Ben-Gurion Faces Crisis As Religious Parties Leave Coalition

JERUSALEM — The brewing political crisis within the Ben-Gurion Government over the religious issue came to a head late last week when two religious parties in the coalition, Agudath Israel and Agudath Israel Workers, quit the government on the claimed ground that their demands had not been met.

However, the development seems to have split the Religious Bloc, since both Mizrahi and the Mizrahi Workers Parties refused to follow suit and leave the government. The defection has deprived the coalition government of a majority in Parliament. Should the seceding parties align themselves with the opposition parties in the Knesset, Parliament would be divided 60-60 between coalition and opposition members.

The two parties that quit had two representatives in the Ben-Gurion Cabinet, Minister of Welfare Rabbi I. Lewin and Deputy Education Minister Rabbi Kalman Kahane.

Although the crisis was believed to have chiefly resulted from Premier Ben-Gurion's determination to conscript orthodox women for military service alongside the rest of the young womanhood of the country, one of the contributing factors was the question of the place of religion under the government's proposed unified educational system. In addition, the situation was aggravated by the Premier's refusal to permit the Agudah to conduct separate fund raising activities abroad.

A behind-the-scenes effort to reach a compromise was nullified when extreme party elements, taking their cue from the London Agudist movement, refused to consider any possible concessions short of their demands. The reason why the other religious groups did not follow, it is believed, was due to the fact that they did not consider the conscription issue a real one, since orthodox women were not in any event being called for military duties but merely assigned to work in immigrant camps or in orthodox settlements.

Premier Ben-Gurion was reported hopeful of patching up the differences with the two parties. Otherwise he may have to turn to the General Zionists and the Progressives.

Bureau of Jewish Education Formally Organized; Lists By-Laws

With the survey of Jewish education in greater Providence completed, a Bureau of Jewish Education established and a director appointed, another step forward was taken a few weeks ago when the Board of Directors of the General Jewish Committee of Providence unanimously approved adoption of a set of by-laws.

These procedures, in effect, represent the foundation upon which the new Bureau will be built and expanded, Alvin A. Sopkin, GJC president explained.

The by-laws are the fruit of several meetings of an implementation committee headed by Joseph W. Ress. Max Winograd, chairman of the sub-committee on by-laws, drafted and presented to the GJC's Directors the procedures governing the Bureau's future operations.

The by-laws are being printed by the Herald, as a community service, in a series of two or three articles, beginning today. Article Four, referred to in part in today's installment, stresses the representative community-wide composition of the proposed Board of Directors, in which the management and control of the Bureau's affairs will be vested.

Meanwhile, until the officers proposed are actually elected, Rabbi George Ende, the Bureau's director, is being advised by an interim committee set up for that purpose.

Following are the by-laws.

Refreshments will be served in the School's Succah. The public is invited to attend.

Other officers to be installed, who were elected with Brodsky at the general meeting on Sept. 15, are Archie Smith, honorary president and chairman of the board of directors; Paul Chernov, Joseph Dubin and Isaiah Segal, vice-presidents; Lewis Korn, treasurer; George Labush, financial secretary; and Lewis Sperling, recording secretary.

Newly elected members of the executive committee are David C. Adelman, William Berger, Robert Berlinsky, Rabbi Morton Berkowitz, Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen, Rabbi William G. Braude, Mr. and Mrs. Max Brier, Rabbi Abraham Chill, Mrs. Joseph Dubin, Eugene Freedman, Morris Kirshenbaum, Mrs. Lewis Korn, Mr. and Mrs. William Newman, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Oelbaum, Dr. Sol Rubenstein, Mrs. Isaiah Segal, Mrs. Maurice Sternbach, Frank P. ## Truman Names Perlman To Head Study of Immigration Measure

Pastore and Ewing B'nai B'rith Guests

Sen. John O. Pastore and Rep. Bayard Ewing, candidates for election as United States Senator from Rhode Island, will share the same platform on Thursday, Oct. 16 at Plantations Club at a meeting presented by Roger Williams Lodge, B'nai B'rith.

