Hebrew Day School
Contributions Reach
Total Of $131,000

Contributions to the Providence Hebrew Day School Building Fund have reached a total of $131,000, it was announced by Lewis Korn, general campaign chairman, at a meeting last Sunday at present quarters of the Day School. Joseph Dubin, president of the school, presided at the meeting attended by some 50 persons.

Mr. Korn presented an up-to-the-minute report on the progress of the campaign for the construction of a new building to replace present quarters which have been condemned by the City of Providence Building Inspectors for use as classrooms because of new fire laws and regulations.

A report on the progress of the plans for the proposed new school was given by Jerome Feinstein, chairman of the Building Planning Committee. He discussed in detail the architectural plans for the very near future construction of the new school.

Makes Strong Plea
For Aid In Israel

LONDON — A strong plea for economic and military aid for Israel was made in the House of Lords last week by Lord Henderson, Labor Party expert on international affairs, when the House debated foreign affairs.

The Labor spokesman stressed that emphasis should be placed in the Middle East on constructive measures of development and a rising living standard. He also urged encouragement of concepts of political unity.

Rothman, senior steward; Allen W. Sydney, junior steward; W. Siegfried Arnold, marshal; H. W. Morris Bromberg, musical director; Frank Pritchard, organist; Malcolm Bromberg, sentinel; Arthur Higgins, tyler; W. Gerald P. Cohen, master of ceremonies; W. Louis Baruch Rubinstein, associate master of ceremonies; W. Earle H. Mason, historian, editor of Bulder, and Edward S. Berren, ritual director.

Committee chairmen are M. W. Bernard B. Abedon, and H. W. Morris Bromberg, social; Nathan Norman, blood bank; W. Walter R. Cook and Samuel C. Ress, sick and visiting.

Receives Cup — Burton Finberg, Hillel chairman of the Southern New England Council of B'nai B'rith, is shown above right receiving a silver Kiddush cup from Rabbi Nathan N. Rosen, director of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation of Brown University. The cup was presented to Mr. Finberg for his outstanding service to the Hillel Foundation of Rhode Island during the past year.

Max I. Millman

To Honor Millman At Temple Beth El

Temple Beth El will hold its fourth annual "Service of Recognition" on Friday, May 22, in association with the national observance of "Yom Hamoreh Teacher's Day." In connection with this special service, Max I. Millman will be honored by the congregation and presented with a gift in celebration of his 25 years of service as a teacher in the Beth El Religious School.

Mr. Millman, principal of the Oliver Hazard Perry Junior High School, is a native of Providence. Graduated from Brown University in 1932, magna cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa, he also earned his Master's Degree there in 1937.

The special program arranged for the "Recognition Service" will begin after the organ prelude by Mrs. Alice Liffman and Sabbath prayers by Rabbi Braude. Benjamin Efron, superintendent of the Religious School, will speak on "The Significance of the Yom Hamoreh Observance". Murry Halpert, chairman of the Religious School Committee will make the presentation to Mr. Millman. Following the closing Sabbath prayers, a reception for the teaching staff will take place in the Temple Meeting Hall.

Mrs. Robert Hochberg, Mrs. Meyer Danzig and Mrs. Gerald Oster, members of the Religious School Committee, are in charge of arrangements. Pourers will be women of the teaching staff, Mesdames Israel Karten, J. Joslyn Presser, Selig Greenberg, Manuel J. Lester. Hostesses will include Mrs. Jerome Feinstein, Mrs. Irving Ross and Mrs. Herman Sternau.

Announces Appointment Of Peter Waldman

The appointment of Peter Waldman of Providence to the counselor staff of Camp Tel Noar was recently announced by George Marcus, director.

Mr. Waldman will graduate in June from Harvard University, cum laude. He is the holder of the John Harvard and General Motors Scholarships, and has spent a summer of foreign study in France under the auspices of the Alliance Francaise.

