GJC Raises $300,000 At Initial Gifts Dinner

Sopkin Increases Gift to $50,000

By SYD COHEN

Paced by numerous pledges that represented substantial increases over last year, the Men's Division of the General Jewish Committee of Providence got its 1952 campaign off to a flying start Sunday evening when better than $300,000 was raised at the annual Initial Gifts dinner in the ballroom of the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel.

A near-capacity crowd of more than 300 men who attended the affair displayed their realization of the plight of their fellow-Jews in Israel by boosting their pledges over last year.

GJC officials said later that all Initial Gifts contributions were not yet in. Several men who are normally big givers, they said, were out of town or otherwise unable to attend the dinner. When these men have made their pledges, the $300,000 figure will be swelled considerably.

The bulk of the funds raised will be sent to Israel via the United Jewish Appeal. The balance will remain here in Providence for the use of local educational and cultural organizations.

The Sopkin Family led the donors with a contribution of $50,000, $30,000 more than last year. Following are a few other pledges: The Kane Family, $15,000 (other pledges are made in Los Angeles and Florida); The Hassenfeld Family (which also makes additional donations in other cities), $18,000, an increase from $14,500; A. Alfred Fain for Apex Tire Co., $10,000; William Weinstein, $8250, an increase from $7500; Joseph Finkelstein, $7000, an increase of $4000; Samuel Rapaport Jr., $8500, from last year's $7000; Harry Leach, $6500, an increase of $1500; The Salmanson Family, $6500; Max Siegal, $6000; Irving Coklin, $5000, an increase of $2000.

In all, it was estimated that more than 50 percent of the pledges represented increases by the same persons over last year. The overall rate of increase was in excess of 20 percent.

Tribute to Weizmann

Before the program, tribute was paid to the memory of the late Dr. Chaim-Weizmann, president of Israel, whose death had been announced earlier in the day. The Israeli flag hung at half mast. The regrets of the State of Rhode Island and the City of Providence were brought by Gov. Dennis J. Roberts, and Mayor Walter H. Reynolds, respectively, who were guests at the affair along with U. S. Senator John O. Pastore. The audience stood for a moment in silence in tribute to Dr. Weizmann.

Another mayor also expressed his sorrow. Oved Ben-Ami, mayor of Nathanya, Israel, a guest speaker, prefaced his remarks with a eulogy of Dr. Weizmann. He termed the Jews of the world orphans as the result of his death. Archibald Silverman, past president of the GJC, and a close personal friend of the late President, said that Dr. Weizmann was luckier than Moses, in that he personally lived to see the Jewish nation established in the Holy Land, while Moses was afforded only a glimpse of the Promised Land.

A prayer was offered by Rabbi

William G. Braude.

Points Up Need

George Jessel, noted comedian, after-dinner speaker and Hollywood producer, entertained the gathering with several of his inimitable stories, including reminiscences of a past visit to Providence and his experiences last summer in Israel. But Jessel struck a serious note in urging his listeners to give generously to the UJA campaign.

"The Lord has helped (the Jews), but only when he had to, and then only because we are so few," Jessel declared. "Our prestige will go lower than it ever has been since the fall of the Second Temple 2000 years ago if Israel falls."

He praised the present administration in Washington for its friendship to the Jewish people.

Mayor Ben-Ami, who termed himself first servant, rather than mayor of Nathanya, declared that Israel's job will be unfinished "as long as one Jew lives in any part of the world where he is unwanted," and said that American Jews are partners to Israeli Jews in this enterprise. He traced the growth of Nathanya from 8000 in 1939 to 38,000 today, and predicted its population would grow to 100,000 within the next three years and to 250,000 in ten. Mayor Ben-Ami presented to Mayor Reynolds

Young Adults Pledge $8,000 To GJC Drive

The highly gratifying total of more than $8,000 was pledged to the annual fund-raising campaign of the General Jewish Committee at the Young Adult Division's Initial Gifts dinner Sunday evening in the Garden Room of the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel. Approximately 140 young adults attended the event.

YAD officials, pointing to the fact that several young adults who were leading contributors at previous dinners have moved up this year to the adult division, termed the $8,000 figure a "wonderful accomplishment". Approximately 90 percent of the pledges represented increases by the same persons over last year's gifts.

The contributors at the affair were spurred to sizeable pledges by Dr. Alisa Klausner Eskol, beautiful Israeli writer, who was guest speaker. Dr. Eskol presented her country's case in a moving manner that visibly affected her audience.

Sid Stone, TV and night club comedian, entertained the capacity throng of young couples. Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen gave the benediction. Dancing followed the speaking program, with Sam Kart and his orchestra playing dance music.