The two senatorial candidates will discuss the 1952 campaign issues, providing for B'nai B'rith members and guests an intimate, first-hand picture of local and national issues just three weeks before election day.

The affair will mark one of the rare occasions when Sen. Pastore and Rep. Ewing have appeared together on one platform during this campaign.

A question period will follow the candidates' discussion.

The meeting is being arranged by Abraham Belliove, vice-president of the Lodge, and program chairman. He is assisted by Morris Bromberg. Belliove announced this week that the public is invited to attend the program, which is presented by Roger Williams Lodge as a public service.

Moscow Jews Shun Israelites

TEL AVIV — "Everywhere in Moscow, on the streets and at receptions, we saw Jews and sensed that they regarded us with yearning eyes, full of love and pride, but they desisted from talking to any of us," it was declared here by A. Ben-Zvi, manager of the Israel Volley Team, who recently returned from Soviet Russia.

It was evident, Ben-Zvi asserted, that Moscow's Jews fear talking to people from abroad, particularly Jews.

GJC Women's Guest

HELEN GAHAGAN DOUGLAS
Mrs. Douglas, wife of screen actor Melvyn Douglas, and a former Congresswoman from California, will be the guest speaker at the Initial Gifts $100 Minimum Luncheon of the Women's Division, General Jewish Committee, next Tuesday at noon at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel. Reservations for the affair may be made by calling PL 1-2796 or GA 1-4111.

Episcopalians Salute Jews At Holy Season

The Jewish people of Rhode Island could ask for no better expression of good will on the part of their Christian friends and neighbors than the tract that was inserted in the Bibles of all the parishioners of St. Stephens Episcopal Church on Sept. 20.

The insert reminded the St. Stephens church-goers of the advent of the Jewish Holy season and suggested a pause "to re-examine our debt to them (the Jews)." It then credited the Jewish people with giving to mankind and the world "belief in God," "moral law," "a sense of God's purpose," "all the early Christians" and the Old Testament, without which "the New cannot be understood."

The text of the tract concluded with: We Episcopalians have much in common with these people, and many of our rites and ceremonies are similar. Perhaps an open-minded spirit of charity between groups of differing traditions would effect a more positive change in society than the narrow-minded, prejudiced view often manifested between members of God's family.

Continue Contact With Germans

TEL AVIV—Premier David Ben-Gurion has requested that Dr. Nahum Goldmann, presiding officer of the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany, continue his contacts with West German Government officials to facilitate the successful implementation of the reparations pact signed in Luxemburg. Dr. Goldmann told newsmen here before leaving Israel. He was accompanied to the airfield by Foreign Minister Moshe Sharett.

President Hits McCarran Act

WASHINGTON—President Truman this week appointed a special seven-man commission, headed by former Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman, to study inequities in the McCarran-Walter Omnibus Immigration Act.

Mr. Truman appointed the commission because of his displeasure over the passage of the act over his veto and the failure of Congress to appoint a commission to study immigration problems. He had suggested such a commission in his veto message. "I do not believe the matter should remain where the Congress left it," Mr. Truman said this week.

The commission was urged to give special consideration to requirements and administration of laws on admission, naturalization, denaturalization and deportation of aliens; admission of immigrants in the light of economic and social conditions and the effect of U. S. immigration laws including the national origins quota system, on the conduct of American foreign policy and the need for authority "to meet emergency conditions such as the present over-population of parts of Europe and the serious refugee and escapee problems in such areas."

Hits Present Laws

Congress failed to act on the President's request for a commission and the new move was seen as the President's reaction to what he considers the urgent need for a review of the immigration situation. Mr. Truman said that present immigration policies present "serious obstacles" to the solution of the world refugee and over-population problems.

Informed sources believe that President Truman may have had the State Department Visa Division's practice of listing Jews as such on visa applications in mind when he said in his statement that "the problem of immigration policy grows more pressing and the inequities fostered by the new law require careful examination."

