$45,000 Short to Reach '53 Total

GJC Sets Jan. 25 as Deadline For Covering Remainder of Cards

With $45,000 still to go to reach the 1953 total of $530,000 General Jewish Committee campaign leaders this week set Tuesday, January 25, as the deadline for workers covering cards still outstanding, according to an announcement from Henry J. Hassenfeld, campaign chairman. However, the campaign will continue until every prospect is reached.

Hassenfeld said the decision was reached earlier this week at a meeting of the board of directors at which some concern was expressed over the slow return of the balance of the cards still in the hands of the workers.

"We are setting the deadline," Hassenfeld said, "to impress our workers of the urgency of the situation and to spur them on in their work. We feel every worker has had adequate time to reach every one of his assigned prospects and make his report. If there is anyone holding cards which he feels he will not be able to cover, we urge they be returned at once. A special 'clean-up squad,' consisting of volunteer members of the Board of Directors and others in the community has been formed to handle these cards and we are anxious to get them in their hands as quickly as possible.

"While we are making every effort to wind up the 1954 campaign, we also would like the workers who already have begun the job of calling on prospects to carry out their assignments to completion. If, however, any worker feels he will not be able to finish his cards, we ask he return them to GJC headquarters at once."

In another step to be sure that every possible source of contributions to the campaign is covered, Sidney L. Rabinowitz, chairman of the 1954 D-Day will meet with his team captains. The purpose of the meeting is to canvass the cards still uncovered by January 25 for reassignment. These particular cards include calls made on D-Day where the prospect either was not at home or for one reason or another delayed in making his pledge.

At the board of directors meeting it was agreed that, due to the hurricane and other factors, some delay in ending the campaign was to be expected, but with the coming of the new year it was decided to bring the campaign to a conclusion at the earliest possible moment.

"At the same time," Hassenfeld said, "we are appealing once again, directly to the Community as a whole to aid us in our work. If there is anyone who has not been contacted, or who has postponed making his pledge, we urge those persons to call GJC headquarters, either by telephone or in person, and their pledge will be handled directly."

UNITED STATES

Senators Alben W. Barkley and Wayne Morse, staunch supporters of the State of Israel, have regained key posts in the important Foreign Relations Committee which will undoubtedly have much to say about arms aid to the Arabs. . . . Senator Alexander Wiley, former Chairman of this Committee, charged last week that Eisenhower's foreign policy had harmed this nation's standing in the free world. . . . Wes Hooker, long-time Negro nationalist and anti-Semite in Manhattan, has formed a new "Nationalist Party" in support of Joe McCarthy.

Addressing the Grand Jury Association of N. Y. County, Jacob J. Javits proposed a new dynamic program for dealing with juvenile delinquency. . . . Eisenhower has designated the Jewish Restitution Successor Organization as the legal body to receive the unclaimed property of deceased victims of Nazi aggression. . . . Rabbi Emanuel Rackman, speaking at Jersey City's Tercentenary celebration last week, criticized contemporary Jewish leaders for having permitted the Seventh Day Adventists, a Christian group, to get the jump on them with the U. S. Government in securing Sabbath rights for all those wishing to observe the day in the armed forces. Rackman cited an instance where a Jewish soldier in the Continental Army was not afraid to write George Washington for permission to observe his Sabbath. Washington, Rackman said, granted the Jewish boy his wish immediately. . . . Jerome L. Miller, writing for Newark's American Jewish Ledger, says that "strains of anti-Semitism are becoming apparent in John Roe, Mayor of North Bergen, N. J. earlier this year." Miller says, "he unsuccessfully protested the selling of land to that town's Temple Beth El. More recently he refused to join his colleagues in proclaiming the Tercentenary Year. . . . Miller also protested Jersey City's sanction of the merger of Seton Hall, a Catholic college, with the Municipal Medical Center," charging that the act violates the established custom of separation of Church and State.

