

Mrs. Meir Denies Nasser's Claim

JERUSALEM—The Israel government does not recognize any "right" claimed by President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic to set conditions for use of the Suez Canal by shipping of Israel or any other nation, Mrs. Golda Meir, Israel's Foreign Minister, declared last week.

Interviewed on the Israel Radio's "Meet the Press" program, Mrs. Meir denied that Nasser had either the "legal or moral right" to set conditions for use of the international waterway. Asked if Israel would "test" the conditions set by Nasser for Israel's use of the waterway, conditions conveyed to the Israelis by United Nations Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold, Mrs. Meir replied with a firm negative. "Such demands," she affirmed, "cannot be made the basis for unlocking a deadlock."

The Israeli Foreign Minister voiced hope that East-West tensions would be relaxed as a result of the forthcoming Eisenhower-Khrushchev meetings and expressed the belief that such a relaxation would also affect the Middle East.

In response to one question, Mrs. Meir said bluntly that the Eisenhower Doctrine did not provide sufficient guarantees of Israel's security. She said her government had never taken any decision, one way or the other, on whether to establish diplomatic relations with the West German Federal Republic. She declined to answer whether she expected to remain as Foreign Minister after the November elections.

Meanwhile, it was reported that Mrs. Meir will arrive at the United Nations in New York shortly before the next General Assembly convenes on Sept. 15, and will remain as head of Israel's Assembly delegation for several weeks at least.

It appeared likely that this year's Israeli delegation will be smaller than usual.

Instructs Followers To Avoid Elections

JERUSALEM — The extremely orthodox anti-Zionist Satmar Rebbe of Brooklyn, Rabbi Joel Teitelbaum, last week instructed his Hassidic followers here not to participate in the forthcoming elections of the Knesset, Israel's parliament. Rabbi Teitelbaum is currently visiting Israel.

Speaking in the synagogue of his Jerusalem followers, who do not recognize the secular State of Israel and are awaiting the coming of the Messiah to establish a Jewish State, Rabbi Teitelbaum disclosed that he is writing a book explaining why it is forbidden to participate in elections and other activities in the "Zionist unbelievers' State."

He also attacked Israel's religious parties, particularly the ultra-orthodox Agudat Israel party and their non-Government school network, where secular subjects are taught in the "holy language."

Mrs. Jack A. Goodman
To Address Luncheon

The National Chairman of the Women's Division of the United Jewish Appeal, Mrs. Jack A. Goodman of Indianapolis, Ind., will be the guest speaker at the Pace-Setters luncheon next Tuesday, launching the 1959 campaign of the Women's Division of the General Jewish Committee.

The event will be held at 12:30 P. M. at the home of Mrs. Alexander Rumpel, 133 Hartshorn Road, and the minimum contribution will be $365.

A leading figure in many civic and welfare organizations, Mrs. Goodman is now serving as head of the UJA Women's Division chairman for the third successive year.

She is a former national vice president of Hadassah, a past president of the Indianapolis Welfare Federation and a recipient of the honor award of the Indianapolis Community Chest. In 1956, she was named Indianapolis Woman of the Year by B'nai B'rith. Mrs. Goodman is a fellow of Brandeis University.

Reports Russian Leader Willing To Discuss Soviet Jewish Position

STOCKHOLM — Philip M. Klutznick, Hon. President of the B'nai B'rith, last week told the World Jewish Congress Fourth Plenary Assembly in the Parliament Building here that Soviet Prime Minister Khrushchev is reported to have indicated a willingness to see American Jewish leaders and to discuss with them the position of the Jews in the Soviet Union.

But, Mr. Klutznick warned, "the questions concerning Soviet Jewry will never be answered in a single meeting with Khrushchev, patiently desirable as such a meeting is." He predicted that it would be a long time before meaningful answers were received.

Th B'nai B'rith leader, briefly visiting Stockholm after a three months European and Israel tour, called for all elements of organized American Jewry to unite for a joint approach to Mr. Khrushchev. The situation of the Jews of Soviet Russia was of prime importance — not the specific interests of any one American Jewish organization, no matter how representative it might claim to be.

Welcomes Klutznick

Dr. Nahum Goldmann, at whose invitation Mr. Klutznick appeared before a session of the World Jewish Congress Political Commission, warmly welcomed the B'nai B'rith leader.

Calling Dr. Goldmann "one of the unique Jewish personalities of our time," Mr. Klutznick said that the existence of forums such as the World Jewish Congress, for better Jewish understanding, was "a prime need of our times." Mr. Klutznick said that he "applauded and commended" the World Jewish Congress for its efforts.

Turning to the issue of cooperation between major Jewish organizations, Mr. Klutznick said that he shared "much of the hopes if not all of the ideas" of Dr. Goldmann in bringing about closer cooperation between such bodies.