The Perlman commission will study immigration policies and report by January 1, 1953, according to the President's directive. Other members of the commission are: Earl G. Harrison, former U. S. Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, vice-chairman; Msgr. John O'Grady, secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities; Rev. Thaddeus F. Gullixson, president of the Lutheran Theological Seminary of St. Paul; Clarence E. Pickett, American Friends Service Committee; Adrian S. Fisher, legal adviser to the State Department and Thomas C. Finucane, chief of the Justice Department's Board of Immigration Appeals.

To my friends:—

During the past several months in discussing fire and casualty insurance problems with many prominent business men in our community I found that without exception all were deeply concerned as to whether or not they were adequately protected against loss of their major assets from fire, windstorm, flood and the various casualty hazards.

These same business men failed to realize that in many instances their businesses would continue to operate even if substantial losses were suffered as a result of one of these many hazards, PROVIDED—that they, their partners and key personnel continued to live and remained in good health. Yet they often failed to adequately insure their real major assets—themselves.

Feeling as I did that there was a definite need for top level advice in the life insurance field in our community, not only in relation to business insurance, but in estate planning as well, I started a very intense comparison of all the rates and contracts sponsored by the leading companies in this business.

As a result of a two month study I found one company to be outstanding, not only on a basis of rate comparisons, but in their progressive policy of sponsoring contracts to fit the variety of needs resulting from to-day's complex estate planning problems. That progressive company is the United Life and Accident Insurance Company.

Having associated myself with that company, I would welcome the opportunity of discussing your problems with you and making recommendations to suit your personal and business needs, and will do so on a straight competitive basis.

Very truly yours,

BURTON A. FINBERG

Arabs Affirm Anti-Israel Stand

LONDON—The Palestine question, and particularly the fate of the Arab refugees, continued this week to occupy the attention of the Arab League Council meeting in Cairo.

The Times of London reported from the Egyptian capital that the League continued to maintain its "resistance" to Israel. It added that its decision that the Foreign Ministers should head the Arab delegations to the United Nations was activated by the desire to maintain the campaign against Israel. The League's political committee has recommended that unofficial Arab bodies, as well as official organs, should boycott all regional organizations or conferences in which Israel participates.

The committee will recommend that the Palestine Arab refugees be given employment in any country in which they choose to settle and that the Arab states should pool financial aid to supplement UN assistance for the refugees, the Times reports. It adds that while the Arab League will continue to insist upon implementation of UN resolutions on the right of the refugees to return to their former homes, it has begun to treat the refugee issue "more realistically." There is an "implied recognition that a refugee will not be able to return to Israel," it says.

Succoth--Feast of Tabernacles

Synagogues come closer to nature as the Jewish people prepare to celebrate the original Thanksgiving holiday, a festival out of Bible times. Jews will go to services bringing greenery from the land of Israel, their children will carry offerings of fruit, and flowers and leafy branches will bedeck the synagogues.

The holiday about to be celebrated is known as the Feast of Tabernacles or the Feast of Booths. Often it is called by its Hebrew name of Succoth. It will begin Friday evening, October 3, and will be celebrated for a little more than a week; for nine days by Orthodox and Conservative Jews, who will conclude the holiday with Simchas Torah on October 12. Reform Jews observe eight days of Succoth, and will close with Simchas Torah on October 11.

On this holiday Jews offer prayers of gratitude, just as they did thousands of years ago, for the blessings of nature and for God's goodness to man. It was first celebrated in ancient days as a holiday of thanksgiving to God for His gift of the harvest, and today as then it is observed at the time of year when farmers of the land of Israel have just finished gathering and storing their crops.

There is much in today's celebration that is still reminiscent of Bible days. Most striking is the "Succah," the tabernacle or booth, that is erected in honor of the holiday. It recalls the ancient festival in its similarity to the shelters in which Israelite farmers lived during their harvest-time stint in fields. Also resembling a desert-dweller's hut, it reminds Jews of the exodus from Egypt and of God's grace to Israel during the long years in the wilderness.