ISRAEL

David Ben Gurion is planning to return to political life, informed Israeli circles say. He has worked out a platform which envisages a two-party system of government. . . . Premier Sharett stands ready to relinquish the Premiership the moment B. G. steps in. . . . The Israeli Government has called (Continued on Page 2)

TALLAHASSEE—The distribution of anti-Semitic materials in the State Capitol building and elsewhere in Tallahassee on the inauguration day of Florida Governor LeRoy Collins, was this week revealed to The Jewish Floridian by Gilbert J. Balkin, director, Florida Regional Office, Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

Anonymous sheets, approximately 3 1/2" x 4" in size, appeared in quantity here on inauguration day. Written on the sheets were the words "LeRoy was elected—Florida is now in the hands of the Jews—watch the wolves feed—two years will be enough."

Also freely distributed at the same time at the seat of the State government and other locations in Tallahassee were copies of the national hate sheets "Common Sense" and "The Coming Red Dictatorship," both published by New Jersey anti-Semite Conde J. McGinley.

Vast quantities of the anti-Semitic publications have been distributed all along in many areas of Florida and elsewhere throughout the country, Balkin stated. In the February, 1954 issue of the National ADL Bulletin, the background of McGinley was exposed. The article reported that "Common Sense," subtitled "The Nation's Anti-Communist Newspaper," has yet to publish a legitimate, factual anti-Communist article.

"Editor McGinley is not addicted to subtleties or innuendoes," Balkin declared. "His anti-Semitism persists at gutter level. He makes competent, if not skilled, use of the Big Lie, pegging falsehoods and personalities, while seeking to capitalize on the anti-Semites' common technique of anti-Communist fakery."

The House Committee on Un-American Activities, U. S. House of Representatives, in its recent "Preliminary Report on Neo-Fascist and Hate Groups," devoted considerable attention to a condemnation and exposure of "Common Sense" as a vehicle "for some of the most vitriolic hate propaganda ever to come to the attention of the committee."

The appearance and distribution of the anti-Semitic materials here have been brought to the attention of appropriate governmental agencies for investigation and possible prosecution, Balkin stated. Violation of the Florida Anti-Anonymous Hate Literature Act appears to be indicated in the anonymous sheet, he said.

No-Salt Tastes Win Favor With All

It's commonplace that most people on restricted diets find themselves longing for "forbidden fruits"—for those foods on the normal daily menu which have been marked "taboo" for them. But it's news when the situation is reversed—when a food developed especially for special diets is taken over as a favorite snack by the entire family.

That's what has happened with Manischewitz No-Salt Tastes. The unique matzo crackers created by The B. Manischewitz Company have captured the palates of everyone who has tried them. Each package of Manischewitz No-Salt Tastes contains 90 bite-size matzo crackers, crisp and fresh as the moment they came from the oven.

Mr. Eisenhower's Appeal

Mr. Eisenhower's appeal to Congress in his State of the Union message for elimination of the inequitable provisions in the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act must be applauded by all fair-minded Americans who have been appalled by the discriminatory aspects of this piece of legislation since its passage over former President Truman's veto some three years ago.

At the same time, it must not be forgotten that Mr. Eisenhower promised to deal with the nation's immigration law during his campaign for office in 1952 and that he has done little to implement his promise. Statistics on the Emergency Refugee Relief Act, which he published through Congress in 1953 as an immediate alternative to wide revision of the McCarran-Walter abomination, show that it has not successfully bridged the hiatus between what is and what should be our policy in dealing with persons who seek entrance into the United States.

The President certainly has been told by our leaders that the present American immigration law does great harm to this nation's prestige abroad, lies in the face of a traditional stand on the influx of potential citizens here and makes a mockery of the famous lines by Emma Lazarus engraved on the Statue of Liberty.

Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer this week remarked that so eminent a personality as Prof. Albert Einstein might never have been able to seek exile and subsequent citizenship in the United States were the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act in effect during the '30's. Although perhaps a naive remark on the face of it, Dr. Oppenheimer's observation nevertheless cogently demonstrates that current American immigration practices are capable of doing great harm to our nation.

