three years. Davar is published under the aegis of the Histadrut, and is supposedly the voice of labor in Israel. Of course, there is no doubt that this is a Mapai organ. Mapam continually complains against this favoritism, which is denied by the editors of Davar. Mapam now publishes its own daily, Al Hamishmar.

The largest morning paper is Haaretz. Its circulation is a little over 30,000. Politically it is independent, with a strong leaning to the Progressive party and is by far the most objective newspaper in Israel. Haaretz doesn't seem to have a political axe to grind, though sometimes it is unduly harsh in its attacks on the Government. Haboker is the World-Telegram and Sun of Israel—a conservative, businessmen's paper. Hatzofeh is similar to Haboker except that it is the organ of the religious bloc. Herut is the organ of the former terrorist Irgun Tzvai Leumi.

The average daily runs from two to four pages. On Fridays and holidays the newspaper is made up of six to eight pages. The Friday paper is called the "Shabbat Issue" and is equivalent to our Sunday edition. The weight of our Sunday papers never ceases to astonish Israelis residing in America. Davar could run a year on the paper of one Sunday Times," remarked one Israeli to me. For in Israel today, paper is rationed and each newspaper receives a paper quota based on its certified circulation. Israel imports all its paper and pays for it in dollars. Owing to the present economic crisis, the Government has tried to curtail the press, hoping to save hard currency. This policy was met expand their papers with a few extra sheets. This results in the exact replica of the daily paper, only more of it. The outstanding difference is the literary and art page, which can be described as a condensed form of our Sunday book review and drama sections combined. It is one of the most enjoyable pages in the Hebrew daily.

Israel's newspapers rarely have pictures. When they do appear, they are uninviting and often blurred. There is no such thing as a sports section in the Friday issue. To appease the fans, the publishers sometimes run a short sports story. The more ardent fans console themselves by reading a sports weekly. Needless to say, there is no such thing as a comic page for children. They reluctantly read the special children's issues. Lately the American comic book has come into its own among younger Israeli readers, and it will be interesting to note this new influence on the sedate and respectable Israeli press.

The chief weakness of the Israeli newspaper is its underplaying of world news. When the war against the Arabs was being fought, this was justifiable, but today this policy continues and the meagerness of world news coverage is strongly felt. The average, intelligent Israeli must read Time or Newsweek, both of which have become very popular in Israel, in order to get a broader picture of the world scene.

Of the evening papers, only two are popular: Maariv and Yediot Achronot. These are primarily headline newspapers. Here the influence of The New York Enquirer is felt. The reader is often tricked by a headline such as: "ISRAEL INVADES JERUSALEM," and after reading the finer print he discovers that the news item is concerned only with the transfer of Government to the new city of Jerusalem. In these papers, a comparatively liberal use of photographs enlivens the sheets and gives them larger circulation. Maariv claims a circulation of 70,000 which makes it the largest paper in Israel. These newspapers play up crime stories, and feature—daily—a serialized story. Both Maariv and Yediot refuse to fall into the static pattern of the other dailies. They even talk of running a comic paper.

The Israel reader reads at least two papers daily, a Hebrew and a foreign one. He is a reader of many interests and one should not be surprised to hear that the American Embassy reading room in Tel Aviv is always jam-packed with Israelis. Here they have access to every American publication. Most popular are the European editions of the New York Times and Herald Tribune. It is with envy in his eye that the Israel reader glances through the lively, diverse and thick American newspaper.

Saga: Eleven Boys On A Horse

By ALFRED SEGAL

call him "The 11 Men." They bought him for $6,000 and expect great things from him toward their social undertakings. He will be running soon at Arlington.

Their horse, in his various versions, richly has profited the hearts of The 11 Boys. He has brought in a considerable sum for the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund. In the recent weeks The Boys have exulted in what their horse has done for a colored girl named Mabel.

Mabel was a student in Wilberforce University about whom the lawyer Albert Weinstein had heard from her mother who is a washerwoman.