The last day of Succoth is a joyous day known as Simchas Torah, "rejoicing in the Torah." The Torah, or the first five books of the Bible, is found in the synagogue in the form of a parchment scroll written in Hebrew. Divided into sections, one for each week's synagogue service, the Torah is read in full over the course of each year. Simchas Torah is the day on which the reading is finished and immediately begun anew, and it ranks as one of the happiest of holidays on account of Judaism's deep love for the Torah and its teachings. On this day, worshippers march in gay procession down the synagogue aisles, the men carrying Torahs and the children waving holiday banners.

Succoth is the last of the great Jewish holidays of the autumn season.

"One Man's Opinion"

BY BERYL SEGAL

Of Candidates and Votes

Shortly after the two major political parties selected their candidates for the highest office of the land, the president of one of our large congregational lay organizations announced his endorsement of one of the candidates, giving his reasons for the choice. The story was released by a national news gathering agency, and appeared in newspapers from coast to coast. In our own daily newspaper the story was given front page prominence.

Wondered at Lack of Tact

We shrugged our shoulders on reading the story and wondered at the tactlessness of the head of this semi-religious organization. Since when do congregational groups endorse political candidates? Since when do presidents of Brotherhoods and Sisterhoods speak for their members in political matters? The story as it read in the newspapers implied that the president spoke for the entire body. Fortunately a denial and a correction followed very soon. The president, it was stated, spoke for himself. He was not authorized to place his organization in one political camp or another.

But as is usually the case, the denial was not given the same prominence as the original story, and very few know of the denial.

This incident of the original endorsement and the subsequent denial points to the need of constant vigilance. Religious groups have wisely stayed out of politics. Heads of religious bodies, and heads of organizations affiliated with them have in great wisdom avoided influencing the voting of their followers in political elections.

It will be a sad day for American democracy when this guiding principle is thrown overboard. Denominational affiliations should not influence our decisions at the voting polls. Neither must racial, or national origin of the candidate claim our vote for or against him.

Local Case Similarity

These remarks were prompted by a local case, which in a sense resembles the case of the head of the national organization, in a miniature form, so to speak.

A local young man, it seems, is running for a minor office in the city government. He is young in years and green in the political game, but apparently full of confidence in his ability to fill the office. More power to him. This is his privilege as a citizen. But this young man, I am told, is appealing for votes on the basis of his religious affiliations.

This, young man, is not very wise on your part.

True enough, many politicians will use every means, clean and unclean, to get votes. But for one who is starting out in political life, it is well to adhere to old principles. The politician who appeals to racial and religious prejudices in order to gain votes, is a despicable character. But the politician who claims preference because of faith and race is also a thorn in our sides. The voter may display greater intelligence than he is credited with by the politician.

How does the average voter make his decision on the fateful election day?

If he is a party member or is in full sympathy with the aims and policies of the party he has no problem at all. He votes the party ticket all the way, every time.

When the Socialist party and the Labor groups were in the race under the leadership of such men as Eugene Victor Debs and Norman Thomas I had no trouble making my decision. Though not a member of the party, my vote was reserved for that platform because of my agreement with the labor policies, the social reforms, and the peaceful solutions of international conflict advocated by the party. Neither the racial, nor the national origins of the candidates were considered. I voted that ticket even though in New York state, where I then resided, Herbert Lehman ran for Governor on the Democratic ticket.

No Party Preferences

But most of the American voters have no party preferences. I find myself in that category ever since the fall of my party. They are independent voters with a freedom of choice and decision. The responsibilities of the independent voter are far greater than those of the party member or sympathizer. Freedom of choice always entails responsibilities.

What does the independent voter do?

He first examines the platform of the opposing parties. Does he agree with the stand the party takes on foreign affairs, on domestic policies, the rights of labor, the qualities of all segments of the population? If so, this is the party to get his vote.

No considerations of the religion, the race, or the national origin of the candidates are allowed to influence the decision of the truly fair, independent voter.

