THE FORMATION OF A JEWISH society with Orthodox, Conservative and Reform representation for the specific purpose of propagating Judaism was disclosed at the CCAR convention. The new body, called the Jewish Information Society, is made up of prominent laymen and rabbis. Its headquarters is in Chicago, and its activities are confined to the Chicago area but it is expected that branches will be opened in other cities.

A GROUP OF 1,260 ULTRA-ORTHODOX families, driven from the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn by new public housing projects, plans to create a village in Franklin, N. J. where they can live according to the strict rules of the followers of the Sarmarer Rebbe without outside interference.

JUSTICE SAMUEL FREEDMAN, member of the Court of the Queen's Bench in the province of Manitoba, has been named Chancellor of the University of Manitoba for a term of three years. He is the first Jew in Canada to hold such a position in any university.

THE CHIEF RABBINATE IN ISRAEL issued instructions last week ordering that all applicants for marriage be investigated to see if their identity cards, listing them as "Jewish" were valid and "in keeping with the Torah." According to a spokesman for the Sephardic Chief Rabbi, Dr. Itzhak Nissim, the rabbinate was concerned about the correct identity of a relatively small number of immigrants described as Jews on their identity cards, but who were actually Christian in religion. These persons allegedly registered as Jews in order to be permitted to emigrate.

A COUNTY COURT IN MILWAUKEE, Wis., last week voided a will by a Jewish woman leaving one dollar of her $40,000 estate to one of her sons who married a Catholic woman. The will specified that he could get half of the $40,000 estate if he divorced his wife. The court voided the will upon the ground that it was calculated to persuade her son to get a divorce and was therefore contrary to public policy.

THE INFLUENTIAL NEWS-PAPER, Le Monde, in a front page editorial, defended Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion's position on the sale of arms to West Germany. The editorial said that the Israel Government must have the freedom to enter into pacts, not only for purely commercial reasons, but for political and military considerations.

MAX DREXLER, OWNER OF A San Francisco meat market, was found guilty of violating California's new kashruth standards law and sentenced to six months probationary term and $100 fine in the first conviction under the law. The complaint against Drexler was presented by Rabbi Juda Glasner, Kosher Food Inspector for the State Department of Health.

15 Injured In Haifa Riots

HAIFA, Israel—Thirteen policemen and two civilians have been injured in day-long riots here.

(Police told Reuters that 32 North African immigrants had been arrested.)

Police said the riots started when a rumor spread among North African Jewish immigrants that a member of their community had died in a hospital after being shot by a police patrol.

The man actually had been shot in a brawl, police said, and was in a hospital where his condition was described as serious but not dangerous.

The riots began with a demonstration of North African immigrants in front of police headquarters. Protest marchers carrying black flags and Jewish national banners smeared with blood shouted: "Blood for blood—death to any policeman hurting one of ours."

Police tried to disperse the crowd. Later, stones and bottles were thrown. Twenty shop windows were smashed, four cars were overturned and burned, and two clubs and one restaurant were wrecked.

Some Jews Leave Romania For Israel

VIENNA — For the first time since early March a few dozen Romanian Jews have arrived in Austria on their way to Israel.

Four months ago a wave of Jewish emigration running to several hundred persons weekly suddenly was halted by the Communist Romanian authorities after protests from the United Arab Republic.

Israeli sources said the few Romanians who had come out recently were only a trickle and that this could not be taken as a resumption of emigration on a large scale.

These sources added that the Israeli government had forbidden any official mention of the emigration from eastern Europe because publicity jeopardizes the chances of these people.

The Romanian Communists never announced the start of the emigrations and no official announcement is expected when they are resumed.

In the first week of March alone about 1,000 Romanian men, women and children had passed through this city on their way to new homes in Israel. But then without warning the migration was cut off.

1959 American Jewish Year Book Reports 5,260,000 Jews In U. S.

NEW YORK — The American Jewish Year Book — a record of events, facts and trends in American and world Jewish life — reports that there are 5,260,000 Jews in the United States, of whom 80 per cent are native-born.

The 1959 edition, published jointly by the American Jewish Committee and the Jewish Publication Society of America, was released recently. It has been published annually since 1899.

Statistics in the book disclosed that in 1899 two-thirds of the Jewish population of one million in the United States were immigrants. The number of the Jewish congregations has risen from 600 in 1899 to more than 4,000 today.

Within the sixty years of the Year Book's publication, Jewish organizational life in this country has grown from twenty national groups to more than 200. These reflect varied interests: cultural, educational, religious, community relations, overseas aid, social welfare, fraternal and mutual benefit, Zionist and pro-Israel.