In her daughter she could discern hope of ultimate victory after all the frustrations a washerwoman has to take. What's more frustrating to the soul than washings day in and day out. Tomorrow the garments she washed today will be soiled again and shortly she will be washing them again and again, no end. There was no fulfillment in washings.

But in Mabel there was promise. Mabel could be a teacher some day if she could get through the University. In Mabel was the satisfying answer to all doubts in the long years of toil, struggle and futility. There could be complete fulfillment for everything if Mabel became a teacher.

There was one more year for her at Wilberforce but how was she to make it? Money was needed to help her through and where could it come from? Her mother's washings couldn't make it.

Lawyer Weinstein went to The 11 Boys. This certainly was something for their horse, he said. Their horse could carry Mabel through her last year at Wilberforce and also her mother to the victory the old lady deserved.

This was something exactly for the purposes of The 11 Boys and the horse. Their horse supported Mabel through her last year in the university. At the recent school end Mabel graduated and The 11 Boys were so happy about it that they sent her a gorgeous graduation gift.

They look even for greater things from their new horse. If he fails the loss will be theirs; they'll sell him for what they can get. Then they will buy another horse to dedicate.

The 11 Boys, being modest, may feel embarrassed to be presented as people who do with a horse as Rabbi Hillel, who was like a saint, might do . . . "A most excellent way of being Jewish," he would tell them.

The 11 Boys would reply: "But there's Jim Mulroy, too. He's one of us and he's of the Irish."

This fact would go to show Rabbi Hillel that the way of righteous men is not private to any religion. The ten Jews among The 11 Boys do with their horse excellently in the Jewish way and Mr. Mulroy in the Christian way; they turn out to be the same ways.

The 11 Boys are: The brothers Samuel, Charles, Sidney and Isadore Schwartz; Herman Weiss, Maurice Beck, Fred Welland, Max Kraus, Nathan Fogel, Jacob Litwin.

And Jim Mulroy.

Our Film Folk

BY LEON GUTTERMAN

HOLLYWOOD—Dramatist George S. Kaufman is right in his milieu on the show business clinic of CBS' "This Is Broadway." He is something of a one-man clinic on show business himself.

Kaufman has been feeling the mercurial pulse of Broadway and diagnosing its ills for more than 30 years as a critic, chronicler, script doctor, director, and of course, as a master playwright. His bravura touch, the answer to many of the eternal riddles of the legitimate theater, is aptly epitomized in a Broadwayite's observation that he is a "great practical theater mind with no philosophy except that the theater is entertainment and good entertainment pays."

The ability to contrive good entertainment has made Kaufman the most successful playwright of the American stage and its biggest money maker. Since 1921, at least one and sometimes two and three of his plays—with few exceptions all co-authored—have festooned the Broadway boards, one of them invariably a hit. More than fifteen of these vehicles have run close to or over 200 performances, and 20 of them have been sold to Hollywood. Two, "Of Thee I Sing" and "You Can't Take It With You," won the Pulitzer Prize.

The whole of the American landscape is Kaufman's dramatic oyster . . . from its pleasant vagaries and follies to its political roilings and its social fermentations. As a supreme satirist, he has almost consistently made sport of them, too. His irony and wit, delivered with dead pan and a look of utter mournfulness, are equally as famous off paper, as evidenced in his ad libbed sparklets on his radio and television programs.

Some of George's well known lines are: "It takes nature years to make a man, and it only takes a woman a few minutes to make a monkey out of him; or "Money doesn't always bring happiness. A man with ten million dollars is no happier than a man with nine million dollars;" or: "A girl's face may be her fortune, but the other parts draw interest;" or: "Since women have been wearing shorter skirts, there have been 50 percent fewer car accidents. Why not prevent such accidents entirely?"

There was nothing apparently in Kaufman's heritage or early gifts to anticipate his future dexterity in the playmaking art. He was born in 1889, in Pittsburgh, the son of a prosperous tailor.

Driven by an unquenchable thirst for work, George quit school at 17 to work for a while as a stenographer for a coal company. Then he was a newspaperman, a hat bank salesman, and a law student. As a pastime, he had been jotting down odd bits of humor and sending them to Franklin P. Adams' column in the old New York Evening Mail.