Camp Tel Noar is sponsored by the Eli and Bessie Cohen Foundation Camps and is located 44 miles from Boston on Sunset Lake, Hampstead New Hampshire. The camp, accredited by the American Camping Association, has only a few openings for the second period.

BASEBALL LEAGUE

Baseball League play opened at the Jewish Community Center last week with three leagues under way at the East Side Center and a three-day program in South Side.

On the East Side, the Peewee League has played three evenings of pickup ball, under the direction of George Katz, league commissioner.

In last week's Midget League Games, Arden Jewelry defeated Arrow Transfer and Rau Fasteners, 3-0, and 6-5. Herbert Brown defeated Miller's Delicatessen, 6-3, and tied City Coal, 8-8. Miller's suffered a double loss and the other league teams broke even.

In the Tween League, Superior Fuels won from Senak and Chase Auto, 6-3, and 11-8. Senak lost twice and all other teams split their pairs.

The R. I. Jewish Softball League will open play in its six-team league Sunday morning at 9 A.M. There are still some team openings.

CAMP REUNION

The Jewish Community Center Summer Day Camps will hold their Annual Camp Reunion and Family Picnic at Camp Centerland, Hope, on Sunday June 7 beginning at 1 P.M., it was announced today by Murry Halpert, Jewish Community Center Camp committee chairman.

Invitations have been extended to all 1958 season campers, those interested in registering for 1959, members of the Center's Sunday Club Day Program, and interested parents and friends.

Registrations are now being accepted for the 1959 season at all three of the Center's summer day camps. The Center camps will open on Monday, June 29.

Absence of Young Jews Noted By Reporter Touring Birobidjan

NEW YORK—The most striking aspect of Birobidjan, the so-called autonomous Jewish Republic in Siberia, to a New York Times reporter who toured it recently, was the absence of young Jews.

Max Frankel, one of the few Western correspondents ever to visit Birobidjan, reported last week that gefulte fish with horse radish and cheese blintzes with sour cream were "the pleasantest memories and realities" of his visit "to that much-publicized, little-known colony" which he called "the object of pride in Moscow and concern abroad."

The correspondent, reviewing the history of the area, said it was organized in 1934, with much fanfare, as a home for Jews, "an empty plot on which Jews were to pioneer and exert their talents without getting mixed up with Zionism." But no mass migration of Soviet Jews to Birobidjan developed and the population now is 160,000, "perhaps half Jewish, two-thirds urban."

Frankel noted Soviet Government denials of rumors that it intended to send more Jews to Birobidjan and added "there is no evidence of such plans in Birobidjan. On the contrary."

As far as cultural life was concerned, Frankel reported that "no Yiddish books are printed. A well-stocked bookstore had not heard of a commemorative Yiddish edition of some works of Sholem Aleichem published in Moscow this year.

He said that a two-page Yiddish newspaper is published three times a week and Soviet reference books list its circulation as 1,000. Two newsstands had a few copies; a third newsstand near a publicly posted copy of the newspaper had not heard of it.

The correspondent said "no youngster ever shows up at the shack that serves as a synagogue. Friday night and Saturdays, on the Jewish Sabbath, Cantor Caplan — there is no rabbi — leads prayer for 30 persons, more women than men. Last Yom Kippur, 400 worshippers walked to the little house about a half mile from the paved city center."

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Teachers Wanted

By BERYL SEGAL

"The pupil enrollment this year is the highest we have ever had in our community."

On this happy note Dr. Harry Elkin began his report to the board of directors of the Bureau of Jewish Education.

The director of the Bureau, who is now completing his fifth year with us, had prepared a detailed account of the growth of student enrollment in the Jewish schools of Greater Providence in support of his opening statement.

The total number of students in the Jewish schools of all types has reached the high peak of 2588, may they continue to increase from year to year.

Of this number more than half, 56% to be exact, attend the week-day afternoon classes two or three times a week. The smaller half comes only once a week to the Sunday morning classes.

This is a point in the report worth emphasizing and broadcasting. The percentage was not always so. Times there were when the greater number of children were contented to draw all their Jewish scholarship from the shallow waters of the Sunday school.

