Sharett Raps U. S. Policy on Military Aid to Arab States

JERUSALEM — Israel Foreign Minister Moshe Sharett denounced the United States policy of preferential arming of the Arab states as deceptive in general and dangerous to Israel specifically.

Repeating in Parliament a demand by the right-wing Herut party for debate on the American arms policy, Sharett declared that the Foreign Office had expressed its opposition in writing and through oral representations to the State Department against any supply of arms by the United States to the Arab nations so long as they refuse to make peace with Israel.

Under the Mutual Security Act passed by Congress, the sum of $30,000,000 was provided to be applied at the discretion of President Eisenhower in the supply of military aid to the Arab states and Israel. The State Department had made it known that the Arab States would receive 80 per cent of this as against 20 per cent for Israel.

Holiday Deferment Granted Draftees

NEW YORK — Jewish draftees ordered to report for preinduction physical examination or induction during the High Holy Days may request deferment until after the holiday period, it was announced here by the Jewish Welfare Board's Commission on Jewish Chaplaincy.

The announcement quoted an order by headquarters of the Selective Service System which recommends that "the local (draft) board should, wherever possible, give favorable consideration to such request."

5 Romanian Zionists Get Heavy Sentences

JERUSALEM — Prison terms ranging from 12 to 18 years were imposed by a Bucharest court on five Zionist Revisionist leaders in Romania who had been under arrest for two years before being placed for trial, it was learned here from reliable sources.

The accused were tried in camera, but there were indications that the next trial of Zionists in Romania will be turned into a spectacle, with public confessions by the defendants, many of whom were members of the pro-Soviet Hashomer Hatzair party.

Embassy in Jordan Refuses to Act For Jewish American Citizens

Strengthened Cooperation With Arabs Is Emphasized By Moscow

LONDON — Soviet Premier Georgi M. Malenkov, addressing the Supreme Soviet, emphasized that the resumption by Moscow of diplomatic relations with Israel need not be interpreted as meaning that the Soviet Government will not continue to strengthen its "cooperation" with the Arab countries.

"The assertions of some foreign newspapers that the restoration of diplomatic relations with Israel will lead to a weakening of the relations of the Soviet Union with the Arab states are void of any foundation," Premier Malenkov said. "The activity of the Soviet Government will be directed also in the future towards the strengthening of friendly cooperation with the Arab states."

With regard to the renewed relations with Israel, Mr. Malenkov stated: "Striving to ease the general tension, the Soviet Government agreed to restore diplomatic relations with the State of Israel. It took thereby into consideration the pledge of the Government of Israel that it will take no part in any union or agreement pursuing aggressive aims against the Soviet Union. We consider that the restoration of diplomatic relations will promote cooperation between the two states."

In Jerusalem, the Israel Foreign Office refrained from commenting on Mr. Malenkov's statement. Political circles there emphasized that no change is to be expected in Israel's foreign policy. They expressed the hope that Israel would become a bridge between the East and the West in the present conflict.

Senator Lehman Raises Question

WASHINGTON—The U. S. Embassy in Amman, Jordan is acquiescing in Arab prejudice against Americans of Jewish faith, according to information received by Sen. Herbert H. Lehman. The Senator has asked Secretary of State John Foster Dulles for an explanation.

Dulles was requested to give his "justification of the attitude taken by the American Embassy in Jordan in declining to make inquiries on behalf of an American citizen merely because the citizen happens to be of the Jewish faith."

The Embassy's attitude was revealed in a letter it sent in connection with an inquiry from Elliott L. Biskind, a New York attorney. Mr. Biskind and members of his family are heirs to real estate in the portion of Jerusalem now occupied by Jordan. He inquired through U. S. State Department channels about information on what steps he might be to take to register the property in the names of its rightful owners.

In response to his inquiry, Biskind received a copy of an official letter written by the American Embassy in Jordan declining to "make either formal or informal queries as to the possibility of recording the property of individuals of the Jewish faith in Jordan." The Embassy said it did not "deem it appropriate" for it to aid "individuals of the Jewish faith" because it took "in view" the "particularly violent anti-Jewish feeling prevailing at the present time in Jordan."

Sen. Lehman wrote Dulles that he recognized the necessity of promoting the best possible relations with Jordan but did not think "those relations should be cultivated at the expense of the legitimate rights of American citizens." The Senator said "it should be repugnant to our diplomacy to tolerate or give comfort to discriminations among American citizens in such matters as this."

Pros and Cons on Goldmann's Remarks

Blaustein Scores Israel Statement

NEW YORK—Issue was taken here this week by Jacob Blaustein, president of the American Jewish Committee, with a statement on Israel reportedly made by Dr. Nahum Goldmann at the plenary assembly of the World Jewish Congress in Geneva to the effect that "there is no other state in the world where nearly 90 per cent of the people live outside of it."

Blaustein said that this view "is refuted by virtually all Jews in the free world, including the United States." He quoted a statement of views adopted by the American Jewish Committee in January, 1949, which declared that "citizens of the United States are Americans and citizens of Israel are Israelis; this we affirm with all its implications." Blaustein emphasized that in making this assertion his organization "reflected the overwhelming sentiment of the Jews of the United States."

Blaustein also took issue with the part of Dr. Goldmann's statement at the Geneva parley in which he urged Jews from the Western countries to migrate to Israel. "Jews throughout the world," Blaustein said, "have supported Israel and will continue to support it. But there is a sharp difference between friendly aid to Israel by Jews all over the world on the basis of strong kinship motivating mutual help, and an obligation to immigrate into that country."