Ideological Issues

Except in the category of religion there are no great ideological issues dividing Jewish life, especially in the Diaspora," Mr. Klutznick said. All Jews, with peripheral exceptions, agreed on the centrality of Israel's needs and security, on the need to strengthen Jewish educational facilities and programs and on the necessity "to continue to seek human dignity and freedom for all peoples and certainly no less for the Jewish people."

But, Mr. Klutznick said, there were still a few Jews who spoke of the danger of giving the non-Jewish world the notion that "we are engaged in an international conspiracy when we openly meet together by pre-arrangement to consider and act on problems that are legitimately and properly the concern of all Jews."

This notion, Mr. Klutznick emphatically declared, "should have died with the ox-cart. It certainly does not belong in the space age."

Stating that he had found "inertia the greatest barrier to inter-organizational cooperation," Mr. Klutznick said the B'nai B'rith was constantly strengthening its ability to cooperate effectively. "This had been displayed by the recent B'nai B'rith decision to establish an international council of which he has been elected chairman."

Bring Greater Harmony

Mr. Klutznick stated that the will to bring "greater harmony and understanding in Jewish life between naturally competitive forces must not be stayed by the few who refuse to enter into any "collaborative efforts with other Jewish organizations unless and until the perfect formula is found that achieves everything and hurts no one." These organizations, such as the B'nai B'rith, willing to take the initiative in cooperative movements, would proceed with their plans for the benefit of the Jewish community as a whole, the B'nai B'rith leader declared.

Differences With Ben Gurion Cause Of Retirement, Says Yadin

TEL AVIV — Dr. Yigael Yadin, the archaeologist who commanded Israel's army in the 1948 War of Liberation, disclosed last week that his retirement as Chief of Staff of Israel's armed forces had been due to differences with Prime Minister David Ben Gurion over the question of a reserve army.

Dr. Yadin said he did not identify himself with any political party in Israel. He expressed himself in favor of regional elections as compared to Israel's proportional representation bloc list system, as the only way to get "new blood" into the country's political life.

The scholar, who played such a great role in the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls, said in an interview with the newspaper Haboker, that he had refused a number of Government posts, ranging from an ambassadorship to a Cabinet portfolio, in order to devote himself to scientific research.

"You can be nominated or dismissed as an ambassador or cabinet minister," he commented, "but in science, you must reach perfection by yourself."

Israelis Start Campaign For Fall Elections

TEL AVIV — While several members of the Cabinet, including Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion, are still vacationing, resting in preparation for an election campaign expected to be rough and hard-hitting, the campaign for November's general elections actually got under ways at two meetings here last week.

The dominant Mapai Party held a rally here addressed by Foreign Minister Golda Meir and Abba Eban, former Ambassador to the United States. The left-wing Ahdut Avodah held a meeting here of its National Council and heard a fighting speech by Gen. Yigal Allon, retired Army hero of the 1948 War of Liberation. Election rallies were held throughout the country also by the General Zionist and by the Herut Party.

In his address, Gen. Allon declared that Israel is now "back in its pre-Sinai days," referring to the situation in 1956 when hostilities by Arab states forced Israel to undertake its march against the Egyptian armies in the Sinai Desert. He called for action in regard to freedom of shipping through the Suez Canal, declaring that, if the United Arab Republic insists on shutting the Canal to Israeli shipping, treating it as "a private waterway," Israel "must regard the Canal like any other Egyptian target."

Premier Ben-Gurion, who had gone to a hospital for a physical check-up in preparation for the campaign was found in "satisfactory" condition. However, he decided on a fortnight's rest before entering the campaign.

Exhibit To Depict Role Of Jews In Civil War

WASHINGTON — Eight Jewish organizations last week jointly announced plans for a traveling exhibit depicting the roles played by American Jews during the Civil War. The exhibit is being prepared as part of the nation-wide centennial observance of the war period. It will feature Jewish contributions to both the Confederacy and the Union.

Through the initiative of the American Jewish Historical Society, seven other groups joined with it to establish the Jewish Historical Commission on the Civil War Centennial. The eight organizations will pool resources from their archives and from other sources to create the exhibit that will open at the Jewish Museum of New York in November, 1960. The following year the display will be moved to the exhibit hall of the B'nai B'rith in Washington. Subsequently, it will be available for public showing in major Jewish communities.

Justin Turner of Los Angeles, a co-chairman of B'nai B'rith committee on Jewish Americana, was elected chairman of the commission.

Her silk illusion fingertip length veil fell from a cluster of white geraniums, and she carried a colonial bouquet of white geraniums centered with a pink rose.