Statistics in the book disclosed that in the thirteen-year post-war period, from 1946 to 1958, Jewish philanthropy contributed more than $1,780,000,000 through central Jewish community organizations for diverse causes.

In a report on world Jewish population, the Year Book said that the total was estimated at more than 12,000,000. Of this number 6,200,000 live in North, Central and South America, 3,500,000 in Europe, 1,900,000 in Asia, 560,000 in Africa and 65,000 in Australia and New Zealand.

In another section the book reported on anti-Semitic agitation in the United States saying that it had increased in the South with the growth of desegregation tensions.

"The bulk of the hatemongers' activity continues to be the extensive distribution of fliers, leaflets and pamphlets," the book said.

"Jews in this country, during the past six decades, have participated fully in our creative experience, which has given Americans increasing opportunities for growth and fulfillment.

"In our democratic society Jews, benefiting from this freedom of opportunity, have been enabled to develop their own institutions while making significant contributions to the general welfare."

Vonnie Laurans Memorial Fund

An invitation is being extended to the friends of the late Vonnie Laurans to send contributions to the Ann Vondelle Laurans Fund which is being established at the Miriam Hospital to benefit the Physical Therapy Department.

Those who wish to participate in a lasting testimonial to her concern for the sick and disabled may send their contributions to the Women's Association of Miriam Hospital at 164 Summit Avenue, Providence, R. I. Additional information can be obtained by calling ELM-hurst 1-1000, Extension 254.

Religious Party Submits Proposal For Formation Of New Government

JERUSALEM — Leaders of the National Religious Party, composed of the Mizrachi and Hapoel Hamizrachi, submitted a proposal to President Itzhak Ben Zvi suggesting the formation of a caretaker government comprised of representatives of all political parties, except the Communists.

The leaders of the religious party also told the President that they would agree to advancing the date of the national elections, set for November, on condition that the Parliamentary and municipal elections are held simultaneously. In this, the Mizrachi leaders differ from the Mapai and the Progressives who seek separate elections for the Parliament and for the municipalities.

Last week's proposal of the National Religious Party for the formation of a caretaker government until the forthcoming national elections doomed the possibility of the formation of a "minority government," composed of Mapai and Progressives, for which Premier David Ben-Gurion has been seeking active or passive support from the religious group since his resignation following a cabinet split over the sale of arms to West Germany. Leaders of the National Religious Party made it clear to Ben-Gurion that they are not anxious "to pull his chestnuts from the fire" because of his opposition to their stand on the interpretation of the "who is a Jew" issue.

Bonn Willing To Buy Arms From Arabs As Well As Israel

BONN, Germany, — West Germany is letting the Arab countries know that she is prepared to buy arms from them as well as from Israel if they can meet the conditions set by the Federal Defense Ministry according to a New York Times article by Sydney Gruson.

The conditions are that the quality be good and the price competitive. These were the only considerations behind West Germany's recent purchase of 250,000 mortar shells worth $3,000,000 from Israel, the Arabs have been told in reply to unofficial inquiries.

The only Arab country with a munitions industry that might be able to sell to the Germans is believed to be the United Arab Republic of Egypt and Syria. There have been talks between the UAR and West Germany on the possible sale of small-caliber ammunition, but no contracts have been signed, according to West German officials.

The Defense Ministry's policy is to buy arms from any member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization or any neutral as long as the conditions of price and quality are fulfilled, it was said here.

Major Suppliers Listed

The major suppliers for West Germany's armed forces are the United States, Britain, France, Italy and Belgium, all members of NATO. Turkey recently won a large order, for a reported sum of $180,000,000 worth of munitions, and Greece and Portugal as well as Israel have joined the list.

The political crises in Israel as a result of the arms sale has surprised officials here, for it was never considered as anything but a straight commercial transaction.

Premier Ben-Gurion of Israel resigned last week over the arms issue, bringing to an end the four-party governing coalition. The two Left-wing labor parties in the Government had objected to the arms transaction. It was originally reported that the contract was for the sale of grenade launchers to be attached to rifles.

Price 30% Less

The main reason the Israelis got the order, according to West German officials, was that their price was 30 per cent less than that quoted by other suppliers.

This is the explanation being offered to the Arabs and Bonn does not expect official protests to follow the unofficial inquiries already made. Bonn is being careful in its relations with the Arab world, which is becoming an increasingly important area of West German economic influence.