Sheldon Heller, YAD chairman, opened the program and Leonard Blazer, Initial Gifts chairman, officiated during the evening. Among those who were introduced were Leon Mann, campaign co-chairman; Harold Ratush, past Initial Gifts chairman; Marvin Rumpel, co-chairman of the dinner; Archibald Silverman, honorary president of the GJC, and Joseph Galkin, GJC executive director.

Here is the main entrance of the New Miriam Hospital, which will be open for public inspection on Monday through Wednesday, Dec. 15-17.

The Conference will convene for breakfast at 9 A. M. Sunday, followed by a discussion of "The Unique Role of Women in the Jewish Center Movement," conducted by Mrs. Eva Olim Goldberg; and "The National Jewish Welfare Board and the New England Section — Members of a Team," led by Harry H. Sussman. Consultants for this portion of the program will be Barnett I. Shur of Portland and Emanuel Berlatsky, director of the Bureau of Personnel and Training of the National JWB.

The afternoon program will include luncheon at 1 P. M., and a business meeting and summaries of Work Shop sessions at 2 P. M. Adjournment is scheduled for 3 o'clock.

Bertram L. Bernhardt is chairman of the Regional Conference and Milton C. Kay is co-chairman.

Emanuel Lecturer

DR. ABRAHAM A. NEUMAN, president of Dropsie College, will address the Institute for Adult Studies at Temple Emanuel on Wednesday, Nov. 19. His subject will be "The Three Greatest Jews of the 20th Century."

Guided Tours Are Planned for Public

After eight years of planning and two-and-a-half years of actual construction, the New Miriam Hospital, on Summit Avenue at Fifth and Sixth Streets, will be dedicated with ceremonies beginning on Sunday, Dec. 14 and continuing through Wednesday, Dec. 17.

Announcement of the dedication dates was made this week by Alvin A. Sopkin, chairman of the Dedication Committee, which has been working toward this climactic event since last summer.

The dedication program will begin with a formal dinner at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel on Sunday evening, Dec. 14. A nationally prominent figure in the field of public health will be guest speaker. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the hospital will be open for inspection by the general public. Visitors will be taken on specially-planned guided tours on those days from 2 to 5 P. M. and from 7 to 9 P. M.

Completion of the dedication ceremonies and open house program as listed by Sopkin will be followed by admission of the first patients to the beautiful and completely modern New Miriam Hospital, standing in a quiet residential neighborhood overlooking a portion of the city of Providence.

Following the dedication period, hospital officials plan to conduct a series of tours for various groups throughout the city, to acquaint them with new techniques and methods of operation in the newly built Miriam.

Slowed by War

Originally scheduled for completion by the summer of 1951, the hospital was slowed by the outbreak of the Korean War in 1950, just a few months after construction actually had been started. It was in May of 1950 that the bids for the new structure were let out, and just a month later that the ground was broken and construction actually begun. The cornerstone was laid by Benjamin Brier, president, in May, 1951.

Planning for the New Miriam goes back to 1944, when a campaign first was begun to raise funds for the proposed hospital. World War II and its immediate after-effects, however, made construction inadvisable at that time. The campaign was renewed in 1950 where it had been left off six years earlier.

As a tour of the hospital will reveal, the New Miriam is completely modern, and fully equipped with the finest of facilities and medical equipment. Its normal capacity will be 150 beds and 34 bassinets, in sharp contrast with the 57 beds and nine bassinets contained in the present Miriam on Parade Street.

The cost of the new hospital is estimated at around $2 million. Barker and Turoff were the architects and construction was by E. Turgeon Construction Co.

Mrs. Finkle Attends Council Conference

Mrs. Archie Finkle, president of the Providence Section, National Council of Jewish Women, leaves for New York tomorrow to attend the conference of council presidents. Mrs. Finkle, who is a member of the national board of the Council, also will attend national council meetings in New York.

Dr. Weizmann's Funeral Held

REHOVOT, ISRAEL—Dr. Chaim Weizmann, father and first President of Israel, was buried last Tuesday in an olive grove on his estate sloping eastward toward the Judean Hills and Jerusalem, the Holy City.

The funeral service was the traditional Orthodox Hebrew ritual accompanied by a military ceremonial. A guard of honor presented arms along the garden path over which the mourners passed.

Four hundred representatives of Israel's public life and foreign diplomats were invited to attend the service for Weizmann, who died of a heart attack Sunday at the age of 77.

The last rites were broadcast to a stilled million and a half grieving Israelis all over the nation.

Chief Rabbi Yitzhak Halevi Herzog presided and recited 10 verses from the Book of Psalms. They were chosen so that the Hebrew initials of each verse spelled out "Chaim Ben Ozer," which stands for Chaim, son of Ozer Weizmann.

The coffin, covered with the blue and white flag of Israel, was borne by eight colonels of the Israeli Army, Navy, Air Force and police.