'Individual Choice'

"Those Jews who of their own volition wish to go to Israel or need to go there will of course do so. This is a matter of individual choice. But to speak of immigration to Israel as a duty of Jews throughout the world is to subvert the basic conception of citizenship and to assume that Israel is the only place where Jews can live in security and dignity. We reject this false doctrine unqualifiedly and in so doing we are confident that we speak in behalf of virtually every American Jew."

Goldmann Says He Was Misinterpreted

GENEVA — Dr. Nahum Goldmann, acting president of the World Jewish Congress, protested during the weekend the "unfortunate misinterpretations" by some newspapers of remarks made in his speech opening the third plenary assembly of the Congress last Tuesday night.

"I have repeatedly said that Israel needs many more immigrants for consolidation, and every Jew who wants to emigrate has that right," Dr. Goldmann declared. "It is the full right of the Zionist movement to urge Jews to go to Israel in order to assist in its development."

"But I have never indicated that all Jews outside Israel should regard themselves as Israelis or potential Israelis," he emphasized. "This is a complete contradiction of my basic conception of Jewish life, as my entire record will confirm."

"I have emphatically stated, and repeated in my opening address here, that it is certain that during the foreseeable future, a very large part of the Jewish people, if not the majority, will remain outside Israel," Dr. Goldmann declared.

He said that the Jewish communities outside of Israel had their own important and essential problems. "It is a fundamental error to regard Israel as the only center of Jewish life and to consider the Jews in the Diaspora as no more than a source of permanent, material support for Israel," he declared.

Great Contribution

Dr. Israel Goldstein, president of the American Jewish Congress, speaking of the contribution of American Jews to the upbuilding of the State of Israel, admitted that they have given the least of manpower but pointed out that the American community has been second only to the Jewish community in Israel as a factor of importance in the establishment of the Jewish State.

He emphasized that the material and moral support of American Jews has been of major help.

Einstein Tells Girl Geometry Good for Mind, Personality

NEWARK, N. J.—When Betsy Sternberg returns to Weequahic High School this fall, she will have an entirely different outlook on mathematics, thanks to Prof. Albert Einstein. Young Miss Sternberg accompanied her father, Norman Sternberg, vice president of the State Zionist Region, to an interview with the famed scientist. When she confessed to Professor Einstein that she was "a little scared" at meeting such a famous man, he smiled and assured her that he was not a very dangerous person.

"I spoke of my problems with geometry and said that it really was not a useful subject," Betsy noted. "He smiled again and told me that although perhaps I may never find use for geometry, it has great value in disciplining the mind and that all subjects that I studied were a part of my intellectual background and will form part of my personality in life."

Warned Against China Trip To Seek Brother's Freedom

NEWARK—Norman Krasner of Newark was advised last week by Rep. Robert W. Kean to abandon his plans for a trip to China to seek information about his brother, Capt. Ben Krasner, who was seized by Chinese communists March 21 with two newspapermen, Richard Applegate and Don Dixon, while they were enroute from Hong Kong to Macao in a private yacht.

Kean disclosed that the State Department has made three unsuccessful appeals to Russia for aid in obtaining the release of the three Americans. He said that the U. S. Embassy in Moscow made three approaches to the Soviet Foreign Ministry with no encouraging results. Kean added that Red China has not replied to notes from the British who have also asked for information about the men.

Kean warned Krasner against taking the trip because it might place him in great danger and bring "militant action" by the communists against his brother and his companions. He also pointed out that "the communists might arrange a rendezvous" and "milk you for a very large sum of money without giving you accurate information in return."

A favorable development in the capture of the men was noted by Kean, however, who pointed out that there has been no mention of the three Americans in the Chinese communist press, which would have reported any public trials. No official charges have been made against the men who are being held incommunicado.

Norman Krasner said that he would follow Kean's advice and defer plans for his trip. "I had hoped to get some information there, but if Mr. Kean thinks that the trip would jeopardize the safety of my brother and his companions, I shall not try to make it now."

When the yacht was seized it was reported that there were also two Chinese crew members and a Chinese girl aboard. The yacht was reportedly flying a large American flag when it left Hong Kong and was captured by a communist gunboat. Applegate had purchased the yacht for a world cruise.

Capt. Krasner, who was piloting the craft, was in China coastal shipping for four years. He served in the U. S. Merchant Marine during World War II, most of the time making the run from the U. S. to Murmansk, Russia.

He left his home in Newark Nov. 1 to return to the Orient where he was promised a job, his family said. Capt. Krasner, 30, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Krasner. He has another brother, Louis, also of Newark.

Three Jews May be Re-Elected to West German Parliament

BONN—At least three Jews will be re-elected to the next West German Bundestag, it was predicted here. All of them are Social Democratic members. The parliamentary elections will take place Sept. 6.

Second Israel Plane Crashes off Haifa

TEL AVIV — A second Israel Air Force plane crashed off the coast of Haifa while searching for the pilot and navigator of a two-engine Mosquito plane. Wreckage from the second crash, seen by crowds along Haifa's shore front, was found almost immediately but that craft's two-man crew was not rescued.

A wheel from the first plane was found in the sea off Ras el Nakura, a border point on the Israel-Lebanese frontier. British planes from Cyprus and an American plane from Libya assisted in the search.