Because Bonn does not want to upset these relations, there is no chance that the Government here will respond to the trial balloon floated publicly last week by Premier Ben-Gurion for an exchange of diplomatic representatives.

In an interview with a Tel Aviv newspaper, Mr. Ben-Gurion said he thought the time had come to establish diplomatic relations with Bonn.

LOUIS WEISMAN

Funeral services for Louis Weisman of 95 Byfield Street, husband of Pearl (Spevak) Weisman, who died July 7 after a long illness were held on July 8 at the Max Sugarman Funeral Home. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

Born in Russia in 1874, he was a son of the late Isaac and Esther C. (Narva) Weisman, and came to Providence about 55 years ago. He was a retired self-employed sheet metal worker.

Besides his wife, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Edward Grossman of Providence; a son, Harry J. Weisman of Pawtucket; a sister, Mrs. Sarah Chafetz of Providence, and one grandchild.

WILLIAM A. IVENTASH

Funeral services for William A. Iventash, 66, of 1 Rhode Island Avenue, a retired insurance underwriter, who died on July 8, were held the following day at Temple Beth El. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

Mr. Iventash, husband of Mrs. Rebecca (Yarus) Iventash, was born in Poland, a son of the late Herbert and Bertha Iventash. He lived in New York City for seven years before settling in Providence 40 years ago. He was a graduate of Brooklyn College of Pharmacy of Long Island University, and was a pharmacist for 20 years before going into insurance underwriting. He became semi-retired in 1948, and fully retired in 1956 because of ill health.

He was a member of the Rhode Island Pharmaceutical Association and of Temple Beth El.

Besides his widow, he is survived by two sons, Dr. Herbert Iventash and Robert Iventash, both of this city; and three brothers, Samuel of Berkeley, Calif., Morris of New York City, and Irving Iventash of New Haven, Conn.

HARRY COVINSKY

Funeral services for Harry Covinsky, 77, of 46 Shawmut Street, retired proprietor of a fish market, who died on July 8 after a short illness, were held the following day at the Max Sugarman Funeral Home. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

The husband of Rose (Meshbank) Covinsky, he was born in Russia in 1882, a son of the late Isaac and Anna Covinsky. He retired two years ago after operating Covinsky's Fish Market in Providence for 35 years.

He was a member of Congregation Anshe Kovno, the First Odesa Beneficial Association and the Hebrew Free Loan Association.

Besides his wife, he is survived by a son, Louis Covinsky of Providence; two daughters, Mrs. Samuel Senders and Mrs. Samuel Sharpstein, both of Providence; three grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

LOUIS L. SILVERMAN

Funeral services for Louis L. Silverman, 68, of 169 Tenth Street, the husband of Mrs. Jennie (Bosler) Silverman, who died July 9 after a short illness, were held the following day at the Max Sugarman Funeral Home. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

Born in Brooklyn in 1890, he had been a resident of this city for 60 years. He was a manufacturer's representative here for many years with an office at 56 Washington Street.

He was a member of Temple Emanuel, Touro Fraternal Association.

Besides his widow, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Albert Schus-

THIS WEEK WE ARE HAPPY TO PRESENT

An Orchid To . . .

A Carnation To . . .

Mary Mushnick

Jacob Diamond

Mrs. Mushnick is the kind of woman who pours her heart and soul into every activity in which she becomes involved. She has been a most devoted member of Temple Beth-David for the past 15 years, and was recently re-elected president of the Beth-David Sisterhood for a fifth term. She is very active in all affairs of the Temple.

Mrs. Mushnick is a past grand chief of the Knights of Pythias Sisters of R. I., and she was recording secretary of the local Telshe Yeshiva organization for six years. She is also a member of the R. I. Association for the Blind, and campaigns twice a year to raise funds for the Association.

Jacob Diamond is the man with the big smile and the open heart. He is a hard worker, and is known to be available at any time when his assistance is needed. His charities are generous, frequent, and spontaneous. He has been an important member of Temple Beth-David for ten years, and has been a Gabbai at the Temple for the past six years. He is also a member of the Board.

Mr. Diamond has long been interested in other phases of life in the Jewish community. He is a member of Jewish Fraternal Association, the Hebrew Free Loan Association, and the Jewish Home for the Aged, among others.

Place Hebrew Teacher At Camp Centerland

The Bureau of Jewish Education, in cooperation with the Jewish Community Center, has placed a Hebrew counselor at Camp Centerland for the entire camp season.