Mr. Eisenhower's appeal to Congress for revision of the act is therefore refreshing.

The Family Corner

"I Found A Home"

EDITH ABRAAMS
Consultant on Services to the Aging

(This is a brief, true although anonymous description of the new Residence Home Program at the Jewish Family and Children's Service.)

"Two years ago I lost my beloved husband. My children were good. I lived with Tillie and then with Martha. But I wasn't really happy. They had their ways and I had mine. It was hard for me as their mother not to advise . . . Soon we had words. We didn't know how to work it out. I thought if only I could be independent and live with someone of my own choice . . . someone who needed me as part of their family. My daughters respected my wish and I could see that they were relieved. They made every effort to find me a good place to live. But one home after another just did not suit me. I was about ready to give up when my daughter called the Jewish Family and Children's Service.

"The Counselor from the agency talked with me and learned what my life had been like, the kind of neighborhood in which I had lived most of my latter years, my desire to be near the synagogue, to be able to visit with my grandchildren, to have another woman in the home with whom I could talk about politics, organizational work and life. The counselor told me of Mrs. G., a widow, who had a nice home in the neighborhood in which I used to live. This woman, although not as old as I, liked having an older person around with whom she could chat. Mrs. G. was a wonderful cook as well as a loving person and a good housekeeper. She wasn't too fussy so that I felt very much at home leaving my scarf or newspaper around the den or parlor. My room was neat and clean and next to the bathroom. At all times the house was warm because she understood that an older person needed plenty of heat. During the afternoon we often drank tea. Before going to bed we each had our glass of warm milk. My children are glad to pay the cost of this living arrangement and I am happy to have found a home . . ."

The Jewish Family and Children's Service has some good homes available at this time but we are eager to have many more in various parts of the city, in Cranston and Pawtucket.

If you would like to have an elderly person come to live in your home on a paying basis or if you are in need of a home for yourself or some older member of your family will you please call DEXter 1-1244?

"One Man's Opinion"

People and Books

By BERYL SEGAL

The old adage, "Show me your friends and I will know who you are", may well be paraphrased to read: "Show me your library and I will know what kind of a person you are".

Surely the books on the family library shelves tell much about the interests and the tastes of the inhabitants of the house. Will a man collect the works of the masters of the novel unless he finds delight in them? Will a woman treasure volumes of poetry and her soul does not sing to their verses? Do not the records in the albums and the pictures on the walls mirror the tastes of the household?

And what is true of one household is true of a people as well. Publishing houses, newspapers, theaters, concert halls, schools, are the library of a nation, and by them we measure the cultural interests and the spiritual tastes of a people.

I thought of this on reading an article in a recent issue of the Hebrew weekly Hadoar published in New York. The article, written by an Israeli journalist, is an inventory of the publishing activities in Israel during the past year. It gives us a glimpse inside the library of the household of Israel, a household beset by many hardships, political and economic, yet which keeps its library shelves well stocked.

The writer of the report states: "The main buyer of books is the common man; the worker, the government official, the storekeeper, the clerk, and the farm hand. Everyone who enters a Jewish home in Israel, in town or country, finds the book case as the most prominent piece of furniture. Even in the poorest of homes the children's room is well stocked with books."

We learn of a great demand in Israel for the writings of authors of other lands. Fully 60 percent of all the books published in Israel during the past year were translations of great books written in English, German, French, Russian, and other European languages. Books by American authors are especially popular. We are told of an enormous interest in the American novel, the theater, and the movie. This interest is well satisfied by the generous grants to Israel from the special fund for the advancement of American Culture in foreign lands.

An agreement between Israel and the government of the United States permits a steady flow of books and journals, free of duty and taxes to which the Israeli publishers are subject in importing paper and printing supplies from abroad.