As the coffin was lowered into the ground, a cantor recited, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

President Weizmann's son, Benjamin, who flew here from London Monday, recited the mourner's prayer in Hebrew.

Memorial services were held in Israel's hundreds of synagogues and also in many of its Christian churches. Prayers in Arabic also were said in a number of Moslem mosques.

charity is "one of the fundamental laws of brotherly love . . . Whatever you give will rebound to you a thousand-fold."

Mayor Reynolds characterized the fund campaign as "an investment in freedom." Gov. Roberts urged the Initial Givers to be "more generous than in the past for this 'noble cause' and pointed out that Israel follows the precepts of liberty and justice . . . 'principles that we all cherish and love.'"

The need for a successful campaign also was brought out by Alvin A. Sopkin, GJC president; Henry Hassenfeld, 1952 campaign chairman, and Sidney A. Kane, Initial Gifts chairman. Sopkin began the meeting and introduced Hassenfeld, who was master of ceremonies.

Dear Housewife:

Let's talk Turkey!
Not just any old turkey, we mean the turkey you will serve for your holiday dinner. How would you like the tastiest and tenderest turkey you have ever enjoyed?

Let's put it this way. Turkeys are GOOD. White Holland turkeys are BETTER, and Rosemarshi White Holland Turkeys raised at the White Holland Farm in Whitman, Massachusetts, are, we sincerely believe, BEST. They must be—thousands of people all over the country buy them from us every year.

Why are they so good? They are milk fed—and what a flavor this gives! The meat is butter smooth with a succulent flavor. There is just enough fat for perfect cooking. When a Rosemarshi turkey is placed before you—big, broad-breasted, goldenbrown and sending out the most delightful aroma—you will know you are in for a feast such as you have never had before.

Yes, and what service we give you. Our Turkeys and Chickens are so clean and free of pin feathers that all you have to do is wash them before cooking.

All our products are packed in air tight vacuum closed bags ready for your freezer.

The Kashruth is endorsed by the Orthodox Rabbinical Council of New England, under the strict supervision of Rabbi Herman Spiro of Brockton, Mass. All our products are Koshered (soaked and salted) according to the Jewish Ritual Law.

Our prices:
Turkeys from 5 to 20 pounds, 92c per pound.
Turkeys 20 pounds and over, 85c per pound.
Try our Boned Turkey Roast (patent applied).
Roasts like a turkey and slices like Roast Beef.

Chicken Broilers and Fryers, 79c per pound; Roasters, Pullets, Caponettes and Capons, 99c per pound; Fowl, 81c per pound. Ducks, 79c per pound.
All our prices are for oven ready weights, all waste removed.

We also offer you parts of chickens and turkeys. We are the largest, cleanest and most modern farm in the East, and always open for your inspection.

Just try us once and we know you will be a steady customer. We have many thousands of satisfied customers all over the United States. May we serve you too!

At our Farm you will find plenty of paved parking space, and heated, air conditioned Sales Rooms. We guarantee you friendly courteous service.

Hoping to see you soon.

Yours very truly,

White Holland Farm

Chaim Weizmann's Life

Leader of World Zionism and Father of Israel;
Scientist Served Allies in Two World Wars

Dr. Chaim Weizmann, who died at his home in Rehovoth, did more than any other man to bring into existence in 1948 the Republic of Israel, of which he became the first President.

He transformed a 2,000-year-old dream into a practical possibility when he won the Balfour Declaration from England in 1917 and for thirty years thereafter labored to turn the possibility into reality.

In the final months of the struggle for statehood, younger men with bolder tactics took the leadership of organized Zionism from him, but in the eyes of the world he remained the dominating figure of the Zionist cause. It was to him that the United Nations listened in the investigations and debates of 1947 and it was his compromise plan of a Palestine partitioned between Jewish and Arab states which the U. N. Assembly adopted and the Jews of Palestine carried out.

Months before the Republic of Israel was proclaimed he was recognized as the man who must head the new state, and accordingly the provisional Council of Government elected him President at its first meeting.

Last U. S. Visit in 1949

Dr. Weizmann was re-elected President on Nov. 19, 1951, by an 85-to-11 vote of the Knesset, or Parliament, despite the fact he was seventy-seven years old and in poor health at the time.

Visiting the United States as Israel's first President in April and May, 1949, Dr. Weizmann received a tremendous ovation from American Jewry both for himself and as a symbol of his country. He met with President Truman and other American leaders, and while here did much to help solve the problem of Christian access to religious shrines in the Holy Land.

Dr. Weizmann was the master builder of the World Zionist Organization, of which Theodor Herzl was the architect. He attended every Zionist Congress except the first one, in 1897, and except for the four years from 1931 to 1935 he was president of the world organization from 1920 to 1946.