The contributions won a luncheon date with the famous columnist and afterward a recommendation from him for a post on the Washington Times. From 1912 to 1913, Kaufman had a pillar of trivia on the Times. He

A HAPPY NEW YEAR

We, the Jewish Bakers Union, Local 122, take this opportunity to thank the Jews of Providence for the patronage that they have given us in previous years, by buying bread only in those bakeries where Union workers are employed and use the Union Label.

At the beginning of the New Jewish Year we again request you—the Jewish housewives—that whenever you buy bread or chalah, to remember us, the Jewish Union Bakery workers, and demand that the Union Label be applied to each loaf of bread that you buy.

By demanding the Union Label you are assured that the bread is baked in sanitary bakery shops and that workers are treated humanely.

WISHING YOU A HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR

Political Wizard Amazes

By FRED H. WILTON

The best known Jewish prophet since Daniel is employed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. He is Louis Hyman Bean, the statistical wizard who predicted President Truman's electoral victory. Those who scoffed at his book, "How To Predict Elections," remained to cheer Bean after November, 1948. They have continued cheering until he has become Washington's most famous statistician and world's best known election forecaster.

Bean's book, "The Midterm Battle," was eagerly awaited by Republicans and Democrats alike. His rise to fame began about 15 years ago when he happened to glance at a page of voting statistics. (Continued on next Page) moved up to the New York Mail in 1914 when F.P.A. took his column over to the Tribune. Next he compiled a column of drama notes at the Tribune under critic Heywood Brown. Eventually, he went to the New York Times, where for the next 13 years his puckish humor and critical notes brightened its drama pages.

While a staffer at the Times, Kaufman wrote his first play, a comedy called "Going up." It saw no audience but it led to an assignment as co-author of the comedy "Someone In The House." But he really burst upon the Broadway scene in 1921 in the first of his fabulous collaborations, "Dulcy," a two-season hit scripted with Marc Connelly.

The play introduced a new kind of satire slanted in the smart rather than the popular vein. The writing team followed this up with "To The Ladies," devastating burlesque of the testimonial dinner to the quarter-century employee. For the next two years, the pair wrote six more hits.

After that, going it solo, Kaufman penned a savage picture of the show angel titled "Butter and Egg Man," and he now began to hit his full stride. For the next 20 years he and a succession of notable partners turned out a rash of smash shows. Two of his most famous collaborators were Moss Hart and Edna Ferber; others included Morrie Ryskind, George Gershwin, Ring Lardner and Alexander Woolcott.

tics in the "World Almanac." He wondered if elections could be predicted the way he forecasts economic trends. This thought gave birth to a hobby which by 1936 attracted the attention of President Roosevelt. It was then that Bean accurately predicted a Democratic victory in states which the Democrats themselves didn't expect to win. Roosevelt thereafter listened to Bean's advice on where to campaign the hardest.

Has Sense of Humor

As economic advisor to Secretary Brannan, Bean is completing his 27th year with the Agriculture Department. An engaging gentleman, he is known for a sharp sense of humor which makes him a phenomenon among economists. Bean was born in Russia and was brought to America by his parents in 1906 at the age of 10. He served in World War I as a U. S. Infantry lieutenant. He came to Washington in 1923, bringing with him degrees from the University of Rochester and Harvard. Employed as an economist in the Agriculture Department, he rose to the department's "brain trust" within a few years.

In 1942 Bean was appointed Assistant to the Director of the Board of Economic Warfare. From 1943 to 1947 he was chief fiscal analyst of the Bureau of the Budget.

He lives in Arlington, Va., where he maintains a wife, two children, and three cats.

Drafts World Plan

After World War II, Bean devised what has been called "a personnel plan for the world." His plan, advocating a more effective allocation of the world's workers, was intended as an aid to the United Nations in fulfilling the point of its charter covering the advancement of better living standards in all countries.