Mordecai Shapiro, one of the city's Hebrew instructors, directs the program which will consist of a variety of activities geared to the age levels and abilities of the students. Such activities as Hebrew plays, Hebrew games, and Hebrew filmstrips will be introduced in this program. Special emphasis will be placed on an Israeli village project in which all activities will be conducted in Hebrew.

Mr. Shapiro is a graduate of the Hebrew Teachers' College, David Yelin, in Jerusalem. He has had camp leadership experience at camps in Israel and New York.

Cause of A Collapse

One of the best cracks I've heard in a long time came from Hoyt Wilhelm of the Baltimore Orioles, who stood the American League's best hitters on their collective ear during the first third of the current season. It will be remembered that in racking up nine straight wins, Wilhelm threw such a lively knuckle ball that his catcher, Gus Triandos, was setting all sorts of records for passed balls. Nobody could catch that knuckler.

Well, suddenly Wilhelm lost his stuff, and he lost several games in a row. In commenting on one defeat in the clubhouse after the game, the pitcher remarked that his knuckle ball had not been working that night. And he added this clincher:

"I can prove it. Triandos didn't have a single passed ball!"

Cause of a Collapse
 Barring a complete about face, an amazing winning streak, and a partial collapse of the two present pennant contenders, it is now gleefully obvious to the vast majority of baseball fans that the defending world champion New York Yankees finally have cracked, and are not going to defend the American League in the World Series this year.

What happened to the Yankees is now the question of the day, to Yankee fans as well as Yankee-haters. It is asked wherever you go, even by those fans who hope this collapse is extended until the once-proud New Yorkers clinch last place . . . and stay there for something like the next 15 or 20 years at least.

Well, a man with newspaper space at his disposal, and a theory, to boot, can hardly be expected not to let the reading public in on the secret of just what is wrong.

Acknowledging that the Yankee players are generally having bad years; admitting that the pitching staff is riddled with inefficiency; and realizing that the defense is simply gosh-awful, this column comes right back to its theme of 1958 AND the early part of 1959, and lays the blame right on the doorstep of the man who in the past has quite deservedly taken the credit — Manager Casey Stengel.

I don't intend to detail everything I think Stengel has done wrong. Obviously a lot of that would entail nothing but second guessing a particular play or game; and that is ridiculous, for your right play might have backfired, too. Here, however, are two criticisms of Stengel that I regard as indisputable — factors that have contributed to the plight of the fading champions.

The first of these involves the collapse of Art Ditmar, who, it will be recalled, was belted hard during the five game series last week in Boston. In my book, Ditmar's inefficiencies stem largely from the stupidity of Stengel, or his pitching coach, Jim Turner, or both.

Up to about three weeks ago, Ditmar was probably the most effective pitcher on the Yankee team. He had been consistently good all year; and only his mates' inability to score runs early in the season kept him from compiling an impressive record.

Until the time in question, Ditmar had worked in regular rotation with the other starters. The Yanks kept hoping that Ford and Turley would come around to the kind of form Art was displaying.

Then, on the third day after one of his starts (a game he won, by the way), Ditmar was sent to the bullpen in a tight game. With only two days of rest, he came in to work several innings. Again, with only two days of rest following that effort, Ditmar was back in a starting assignment. He was belted out in the first inning.

Since then, Ditmar has been in and out of the bullpen, pitching mostly in relief, and with decreasing effectiveness. His routine broken, his arm overworked more often than not, the man who had held up a sagging pitching staff all season suddenly has been converted into a mediocre reliever. On a staff that is hungry for effective starters, the most consistent starter has been methodically ruined by irregularity, insufficient rest, and the sudden change to a different form of operation.

Don't tell me that Ditmar just went into a slump! Once again, as I have been preaching for two seasons, Casey Stengel has been the Yankees' worst enemy!

One more example for this week — an example stimulated, perhaps, by the erratic third base play of Tony Kubek last week, in which he literally threw away one game.

All through the 1958 season, Stengel had his boy Kubek at shortstop. The best shortstop on the team, Gill McDougald, shifted to second, although he had been named the top shortstop in the majors the year before. When the Yankees went into their long slump that lasted from mid-season until the fourth game of the World Series, Kubek contributed to that slump by poor hitting and terrible fielding. As the play of the shortstop declined, so too did the play of the second baseman. After it was all over, Stengel admitted that maybe he let Kubek stay in there too long, and maybe he shouldn't have rushed him into the regular lineup after Tony came out of the Army near the end of the spring training season.