Son of Lumber Dealer

He was born in Motol, near Pinsk, White Russia, on Nov. 27, 1874, the son of a lumber dealer and the third of fifteen children. His family and neighborhood background was rich in Zionist influences. His father was a member of the Choveve Zion—"lovers of Zion"—a philosophical group that preceded the organization of political Zionism.

After early training in the local Jewish school he went at the age of eleven to the gymnasium at Pinsk. When he was graduated at eighteen he took up the study of chemistry, at the University of Darmstadt, for a year, then at the Technical High School at Charlottenburg-Berlin from 1894 to 1898. He studied two years at the University of Freiburg, where he received his Doctor of Science degree in 1900, and then went to the University of Geneva for four years as a lecturer and research chemist.

Organized Own Party

He was twenty-three when Theodor Herzl published "The Jewish State" in 1896. Until that time Russian Zionism had been devoted to colonization and educational activities in Palestine. Herzl dared to contemplate a revolutionary action on the international stage and to plan an organization of Jews of all lands for that purpose.

Herzl called the first Zionist Congress in 1897, and the young Weizmann toured Russia urging Zionist groups to elect delegates. The following year he was a delegate himself, and in 1900 he organized his own party of Zionists—the democratic faction. While Herzl was primarily concerned with political propaganda and diplomatic negotiations, Dr. Weizmann emphasized the practical work of training colonists for economic reconstruction and pioneer work in Palestine.

Herzl had tried without success to persuade the Turkish Sultan Abdul Hamid to create an autonomous Jewish state under his suzerainty. When that failed he asked the British if some other land near Palestine could be made available as a temporary refuge and training ground for Jewish colonists. In 1903 Britain offered 6,000 square miles of Uganda, and Herzl wanted to accept it. Dr. Weizmann came to the fore as the leader of the opposition and, although the majority at first was against him, succeeded in blocking the plan.

As a practical matter the Jews did not like Uganda, and the African natives did not want them there. But for Dr. Weizmann the important thing was that Uganda was not Palestine. Fundamentally he was interested not in saving individual Jews from anti-Semitism but in saving Judaism as a culture, a community and a mystical and ethical concept. For such a purpose Palestine was essential.

Proposed Hebrew University

It was in line with this conception that Dr. Weizmann proposed as early as 1902 the creation of a Hebrew university in Palestine. He won the approval of the Zionist Congress in 1913 and was able to lay the cornerstone on Mount Scopus in 1918 soon after Jerusalem was captured by the British at the end of the first world war and while the last battles were still raging within earshot. He called the university "the citadel of the Jewish spirit."

The Hebrew University, financed by contributions elicited largely by Dr. Weizmann's own persuasive eloquence, was followed in 1934 by the Daniel Sieff Research Institute at Rehovoth, where Dr. Weizmann did much of his own work in his later years, and ultimately by the Weizmann Institute of Science, founded in 1946 as a tribute to Dr. Weizmann on his seventieth birthday.

Career Began in 1904

Dr. Weizmann's scientific career as well as his career as Zionism's dynamic leader, really began in earnest in 1904. After the Uganda argument he left the student atmosphere of Geneva and the faction fights of the Zionist Congress to make a new start in England.

At the University of Manchester Dr. Weizmann obtained laboratory space, learned English, began experiments on the fermentation of starches, which were later to be of supreme importance, and became a lecturer in organic chemistry.

He chose England for his home largely because it offered freedom from persecution and because he believed that if the Zionists were to get help from any quarter, it would come from England. He trusted to the innate idealism of the British and their capacity for moral indignation to aid the Jewish cause. Two years later he obtained an interview with Arthur James Balfour, who came to Manchester on an election tour.

Balfour Became Convert

Balfour wanted to know why the Zionists under Dr. Weizmann's urging had rejected the Uganda plan. Dr. Weizmann explained it simply and forcefully. "Supposing I were to offer you Paris instead of London, would you take it?" he asked Balfour. "But we have London," the British statesman replied.

"That is true," said Dr. Weizmann. "But we had Jerusalem when London was a marsh."

He went on to talk about the plans and hopes of the Zionists, and his fifteen-minute interview stretched to an hour and a quarter. In the end Balfour was a convert to Zionism, and though he lost the election of 1906 this interview had its effect ten years later.

Acetone Process

By that time two things had happened. The World War, by involving Turkey, had raised again the possibility of making headway toward Zionism's political objectives. By this strategic position in England and his friendship with English leaders, Dr. Weizmann inevitably was placed in the center of Zionist political leadership. His chemical research had also proved of value to the British war effort.