Bean's success in election predictions has surprised even Bean. He explains: "Somewhere around 1936 I began it as a plaything. My real job was in agriculture, in farm income, and so forth. The basic data revealed a vast consistency which enabled me to play. I started to use political statistics in the same way; to try to find out what their movements have been and why." He found that "a knowledge of voting behavior over a considerable period of time greatly narrows the sphere of unpredictability." His predictions have been so close both parties have called them "uncanny."

Rosh Hashono -- New Year

Rosh Hashono, the Jewish New Year, will be ushered in at solemn religious services on Sunday evening, September 30. These services, held in synagogues throughout the world, will mark the beginning of the year 5712 in the Jewish calendar, which counts time from the traditional date of the world's creation.

A striking feature of the Rosh Hashono services is the sounding of the "shofar," a primitive wind instrument made of a ram's horn. Its shrill notes seem to deepen the solemnity of the service nowadays just as they did thousands of years ago, when the shofar was sounded by the Israelites of the Bible.

Jewish folklore has built around the Rosh Hashono prayers the tale that on this day each person is judged according to whether he has done good or evil during the past year, and his fate for the coming year is decided on the basis of his goodness and inscribed in Heaven. Consequently, Jews greet one another during the New Year season by saying: "May you be inscribed for a good year."

Rosh Hashono, which is Hebrew for "beginning of the year," is primarily a spiritual occasion. It begins a period of soul-searching and prayer known as the Ten Days of Penitence. Their culmination is the somber fast day of Yom Kippur or the Day of Atonement, which will fall this year on October 10.

The Boy With The Magic Shofar

BY BERNARD SEGAL

A Rosh Hashanah Story for Children

Little David had a magic Shofar.

A Magic Shofar? What kind of a Shofar is that? And who believes in magic anyways?

Well, there are all kinds of magic.

There is the magic of the man who stands on the stage and pulls rabbits out of his black hat, and he shakes silver pennies out of his ears. He waves a piece of colored cloth in front of your eyes, and pronto, it disappears in thin air. Then he snaps his fingers, and the piece of cloth comes floating down into the magician's hands again.

That is one kind of magic. It is fun to watch. It may even be thrilling. But nobody believes that the rabbits really come out of an empty hat, or that the pennies come tumbling out of the ear. As for the cloth, it was probably up his sleeve all the time.

But there is magic in the touch of a mother's hand that wipes away tears and heals pain. There is magic in the word of a friend that banishes all fears, and brings the sun out of the clouds again.

There is magic in a story that carries you on the wings of fancy to wonderful places in far away lands. There is magic in music that lifts you up to the stars and opens for you vistas to rare beauty. And faith has the magic power to lead you on marvelous pathways where all is good and right and where no harm can befall you.

Also there is magic in dreams which open the gates to a wonderful world where nothing is impossible, and no island is too remote to reach, and where all ends well.

All this is another kind of magic. How happy are they who know it and believe it!

Now, David knew the wonders of Storyland and of Dreamland, and he believed in the magic power of Love and Faith, and this is how he came to have his magic Shofar.

It happened on the day of Rosh Hashanah. David was sitting beside his father in Shul. The Shul was filled to the doors with people who came to pray on the New Year. Many stood by the walls and in the corridor, because there were no seats for all who came. David leaned close to his father, and the man next to him pressed against his elbows and there was hardly room to move around.

David craned his neck to look at the chandeliers, all of gleaming crystals, hanging high on the ceiling. He couldn't take his eyes off the new velvet curtain on the Holy Ark. It was snow white, with gold embroidery, and it was stirring ever so lightly in the breeze coming in through the open windows. In front of the Holy Ark stood the cantor and the choir on either side of him. David listened to their singing, and all around him the people were humming, and it was in David's ears like the rustling of the leaves of the trees, when the wind plays among them.

Suddenly David saw his cousin Jonathan.

Little Jonathan, who was one year younger than David, did not sit in the Shul on this day of Rosh Hashanah. He was far away across the ocean, and nobody knew where he was just then. David never saw his little cousin, but he heard a lot about him from his father. David often listened to his father telling how little Jonathan lived with his father and mother in a far-away city. One day, when Jonathan was only seven years old, bombs fell over the city, and one bomb hit the house where Jonathan lived with his parents.