Beth-Israel Engages New Cantor

Temple Beth Israel this week announced the engagement of Cantor Leo Lang as the official Cantor of the Temple.

Prior to coming to this country 20 years ago, Cantor Lang was chief Cantor at the Great Synagogue in Moscow and has been known as the "Moskova" Cantor. Subsequently, he served in a similar capacity in the Great Synagogue in Helsinki, Finland. Cantor Lang has occupied pulpits in Chicago, Detroit, Montreal, and Boston. In New York he has been Cantor for the High Holidays for the services held at the Yeshiva University. His musical training was obtained at the Odessa Conservatory.

Cantor Lang's first appearance at Temple Beth Israel will be at the Slichoth services to be held at midnight on September 5. Rabbi Morris Schussheim will officiate. The Temple Choir under the direction of Benjamin Premack will participate in the service.

majority vote in individual constituencies and half will be elected on statewide party tickets with the aid of proportional representation. Jacob Altmaier, 64, and Peter Blachstein, 42, will both contest the same "safe" Social Democratic constituencies which sent them to Parliament in 1949, the former in Hanau, near Frankfurt, the latter in the Hamburg district.

Berlin delegates to the Bundestag, whose votes are not counted there because of four-power arrangements with regard to the separate status of the city, are picked by a different procedure. It is fairly certain that Jeannette Wolff, 65, will again be prominent among those representing Berlin in Bonn.

It does not appear that any of the other parties will run candidates who are avowed Jews, but a number of nominees of all parties are known or believed to be of Jewish or part-Jewish extraction. The Christian-Democratic Union has picked Professor Franz Boehm, head of the German delegation to the reparations negotiations with Israel in The Hague and proven friend of the Jews, to contest a Frankfurt constituency.

Centerland Closes Season Today

Camp Centerland, country day-camp of the Jewish Community Center, closes its 1953 season today with two special programs. Blue and White Day, involving the entire camp, featured a Scavenger Hunt, Group Singing, Stunt Program, Softball, Volleyball, Dodgeball, Checkers, Ping Pong, Archery, Swimming Events.

"Finian's Rainbow" was presented by the campers in the wooded amphitheater recently constructed by the campers. This musical fantasy featured Paula Dressler as Finian, James Steiner as Woody, Sheldon Melamut as Spooner, Jeffrey Galper as Ogg, Harriet Millman as Sharon, and Rayna Ackerman as Susan, The Silent One.

High spots of the Camping season included the annual camp carnival, parents' visiting day, the nature program, trips, the art workshop, golfing instruction on the miniature golf course, and the busy water front program, with swimming and diving instructions.

Sabbath services were conducted and planned by Leahbelle Korn Chernov, Beverly Rotmer, and Mal Singer. A choir composed of the Minnettes, a Senior Girls group, provided the musical portion of the program. Gabriel and Mike Ende, Judy and Nancy Weinber, Shira Keller and Roberta Trinkle were active participants in the services.

Attending were all workers in the initial gift and vital gift divisions and the M-Day associate chairmen. Plans were discussed for the forthcoming campaign, and instructions were given by committee heads, including Mrs. Archie Fain, general chairman; Mrs. Benjamin Brier, chairman of initial gifts, Mrs. Max Greenbaum, vital gifts chairman, and Mrs. George Reizen, M-Day chairman. A dramatic audience participation program, highlighting the needs of the campaign, was conducted by Mrs. Henry Markoff, dramatic program chairman.

"Mister Roberts" at Theatre-by-the-Sea

"Mister Roberts," the uproarious comedy about women-starved sailors, will open Monday night, Aug. 24, at the Theatre-by-the-Sea, with Wayne Morris, Hollywood star, in the title role.

The lusty comedy by Thomas Heggen and Joshua Logan, which ran for three laugh-packed years on Broadway and is soon to be made into a motion picture, will be seen with all its salty dialogue intact. The comedy tells of the gobs aboard the AK601, traveling between the ports of Tedium and Apathy in the South Pacific, and of what happens when they spot a unit of U. S. Navy nurses on shore.

"Mister Roberts" and the men of the AK601 will be seen nightly through Saturday, Aug. 29, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

WJC Congress Ends; Calls For Restoration of Yiddish Language

GENEVA—An appeal to the nations of the world to take legislative and administrative action to facilitate the naturalization of stateless persons now within their borders, was made by the Third Plenary Assembly of the World Jewish Congress, which ended here this week.

The appeal was contained in one of a series of draft resolutions prepared in committee to sum up the discussions and conclusions of the representatives of Jewish communities in some 60 countries on political, social and cultural matters.

As indicated in the draft resolutions, the WJC expressed its deep regret and concern that a number of major powers have declared that they will not adhere to a binding international covenant on human rights. The assembly urged all members of the United Nations to support the adoption of the covenant as a step towards "the building of a structure of international relations based on understanding and on the principles and purposes of the United Nations Charter."

The Congress called on Jewish communities throughout the world to "mobilize every moral resource in support of the United Nations and to cooperate actively with like-minded groups in the struggle for implementation of the principles and purposes of the UN throughout the whole field of international relations." It will also appeal to the statesmen and governments of the world to end the present international tension "with the burden of insecurity which it imposes on the people of the world."