So, in 1959, Casey went right back to Kubek at short and McDougald at second. The team got off poorly, and dropped into the cellar, with a sizable handful of games being lost at shortstop. Mc-

Dougald, too, went bad, and Stengel grumbled out loud that too many balls were going through his infield.

Yet he did nothing about it! What "saved" the Yanks was an injury that sidelined Kubek for quite a while. Having no choice in the matter, the manager moved McDougald, his best shortstop, to short, and his best second baseman, Richardson, to second. They played together so well that the team immediately started to move; and when Kubek was recovered, he was sent to the outfield, where he proceeded to shine, and to hit. He admitted he was relieved to be out of the infield.

What this all adds up to is this: At a time when the team's confidence could have been saved, and its pride kept high, the manager kept a weak, inefficient second base combination intact, even though he knew it was bad, and complained openly about it. It is no exaggeration to say that "many" of the close one run and extra inning games that were lost in the spring would have been won without too much effort had the manager done on his own what an injury forced him to do.

So, while you can say that Kubek's play hurt the Yankees, I say that the fault is the manager's, who was aware of this poor play, a carryover from the entire season of 1958, yet permitted it to go on. And in Boston last week, again, while Yankee fans might logically blame Saturday's defeat on Kubek's throwing error, the greater blame must rest on Stengel for bringing this erratic throwing infielder in to play a strange position in a close, and crucial game.

Only two examples, but enough to lend credence to my persistent argument that Casey Stengel is the Yankees' worst enemy.

To Construct Course At Grand View Hotel

Irving Pivnick of Grand View Hotel, Moodus, Conn., announces the construction of a new golf course on the hotel property back of the Olympic Pool. Completed, it will be an 18-hole course of championship caliber. Work has already begun on the first 9 holes which will be approximately 3300 yards in length and will cover 70 acres.

Other sports facilities at Grand View include championship tennis courts, basketball, handball, and volley ball courts and a putting green. The resort opened for its 47th summer season on June 26.

A subscription to the Herald is a good gift idea for the person who "has everything" else. Call UN 1-3709.

I should like to thank my friends and relatives, and the organizations, who were so thoughtful and kind during my recent hospital illness.

Ornstein-Singer

Miss Gloria Singer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Singer of Byfield Street, was married to Jack E. Ornstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ornstein of Radcliffe Avenue, on June 21 at Temple Beth David. Rabbi Abraham I. Jacobson officiated at the ceremony which was followed by a reception.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an Italian lace gown, trimmed with iridescent sequins and pearls, with a portrait neckline, an Empire bodice, short sleeves, a bell skirt with a Watteau back and a chapel train. A tiara of seed pearls held her fingertip illusion veil.

Mrs. S. L. Rabinowitz, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor, and Miss Marilyn Leibowitz was maid of honor. Irving Ornstein was best man for his brother. Ushers were Jerome Miller, Lawrence Orleck, Norman Bader, Warren Rosenblum, Alfred Factor and Melvin Spindler.

The couple left for a motor trip to Los Angeles, Calif., where they will live.

Ginsburg-Roth

The names of the members of the wedding party were omitted in error from the article in last week's Herald on the marriage of Barbara Faith Estelle Roth to Marvin Leonard Ginsburg which took place on June 7.

Miss Cornelia Ann Powers was maid of honor. Rober S. Ginsburg, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Richard Roth, Dr. Melvin Greenberg, Richard Treistman, Phillip Shore, Robert Greenberg and Alan Greenberg.

SOUR CREAM PIE PASTRY

(Two 9-inch pie shell)
1 1/2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon baking soda
3 tablespoons softened butter
1/2 cup sourcream

All of these ingredients should be chilled before mixing. Sift together sifted flour, salt, baking soda, into a chilled bowl the inside of which has been greased with softened butter. Add the sour cream and mix to a soft texture.

Divide dough in two parts. Knead one part on a board for one minute then roll out into a 9-inch circle. Spread with half the softened butter, fold over and roll out again into a circle 9 1/2 inches in diameter. Repeat this process with the second portion of dough. Adjust both rounds in 9-inch pie pans, turning up edges and fluting with the fingers. Chill one hour or longer before baking time. Brush inside with a little evaporated milk or fruit juice, and prick with tines of a fork to prevent blistering or puffing while baking. Bake 12 to 15 minutes at 425 deg. F. or till nicely browned at the edges.

Use with the following cheese-pineapple filling for one pie and store the other crust in your freezer or aluminum foil-wrapped in any dry, cool spot.