It was night when the bombs began to fall, and when morning came the house was a heap of dust, and Jonathan was all alone under the morning skies. He was taken to the house of a neighbor, and there he stayed to wait for his parents to come and take him home.

But his father and mother never returned, and Jonathan never saw his parents again. Now he is somewhere in a strange city, living in a home for homeless children, who lost their parents.

But David's father said:

"Little Jonathan will have a home again. He will have parents again. We will bring him to our house, and he will be a son to us, and David will be a brother to him."

But where is Jonathan? It is more than a year now since David heard about his little cousin, but he is still in the strange city across the ocean. Every time David asks his father and mother when Jonathan will ever come to be his brother, they sigh and they answer sadly:

"Very soon, we hope. Very soon."

And now, in the crowded Shul, on this day of Rosh Hashanah, David saw little Jonathan. He saw him sitting all by himself on a bench with a prayer book on his knees. There was no one to the right of him, and no one to the left of him. A little boy sitting all alone, his head bowed, reading to himself from a book of prayers. David could not see his face, and the hair on the head was black and curly. The eyes were cast down toward the page of the open book, and the face was in a shadow. But David knew that it was Jonathan, though he never saw him. He just knew that this was his little cousin, and David called him by name:

"Jonathan, Jonathan! Come over here. Come sit near me!"

But the little boy did not lift his eyes, and he did not turn his head, not even when David called him again, louder than before.

Then David reached for the Shofar and began to blow into the tiny opening at the end of the mouth piece. David was startled by the sounds that came out of the Shofar. They were so clear, and they were soft and warm sounds. And it was so easy to blow the Shofar.

David just touched the mouth of the horn with his lips, and out came sounds from the wide opening of the Shofar. The sounds curled out of the Shofar like rings of bluish smoke, and the rings floated up toward the ceiling, and then down to the bench where little Jonathan was sitting with his head bowed.

David sounded the Shofar once, and twice, and when the rings of sound came out for the third time, the little boy lifted his head, and he turned his eyes toward David, and their eyes met. Now David could see his little cousin clearly. Now his face was no longer in a shadow. David found his lost little cousin. He found him by the sound of the Shofar. The little boy smiled at David, and his lips parted as if he wanted to talk.

But just then the whole Shul shook, and David jumped to his feet in fright. He awoke with the ringing of a loud blast in his ears. He clung to his father, and his father whispered softly:

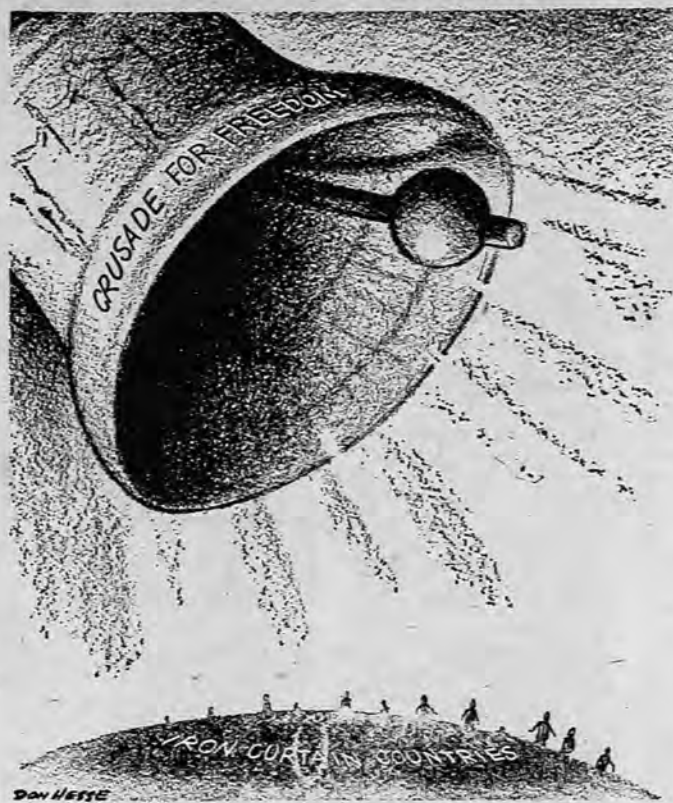

"Don't be frightened, David. That was the Shofar. Listen, here it blows again."