THE WJC ADOPTED a resolution designed to restore the Yiddish language to the position it enjoyed at the beginning of the last decade as a major medium of communication of world Jewry. To counteract the "contentions of assimilation" in the countries outside Israel, the delegates urged that no efforts be spared to further the "creative power of the Yiddish masses which finds its expression through the medium of Yiddish." The resolution called for support of all educational and cultural activities in Hebrew, Yiddish and other languages which are likely to promote Jewish cultural unity. Another draft resolution urged that "special attention" be paid to the exploration of sociological phenomena underlying the "alienation of Jews from their national origin."

SUNDAY'S SCHEDULE
(August 23, 1953)

Esquire Formal Wear vs Technoprint at Hopkins Park
Cranston J.C.C. vs Hope St. Business Men at Dillon Park
M&F Insurance vs Beacon at Roger Williams Park
Broadway Auto Sales (off)
Broadway insured itself of a playoff spot by taking both ends of their doubleheader from their nearest rival, Technoprint. The first game was one of the best games ever played in the league. A nine innings 2 to 1 win for the automen. Leven and Jerry Gordon hooked up in a duel that was something to watch. The printers scored in the third only to have Broadway tie up the game in the fifth. Neither side threatened until the fatal ninth when, with one out, two singles and an outfield bobble put runners on second and third. The winning run scored on a wild pitch while giving an intentional walk. For the winners it was Gordon all the way tossing a five hitter. For Davey Leven it was a tough loss. Paris, Jim Steiner, and Moe Rose were the best hitters. Jim Steiner was outstanding at second base. The Karambales Bros., Wish, Bader and Levine shone for the losers.

Broadway wrapped up the second game early, scoring three runs in each of the first three innings and coasting to the win behind Jack Steiner and his tomato ball. The Kaplan brothers and Paris homered, while Ross, Don Schwartz, and Rose also hit well. The printers only noise came from Lou Dostoglos who had a two run homer to account for their only runs.

M&F Insurance pulled another upset this time taking a split with the league leading Esquire outfit. In the first game, behind the pitching of Labush the insurance men took over by the score of 7 to 4. Beside the good pitching, Gladstone, Gold and Kadsivitz did some good hitting while Sandler and Steve Espo were outstanding in the field. For the losing tax men Rodman, Seymour and Shelton Golden at bat and Weintraub in the field were best.

In the second game the league leaders rode rough shod over the M&F boys. Starting off with a five run splurge, the final was 15 to 3. Stan Lobel, Rodman and Tetrault had four hits each. Leonard and Herb Weintraub were sensational in the field. Labush and Diamond homered to account for the loser's runs. Goldstein at short played an outstanding game.

Between You and Me

POLL ON JUDAISM: From time to time Jewish students at Harvard "take the pulse" among their colleagues on their identification with Judaism . . . Last year the results of such a poll presented a rather gloomy picture . . . Most of the students were not ashamed of being Jews, but they said that they were Jews only because their parents were Jews . . . They knew nothing about Judaism and cared little about it . . . This year the survey involved college students from all over the country . . . They attended the Brandeis Camp Institute, a summer camp of Jewish study, and they were asked to answer a number of questions to establish the extent of their identification with Judaism and the extent of their insecurity as Jews . . . The questionnaire, prepared by Malcolm D. Rivkin, a Harvard student, had been pre-tested on 30 students from Harvard, Radcliffe and Brandeis University . . . The results of the study led to the conclusion that American Judaism is losing the character of a positive, soul-satisfying force . . . Mr. Rivkin emphasized that if Judaism is to survive and develop, Jewish leaders must "re-examine, re-evaluate and re-define" its role in terms of present-day problems, not past experiences . . . He found the highest level of identification with Jewishness among Orthodox and Conservative students, women with extensive education, and office-holders in Jewish organizations . . . The lowest level of identification came from students with Reform or agnostic backgrounds, or those who had limited Jewish education . . . Women showed strong tendencies to be more identified than men . . . This is because Jewish groups in this country offer its women a larger variety of activities . . . Also probably because the man tends to be oriented away from the home toward the larger society where he must find occupational status . . . In this atmosphere there is a corresponding lessening of forces and attractiveness towards Jewish identification . . . On the other hand, the Jewish woman, because she has less opportunity for achievement in the occupational world, tends to join Jewish women's groups and adopts more Jewish values than men.

JEWISH SECURITY: Perhaps the most interesting part of the study is the part which tries to establish to what extent Jews feel secure in this country . . . A high degree of security showed itself among those who lived in neighborhoods or went to schools where there were a large number of other Jews . . . Women were also very secure . . . The most insecure people came from areas or schools with few fellow-Jews . . . They had very high incomes, and tended to be men, rather than women . . . The highly identified Jews were not necessarily the most secure . . . In fact, a large proportion of the "most Jewish" subjects evidenced marked insecurity . . . Of course, the sample group on which this finding is based is small, and possibly unrepresentative . . . Nevertheless, the result of the study is interesting inasmuch as the trend among Jews now is towards breaking away from neighborhood ties and moving to other areas . . . Emphasis is, of course, laid on the fact that the only insecurity American Jews face is an amorphous state of social insecurity . . . The American Jew enjoys equal protection under the law and the privileges and immunities of other American citizens . . . He is not exposed to external forces which demand that Jews band together or perish . . . He is not subject to concerted pressure from an openly hostile environment which denies him material benefits . . . On the contrary, he is a product of a society that ideologically encourages him to act as an individual, not as a member of a group . . . Nevertheless, he is denied by some elements the symbols of social status only because he is a member of the Jewish group . . . It is due to this attitude, that many Jews "return" to Judaism, the study establishes . . . They become "more Jewish" because they can find a status substitute in Jewish affiliation . . . Much of their identification with Judaism, the study finds, is nothing but a compensation for status-denial by the non-Jewish world . . . They find Judaism "second-best" and really want to break away but cannot.