CHEESE-PINEAPPLE FILLING

1 cup dry cottage cheese
1 cup light cream
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 egg yolks, well beaten
1/2 cup drained crushed canned pineapple
3 tablespoons dark brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon almond extract

Combine in the order listed, mixing thoroughly. Turn into the baked pie shell and make a topping by beating together the 2 egg whites with 4 tablespoons brown sugar until stiff, and arranging in swirl pattern over the filling. Bake 20 to 25 minutes at 300 deg. F. or till the topping is slightly browned and "set." Let cool before serving.

This pie may be chilled in the refrigerator and served a day later. Be sure to cover with aluminum foil to preserve its good looks.

Just in case you'll be entertaining "for the coming bride," we have a few suggestions we hope will prove helpful. We recommend serving the kind of dainties that can be eaten without benefit of knives, forks and spoons whenever possible.

Whether it is to be a reception for a bride or a sweet girl graduate we suggest the following recipe, quantity production, which can be prepared long in advance and save you the last minute rush often incident to such happy events.

Unbaked Candied Fruit Balls

3 packages vanilla wafers (14-ounce size pkgs.)
1 1/2 cups chopped pecans or walnuts
1 1/2 cups granulated sugar
1 1/2 cups cocoa or 1/4 cups cocoa and 1/4 instant coffee
1/4 cup corn syrup
1/4 cup orange extract
1 cup finely chopped candied orange peel

Cocunut, fresh shredded or packaged variety as directed. Roll vanilla wafers with a rolling pin—use strong paper bag for convenience — for making fine crumbs. Combine with chopped nuts, sugar, cocoa, in a mixing bowl and stir in the syrup, flavoring extract, using two forks to combine well. Add the finely chopped candied fruit peel last and combine lightly to a consistency easy to shape into 1 1/2-inch balls. Roll balls in cocunut and place on a cookie sheet till all of the mixture is shaped. Cover with wax paper or aluminum foil and store in refrigerator or freezer till needed. Yields 400 approximately.

Variation can be achieved by dividing mixture into two or three equal portions and coloring each

Tass Correspondent Attempts To Find Source Of Reports

UNITED NATIONS — The latest press reports detailing official anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union were seen here as having caused much more excitement in Soviet circles than such accusations have brought about in the past.

A usually suave and congenial correspondent for Tass, the official Soviet news agency, made determined efforts to trace the source of the press reports which had cited specific cases of anti-Jewish activity like the closing of parts of old Jewish cemeteries, and the arrest of Jews on charges of "Zionism" because, in High Holy Day services, they had uttered the traditional prayer: "Next Year in Jerusalem."

The Tass correspondent, Vladimir Ozerov, insisted on trying to trace the source of these detailed reports by repeatedly demanding that Saul Carson, Jewish Telegraphic Agency correspondent at the United Nations, tell him the source of the information. Carson told him: "I don't know the source. If I did, I wouldn't tell you."

"I do not understand why you refuse to reveal the source," persisted Ozerov. "I am a member of the UN Correspondents Assn., as you are."

"For one thing," Carson replied, "if the source happened to be Russian, he'd be shot tomorrow."

Ozerov, who was accompanied by another Tass representative, Vladimir Bogachev, made his final approach to Carson during a luncheon of the UN Correspondents Assn. honoring a colleague. The exchange between the Tass man and the JTA writer culminated with some hot words from both, thus becoming public. Later, each apologized to the other, and the two agreed that "this unfortunate misunderstanding will not disturb good professional relations between us."

It was obvious to all correspondents and others here that a Tass correspondent's insistence on tracing the source of a news report — which he knows to be privileged — must have come as a result of official Soviet orders, indicating official Soviet sensitivity to the latest reports about Russian anti-Semitism.

Histadrut Honors Dubinsky, Potofsky

NEW YORK—Tribute was paid to two American trade union presidents by American and Israeli leaders at the Histadrut Humanitarian Award dinner at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, sponsored by the National Committee for Labor Israel. The awards were presented to David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and Jacob S. Potofsky, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, for their efforts to "promote understanding between the people of the United States and the people of the State of Israel."

The Lucky Break

BY HARRY GOLDEN

There is a whole American mythos about the lucky break. I am as much for the lucky break and the hopeful myth as the next man, but the sad thing is that many people forever depend upon chance. They wait for the telephone to ring and a voice to say, "If you guess the name of this tune, fifty thousand dollars is yours." They grimace in vicarious tension with the contestant in the isolation booth. They zoom newspaper circulation to get at that puzzle.