David looked up to the Holy Ark. There in front of the open doors stood an old man with a large ram's horn in his mouth, and the blasts of the Shofar rang out in the crowded Shul:

"Tu-roo--! Tu-roo-tu-tu! Tu-roo-oo-oo!"

And father said further:

"You fell asleep, and you almost missed the sounding of the Shofar. You would have to wait till next year to hear the Shofar blow again."

But David looked up to the crystal chandelier high up on the ceiling where he saw his little cousin sitting alone. The little boy was no longer there. And the magic Shofar, too, was gone. But David remembered the face of little Jonathan, and he knew the smile in his eyes, and he could still see the shape of his lips as they parted to speak. And David knew that now his little cousin would come soon, very soon.

But he said nothing to his father about the magic Shofar, and he did not speak of Jonathan to his mother when they walked home from Shul late in the afternoon, after the Rosh Hashanah prayers.

When they came to the house, David saw a yellow envelope half way under the door, and hastened to pick it up. His father opened it quickly, and glanced briefly at the yellow sheet of paper, and he shouted:

"He is coming! Jonathan is coming! Listen to this."

And father read in a trembling voice the words on the telegram.

"Jonathan boarding ship today. Will arrive in ten days."

That same day David told all his friends and all his playmates that his cousin is coming on a ship, that his name is Jonathan, that he is eight years old, and that when he comes he will never leave again, but be a brother to David.

And ten days later, on Yom Kippur, David was in Shul again. The Shul was even more crowded than on Rosh Hashanah, and many people stood by the walls and in the aisles because there was no room for all who came. But David moved very close to his father, and there was just room enough for a little boy with black curly hair and a thin dark face, and deep smiling eyes. Father put one arm around his son David, and he put the other arm around his new son Jonathan, and together they read from the open prayer book on father's knees.

The doors of the Holy Ark were open, and the Torah scrolls stood for all to see in their white silk mantles. The cantor and the choir sang, and people hummed after them.

David looked up to the ceiling where the crystals in the chandelier were agleam with hundreds of little flames. Then he looked at his little brother Jonathan sitting near by and he remembered the little boy sitting alone on a bench with his head bowed, and he remembered the magic Shofar and the rings of soft, warm sound that floated in the air and reached to Jonathan on the day of Rosh Hashanah ten days ago.

David touched the arm of his brother lightly, and Jonathan looked up from the prayer book. They looked at each other silently, and they smiled at one another, and their eyes and their smiles spoke more than words can ever say.

Historical Drama On "Eternal Light"

On September 30th, in observance of Rosh Hashanah the beginning of the Jewish New Year, the Eternal Light (12:30-1:00 P.M. EST, NBC Network) will present "As a Wind that Blows" by Morton Wishengrad, according to an announcement by the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, under whose auspices the program is conducted. The Eternal Light, a coast-to-coast radio program, is presented as a public service of the National Broadcasting Company.

"As a Wind that Blows" is a historical drama of a young medical student who, through his efforts to alleviate the suffering of plague victims in New York City in 1798, died "in the cause of humanity." This program is built around pertinent portions of the High Holy liturgy, for it was exactly at this time of year that the records place the story.

Center Board OK's Building Program

After extensive planning for the renovation of the Sessions Street site, the Building Planning Committee of the Jewish Community Center opened its consideration of bids from contractors on Thursday, Sept. 13. Authorization to go ahead with the plans was given to the Committee by the Board of Directors on Wednesday, September 19. Included in the renovation is the winterization of the field house for Play-school activity.

David Chernack, chairman of the Program Coordinating Committee, reminded that registration for use of Center facilities is now going on. Preference will be given to membership groups in the allocation of space for the coming year. All requests are to be directed to George Weisfuse, assistant executive director in charge of program.