"Restitution Bank" Trial Nears End

FRANKFURT—With counsel for the prominent Jewish attorney Joseph Klibansky demanding his acquittal because of "proven innocence," the defense completed its summation in the involved "Jewish Restitution Bank" case, which has been dragging on in a local German courtroom for the past ten months.

Mr. Klibansky, who was indicted for having been an accessory in the violation of corporation and foreign currency laws, will make his final remarks next week. The other four defendants, who were connected with the bank in one capacity or another, will also make their concluding statements. The court will hand down its verdict in about two weeks.

"These monstrous proceedings have become the very archetype of the situation described in Franz Kafka's famed novel, 'The Trial,'" declared Dr. Paul Haag on behalf of Mr. Klibansky, an Orthodox Frankfurt-born Jew, whom the Association of Jewish Communities in Hesse recently confirmed as its legal adviser.

ZOA Convention to Convene August 26

NEW YORK—The 56th annual convention of the Zionist Organization of America, which will be held beginning August 26 through August 30 at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, New York, will center its attention on issues affecting the structure and tasks of the Zionist movement today, the relationship of American Jewry to Israel and Israel's position in the Middle East, according to the tentative agenda released by the National ZOA headquarters here.

More than 1200 delegates representing 663 ZOA Districts in the 48 states will attend the five-day deliberations.

The main issues to be discussed and acted upon by the Convention will embrace the entire range of Zionist activities in this country, the role of the ZOA on the American scene, the future of the World Zionist Organization and American Jewry's contributions toward solving the economic problems confronting the State of Israel, with emphasis on the promotion of a vast program of capital investments.

Reading the Papers

The Kid Again

Ted Williams has been the subject of much favorable publicity of late; but somehow, it seems inevitable that some one, some where, will wind up taking a punch at the Kid in print. The latest blast was not long in coming, and this one was unusual. The Sporting News editorialized last week on the manner in which athletes dress, and picked out Williams for special attention because of "the sloppy long pants which are part of the slugger's uniform."

The Sporting News thinks big league ball players should be careful about how they dress, and it hopes that the kids and young ball players will not follow Ted's lead in that department.

How fortunate that the Splinter returned to baseball at the time he did. Without a figure such as Williams to hold up as a bad example, the editorial writer would have nothing solid on which to hang his hat.

Yes sir, Ted Williams really comes in handy to the nation's writers. When they tire of praising him they can always think of some way to criticize him.

Picking Up Sings

Have you ever wondered how a ballplayer can steal a sign from the players of the opposing team? Paul Richards, manager of the White Sox, tells how it is done in an interview with a Chicago writer in last week's Sporting News. Richards says that ball players would make poor actors, and he shows why in this article. Here is what the clever manager has to say about the matter:

"Baseball players are almost universally bad at taking signs, and the answer is that they're clumsy actors. They just can't fool anybody.

"If they had more acting ability you would see more tricky baseball played. The average manager nowadays is afraid to try anything too smart or involved, because the player will get it all fouled up.

"For instance, when a base-runner takes a hit-and-run sign he'll give it away nine times out of ten.

"The best way to spot it, of course, is to keep your eye on the batter first. As soon as he does a little something out of his normal pattern, look quickly at the runner on first base. Almost invariably he'll give some mark of recognition that will tip it off.

"Very few, even among the veterans, are good enough actors not to give it away. When I was playing I could catch a hit-and-run sign 90 per cent of the time.

"I know I used to have Lou Boudreau (then managing the Indians) half crazy because I'd always break up his hit-and-run plays. It bothered him because he felt that he was giving it away. Actually he himself was good at giving the signs, but I was picking it up from the base-runners.

"Batting ahead of him were Oris Hockette and Ray Mack and they would give it away and I'd call for a pitchout and throw them out a mile.

"Here's the way Hockette and Mack tipped it off: Whenever Hockette got the hit-and-run sign he invariably would take a quick look at second base and hitch up his pants a little.

"Whenever Mack saw Boudreau flashing the hit-and-run sign he'd walk over to first base and kick the bag. They were unconscious little habits, but foolproof for me.

"We have players on our club who are brutal at taking signs. Some think, for example, that by acting nonchalant they can cover it up. But if they start talking casually to the coach and don't do that normally, well, that's a give-away too."

Richards should know what he is talking about. He was a smart big league catcher for years, and there are no flies on him as a manager.

Hole In One

Umpire Max Pelerski had a tough one to call during a recent game at Buffalo in the International League. Tom Burgess, Rochester outfielder, smacked a 400-foot drive that struck the base of the right-center field wall and lodged in a gopher hole. Burgess came all the way home, but Pelerski ran out, dug the ball out of the hole, and then waved the batter back to second base.

Strikeout King

Lou Kretlow, veteran right-hander who has had a tough time striking in the American League, still holds the strikeout record for the Eastern League. Playing for Williamsport in 1948 Kretlow whiffed 219 men.

Using Their Heads

You'll probably never see a National League umpire remove his cap from his head while out on the field. There may be several good reasons for this, but tops among them is this. Some of the umps have adopted the tropical custom of inserting chilled cabbage leaves in their caps in an attempt to lessen the effect of the hot rays of the sun.