This myth about the lucky break has several variants, but the most common are two. One of them is that all you need for the main chance is blonde hair and eyes utter blue, and one day as you sit on a drugstore stool sipping a malted milk a talent scout will materialize and whisk you off to Hollywood. The next time you visit that drugstore that self-same stool will have a bronze plaque commemorating to all and sundry that here is where you were discovered. The other variant concerns the sourdough who stamps into the general store and in exchange for new overalls, canned beans, two shovels and some feed for his mule grants outright half of any claim he takes. The payload comes in. And the storekeeper educates his daughters in Swiss convents, clips coupons and spends the rest of his life endowing charities.

There's an element of luck in success, but all of us know there's not one-hundredth as much luck as there is hard work.

The sourdough who brings in a payload does so by risking his life against the malignancy of natives and the greed and cunning of fellow prospectors. And the blonde who sits on the drugstore stool more likely than not has studied dancing and voice since she was five and acting since she was six and for the first two years she kicks back half of her salary to that talent scout anyway.

Yet our myths persist. I do not say that there have not been men who were lucky or who found gold or made a lucky investment. Many a man has won a boxing match with a lucky punch. Max Schmeling in fact won the heavyweight title lying flat on his back and lost it standing up. The point is no one can defend a championship for long lying flat on your back.

The luckiest break I ever heard of happened when I was a hotel clerk in a Broadway hotel. We were carrying an actor, his wife and son. It was 1934 and the actor just couldn't find work. He was in desperate straits. For convenience's sake, I shall call him Wallace. Well, one night, Wallace stopped into a drugstore to make a phone call. He was down to his last nickel. In the phone booth, he found a doctor's satchel and he opened it to see the name of the physician who left it there. Instead of a stethoscope and scalpels and pills, however, Wallace found the bag bursting with money. Wallace weakened. He took the bag filled with money back to the hotel. He and his wife counted over $37,000 all in $10 bills. They were made. Wallace and his wife decided to keep the money.

But during the night, Wallace's conscience raged and in the morning, broke though he was, he told his wife they had to report their finding to the police. He took the bag to the West 47th Street police station. Maybe there was a reward. There wasn't. Every bill in the satchel was counterfeit.

Wallace saved himself a lot of trouble and he discovered that he was indeed a very lucky man—because he was honest.

ANYTHING FOR A LAUGH . . .

A recent custom at New York parties is to have a lady stashed away in another room for "consultation" purposes. No, nothing illegal or immoral about it. The uninitiate refer to her as "the fortune-teller," but that's incorrect. After all, any lady who can tell fortunes accurately should be able to make her own fortune and avoid the need for this kind of work. She prefers to be known as a horoscope-analyst, with a bit of palm-reading added.

I never availed myself of the invitations to consult the ladies in the other room. I'm a skeptic in such matters and have little time to waste. Besides, I usually tell them I'm in the same business myself, in a way—the business of prophecy. But then came the party where I was the lone holdout; and after sufficient taunts I reluctantly submitted.

She began cautiously, "You are sensitive, you have an artistic streak touched with cynicism, you make friends easily, you have rare taste." Oh, sure. "You could be eminently successful in Law, or Diplomacy," she continued, glancing at my palm. "Your vivid imagination and humor could be useful in executive positions in the highest echelons." She had me going, then lost me with one line: "You'd make a great comic."

Great comics are as rare as great musicians and great scientists, and few come along in any generation. Each is distinctive. Bert Lahr, Bobby Clarke, Durante, Berle, Ed Wynn, Red Skelton, Gleason — the giant clowns of our times who, in their unique way, can provoke laughs independent of any funny lines written by some serious-faced gagwriters. The silent films of Hollywood, starting with Chaplin, supplied the primary, enduring tests.

Their must-get-a-laugh compulsion was exemplified by Buster Keaton, whose film contract barred him from cafe appearances. Once, when a nightclub m.e. introduced Keaton and added, "Applaud, folks, and we'll get him up here," Keaton's manager said: "Sorry, but his contract doesn't allow it." But Keaton leaped onstage and did a routine ending with a fall — and was rushed to a hospital.

Four stitches were taken in his scalp, and his manager was distressed. "You think this is awful?" said Keaton. "Look at my arm — broken in Chicago, the same way; but I got yaks, didn't I?"

When Martin & Lewis were at the Copacabana, their noisiest routine was at 1:30 A. M. They were interrupted by Phil Silvers, the comic who then was living in the hotel over the club. Silvers, wearing a robe over his pajamas, walked to the microphone, said "Sh, less noise please; I'm trying to get some sleep," then returned to his rooms upstairs.