Progress Made on Leisure Time Study

Substantial progress relating to the current study of Jewish leisure time activities and needs in the greater Providence area was registered this week with the holding of two important sub-committee meetings and the scheduling of two more for next week.

The representative self-study group conducting the audit—in-inaugurated by the General Jewish Committee of Providence at the request of the Jewish Community Center—has been divided into seven major sub-committees to compile local data for the group work survey.

Two of these units—the sub-committee on pre-school activities headed by Dr. Clara Loitman Smith, and the sub-committee on physical education headed by George Katz—held lengthy meetings during the week.

Two other sub-groups—youth activities and leisure time activities for the aged—are slated to meet on Wednesday and Thursday of next week. Mrs. Selma Pilavin and Aaron Roitman are chairmen, respectively, of these last two units.

The survey, which also embraces the neighboring communities of Pawtucket and Cranston, is designed to provide a realistic picture of the growing leisure time needs of the Jewish community of greater Providence.

Factors to be studied in the survey include: Present location of Jewish population and pertinent trends in growth; definition of the overall services and programs now available; determination of the number of people, and their age groups, now being serviced—and under what auspices and at what cost.

Myron Blanchard, head of the National Jewish Welfare Board's research department, who has been engaged as the survey's consultant, sat in on both meetings held this week and is planning to participate in the two discussions planned for next week.

Three other sub-committees—adults, headed by Irving Brodsky; children under 12 years, chaired by Mrs. J. I. Cohen, and young adults, headed by David Chernack—are slated to begin their work in the near future.

Max Winograd, general chairman of the study, emphasized this week that "broader programs of service, elimination of duplicating activity, sounder expenditures of funds, and greater community service are certain to result from the ultimate findings and recommendations of this vital study."

Dr. Smith's committee on pre-school activities includes Mesdames Bernard Bell, Eli Bohnen, Irving Brodsky, Warren Foster, Joseph Galkin, Leo Gleklen, Adrian Goldstein, Rudolph Haber, Edwin Halpert, Bernard Rapoport, and Edmund I. Waldman. Dr. Herman Marks, Dr. Sara Saklad and Nathan E. Sklar are also members.

The committee on physical education includes, in addition to Katz, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Charon, Miss Minna Dorn, Stephen Espo, Sidney Green, Dr. A. Budner Lewis, Hyman Lisker, David Meyers, Max Miller, Mrs. Abraham Press, Ernest Steck, Harold Sydney and Dr. Eric Denhoff.

Home To Dedicate Yahrzeit Plates

The Jewish Home for the Aged will recite special prayers for those departed whose children and relatives are perpetuating the memory of their loved ones by placing a bronze Yahrzeit Tablet in the Home Synagogue.

During the past year, 46 new plates were installed and they will be dedicated at a special service on Sunday, October 7 at 11 A. M. This custom was initiated three years ago to make it possible for children and relatives to attend who on Yom Kippur cannot travel and who would like to be present at this special Dedication Service.

The following Yahrzeit plates are being dedicated:

Esther Marston, Louis Wattman, Ellen Schneider, Joseph Felder, Mary Felder, Fannie Hornstein, Annie Weiner Rice, Isaac L. Rice, Benjamin Rice, Sarah Goldberg, Annie Siskind, Benjamin Berman, Bessie Horowitz, Nathan Horowitz, Samuel Finkelstein, Ida Press, Bertha Mendelowitz, Abraham Nicoll.

SYD COHEN:

The Patient Man Laughs

Joseph Edward Cronin, he of the jutting jaw and protruding paunch, cannot be blamed if he meanders around the premises at Fenway Park wearing a solemn, tragic air during this final week of the American League season.

Regardless of whether or not the Red Sox rally to win the 1951 pennant, the Bosox have had a disappointing year. All of Cronin's efforts, and Tom Yawkey's money, have failed to establish the Sox as the junior circuit's outstanding club.