In 1916 he was appointed director of the Admiralty Chemical Laboratories by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, who had been told of a method Dr. Weizmann had discovered of producing acetone from starch in the production of a smokeless powder. This, the first of his Manchester researches, broke a critical bottleneck in the manufacture of the powder.

The Career of Israel's First President

Balfour Declaration

In consultation with leading British and American Zionists, and after obtaining the specific views of President Wilson, the terms of the Balfour Declaration were worked out. In its final shape it took the form of a letter from Lord Balfour, then Foreign Secretary, to Lord Rothschild, president of the English Zionist Federation, on Nov. 2, 1917. The declaration did not give the Jews all they wanted; it did not create a Jewish State, or promise that a state would be created or make the creation of such a state a permanent objective of British policy. But it did say that the British government favored the idea of a Jewish National Home in Palestine and would use its best efforts to facilitate it.

Dr. Weizmann went to Palestine in March, 1918, to establish relations with the British military forces occupying the country and made what proved to be a short-lived agreement with Emir Faisal, who afterward became King of Iraq. In February, 1919, he went to Paris to plead the Zionist cause in the negotiations that ended with the establishment of a British mandate over Palestine under the League of Nations and the incorporation of the Balfour Declaration in its terms.

Financial Drive

Dr. Weizmann's next task was to organize the financial support of the vast undertaking, which took the form of the Keren Hayesod (Palestine Foundation Fund), organized at an international conference of Zionists in London in 1920. Because of an organizational dispute with American Zionists led by Louis D. Brandeis, the American group split, and Dr. Weizmann himself took over the leadership of Zionist propaganda in the United States, visiting this country frequently in the next ten years.

The Keren Hayesod, like the Jewish Agency for Palestine provided for in the mandate, included non-Zionists as well as Zionists. The organization of the agency was completed in 1929 and Dr. Weizmann became its president.

British Policy Changed

For the next twenty years Palestine was the scene of frequent strife between Arabs and Jews, while British policy, after a number of changes, ultimately took the Arab side.

Extremists among the Zionists criticized Dr. Weizmann for his patience with the British. In 1931, after the Labor government of Ramsay MacDonald threatened to cut off immigration because of mounting unemployment in Palestine, Dr. Weizmann resigned from the presidency of the World Zionist Organization. He did, however, obtain from Mr. MacDonald a reinterpretation of British policy, and in the next few years immigration reached new peaks. Dr. Weizmann was re-elected by a huge majority in 1935.

In 1936, after another outbreak

Abba Eban, Israel Ambassador to the United States who was to have spoken at the meeting, canceled his appearance because of Dr. Weizmann's death, but Arthur Lourie, Israel Consul General and a member of that country's delegation to the U. N., spoke. Mr. Lourie recalled that Dr. Weizmann had been a friend of President Truman and other distinguished Americans and said that much of America's sympathy for Israel resulted from Dr. Weizmann's efforts.

Sermons to Honor Him

Rabbi Simon G. Kramer, president, and Meyer Passow, executive director of the Synagogue Council of America, speaking at the U. I. A. meeting, said they would ask member rabbis to devote their sermons next Saturday to an appreciation of Dr. Weizmann's work.

At the Israel Exposition, 22 W. 48th St., visitors passed in a slow line before a black draped portrait of Dr. Weizmann. The exposition will be closed today as a memorial observance.

The Israel Embassy in Washington and Israel consulates and other agencies throughout the world will be closed on Tuesday, when Dr. Weizmann's funeral is to be held. A memorial service is tentatively scheduled for next Sunday at the Israel Consulate here, 11 E. 70th St.

A number of American Zionist leaders left yesterday by plane to attend Dr. Weizmann's funeral, including Mrs. Samuel W. Halprin, acting chairman of the Jewish Agency for Palestine and Dr. Israel Goldstein, president of the American Jewish Congress.

Among those at the United Israel Appeal meeting who paid tribute to Dr. Weizmann were Louis Lipsky, chairman of the American Zionist Council, a contemporary and colleague of Dr. Weizmann for more than half a century, and Rudolf G. Sonneborn, national chairman of U. I. A.

Wise, Careful Leader

Among the comments were: Mr. Lipsky: "The world will never again witness a leader as wise, careful and humorous as Dr. Weizmann. He was not only the guide and wise leader, but he inspired the pioneers and the builders to lay the foundations of the national home. He was the founder of every worth-while cultural institution in Israel. He established the Hebrew University and the Weizmann Institute at Rehovoth. He was the builder as well as the political leader."

Mr. Sonneborn: "Our decision to continue the working sessions of this conference today was made in tribute to the memory of our beloved. Dr. Weizmann who dedicated his great mind and heart to the ideal and the reality of a Jewish Homeland."