Check Record

On a local plane, the voter has another means of checking on his choice. He knows more or less the candidates on each ticket. He examines their record in the community. Have they a record of social responsibility? Have they been known to stand up for better education, more recreation, improved conditions of living, richer opportunities for all in the community? Are their names among those who give of their time and efforts to make the community a better place for all? Or did they keep to themselves, and tend their own vineyard? Do they, as fellow citizens, deserve the confidence of the community, or are they unknowns and may be considered a risk?

These are the considerations the independent voter gives to the candidates.

Not on the basis of faith, but on reputation.

Not on the basis of race, but on personal merits.

Not on the basis of ancestry, but on individual integrity.

A candidate may be of your own race, and worship in your manner, and yet be undeserving of your vote.

A self respecting candidate will not rely on religious prejudices or preferences. He will strive to deserve the confidence of all.

Where would we get in this country of ours if Negroes voted for Negroes only and Jews voted for Jews only, and Irish refused to elect Italian, and Catholics opposed Protestants at the polls?

If this day were to come, then Democracy would come to an end.

As I pass in the streets at this time of the year, I read names of candidates on both party tickets. Among these names I recognize Jewish candidates on both sides of the fence. When the time comes for casting my vote, I will not pick the names that sound to me Jewish and give them my vote just because they are Jewish and so am I. Nor will the Irish pick the Irish names, and the Italians, the French, and the Armenians pick the names of their respective nationalities.

Woe to us if that comes to be.

We hope this day never comes. The candidates who seek to gain votes on racial and religious lines, and those who give their votes on racial and religious lines, know not what they are doing to themselves, to their country, and to the future of their children and children's children.

SYD COHEN:

As the Leaves Fall

If you don't believe that the Herald had a representative at the Marciano-Walcott fight in Philadelphia, you underestimate us. One of the boys in the press room, Eddie Mincarelli, took in the title joust in behalf of our sports desk. Of course, the fact that Eddie got himself a couple of tickets and asked for a few days off had something to do with it. Nonetheless, the Herald was there!

Eddie was disappointed. He claims that, contrary to the general opinion, Walcott did not stand up to Rocky unless he was forced against the ropes and had no choice. Otherwise, the defending champ kept retreating, determined to ride with every one of Marciano's punches. Most of the toe-toe exchanges, says Ed, were against the ropes—with Jersey Joe the man who was up against them.

And when Walcott went down—Eddie went down. When Marciano landed the haymaker, the guy immediately behind Ed gave him a whack across the "plaitzahs," as Getzel got it at the Ball Game. But Herald employees are made of sterner stuff. Mincarelli did not take the count. Just like the new champ, he was up and at it again. And he saw the counting out of the old champ.

Men of Distinction

Hank Greenberg, general manager of the Winter and Spring world champion Cleveland Indians, has won a new distinction. He was recently listed by the Custom Tailors Guild of America as one of the ten best dressed men in America. Further, he was picked in the clothes horse department as the representative for sports.

Well, it's nice to see Hammerin' Hank get a distinction of some sort. One thing is certain, he could never get it in the field of forecasting the outcome of pennant races. Every time Greenberg opened his mouth during the past two years to let a pearly prediction pop forth, he stuck the Indians' foot in it.

In that respect Hank is not in the same league with the intrepid Howie Cohen, who proudly picks the Yankees to win every year, despite the experts and the law of averages. "We", says Howie of himself and the Yanks, "don't believe in the law of averages. We just win championships."

Anyway, credit must be given where credit is due. And here is a bona fide prediction that Howie made almost a month ago. He has witnesses, too—the gang at the Friendly Store and this fan, who openly scoffed when Howie, the ageless shortstop, opined that the Yankees would lose only three of their then remaining 19 games.

That prediction was made after the Yanks had won one of those so-called "big" games. And Howie hit it right on the button. Going into the final game of the regular season, when it no longer mattered whether they won or lost, the Champs had won 15 and lost 3.

Will some one loan me a hat so's I can tip it in Howie's direction?

They're Still In the League

There's nothing like experience, and because of that this corner fearlessly becomes the first tree climber of the 1953 season. In other words, I'm going out on a limb—a good six months ahead of time.