Praise for Al Rosen

Three years ago Casey Stengel was called all sorts of names because he left Al Rosen off the All-Star team of the American League. But now Casey has changed his mind.

It is not alone for Rosen's great hitting and vastly improved fielding that Stengel now praises the Cleveland third baseman. Here's what the Yankees manager says about Al:

"What I like about the fellow is that he has taught himself to hit to all fields. He can shoot 'em from one foul line to another. Makes it tough to put your men in the right place for him. He doesn't play too bad in the field, either.

"Another thing I noticed. I saw him put on his uniform at the All-Star Game in Cincinnati. Why, that boy is all black and blue. Yet he never misses a game. Must be made of the stuff that was in the old Orioles. That fellow hasn't been given enough credit."

Drama to Describe Work of Centers

The second in a seven-week series of radio dramas presented by The General Jewish Committee of Providence and Station WEAN will be heard at 10 P. M. this Sunday, August 23.

The play this week stars William Gargan in a drama entitled "The Biggest Town in the World." It depicts the work carried on in Jewish Community Centers like the one on Sessions Street in Providence.

Julius Michaelson, president of the Providence Jewish Community Center will make a brief address at the end of the program.

PASS FEDERAL EXAM

Two Providence men have passed the U. S. District Court of Columbia Federal Bar examination held recently in Washington. It was revealed this week. They are Morris J. Levin, of 10 Crolyland Road, and James L. Diamond, of 88 Posdyke Street.

London Times Views

The very conservative London Times, in an editorial this week, shows a much more practical approach to the current Jerusalem controversy than does our own State Department. Commenting on the move of Israel's capitol to the Holy City, the Times urges the United Nations to reexamine its position "in the light of existing facts."

Most of the world's governments, including Britain, said that they would not remove their foreign offices from Tel Aviv and that Israel's decision endangers current UN efforts to bring peace to the Near East.

But in no uncertain terms, the London Times writes: "The emotional hold which Jerusalem has over Jewish affections makes the Jewish city the only possible capitol for Israel." Setting the lie to the Arab position that the Holy City virtually belongs to three major world religions and that its total occupation by Israel would deny their "spiritual claims" as well as violate a United Nations decision regarding internationalization, the editorial points out that both the Jewish State and Jordan, the two countries between which Jerusalem is now divided, are willing to give religious pilgrims every possible facility to visit the Holy Places.

Our own State Department this week reemphasized its position that the American Government could not recognize Jerusalem as Israel's capitol city and voiced dismay that the Jewish State had acted unilaterally in setting up its ruling seat there. It would be well for the world's governments to consider the London Times attitudes—especially in light of the fact that Israel long ago announced its intention of moving, its willingness to allow internationalization of the Holy Places and the UN's failure to bring to a conclusion an issue which is now more of a political football than anything else.

PLAIN TALK

by ALFRED SEGAL

The Jewish community of our town is being stirred up more or less by a certain case of intermarriage. Not that intermarriage is anything new in our community in the recent years. It has been happening among the children of some of our most Orthodox people.

Indeed, intermarriage in our Orthodox circles is much more frequent than ever it was among the Reform. The Reformers generally have married within their own religious circle.

But this particular intermarriage was somehow a bit different, you might say. The officiating clergymen were an evangelical minister and one of our Reform rabbis.

The Jewish boy and the Christian girl had agreed that in the ceremony of their marriage the religions of both of them would be respected. In deference to the religion of her fathers the girl desired that the minister of her church officiate; the Jewish boy was willing if at the Christian minister's side stood his rabbi, joining equally in the service.

And that's the way it was: The Christian minister and the rabbi served together at this marriage altar. The Christian was meticulous not to bring up any suggestion of Christian theology, such as the name of Jesus, in his marriage rite.

If it hadn't been for the protest of one of our more Orthodox rabbis the event would have been quickly forgotten, indeed, it was noticed by many. Some people who were aware of it thought of it as one of the rarer manifestations of the brotherhood of man. These, of course, are the people who hope for a time when all the religious altars will be one for the one God.

The Orthodox rabbi didn't like any of this at all and he issued a public letter in which he practically suggested the excommunication from the community's favor of the Anglo-Jewish newspaper that printed the news of this wedding together with a picture of the bride.

That is to say, he called on B'nai

B'rith and the Jewish Community Center to expel this newspaper from their patronage. B'nai B'rith and the Community Center get the bulletins of their activities and program printed in this paper. The rabbi summoned all local Jewry to a mass meeting of protest and action. He dismissed with a brush-off the Reform rabbi who had participated in the service of this marriage. "Such 'rabbis'" (yes, he wrote rabbis in quotes), "such 'rabbis' we may regard as ministers of another religion."

So our much-divided community now has something new to divide on. Some people say: "The idea of that! A rabbi joining with a Christian minister in the sacred service of a marriage! It's all right for rabbis to mix with Christian ministers in causes that have to do with the general good outside the synagogue and the church. But in matters special to religion a rabbi should stick to his own altar where his religion exclusively belongs. The rabbi had no business at the side of the Christian minister in the performance of a religious rite; even though with his Jewish rite he had an equal part in the ceremony. But that's Reform for you. Maybe we will yet see Reform rabbis joining in a service of Christmas."