Mrs. Halprin: "Dr. Chaim Weizmann, whose place in Jewish history will endure as long as our ancient people endures, combined in his person both the ends and the beginnings of major convergent eras in Jewish destiny."

Henry Morgenthau Jr., chairman of the State of Israel Bond Organization: "I mourn the loss of a close personal friend. He was one of the most illustrious statesmen of the 20th century. He belongs with Wilson, Masaryk, Roosevelt and Churchill as a master builder of democracy and world brotherhood."

"A Prince Has Fallen"

Edward M. M. Warburg, general chairman of the United Jewish Appeal: "A prince in Israel has fallen. He was the greatest Jewish figure of modern times, a towering leader among men everywhere."

Israel Appeal Pays Tribute To Weizmann

Commodore Session Turned Into a Memorial; Israel Is Called His Monument

The death of Dr. Chaim Weizmann transformed this week's session of the sixteenth annual conference of more than 1,000 leaders of the United Israel Appeal, at the Commodore Hotel into an impromptu memorial service.

The delegates unanimously adopted a resolution, which after extolling Dr. Weizmann's career, said: "The sign of our redemption, the symbol of the highest Jewish hopes—the State of Israel—is also the everlasting monument of the distinguished life of Dr. Chaim Weizmann."

Chaim Weizmann

Chaim Weizmann has died, full of years and accomplishments, in the land he led to modern statehood. It is given to few men to leave nations to stand as their memorials, and, indeed, the Israel of today was not the creation of one man. Dr. Weizmann was the first to say this himself. Once, when he was asked whether there were many Zionists like him, he replied grimly that the roads of his native village in Russia were paved with them. But it was Dr. Weizmann who brought to fruition the work of Theodore Herzl and others, who worked and fought and suffered to fulfill an ancient dream and who, at the last, saw the Republic of Israel born and become its first president.

Not only was he the leading citizen of one of the world's nations; in many ways he epitomized the civilized man, moved equally by profound religious faith and a belief in human betterment through science. It was his accomplishments in biochemistry that helped win him fame in England, just as it was his personal charm and sincerity that brought him scores of friends who later were to give him great support in his statesmanlike struggle toward the objective that lay closest to him. To many people, the brilliant scientist devoted to the cause of leading his people out of a 2,000-year wilderness was symbolic of the ancient nation which sought redemption. Later on, younger and stronger men were to shoulder the final burdens, but the vision passed on to them by Weizmann remained sharp and shining, even while his own eyes grew dim with age.

Hope is an eternal monument, and it was hope that Dr. Weizmann gave a people. Today it has been translated into lives saved, universities founded and homes established, families reunited, a nation reborn. To all who admire faith and courage, Chaim Weizmann's name will remain an everlasting inspiration, his memory a blessing. That is why all people with hopes and dreams in their hearts may say: "Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?"

"One Man's Opinion"

BY BERYL SEGAL

The Book of Books

At this season of the year we are reminded to observe Jewish Book Month. In previous years this space has been dedicated to some work of significance published during the year. The choice of the book was entirely personal, and was not necessarily the best. Tastes in books, as in all other forms of art, differ, and personal judgments are not without error.

The choice of the work for this year's Jewish Book Month, however, is not based on personal taste. It is a universal choice, and no one will question our judgment in making this selection.

The Book of the Month, as of every month, and every year, and every day of the year, in ages past and in ages to come, is the book now celebrating 500 years since the first copy was printed, on movable type.

It is the Book of Books, the Bible, which was the first to be brought out to the world on the new invention, the printing press, 500 years ago. Our Christian neighbors are celebrating this date. Both the Catholic and the Protestant churches have prepared new revised editions of the Bible for the occasion. It is only proper that Jewish Book Month this year be dedicated to the Bible and speakers and writers touch on the subject each after his own ability and each in his own manner.

To say that the Bible is a great book is devoid of all originality. And yet one finds no other word in the limited human vocabulary to describe this collection of volumes, the crowning glory of the Jewish creative genius. Perhaps a better way would be to consider the ear-marks of great books, and then see how they apply to the Bible.

Great books are known to all, though not all have ever looked into them. Can you think of anyone who has never heard of the Bible? And yet you probably know many, just as I do, who never read the book.

Great books are often quoted in speech and in writing, though the source of the quotation is not always known. Verses, sayings and expressions from the Bible text issue from our mouths every day, on many occasions, though we know not what we are quoting. Bible expressions have long become part of every language, spoken in every corner of the earth, since the Bible is translated into every tongue, and children grow up on them and with them.