Only eight years ago the proportion of Sunday school to weekday enrollments was very lopsided and in favor of the Sunday school. Only about 21% of all the pupils in the Jewish schools came to week-day afternoon classes.

At that the schools had nothing to brag about. Even these twenty-one of every hundred pupils were not of the young age level whose stay in schools could be counted on for at least four or five years. They were mostly of the pre-Bar Mitzvah age when their only goal was to get ready for the big day. And they have learned little else.

A very impressive change in the attitude of parents and children towards the purposes of the Jewish school. No longer is it the place to which you send your boy for his Bar-Mitzvah outfit only. There are other wares on the shelves of the schools, and the takers of these wares keep increasing from year to year.

And so in Greater Providence, as everywhere in the land, we are beginning to sense a greater awareness of the real purpose of Jewish Education and also greater demands and expectations of the schools.

To meet these demands the Bureau works toward raising the quality of the teachers and the standards of achievements in the schools. A net of activities in which all the schools are involved has been set up to bring this about.

Advice and assistance is constantly offered to schools and teachers whenever problems arise either in administration or in curriculum. A School Council meets regularly to share skills and experiences and to plan for all the schools in the area. Teachers meet in monthly Seminars to discuss methods, and to widen their horizons of knowledge, and to grow in their chosen profession through exchange of ideas.

Children of the schools are getting together in annual Inter-School Festivals for a morning of celebration and fun. The pupils from the schools of all types meet under one roof for a common purpose. Who can measure the effect of these annual festivals on the souls and minds of the thousands of children who have taken part in them through the years?

A teacher who remembers where we stood ten years ago has much for which to be grateful as well as to be hopeful for an even better future.

But . . . There is always a bitter drop in the sweetest cup of wine. We have grown in number, we have risen in stature, but we are far behind in teaching personnel. More schools, greater numbers of pupils, higher goals, also demand more and better teachers.

In this we sadly failed. We lacked the foresight to prepare for the time when Jewish teaching would become a full time, well paying, honorable profession. And we are now facing a dangerous shortage of qualified teachers for the Jewish schools.

In the days when the Sunday School reigned supreme there was no problem of staffing the classes. There were always college students who were looking for work on Sunday morning. We could always call upon public could prevent pellagra — and Dixie's children were saved.

Dr. Goldberger also made a number of contributions in the other branches of medicine. He solved the cause of the disease of dogs called "black tongue." He proved the cause of typhus fever and how it is transmitted. He discovered the cause of a skin eruption. He made studies in yellow fever. He did research in the animal parasites of man. He studied the use of saline solutions, alcoholism, American hookworm, hydrophobia, sanitation of water, mosquitoes, diphtheria carriers, typhus, typhoid fever, and the mode of transmission of influenza. He produced inoculations of typhus fever, discovered a filtrate virus in measles and described its nature.

While engaged in research studies he contracted yellow fever and later typhus. Dr. R. C. Williams comments: "It was characteristic of Dr. Goldberger to be perfectly oblivious of personal interest when engaged in his official duties, and like a faithful soldier he received his wounds with philosophy and with no abatement of zeal."

Congress in 1929 voted his widow a pension "in special recognition of the services of Dr. Goldberger in discovering the essential facts of pellagra and the means of its cure and prevention."

This is the story of Dr. Joseph Goldberger, a Jewish immigrant from Hungary and why the millions of Southern children now grow up with straight and sturdy legs.

ONLY IN AMERICA

Dr. Goldberger and the South

BY HARRY GOLDEN

Dr. Joseph Goldberger was a Jewish immigrant from Hungary. He was born in 1875 and he was brought to the United States when he was six years old. He was educated at the City College of New York and received his M.D. degree from NYU in 1896 at the age of 21. A year later he went to work among the coal miners in Pennsylvania, and later joined the United States Public Health Service. He remained a government doctor until his death in 1929, and during those last 30 years he earned a total salary of $125,000, or about $4,000 a year; but during his career this immigrant Joseph Goldberger was the man who found the cure for pellagra.