Those who take this Reform rabbi's side of it, reply: So what? Isn't it all to the good to see two clergymen of different faiths getting together at one altar in a service of both their religions? An omen of the brotherhood of man, isn't it? The two clergymen—this Christian and this rabbi were found for once speaking to God together. Can God himself find any fault in that? If He noticed the matter at all He must have been pleased to see these brethren of two religions joining together in a blessing on a marriage. You think God is more pleased when he sees brethren so hatefully divided as they generally are?"

On Walnut Street of our town I met a Reform man who was exulting. "The orchestra of heaven

Former Haganah Fighters

Students From Israel Attend University of Michigan

ANN ARBOR—Former fighters of the Israel Haganah have established temporary headquarters at the University of Michigan.

Far from their home base in the young Jewish republic, 14 young Israeli citizens are residing at U. of M. Hillel House and pursuing studies here. All fought in Israel's War of Liberation, and some are still serving in Israel's armed forces.

A senior lieutenant in Israel's Navy, Joseph Rom, 26, has brought his wife and three year-old child to Ann Arbor, bringing the delegation from Israel in Ann Arbor to a total of 16.

Half of the students have been sent to the United States either by the armed services or the Israel government, and the remainder are here with the approval of the government. Israeli students, wishing to study abroad must be of exceptional ability, and must receive clearance from a committee of the Ministry of Education, and representatives of the Hebrew University and the Technion.

Although the economy of Israel is very unstable, the government places a high premium on education and continues to allocate funds so that gifted students may study out of the country.

Three naval lieutenants taking courses in naval engineering are Annon Saly, 24; Joseph Yakir, 24 and Rom. Benjamin Givli, 21, director of Israel's military intelligence, is taking summer courses in public administration and government. Mrs. Tamar Yakir, 24, must have struck up a hallelujah when the prayers of the rabbi and the Christian came up there together," he chuckled. "Maybe Beethoven who was Christian, and Mendelssohn the Jew alternated in conducting the heavenly concert. Anyway, I hope that's the way it is in heaven."

Then, farther down the street an Orthodox man stopped me: "Well Segal, what do you think of it all? What becomes of our Judaism when it gets mixed up that way? What do you think, Segal?"

Well, I replied, as you know I am not in favor of mixed marriages for reasons that are social. I mean the social problems that are involved in them. It's often tough enough for two Jewish people to get along together in marriage. It may be even tougher for a couple of different religions to find common ground in marriage; though I must confess I know of mixed marriages that have turned out happily enough.

Yet, I said to my Orthodox friend, you and I must agree that there is a better chance for a mixed marriage being successful where each of the couple respects the other's religion from the beginning, as in this particular case. In their marriage ceremony each was will to defer equally to the other's religion. That's respect, it augurs for a happy marriage. Let's be thankful for that.

And, sir, isn't that the main ingredient of happy marriage? Respect! There can't be any holiness even in a strictly Jewish marriage where respect is lacking; the marriage breaks up or it falls into a stretch of life-long misery. Let's you and I hope for the happiest marriage in this case of the Jewish boy and the Christian girl who were married by the Christian and the rabbi.

I give all this for the consolation of the complaining Orthodox rabbi. Yet he shouldn't have set himself up, like papal authority, to visit punishment on the Anglo-Jewish paper that printed the news of this marriage. That was arrogance. The right to print remains one of the American freedoms. In the current McCarthy climate some old American freedoms are being challenged but, as yet, there has been no suggestion to excommunicate any of the general press that prints reports or opinions distasteful to the McCarthy line.

wife of Lt. Yakir, is taking post-graduate courses in chemistry. Yeram Goren, 21, and Shalom Brafman, 24, are studying mechanical engineering.

Two Israel students have been granted scholarships by U. of M. Mordechai Kreinin, 24 has been awarded a $1,500 scholarship for post-grad studies in economics, and David Hellman, 30, of the Technion was granted a $1,500 scholarship for post-grad studies in electrical engineering and electronics. Others studying at U. of M. are Jehuda Carmel, 21, naval architecture and civil engineering; Chagai Prizker, 27, graduate studies in engineering, specializing in cooling systems; Itzhak Hammer, 30, graduate studies in tool design; and Joseph Oterman, 28, post-grad studies in electrical engineering and electronics.

Before any student is permitted to leave Israel to study abroad, he must sign a contract with the government stating that for every year he studies abroad he will serve four years in government work.

One other Israel citizen is enrolled in the University. Thirty-year-old Joel Arnon, director of the Israel Government Transport Service, is on a United Nations Technical Assistance scholarship. Last year the UN awarded 15 scholarships for senior-government officials. Arnon is studying at the U. of M.'s Transportation Institute for eight months and then will work with a trucking company or transportation line to acquire further information on transport methods that he will be able to use in his job in Israel.

According to Arnon, his job consists of supplying transportation for all government departments, and acquiring means of transportation for all government departments, and acquiring means of transportation for visiting dignitaries such as Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Eddie Cantor.

Head resident at Hillel House, Arnon points out that most of the students are in engineering fields. That is because Haifa's Technion does not offer many of the specialized engineering courses which are available in the United States.

Why do so many of Israel's students abroad study in the United States? Arnon states that it is easier for them to gain admittance to American universities than elsewhere. Most already have picked up a smattering of English, and there is not too great a language barrier. Because of the long British occupation of Palestine, English became "the second language" of Israel, Arnon states.

Thirdly, America, where the standard of living is high, holds a great appeal for the Israel student. It is also easy for the Israel student to work his way through American universities while in many European countries it is forbidden that students work while attending a university. All of these factors account for the fact that there are 860 Israelis in American schools today.