Thus are formed strong cultural ties between Israel and the United States, even though the diplomatic relations may at times be strained. Books exported from this country to Israel amounted to two and a half million dollars in value during the past two years.

The children are fond of beautifully illustrated books, and while the parent reads the text in a free go-as-you-read translation, the child feasts his eyes on the colorful pictures.

"The Caine Mutiny" was a best seller in Israel, and so was "From Here to Eternity"; and they translated Pearl Buck, and Robert Penn Warren, and John Cronin, and, of course, Ernest Hemingway, into Hebrew. On the stage the Israeli sees plays by Shakespeare, George Bernard Shaw, and the best productions of Broadway in Hebrew.

But translations, opening as they do a window to the wide world of culture, did not in the least diminish interest in creative efforts of the Israeli author and artist.

Over a hundred and fifty volumes of stories, poetry, and essays by Israelis appeared during the past year. The Hebrew Encyclopedia has attracted 35,000 subscribers so far. More than 10,000 people bought the Biblical Encyclopedia, and the Talmudic Encyclopedia found as many buyers. The People's Encyclopedia in seven volumes had a good market. A new Hebrew dictionary which appeared this year could not keep up with the demand. And Israeli readers buy books on Philosophy, Psychology, History, and Economics.

The Kinsey Report on the "Sex Behaviour of the Human Female" is available in Hebrew in a translation approved by Professor Kinsey himself, and the list of books for 1954 includes a volume of beauty hints for women.

The Bible, and commentaries on the Scriptures, is still the favorite book with the People of the Book. A new edition of a printing of the Bible, originally printed by a famous publishing house in Warsaw, about a hundred years ago, sold in thousands of volumes. Something new for the ancient land and for the ancient tongue is the publication of scientific books and journals. These range from physics to agriculture, engineering, medicine, aerodynamics, chemistry, and meteorology.

The atomic scientists from Israel who are among those invited by President Eisenhower to the "Atoms for Peace" conference in Oak Ridge did their research and published their findings in Hebrew. You may read about the production of "Heavy Water" by the new method discovered by Israeli scientists in Hebrew books and journals, providing you understand the mysteries of "Heavy Water."

Oh, yes, they published books on Physical Culture and athletics in Israel in the past year.

Who ever said that books and art and all things cultural are the luxury of the well-to-do and the leisure groups? There is little of both in the homes of the people of Israel, but, oh, what libraries they possess!

SYD COHEN:
Unfinished Business

Some time ago, shortly after the end of the Jewish Softball League season, this column suggested that an all-star team might be selected by the managers of the six teams in the league, and the results announced in the Herald. Such a team has never been named before, but there is always a first time.

Well, going through my files this week, I noticed that only two managers have submitted their nominations for the all-star, or all-league team. Four are still missing. Only Ira Schreiber of City Coal and Paul Paris and Jerry Salter of the champion JCC Young Adults have submitted their interesting selections.

It's not too late yet. If the managers and co-managers of the other four clubs—Beacon, Broadway Auto, M & F Insurance and Technoprint—will mail in their choices, we ought to be able to find time for a column on the all-stars before the planning starts for the 1955 season—and that is only about a month off.

The Golf Trophies

After an over-long delay caused by the Herald's pre- and post-moving operations, the 1954 golf tournament is about to be wrapped up. Tomorrow morning at 11, members of the committee that handled the tourney, along with the division winners and runners-up, will gather at the Herald office for the presentation ceremonies.

Twelve trophies in all will be awarded. These include the Herald Trophy, to Maurice (Moe) Kessler, winner of the championship division; the Lou Chase Trophy, to Dick Loebenberg, runnerup in that division; the Seagram's Trophy, to Bill Gollis, winner of the First Flight.

Other trophies will go to Dick Chase, First Flight runnerup; Morris Feldman, second flight winner; Melvin Bloom, second flight runnerup; Lloyd Turoff, winner, beaten eight; Lou Chase, runnerup, beaten eight; Samuel Posner, winner, beaten 8, first flight; Maynard Burt, runnerup, beaten 8, first flight; Harvey Cooper, winner, beaten 8, second flight; and Nat Perlow, runnerup, beaten 8, second flight. Photos of the presentation will appear next week.