Pellagra is a plague of starvation. In our Southern states it once killed about 8,000 people every year and crippled at least a quarter of a million children.

Dr. Goldberger did not work with the test tube. Instead, he went among the people. He visited in an insane asylum — the inmates all victims of the dread disease, but not the doctors, orderlies, or nurses in attendance. Yet the orthodox accepted theory was that pellagra was contagious.

Dr. Goldberger injected himself with the discharges of people dying of the disease — their excreta — their blood; and he did not contract it.

Then he tried this on his wife — then on volunteers from the Rankin Prison farm in Mississippi. Pellagra was not contagious.

After five years he had the answer. Proper diet was the cure. The South had lived on sow-belly meat, meal and molasses. Vegetables were not raised because the ground was needed for cotton.

He told them to raise greens and vegetables. He reasoned that the first result is an accident, the second a coincidence, but the third is proof. No one listened to him.

In 1927 came the floods of the Mississippi River and the Red Cross to the rescue of the victims. They were shocked and alarmed by the prevalence of pellagra.

They appealed to the U.S. Health Service, Dr. Goldberger was ready with the answer — "Feed them Brewer's yeast," he said. "It will cure them but it's not a preventative." They did and they saw that it worked — and the message spread. Only the proper foods

Casey Stengel - The Yankees' Worst Enemy

It was early morning in Kansas City, and the Yankees were about to leave by plane for the Roy Campanella benefit game in Los Angeles that same evening. Pitcher Duke Maas arrived at the airport ten minutes late, and ran into this withering roaring blast from Manager Casey Stengel:

"Who the hell do you think you are keeping a plane waiting? What have you done for us? You ain't good enough to be late!"

So reports Leonard Shecter, the writer who covers the Yanks for the New York Post.

In the same paper one day earlier, columnist Milton Gross described a scene in the Yankee dressing room in which Stengel was walking around ripping the wrappings off new baseballs that were to be autographed by his team for presentation to a hospital. It happened that Mickey Mantle was in bed with the flu, along with several lesser members of the club, and Yogi Berra was attending his mother's funeral in St. Louis.

According to Gross, Casey suddenly threw the baseballs back into the ball bag, threw up his hands, and exclaimed:

"How do they expect me to get them balls signed tonight when I ain't got my team here!"

As if they had been stung, such players as Bill Skowron, Gil McDougald, Enos Slaughter and Hank Bauer straightened up on their stools. Each muttered under his breath, then Bauer asked:

"What's the matter with us? Since when are we off the team?"

These stories, which were not part of my original theme about Stengel's being his club's own worst enemy, made the prints just in time to be included here as further evidence of that thesis.

Gross termed the incident another example of Stengel's applied psychology. Shecter reported his tale without comment. My claim is that incidents such as these have tended to lower the once-high morale of the Yankees and affected the team's spirited conduct and play of other years. You can't convince me that anybody who listened to Casey's uncouth blast at Maas sided with the manager... or that the players who were so bitingly insulted in the clubhouse could be expected to go out and play better ball as a result of their manager's snide reference.

Casey has talked like that before, and even in the prosperous days of big leads and automatic pennants, his players resented his personal insults. Their feeling for the manager has changed gradually from one of admiration and willing obedience, tolerance and forgiveness, to one of bitter animosity.

This explains the incident last season when Stengel, after a couple of drubbings at Fenway Park, ordered a full scale workout for his team on an off day. The players were bitter and vindictive. They talked for publication, although not, of course, by name. One of them summed up their feelings by remarking:

"Why doesn't Casey give his brains a rest instead?"

Can you imagine such flagrant and disrespectful comment coming from a group of professional athletes who held their manager in any degree of esteem?

This, then, is my first point in terming Casey Stengel the Yankees' worst enemy. He has lost completely the respect and affection of his men.