Arnon stated that to the Israeli students the standard of living in the United States is "amazing, overwhelming and out of this world." There is, he said, a definite lack of appreciation for material things in this country. "In Israel, as director of transportation, I have to scrounge for every car—more than that, I must do the same to obtain small parts for autos. How different it is here in the United States where almost everyone drives a car!"

Arnon told how he was responsible for rustling up a car for the inauguration of President Ben-Zvi. "After much effort, I secured one of the two Cadillacs in Israel for the President to ride in," he said. "Imagine my disgust when the car suddenly stalled on the road to the inauguration. It was a good thing that the new President is a simple man for he saved the day by leaving the car, and walking the remainder of the route to the swearing-in ceremonies. And in America, cars line both sides of the roads!"

"I am also amazed at the attitude of Americans toward food problems. It seems that Americans are always wondering what not to eat—while in Israel the problem is what to eat." He declared that the food thrown away from American tables would easily solve all the food worries of Israel.

Impressed by our technical standards and ways of organization, Arnon said that "if we pick up just a little of the knowledge and planning from the United States, our being here will have been worthwhile."

They regretted that they could not study longer at the University of Michigan. "It is remarkable that a whole town is dedicated only to learning. It is wonderful that Ann Arbor is in being because of the pursuit of knowledge."

Lt. Saly was impressed by the close relationship that existed between professor and student in the United States. "In Israel," he stated, "the instructors feel that they are way above the student." He was also pleased by the variety of courses that are open to students here. He explained that in Israel, the student has no voice in selecting his courses. For every given field in Israel, there is a prescribed list of subjects which the student must take.

One thing, however, the Israelis find very disturbing: "The mystery of the American Jew." They regretted the lack of knowledge that Jews in America possess toward Jewish subjects — their cultural heritage and relationships with Israel. They feel that their job is to create a closer tie between the Jews of Israel and the United States.

On the last Israel Independence Day, the Israel delegation arranged a complete day of celebration in Ann Arbor—getting the U. of M. Intercollegiate Zionist Federation of America, Hillel, the Jewish community and other Jewish students to work together.

Their opinion is that the future of Israel rests upon the shoulders of American youth. While admitting that Israel is badly in need of financial aid, they argue that only if there is interest in Israel in the United States can the state succeed. "We need financial aid. . . . But we need the technical skill of America even more. We look forward to the day when Israel no longer need rely on financial assistance from foreign countries. There must be a common partnership between the Jews of the U. S. and Israel in building up the state."

Satellites Negligent In Paying Claims

GENEVA — The negative attitude displayed by the Soviet Union and its satellite countries toward appeals for indemnification for huge losses sustained in their territories by Jews during the Nazi occupation is cited as "grounds for anxiety" by the World Jewish Congress in a report disseminated here Tuesday.

Emphasizing that it was in Soviet-controlled territories where the Nazis inflicted the vast majority of Jewish material losses and murdered millions of Jews, the WJC report points out that although peace treaties between the Allies and successors of Nazi governments of Rumania, Hungary and Bulgaria obligate the latter to transfer heirless properties of persecutors for the purpose of rehabilitating surviving victims of the Nazi persecution, no single act has been done by these states to implement their obligations.

Foods To Remember

by LEAH W. LEONARD

Have you ever yearned for a "different" stuffing for turkey or chicken? Here's a rather unusual variety that has pleased so many of our friends we would like to pass it along to you. Now that KASHA (made of buck-wheat) is processed so that it is a year 'round grain food, the basic ingredient for this particular dressing is nothing more complicated than BUCKWHEAT GROATS. Here's the way to prepare this tasty and "good-for-you, too" stuffing for a 6 pound chicken or turkey:

Kasha-Prune Poultry Dressing

- 1 cup whole or coarse Buck-wheat Groats
- 1 egg, beaten
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons hot melted shortening (chicken schmaltz)
- 1 cup diced onion
- 4 cups boiling water
- 1/2 pound large size prunes
- 3 tablespoons dark brown sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon, optional
- 1/4 cup chopped Greben, optional
- 1/2 cup fine cracker crumbs or Matzo meal
- 2 eggs slightly beaten

Heat the Buckwheat Groats over moderate heat in a heavy frying pan, stirring till lightly browned. Stir in the beaten egg till the grains of buckwheat are coated. Add the salt. Remove from heat. In another frying pan lightly brown the diced onion in hot melted fat and add this to the groats, stirring well. Stir in the boiling water slowly, cover and cook over moderate heat 15 minutes or till the groats are tender. During this process prepare the prunes by first pouring boiling water over them, using a colander is the most practical way. Cut the prunes from the pits and combine with sugar, cinnamon, Greben and crumbs. When the buckwheat groats are tender, stir in this prune mixture and the slightly beaten eggs. Cover and let stand 5 to 10 minutes before filling the poultry in the customary manner. Roast by the usual open-pan method.

Flying Watchmaker Back in Frisco After 2 Hops Over Atlantic

SAN FRANCISCO—Peter Gluckmann, the "flying watchmaker," was back at work behind the counter of his jewelry shop here just 24 hours after eight Civil Air Patrol planes had provided a guard of honor for his tiny, 90-horsepower plane as it winged into San Mateo Airport, completing a round-trip flight from San Francisco to London, England.

The 27-year-old 260-pound former German refugee who made aviation history with his fantastic