Great books speak to the hearts and minds of people of all lands, of all climes, and of all ages, years after they were written. So it is with the Bible. Whether the words of the Bible were told by word of mouth from father to son, or inscribed on clay tablets and on papyrus leaves by the wise men, or written on parchment by the scribes, or printed laboriously by hand, or rolled off the most modern printing presses, these words do not fail to move millions of people. They find in them echoes of their daily problems, their most hidden thoughts, and their fervent hopes. Peoples and nations find in the Bible reflections of the modern day perplexities facing them today. Peace and war, prosperity and want, good fortune and calamity, all are spoken of and reflected on in the stories of the Patriarchs.

Choir to Honor Schalit Tonight

The Temple Beth El choir, under the direction of Alice Liffmann, will present a musical service dedicated to Heinrich Schalit's newly revised Friday Evening Liturgy tonight at 8:15 P. M. A similar program was presented last May. Rabbi William G. Braude will comment on the program.

Schalit is well-known nationally as a contemporary composer and interpreter of Hebrew liturgical music.

In the utterances of the Prophets. It is an eternal book, speaking in eternal words, of eternal human problems.

Great books all have their doubters and their scoffers. In every generation the Bible too has its share of those who would tear it down and bespatter it with the vileness of their tongues. But every generation discovers the Bible again, discovers it by itself, discovers its truths and its beauty. What is more, every man in his own lifetime must discover the Bible for himself. We start out doubters and find ourselves devotees.

Finally like all great books, the Bible is hard to define. What is the Bible? Is it Story? Drama? Poetry? History? Law? Philosophy? Mystery?

It is all these and much more. For good story, you will find few tales in the literature of the world that can rival the story of Moses, of Joseph and his brethren, of Ruth and Naomi, of Esther.

For human drama, witness the gold mine discovered by Hollywood in the pages of the Bible. Enough to mention the two latest grand productions, now appearing on the screens of the nation, based on the stories of Samson and Delilah, and of King David and Bath-Sheba, both taken from the Book of Judges and the Book of Kings.

For poetry, the Psalmists of old are still the greatest masters who ever played the full gamut of human emotions. And when it is the Springtime of the year, and you are in love, where else will you find all that fills your heart, but your tongue cannot utter, than in the Song of Songs?

For philosophy, go to the Book of Job, to the sober wisdom of Koheleth, and to the epigrams of the Proverbs.

Mystery? If you can unravel the mysteries of the first four chapters of the Book of Genesis, you will have found the key to the mystery of life, of the universe, and of the power that created heaven and earth.

As for law, how sadly behind are we even today, how inadequate are we in all our wisdom, to live by the moral laws laid down in the Ten Commandments, in the teachings of Isaiah, of Amos, or even in the parable of Jonah and the gourd.

So, here it is once more, Jewish Book Month. What better book, what greater Jewish book can you think of, can you speak of, than the Book of Books, the Bible, now celebrating 500 years of printing and reprinting in every tongue, in every clime, in all corners of the earth?

Ulps Win 13-0 Over RW AZA

Led by co-captains Herb Gruber and Phil Diamond, the newly formed ULPs football team Sunday defeated Roger Williams A.Z.A. 13-0 at Tim O'Neil Field. The first touchdown was set up on a long run by Diamond and featured the down-field blocking of Howard Lovett, Phil Messing and Dick Triestman.

Intermittent showers made pass catching a very tricky job, but Stan Cohen and Howard Fink, ULP ends, did a good job. The A.Z.A. offense was stopped cold by the vicious tackling of Art Gilbert and Bob Yanover. Leo Gladstein and Harold Banaler shone for the losers.

SYD COHEN:

The Dodgers Institute A Search

The news for this week is easy to relate. It is on page 13 of the current issue of the Sporting News, under the by-line of Oscar Ruhl.

The headline on this particular story reads—"Jewish Player No. 1 on The O'Malley Want List," and here is what it says:

"Walter O'Malley, head man of the Brooklyn Dodgers, believes a Jewish player of top ability and an Italian diamond performer will provide the answer to the Dodgers' quest for a world's championship. The O'Malley says, 'Our agents have been under instructions to hunt for a Jewish player these past two years, but as of right now, that search moves into top priority.'

"I also want an Italian player. And, being Celtic myself, a great Irishman. But I appreciate that in baseball, we Gaels are a vanishing race.

"Be it in baseball or politics, certain considerations are important. We are confronted with the fact that a larger percentage of our Brooklyn patrons are Jewish... A fraction of the money spent in our extended campaign to bring Negro players to Ebbets Field possibly would land the Jewish star we want."

"When asked if his scouts would reduce speed in their quest for Negro material, O'Malley replied, 'We hardly are in a position to adopt any such policy of selectivity. We will give ample opportunity to any player who is worthy of the chance. But the fact remains, we should get that Jewish player.'

"The Dodgers could have had Sid Gordon, who lived in Flatbush, but our club officials at that time (Ed. note—that would be a reference to Branch Rickey, who ran the Dodgers for years before going to Pittsburgh) were not conscious of a changing population in Brooklyn...