Principally, aside from these growing signs of irascibility and foul temper, the opinion here is that Stengel, like any other human being who should happen to be in his shoes, has become so satiated with success, so accustomed to having his every move become a triumphant gesture, that he is now unable to rouse himself from the lethargy into which this unparalleled success has dipped him. He is confident that everything will turn out all right, because the script says so, and because he is still paid homage by the host of writers and radio and TV men who depend on his quotes to provide them with entertaining small talk during the long summer. When this column guessed on several occasions last year that 1958 would be Casey's last year, it was based on evidence such as that reported above. At World Series time, a few days after the column again discussed Stengel's possible imminent retirement, Columnist Joe Williams broke an exclusive story which gave all the facts of this retirement. The Yankees quickly denied the story, and proved it by re-hiring their manager for two more years.

But where there is smoke there is sure to be a little blaze. Stengel was a sick man and an old man (almost 70) for baseball; and it was natural to discuss his eventual departure in the front office. But you don't fire a manager who has just won acclaim for scoring an almost unprecedented World Series comeback (the Yankee players also looked good in making that comeback), and so Joe Williams turned out to be a false prophet and was left holding the bag. Me, too, although I admitted I was only guessing.

My next point has to do with Casey's handling of his players, and in this connection there is a story that also affects the feelings of the players toward the manager.

While talking once with a very prominent member of the Yankee organization, I asked whether he and the other Yankees felt that stupid base running by Andy Carey might not have cost New York the fourth game with Milwaukee in the 1957 World Series, and eventually, therefore, the Series itself.

This man nodded, and said that Coach Crosetti had taken the blame for Carey's blunder on his shoulders, as he usually did in such cases, because he felt that he, the coach, could better afford to be criticized than could the players.

And then this man revealed that most of the Yankee players do not share their manager's high esteem of Carey as a player. Without going into details, let me say only that they feel Andy is vastly overrated, and that it is a case of the manager and possibly his coaches liking a player, and sticking with him out of all proportion to his actual ability because of their belief that he does have ability.

If true, this weakness would not be original with Stengel, of course. Breathes there a baseball man who had not gone overboard on some player and lived to regret it? Sort of reminds you of Mike Higgins and Joe Cronin, doesn't it?

The important factor to note is that again the Yankees are being critical of their manager, and feel that because of Stengel's insistence on sticking with Carey, he is adversely affecting the overall play of the team. Such widespread comment and criticism does not help provide the inspiring and psychologically uplifting atmosphere that any ball club needs in order to operate efficiently.

Where Stengel has looked worse, however, is in his handling of some of his principal stars, mainly Mantle and Skowron. Of this theme, more next week.

school teachers to come in for the morning. And if needed we welcomed any well meaning adult or even high school students to act as teacher for a day.

The old Talmud Torah had no problem finding teachers. In those days when the Talmud Torah on the North End and in South Providence and on Benefit Street (forerunner of the Community Center) were well attended by children of immigrants the fountains of Jewish scholarship had not as yet run dry. Jews who were well versed in Hebrew, in Scripture and in Talmud were to be found in abundance, and new ones came with every ship-load of immigrants.

Those days are gone. The older generation of Hebrew teachers, and we had many remarkable men in our community schools in the past, have all gone to their reward. We have not prepared new ones to take their place. We failed to prepare them both in depth of learning and in numbers to meet the demands of our times.

And so we staff our classes with make-shift teachers. Some of them are ill prepared. Some of them know little more than the pupils in the advanced classes. The tragedy is that even those are not available in sufficient numbers to staff the classes.

And it is a pity. Jewish teaching offers the teacher greater spiritual satisfaction than many another profession. Jewish teachers are well remunerated today. It is a profession worth pursuing.

Young people who are about to choose a profession may well consider Jewish teaching. They could do worst.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

HOW LONG WILL PROSPERITY LAST?

We are riding the 26th cycle of business expansion in our country in the past 100 years.

From December 1854 to April 1958 business in our land went into 25 perceptible rises, 25 perceptible declines.

In April, a year ago, the 26th upswing began — and in this May of 1959 the advance is now firmly into its 13th month.