Baseball Briefs

One of the most aggravating issues of all time, insofar as Red Sox fans are concerned, is the question of why so many fans in Rhode Island and other parts of New England choose not to root for the home team—namely, the Red Sox. Why, in an area little more than an hour from Boston, should there be such a large following of Yankee fans, and so many devotees of other teams than the Sox? This always has baffled the "home towners".

Well, here is something that will add further to their discomfort. It concerns a comprehensive survey taken in Baltimore, during that city's first season in the American League (1954), and it reveals the habits, likes and dislikes of the fans who paid to see the Orioles.

From the results, it would appear that New England fans are not alone in their refusal to back the home team unanimously with their affections.

On the basis of 2,500 replies to a questionnaire distributed by the ushers at games last year, the Orioles got the following breakdown on this question: "For whom do you root in the American League?"

Baltimore, the home team, 65.2 percent (slightly under two-thirds); Cleveland, 17 percent; New York, 9 percent. The other clubs ranged from three percent down.

The conclusion must be—that's the baseball fan for you. It doesn't matter where he lives. He roots for his favorite team, and if that team doesn't happen to be the home club, it's too bad. That's his privilege, and that's how it is going to be.

So you see, the large Yankee contingent around here is not really so heretic or morally derelict, after all. It seems to be a common phenomenon.

Slightly Sour

A chuckle that this column enjoys annually comes from a recapitulation of predictions made twelve months ago that turned out to be slightly sour.

Here are a few morsels to try on your taste of humor; with the author, date of prediction, and its outcome all listed:

Eddie Stanky, manager of the St. Louis Cards, on Jan. 25—"We finished 22 games behind the Dodgers in 1953, but our club has improved so much we may go all the way this year. I'm sure we won't wind up 22 games behind the '54 champions." The Cards finished sixth—25 games behind the Giants.

(Last year, similarly, Stanky quoth that he was sick and tired of finishing third, and that he might win the pennant and definitely would not finish third again. The Cards finished—third).

Chicago Cubs Yearbook, March 1—"Phil Cavaretta's influence is stronger than ever with the Cubs." Phil was fired exactly four weeks later.

Spike Briggs, Detroit Tigers owner, Oct. 11—"The Athletics are not going to Kansas City, period!" The vote that sent the A's to KC came on Nov. 8—on a motion made by Briggs!

Buck Shaw, San Francisco coach, Oct. 5—"The Cleveland Browns are over the hill; they won't win the title this year." The Browns are world champs. Shaw lost his job.

Report on a Journey:

By JOSEPH P. LASH

Stanley H. Lowell, Assistant to Mayor Wagner, has returned from a tour of Western Germany with a deep pessimism about the future of German democracy.

After a one-month journey as a guest of the Bonn republic, Wagner's aide came back convinced "the State Dept. understated things when it said that what we're doing in Germany is a calculated risk."

Lowell expressed grave skepticism about the cheerful speeches of Dr. James Conant, U. S. High Commissioner for Germany, who has insisted that democracy is coming along fine in the German Federal Republic.

"I think Dr. Conant must be living in an ivory tower," Lowell told The Post. "His optimism is contrary to everything I was told and heard in Germany—except from officials."

In Lowell's opinion democracy has only gone skin deep with postwar Germans, the old reverence for authority is still the dominant fact of German life and the issue on which the Germans feel most passionately is unification.

All of which, Lowell believes, adds up to the likelihood that at some future moment Bonn will plump for a deal with the Russians.

While he believes it may be "too late" to stop ratification of the Paris accords for the rearmament of West Germany, Lowell hopes that at least there will be a full debate when the accords come up for ratification by Congress. That, he says, will at least give the American people some appreciation of the dangers of the present course.

German rearmament should not become "an undiscussible issue," he declared.