"We could have had a great Italian infielder, too, a guy named Phil Rizzuto. But they chased him out of Ebbets Field with the complaint he was too small... I believed that we had the Jewish star in Cal Abrams. But he did not quite make the grade."

"Brooklyn has no carriage trade, such as they have at Yankee Stadium," the Dodger president went on... "It hasn't the 'come hell or high water' type of fan the Giants had during the McGraw regime... We have enough baseball enthusiasts within walking distance to fill Ebbets Field. We have analyzed this neighboring population, and come up with the idea that we must find that Jewish player."

"O'Malley's quest revives memories of the one John J. McGraw conducted for many years, without success. Mac thought he had his man in Andy Cohen, Rogers Hornsby's successor in 1928. But Andy ran out of gas... Brooklyn tried Freddy Sington before Abrams, and he lacked major league potentialities."

"The Yankees have tried Jimmy Reese and Ed Levy, and they, too, are still looking for the Greenberg whom they let go to Detroit from Crotton Park, North—right under their Jimmy Durante schnozzola."

That's the end of the quote from Oscar Ruhl's column, but it is far from being the end of the story. The fact that Brooklyn's owners have decided they must have a line of outstanding Jewish players may seem flattering; actually, it seems a move born of desperate necessity.

"The truth is, the Dodgers did not draw well this past season. They fielded an outstanding club, interesting at all times; colorful, capable and classy—a team which romped to the title and actually out-played the Yankees in the World Series. Yet, the fans stayed away in droves, even during the sixth game of the Series, which conceivably could have meant the championship for the Brooks.

Something is wrong in Brooklyn, and the Dodgers' bosses are driving themselves frantic trying to figure what it is. Television is not held to be the main reason. The three New York clubs are concerned about TV, of course, and are considering cutting down on home games and just TVing all road games instead.

But is that the answer? Detroit had an awful club, yet drew well. So did the Cubs, who were no sensations during the last half of the season. Brooklyn obviously is not appealing to its baseball citizenry the way it should, and in trying to figure what is the reason, O'Malley and associates have come up with the Jewish theme.

Here is a team playing in the heart of a tremendous and comparatively well-beeled Jewish population, yet without an outstanding Jewish ball player. They may have something there; but if that is what is needed to boost attendance, it certainly destroys the myth that Brooklyn is the best ball town in the country.

It is really ironic that the three New York clubs, with a total of better than two million Jewish population, should have such continuous bad luck in getting Jewish players. Outside of Sid Gordon, how many can you name down through the pages of baseball history?

And that brings up the matter of Jimmy Reese and Ed Levy, mentioned earlier in this essay. This is really funny. Reese came up with Lyn Lary in 1930, not as a Jewish player, but as a partner in a crackerjack second base combination. Jimmy was not advertised as a Jewish player. His real name was Hymie Solomon, and he didn't plug it at all.

On the other hand, Ed Levy, one of the wartime replacements for Lou Gehrig at first base, was widely heralded as a Jew, when all the time he was nothing of the sort. Ed's real name was Whitner; he had merely adopted the name of his step-father, with whom he had lived for years.

As for Hank Greenberg, the Yanks tried hard to keep him within the organization. They offered him money, and treated him to a Yankee game to show him what playing in the Stadium was like. Hank glued his eyes on Lou Gehrig, already one of the most feared hitters in the game, and decided that he likely would rot on the bench waiting for a chance to replace Larruping Lou. So Hank shopped around, and wound up with Detroit.

Well, there's the story. Do you know of a likely Jewish prospect? You can make a small fortune by letting the Brooklyn organization know about it if you do.

Their second war of independence

A DESPERATE WAR is raging in Israel. This time the enemy is shortages.

Once these boys fought to liberate their land, now they battle to build it. Their weapons are the trowel, the plow, the tractor.

The enemy holds many fronts. Housing is short. Materials are short. So is food.

All this is so because Israel, in her first forty months, doubled her population by welcoming 700,000 refugees. Those who won freedom shared their prize with those who came home from lands of danger and despair, even though they came at a rate which exceeded Israel's capacity to absorb them.

Now Israel fights again — to conquer scarcity — to turn the great homecoming into the great home making.

The enemy can be defeated if we lend a hand through the United Jewish Appeal. New settlements can be built; new houses erected to replace shabby immigrant camps; new irrigation lines set to make waste areas productive.

Through the United Jewish Appeal we can pass the ammunition they urgently need — mortar, cinder blocks, equipment and help in absorbing those who have come, and will continue to come.

Israel's people, building a democracy like our own, have no shortages of courage and will to win.

Give through your local campaign. Give more than ever. Give today!