What are the chances that this latest cycle of prosperity will last for quite some time?

As of today, the chances appear excellent.

What guideposts does history give us to help us judge the probable duration of this expansion before new weaknesses and new maladjustments bring about another slowing and decline?

History gives us some vitally important ones. For, as a result of the pioneering research on the business cycle done by the National Bureau of Economic Research and the brilliant studies now being made by Dr. Geoffrey H. Moore of that bureau, we have precise data on how long other advances in our nation have lasted. And there is persuasive evidence that cycles of business rise and fall tend to follow a pattern.

Specifically, here are key facts on the duration of cycles of advance dating back more than a century:

The average duration of the previous 25 recoveries in the United States has been 29.9 months — almost two-and-one-half years.

In only two instances in all these 100-plus years have advances peaked out in a year or less, and both of these occurred before World War I.

In five instances the advances lasted more than 40 months, but four of these encompassed major wars and one marked the comeback from the chaotic depression of the '30s.

Since the great depression not one phase of expansion has ended in less than approximately three years.

Since World War II the record has been: a period of prosperity lasting 45 months after the recession of 1948-49; a period of prosperity lasting 35 months after the recession of 1953-54.

What do the guideposts of history say, then?

They suggest that this phase, first of recovery and now of prosperity, will match only the AVERAGE of previous advances in the past 100 years if it lasts until the fall of 1960.

They suggest this upswing will match only the record following the 1953-54 recession if it continues until the spring of 1961.

Now what about the prospects that the new cycle will fit into the more cheerful patterns of the past?

A factor highly encouraging to close students of the business cycle is that to date this advance has been moderate. And, as Dr. Moore remarked when I queried him on this, "It's reasonable to say that the more moderate the rate of increase in a recovery, the better the chances for a longer period of recovery."

The sparkling headlines on production, profits, incomes, etc., may be misleading you on how modest this recovery actually has been. But, the fact is that it took a full year from the recession bottom for industrial production to get back to its previous peak, and unemployment is still disturbingly high. The fact is that while housing is booming along, the rise has leveled out. The fact is that only now are businessmen starting to add to their inventories and starting to boost their spending on new plants and modernization of equipment. In short, the fact is that so far the advance has been moderate — and rather astonishingly close to classical patterns drawn in other prolonged cycles of expansion.

Of course, statistics tell us only what has happened and is happening — not what will happen.

HADDASSAH EVENING GROUP
 Mrs. Alfred Jaffe has been elected president of the Evening Group of the Providence Chapter of Hadassah. The installation meeting will take place on Tuesday evening at the East Side Jewish Community Center.

Other officers who will be installed are Mesdames Saul Muffs, Kenneth Halpern and Jerome Diwinsky, vice-presidents; Samuel Kouffman, treasurer; George Bernstein, recording secretary; Harvey Blake, corresponding secretary; Stanley Tolchinsky, financial secretary. Mrs. Irving A. Wiener will be installing officer. Mrs. Benjamin Viner is chairman of the evening and Mrs. Malcolm Rosenthal is hospitality chairman.

TO HOLD MEETING

Hope Lodge #2224, B'nai B'rith, of Cranston will hold its monthly meeting on Wednesday at 8 P.M. at the Cranston Jewish Center.

Sol Kolack of Boston, executive director of the New England regional office of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, will be the principal speaker. He will be presented by Joseph M. Finkle, a member of the executive committee of the National Council of B'nai B'rith, and of the Rhode Island Commission on Discrimination.

Invitations to the meeting have been issued to the Cranston Women's Chapter as well as Kent Lodge and Chapter of East Greenwich.

TEMPLE SINAI

"On the Wings of Eagles" will be the subject of Rabbi Robert Schenkerman's sermon at services to be held in honor of the creation of Israel at Temple Sinai tonight. There will be a presentation by the choir. Guests are invited and school children from the fourth grade on.