But now, enough of despond and sorrow. Please accept a most cordial invitation to share my imagination and travel to Joe Cronin's home after he has left the beclouded and tearstained atmosphere of Joe Btfsik—pardon me, Fenway Park.

Straight ahead is the Cronin domicile — and look carefully, doesn't the house seem to be shaking, as if with laughter? Can't you see General Manager Cronin, his scowl gone as he greets his family, explode into belly-shaking merriment that sets the very walls to dancing as he thinks of the troubles of the Red Sox? If you can't get the image, look a little closer into my imagination. I can see it plain as anything.

Yes, the patient man laughs; and Joseph Edward Cronin certainly has been a patient man, and he certainly deserves the right to laugh.

Think back into fairly recent major league history and recall the severe beating the Red Sox GM took every year for more than ten years when, as manager of the Sox, he failed to reward the fans with a pennant—and when he finally did it once in 1946, failed miserably in the World Series against the Cardinals.

Every spring the Boston writers came North with the club, bragging of the world-beating Bosox and wondering, in all seriousness, how the club could miss winning at least 110 games.

Boston would bring up a raw rookie like Woodrow Rich, who had a good year in Class A at Scranton, and who looked sharp in spring training. The writers would tout him as the coming ace of the staff. This would be the year that the Red Sox would win, they annually predicted.

But the Red Sox didn't win, mostly because the Yankees then were the greatest club baseball had seen since the 1927 Yankees, also because the Woody Riches were not ready for the majors. And in the late summer of every year the torrents of abuse were heaped high on the back of the manager, Joe Cronin.

So Joe, following an unsuccessful season in 1947 wherein the Sox lost their one championship, retired to the front office, and Boston, tacitly admitting it needed different leadership, brought in as the new manager the genius himself, Joseph Vincent McCarthy, late of the Yankees, and the most successful manager in major league history.

The rest you know. McCarthy failed as Cronin had failed, even though the Sox boasted the best players at every position. McCarthy lost in 1948 and he lost in 1949 and he was losing in 1950 when he quit. And Cronin, a patient man, looked and listened, and waited.

Well, it seems that Cronin had been too easy and McCarthy had been too tough, and so here came a new manager, Steve O'Neill, who was neither too easy nor too tough, and this time we couldn't miss.

But miss they did, in 1950 and now in 1951 (barring a last minute miracle that must occur, if it will occur at all, long after this column has been written). So it would appear that the succession of managers has not been the major factor in the failure of the Red Sox to win.

Joe Cronin, who is a patient man, must have known that. In his heart, he must have felt that he had not been to blame even if Joe McCarthy and Steve O'Neill won pennants. Vindication, however, is slow in coming.

Some four or five years ago, Cronin's wife wrote a magazine article telling of life with a major league manager. She harped on her husband's failure to win, and she said that Joe placed the blame on one man, and one man alone.

According to Mrs. Cronin, the Yankees and Red Sox, back in the late 1930's, were just about even with the exception of this one man—Joe DiMaggio. She quoted Cronin as saying that the Yankee Clipper was the sole difference between the two clubs—that it was the miracle defensive genius of DiMag, just when it hurt the most, and the crucial rallies he so often started with his bat, that constantly boosted the Yanks along and wrecked the Red Sox hopes.

Believe this or pooh-pooh it, as you will. The point is that now, as the 1951 season has moved forever away from Fenway Park, save for the slim possibility of the World Series being played there, Joe Cronin must watch the wolves gnaw at O'Neill's vitals with some bitter satisfaction. When, he must ask his wife, will the writers and fans realize—and say so publicly—that Joe Cronin wasn't such a bad manager after all?

But Joe is a patient man, and his vindication seems closer at hand than he would have dared hope four years ago. In the meantime, no one can blame him if he loses his scowl and his frown when he leaves his Fenway office and returns to his family, and sets the rafters to ringing with his hearty laughter as he reviews the failures of his two successors.

Joe Cronin—a great shortstop and a murderous hitter in his day, but who won only two pennants in 15 years as a big league manager—certainly has earned the right to laugh.