This limb, which only now is shedding its shriveled leaves over the deadened and empty area of Braves Field-on-the-Charles, will be a sturdy oak come another spring, in my opinion. Which is another way of saying that the Boston Braves, whom everyone likes and nobody goes to see, are about to come out of the depths.

New Englanders had high hopes for the Braves last Spring. A team that had a popular manager in Tommy Holmes, a seasoned group of veterans and an outstanding assembly of rookies, seemed good enough to finish high in the National League.

The veterans turned out to be a bit closer to the Veterans Administration than the big league diamond, and the rookies weren't ready. And that is what I meant by saying that there's nothing like experience.

In case you didn't notice, the Braves' Milwaukee farm team stood, the strong American Association right on its ear in 1952 and won the pennant going away, although the Yankees' Kansas City farm (and watch that bunch, too) swept them out of the playoffs in seven games.

The rookies who failed to bloom in Boston in the Spring, tra-la, really blossomed when they got a chance at the extra year they needed to season into real ball players. My prediction is that with that added experience, plus their brief taste of the majors early this year, the Braves' rookies will "arrive" in 1953.

Other teams, like the Dodgers, soon will start to fade unless they replace their present stars. But the Braves are mixing new blends of warpaint, and I believe we all will want to watch them play ball next year—and be willing to pay for the privilege, too. And as any one of the sportswriters and sportscasters in New England will tell you, it honestly can't happen to a nicer bunch of guys.

I don't say the Braves will win the pennant next year—they may be a year or so away from that, and Nichols won't be back for another year—but I will bet that they are first division, and stronger at the finish than most other teams.

Down the Avenue

It isn't far from Braves Field to Fenway Park, but I can voice only regret for the Red Sox. I am not one of those who classes Lou Boudreau as an outstanding manager. I don't believe that with all his managerial talent and unorthodox innovations, he ever lifted a team as much as one notch above the spot it normally would have achieved by its own playing ability.

Maybe Boudreau had a pitching rotation, but I never noticed it. McDermott, who obviously needs lots of rest, needed only to pitch one good game before he was rushed into a relief job with only one day off, or another starting assignment after only three days of rest. Invariably, Mickey then got slammed, and everyone groused about that lousy, unpredictable McDermott. Mickey should ask to be traded.

The aging Dizzy Trout was sent to the well too often and lost games that he might have won with more rest. Sid Hudson, crowding 35, was warming up in the bullpen just two days after he had pitched a brilliant victory.

Boudreau had a long list of capable starters on hand, but instead of a steady pitching rotation for a month or so so's he could see what the boys could do when they were working steady, he appeared to depend on his hunches.

Yeah, I know, the Sox lost Williams and Kinder and Kell and Stephens and others by sickness and injury. But the Giants lost Irvin and Mays, and Maglie and Jansen went bad, and they finished second. And the Yankees lost DiMaggio, Coleman, Brown, Morgan, and Lopat, for two months, and they won the pennant.

If you have ever loved a child...

HE IS FOUR YEARS OLD. In his meager life, he has never known what it is like to eat his fill. His small hands have never held a toy.

A moment ago he came down the gang-plank into Israel. Now he waits like a wounded bird on the dock at Haifa. In his tousled head stirs a question:

"What next?"

All he has to guide his thoughts are haunted, ghetto memories. He sits with that troubled child's gaze that is more shattering than tears.

"What next?"

How long until he knows the warmth of a sunlit house? How long until he learns to laugh the free, winging laughter of a secure and happy childhood?

If you have ever loved a child—you ache to comfort him and calm his unvoiced panic.

Yes, your gift to the United Jewish Appeal can banish the look of fear from his — and many — eyes. For all who wonder "What next?"—child and man—you can furnish the reassuring answer.

Your help will make possible new settlements, new irrigated farmlands, new houses, homes. It will turn the great homecoming of Israel's 700,000 recent immigrants into the great home making.

Give through your local campaign. Give more than ever. Give today!