PLAN CHILDREN'S CARNIVAL

Plans for a "Children's Carnival" are being completed by the children's activities committee of the East Side Jewish Community Center, it has been announced by Mrs. Gustaf Sweet, committee chairman. The affair will be conducted at the East Side Center building on Sunday, May 24, beginning at 1 P. M.

Open to all children in the community, the affair will include pony rides, a merry-go-round, a variety of booth games, refreshments, a cartoon show and prizes.

Assisting Mrs. Sweet are committee members Leon Temkin and Mesdames Arthur Eisenstein, Morton Bomes, Irving Chase, Lewis Rotenberg, Matthew Millman, Michael Millman, Robert Gorfine, Stanley Friedman, Albert Geffner and Harold Braustein. Staff aides are Mrs. Jerome Bernstein and Arthur Eisenstein.

PLAN COOKOUT

The Junior High Council of the East Side Jewish Community Center will hold a "Starlite Dance and Cookout" on Saturday beginning at 7 P. M. The affair will be held on the outdoor patio.

trip to Russia, he was inducted into the Overseas Press Club by its president, John Wilhelm, who offered this practical advice: "Never itemize or give any details on expense accounts. In this respect we point with pride to Richard Vidmer of the Herald Tribune whose expense account read, '$500, for getting around.'"

ART DEPT.: Salvador Dali painted six water colors on Christmas themes commissioned by Hallmark Cards. In delivering the Christmas paintings Dali stated that he completed all six while sitting inside the empty bathtub of his suite at the St. Regis Hotel. "The white tile, it's like snow, and the gold fixtures, like tree decorations," the artist explained. "And, besides, a man who works from inside an empty bathtub can work without interruption."

LOCAL NEWS: Elia Kazan, who directed Archibald MacLeish's Pulitzer Prize-winning play, "J.B.," also will direct the RCA Victor cast-recording of the play . . . Graham Greene just finished writing his first musical comedy. He hopes for simultaneous London and Paris productions . . . Jerome Robbins and George Balanchine have been invited to create ballets for A. M. Julian, the new head of the Paris Opera . . . George Gobel, at the Empire Room, won't try the new "breathless" vodka: "When I hit a cop, I want him to tell I've been drinking."

FASHION NOTE: The cover of Nat King Cole's album, "The Very Thought of You," features an arresting photo of Cole with an English sporting hat — the kind usually worn by Rex Harrison. "Is the album a big hit?" Cole was asked . . . "I guess so," he replied. "It's already sold 32,000 hats."

TV DEPT.: Howard Dietz, the lyricist, and his wife, designer Lucinda Ballard, have two separate phone numbers at their town house, but never have been called by any pollsters — until the other day. A man phoned to ask: "Do you watch the Arthur Murray Show?" . . . "Of course not," said Mrs. Dietz . . . She reported this to her husband who frowned: "Why did you say that: Arthur Schwartz is going to be on that show." Schwartz and Dietz have been collaborating on countless song hits for more than 20 years.

Lucinda was duly contrite. Just then, the other telephone rang. It was the same caller, asking: "Do you watch the Arthur Murray Show?" . . . "Certainly I do," Mrs. Dietz replied, "especially when people like Arthur Schwartz are on it."

BUILDING DEPT.: A Washington politician attended a dinner where President Truman was shown photos of the new Truman Village in Israel. "I am not impressed," said the Washington man. "I have a whole forest named after me in Israel." . . . "You had," said Truman . . . "What do you mean — 'had'?" the man asked . . . "The buildings for my village," said Truman, "came from the wood we cut from the trees in your forest."

GOLDEN AGE SABBATH
The Golden Age group of the East Side will be honored at special services to be conducted by Rabbi Jacob Freedman at Temple Beth Sholom in the main synagogue of the Temple tonight at 8:10 o'clock, and on Saturday at 9 A.M.
Representatives of the Golden Agers will participate in both services. Rabbi Freedman will preach on "All Honor to Our Elders." A reception and Oneg Shabbat will be given in honor of the group.