LOWELL, 33, IS ONE OF MAYOR Wagner's key deputies. A graduate of City College and Harvard Law School, married with three children, Lowell since the end of the war has been active in New York politics. He has served as an officer of the New York Young Democratic Club and for three years was state chairman of Americans for Democratic Action.

Lowell's trip to Germany came about this way: The German Federal Republic invited the mayors of several American cities, including Mayor Wagner, to come over and make a survey of German municipal institutions. Wagner chose Lowell to go as his representative.

The rebuilt cities of Germany are "fabulous," Lowell found: they have done "a wonderful job of planning" with, in most cases, the "progressive planners winning out over the traditionalists" who wanted restoration rather than renovation.

THE PARTY OF EIGHT

which flew to Germany in early November consisted of the Mayors of Atlanta, Allentown and Little Rock, the City Administrator of Los Angeles and lesser officials from Evanston, Cleveland and Chicago.

The group spent four days in Bonn being briefed. Its itinerary covered Cologne, Dusseldorf, Bremen, Hamburg, Berlin—both West and East, Ravensburg on the Bodensee, Munich and Frankfurt. Bonn footed the bill for transportation as well as a daily stipend of 40 marks for expenses.

"The food was wonderful," says Lowell, "except for the whipped cream on everything."

"I went over," Lowell says, "in a neutral position with no prejudices against the Germans because of the war. I went over with a fairly open mind and sympathetically disposed because I was a guest and glad to be a guest."

"My prime interest," he went on, "was what is this country and where is it going."

Lowell's views were formed on the basis of talks with Germans and Americans with whom the group was officially in contact and also people to whom he was given introductions by friends in the U. S.—like the editor of a leading Munich newspaper and the commentator on a state radio.

"We met a lot of such people—and these are the people who are most worried. They would say, 'Mr. Lowell, the problem you

Stanley H. Lowell

Democracy is only skin deep in Germany raise is the one we are scared of."

The problem, according to Lowell, is that after "ten years of ineffectual effort by us to explain what we mean by 'democracy,' there is no understanding of it by the Germans, whose feeling for authority and desire to follow a leader has in no way been diminished."

A GOOD DEAL OF LOWELL'S

work at City Hall is listening to and acting on the complaints of civic and neighborhood groups concerning municipal services. Lowell quickly gave up asking about the German equivalent of such grass roots democracy when a Burgomeister told him: "We have no such committees here, no such civic groups. If a service broke down, people would not rise up and protest."

"In Bonn we had an official photographer," Lowell went on. "She was a young woman of 31. I asked her how do young Germans feel about rearmament?"

"Don't ask me, ask a man about it," was her reply," said Lowell, "and when I teased her about this she said the Germans would vote for it because Chancellor Adenauer wants it and the Germans like Adenauer."

To Lowell neither reply was reassuring, although he added that he had "a tremendous respect for Adenauer. He is a sincere, honest democrat."

MANY EPISODES DISTURBED

Lowell, One fellow, a former PW in the U. S. was affable and generous in his remarks about the U. S. until he had too many drinks. Then he switched to an anti-Americanism "completely at variance with his sober self."

An exchange student at Harvard Law School invited Lowell to a party with some of her friends. One of these, a young businessman, spoke scornfully about American efforts to teach the Germans democracy:

"You Americans think you can change us," he said derisively.

A protocol official who took them around turned out to have been a former admiral in the Romanian Navy, although a German. His proudest stories were about the two times he lunched with Hitler.

A Bonn official patronizingly sought to explain France's hesitation over the Paris accords:

"You have to understand our neighbors," he said. "They're afraid of us because they work to live whereas we Germans live to work."

But this mean a resurgence of Nazism?

"The answer is 'no,'" replied

The Old Story in the 'New' Germany

CHANCELLOR ADENAUER
The Germans like him

"All this means to me that we don't even have a 50-50 chance that they'll be on our side if and when the issue comes down to choosing between East and West."