This anything-for-a-laugh impulse also affected the late Lou Costello, during this same Martin & Lewis engagement at the Copa. They introduced Costello for a bow, and Lou — who was suing them for $150,000 — responded by taking the floor and doing his routine.

Ed Gardner, creator of "Duffy's Tavern," once lunched in San Juan with Gov. Munoz-Marin. He studied the 300-year-old sun dial in the Governor's garden, glanced at his own watch and said to the host: "Your clock's fast." And it was Milton Berle who — in a Chicago movie house where the film suddenly broke — leaped onstage, announced, "I thought you'd never call on me," then entertained them for 40 minutes until the film was re-spliced.

Joe E. Lewis' intuitive ability to convert anything into a laugh was apparent even on that Chicago night when mobsters came to his hotel room, knifed him and left him for dead. As Lewis was carried out of the hotel to a hospital, a feeble, 70-year-old elevator operator hovered over him solicitously. Joe E. said to him: "Why did you do it?"

During a nightclub routine in Las Vegas, Jack E. Leonard suddenly suffered a coughing spasm, and apologized: "Dice-dust." Harpo Marx once visited the offices of small-time agents in Times Square, filled out their questionnaires and in response to the question "Type of Performer?" wrote "Nondescript." And when, after a championship fight, Byrnie Foy left in a Rolls-Royce and a police escort, his brother Eddie pressed his nose against the car windows and gasped pleadingly, "Bread! Bread! Bread!"

The horoscope-analyst may have been right, about my making or diplomate or top executive. But when she mentioned the impossible — comic — I quickly said goodbye and left.

AUTO BOOM AHEAD

Standing around the gas pumps when I pulled up in my long, sleek '57 convertible Sunday were a couple of middle-income neighbors, the owner of the garage and the garage mechanic.

"Going to trade in those tail-fins for one of the new compact deals?" asked the garage owner.

"Turn in this yellow beauty? I've only 12,000 miles on it!" For an instant I bristled, then I saw their smiles, threw the question back at them — and got some fascinating results.

The mechanic: "If those small cars are what I hear they are, I'm buying, although I'll wait to see each model. For me, there's nothing like a small car and I've been waiting just for this."

One neighbor: "When Marge cracked up the station wagon in January, I swore she'd have to get along on mine. But it's sure rough without a second car around here. I don't know, I'll see."

Second Neighbor: "Not me. I'm ready for a nice, new big one like Sylvia's. None of those 'bugs' for me."

Garage owner: "I'll need another assistant, no?"

Not since the fabulous auto year 1955 — when a spectacular 7,500,-000 autos were sold in this country and virtually by itself, the auto industry sent our economy spiraling upward — has there been so much intense, advance interest in new car models as today.

Not in four years has the general economic background — with its record paychecks, rising employment — been as right for a bang-up auto sales year as now.

Not in a long time has the average American family been so relatively free of auto debt, and thus in a position to take on new monthly payments to buy cars.

If the conversation I heard around the gas pumps this past weekend is being repeated in various versions across the country—and I suspect it is — the 1960 auto year will get off with a roar when the Big Three start unveiling their "compact" cars 100 days from now.

And the 1960 auto year is likely to be one in which sales easily top 6,000,000 and in which sales well may top 7,000,000

It is likely to mark a revolutionary broadening of the second-car market — not because of the prices of the smaller cars, but because the size of the new cars will appeal to the second car buyer, and the industry will go all-out to woo the multiple car buyer.

It certainly will witness one of the fiercest competitive struggles in the industry's history as the European producers fight to hold their customers and the Big Three fight to get them back and all the domestic automakers battle each other for a share of the car market.

It well may see the beginning of a cycle of the "individual car" — meaning increasing numbers will be buying small cars for their own personal use as well as large cars for use by the entire family.

It could be a year of major switches in loyalties among car buyers since such buyers as my garage mechanic shop all the models before they decide which of the new compact autos they prefer.

How can the 1960 auto car year not be good? In view of the excitement about the new models? In view of the spur to activity which real competition always provides and the fact that this competition will be real indeed? And the generally bright economic background? The fact that the debts on the 1955 cars have been paid off and the 1955s are now getting old? And in view of the simultaneous restyling of the large cars to hold and intrigue the vast number who want to continue owning big models

It is hard to see how the 1960 car year can miss.

And this will mean not only a resurgence of Detroit and all the industries in our land tied to the auto market.

It also will mean a great boost to the entire American economy. At a time when other stimulants will be losing force and a new stimulant will be welcome, the auto industry appears set to provide it.