HADDASSAH STUDY GROUP
Mrs. Isaac Gerber, who recently returned from a trip through Spain and Italy, will speak about her travels at the luncheon of the Hadassah Study Group which will be held at the Colonial Room, Grist Mill, Seekonk, Mass. on Thursday at 12:30 P.M.
Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. Barney M. Goldberg, chairman, at DE 1-5582, or Mrs. Harry Seltzer at DE 1-4356.

TEMPLE BETH DAVID
Rabbi Abraham I. Jacobson will dedicate his sermon "Teach Us to Count Our Days" tonight at 8:15 o'clock at the Friday night Shabbat service at Temple Beth David to the Golden Age Club of Providence.

Eugene Cornfield will officiate in observance of Yahrzeit, and Mr. and Mrs. Cornfield will sponsor the Oneg Shabbat after the service.

At the Saturday morning Shabbat service, the Aliya honors at the Torah reading will be given to Golden Agers, and Mr. Cornfield will chant the Maftir and will lead in the liturgy. Rabbi Jacobson will preach on "The Golden Age in Your Life."

The Golden Age "Shalot Sudot" will be served between the Mincha and Maariv services after the lecture period.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

prognosis is for a long phase of prosperity.
WALL ST. RELATIONSHIPS UPSIDE-DOWN
If you recall your "Alice's Adventures," you will remember that when she went Through The Looking-Glass and found her first Looking-Glass book, she couldn't puzzle it out until she realized all the writing in it was backwards.

That's what Wall Street appears to most seasoned experts today — a financial parallel of Alice's Looking-Glass House in which just about every traditional relationship seems to be running "backwards."
If you buy a U. S. Government bond, representing the highest credit in the world, you can earn 4 to 4½ per cent a year income today.

If you buy stock of a high-grade industrial corporation — just one corporation in one industry in our land — you're "lucky" if you can earn 3¼ per cent a year income and you may get much less.
If you put your money in a U. S. savings bond, you can earn 3¼ per cent only after you've held it eight years and 11 months.

If you deposit your money in a local savings bank, you can get 3¼ to 3½ per cent from the first year, and on funds in a savings and loan association you can get 3½ to 3¾ from the first year.

The relationships are upside-down. The customary spreads between what money can earn in the bank or in bonds or in stocks have disappeared or are fading fast.

For, what has been happening is that many investors have been shunning bonds of the Government and others because bonds lose buying power just as the dollar loses buying power in a cycle of climbing prices, and these investors fear inflation will continue. As investors have moved out of bonds or avoided buying them, prices have plunged, and borrowers from the U. S. Treasury down are now paying the highest interest rates in a generation to attract buyers.

Simultaneously, what has been happening is that big and little investors have been pouring funds into stocks in the hope that these will give them a hedge against future inflation and a participation in the nation's shining economic future. As they have scrambled for available stocks prices of stocks have soared, and the incomes received from dividends on the stocks have dwindled to record or near-record low levels.

And savings institutions have been trying to woo funds by raising their payment rates to the highest in years. But, the U. S. Government hasn't altered the interest on savings bonds since February 1957.

Just consider the difference on what your dollar can earn today.
IF YOU PUT YOUR SAVINGS IN:

Securities of the U. S. Treasury due in six months — as riskless an investment as can be imagined — you can get 3¼ per cent.

Securities of the U. S. Treasury due in one year to as far out as 1990, you can get 4 to 4½ per cent.

U. S. savings bonds, you can get 3 per cent after holding the bonds three years, 3¼ per cent at maturity in almost nine years.

Tax-free, high-grade municipal bonds, you can earn 3½ per cent, equal to 7 per cent a year to a person in the 50 per cent tax bracket.

Most savings banks, you can get 3¼ to 3½ per cent.
Most savings associations, you can get 3½ to 3¾ per cent.

The 30 industrial stocks which make up the familiar Dow-Jones stock index, you can get an average of around 3¼ per cent.

Bonds of the identical industrial corporations, you can get an average of 4½ per cent or more.