The warning flags are also up in the economic sphere, says Lowell. West Germany seemed to be the "country best off in Europe." One of Lowell's colleagues on the trip looking at the country's shining new cities predicted that "in ten years Germany will have the most modern cities in the world." The main thoroughfares, said Lowell "are agleam with lights. The shops are new and full. The Ruhr area is throbbing. They're the conquered power, but there is no unemployment there."

BUT IN THE MIDST OF THIS plenty, Lowell continued, an official who was briefing them on Germany's economic accomplishments "ended with a half-threat.

"If this did not continue," the official warned "if help from the West stopped and access to its markets was cut off Germany would have to look elsewhere."

"Does this mean," one Mayor asked, "you will have to trade with the East?"

"We must live," was the answer.

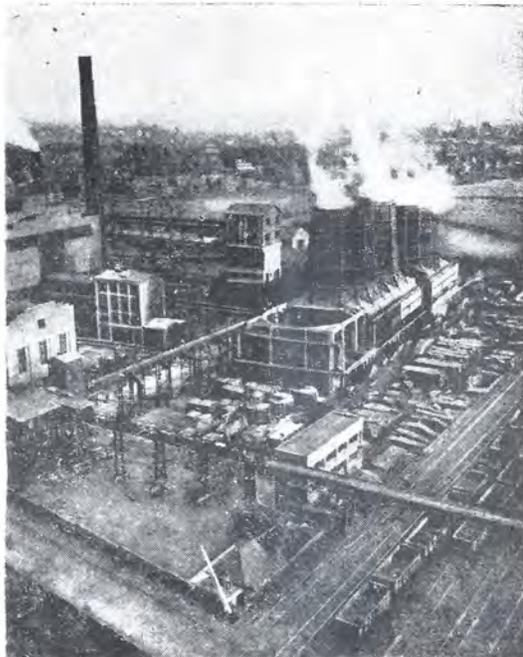

"I found out later," Lowell went on, "how extensively they are already trading with the East. The whole attitude of Hamburg officials is that they must trade with the East because Hamburg is the 'natural port' for Poland, Czechoslovakia and western Soviet Russia."

Other conclusions readied by Lowell on his trip were:

"The U.S. Information Agency's exchange program is 'excellent.' 11,000 Germans have come to the U.S. under that program for periods ranging from 3 months to a year. "They are the best salesmen this country has."

"The 'Amerika Haus' the group found in a number of cities also is "excellent—despite Cohn and Schine."

MANY GERMAN FEEL THE Social Democratic Party has become almost wholly "an opposition party—like our Republicans." "It would have been better if the Social Democrats had acknowledged the good things Adenauer has done," Germans say.

"The Ruhr area is throbbing"

He found little evidence of anti-Semitism. "There is nobody left to be anti-Semitic about."

At the request of some Jewish organizations in this country Lowell looked into the problem of restitutions to the victims of Nazism. There are two aspects to this. One is the agreement with Israel, which Lowell says "is working very smoothly."

The other is the matter of individual claims. A law recognizing these claims was passed in 1953 but nothing has been done to implement it. Lowell was told the delay was due to technicalities, but he had the unmistakable impression the law would never be followed through with actual payments.

Some officials told him that since there were only 25,000 Jews left in Germany the chief beneficiaries would be outside of Germany and that with the pending calls for funds for rearmament it was unlikely that money would be found for restitution.

From all this Lowell concludes it would have been better if the goal of U. S. policy had been a unified, demilitarized and neutral Germany. Now he fears the problem may be insoluble; at least, he believes, it ought to be ailed.

Lowell. It's not Nazism, but there is certainly a loss of feeling on the part of the intellectual group that a new day of freedom was dawning and there is tremendous concern that so many who were public officials under the Nazis are coming back in."

Lowell explained his anxieties to the Munich editor when they breakfasted together. "Mr. Lowell," the editor said, "the trouble is the German thinks with his stomach. Right now democracy is feeding the Germans very well."

"But the time will come when democracy doesn't feed them well and they'll look for something else. And because democracy is only a surface matter with them they'll start comparing the bad way democracy is feeding them, not with the good times under democracy but with how well fed they were under Hitler."

us that he meant something different by the word 'freedom.' He meant, Lowell observed, Germany's "sovereign freedom in relation with other nations and not the individual German's freedom in relation to his government and other Germans."

Lowell sums up his apprehensions about the Germans this way:

"Their lack of understanding of our concept of individual freedom."

"Their continued acceptance of the leadership concept."

"The tremendous pull and impact of the unification issue—which is an expression of nationalism."

WHAT MAKES THE SITUATION

so dangerous, observes Lowell, is that along with the absence of any deep-seated feeling for democracy is the great pull of the unification issue.

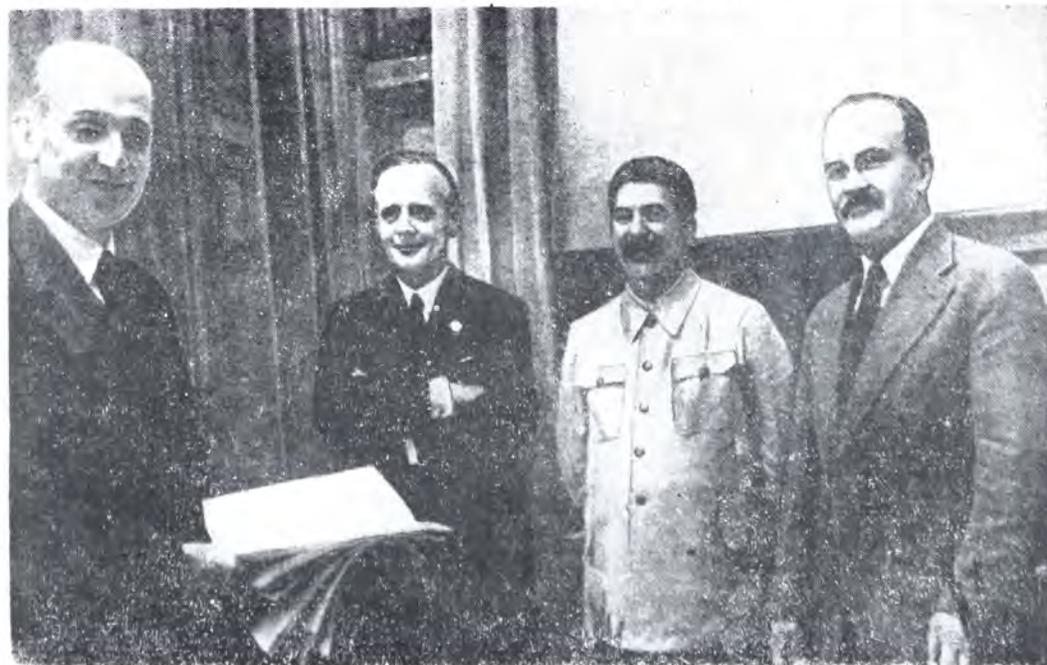

"The slogan of the 'stab in the back' and the Versailles dicta," Lowell points out, "took years of propagandizing to Hitler to put across."

"But today there already exists an issue which is hard to prefer to a man on horseback. That is unification of East and West Germany. We got it everywhere. Municipal officials would interrupt what they were saying to declare solemnly that 'Germans must be reunited.' These interventions were most emotional. They would ask us: 'How would you like it if the U.S. were split in two at the Mississippi?'"

"But no one would tell us," Lowell went on, "what they would be willing to trade for unification."

Lowell asked that question at one of the final meetings the group had with some German officials. "There was a quiet, embarrassed hush. Then one German replied smoothly: 'Of course you must recognize, Mr. Lowell, that we would not trade freedom for unity.'"

This was a comforting answer, Lowell said, "until it dawned on