OPEN REGISTRATION

Registration for the Providence Hebrew Day School for the Fall semester re-opened on Aug. 17. Applications are being accepted for Kindergarten and the first grade only. Students will be required to pass a qualifying examination in both Hebrew and secular subjects to enter the higher grades.

In order to avoid delay, parents are requested to bring birth and vaccination certificates at the time of registration.

Inquiries about registration and tuition fees may be made at the school building which is open daily from Monday to Friday from 9 A. M. to 3:30 P. M. Sessions for the Fall semester will begin on Wednesday, Sept. 9.

SONS OF JACOB

The Sons of Jacob Hebrew Academy will be open for final Hebrew School registration from Sept. 8 to 10. Jacob Glantz, president, has announced that the registration committee will be present from 4 to 6 P. M. daily, and from 7 to 10 P. M. on Thursday evening in the vestry of the Synagogue at 24 Douglas Avenue.

The Hebrew Academy will again be under the direction of Rabbi Hersh M. Galinsky. Mrs. Galinsky will continue as teacher.

SCHOOL ENROLLMENT

Enrollment in the Jewish schools in Greater Providence will be completed within the next week and a half, according to the Bureau of Jewish Education. The School Council has set Wednesday, Sept. 9, as opening of mid-week Hebrew Schools, and Sunday, Sept. 13 for opening of Sunday School.

Parents whose children have reached or are reaching their eighth birthday are asked to enroll them in mid-week Hebrew school, since most of the schools in the state do not offer one-day-a-week Jewish education for children who have passed their eighth birthday. In addition, most schools are requiring candidates for Bar Mitzvah on a Sabbath morning to be enrolled as a student in mid-week Hebrew school for a period of five years prior to Bar Mitzvah.

Schools affiliated with the Bureau include Beth Am, Beth David, Beth El, Beth Israel, Beth Shalom, Cranston Jewish Center, Eastward Jewish Center, Emanuel, Ohave Shalom. Others are Providence Hebrew Day School, which offers an English and Hebrew studies program, Shaare Zedek, Sinai, Sons of Abraham, Sons of Jacob and the Community Hebrew High School of the Bureau.

Further information may be obtained from the Bureau of Jewish Education office at DE 1-0956.

THE RHODE ISLAND HERALD, FRIDAY, AUGUST 28, 1959

Campers Wind Up Season At Centerland

More than three hundred suntanned and happy boys and girls last week completed an outstanding day camping season at Camp Centerland, Camp Adventure, and Camp Jaycee, summer day camps of the Jewish Community Center. And as the seven huge yellow camp buses trundled their full loads away from the camp grounds in Pawtuxet Valley for the last time this season, campers strained — some tearfully, for a last glimpse of the green woodlands and sunny fields that had brought so much enjoyment to them during the past eight weeks.

Some sixty members of the camp staff, too, looked back at the camp with mingled feelings of relief and regret as they now return to the more mundane activities of city life. "Meanwhile, back at the camp" the caretakers move in, locking doors, storing equipment, disconnecting and disassembling the many physical features so necessary to daily camp life which will not be needed again until next Spring.

For the Center's Camping Committee, under the chairmanship of Murry Halpert, there is hardly a pause between the 1959 and the 1960 camping seasons. Already the committee is in session, evaluating the 1959 program, the facilities, the staff, the budget—making recommendations for improvements for the next season. For camp director, Matt Millman, assistant executive director, Art Eisenstein, and camp secretary, Carol Riffkin, there is the job of finalizing records, preparing evaluations of counselors and campers, and sorting and filing the reams of "paper work" that collect each season in connection with the camp. Camp nurse, Miss Mary Hicks, packs away the medical kit that has patched and soothed a variety of scrapes, scratches, "itches" and aches and, after a few brief flurries of activity for adult and teen groups in the early Fall, the camp reverts to its natural Winter heirs.

Little campers in Camp Jaycee, the junior camping division, enjoyed an especially fine program under the supervision of Mrs. Stanley Brier. At the opposite extreme, Camp Adventure, under the direction of Lawrence Grebstein, enjoyed a senior camping program which, in addition to regular camp activities, included horseback riding, sightseeing trips, hikes, cook-outs, sleepouts, bowling, a trip to the Warwick Musical Theatre, etc.

Norman Saranovitz, staff worker at the South Side Center building, headed the Camp Centerland Intermediate Division this season and Sandra Finklestein returned as head of the Centerland Junior Division. Under the direction of Mrs. Frances Taylor the camp crafts program gained unusual popularity. Leaves, plants, pine cones and needles, rocks, birch bark and even animal tracks were included in a variety of crafts items that ranged from tie racks to miniature scenes.

Another program innovation, developed in cooperation with the Providence Bureau of Jewish Education, was the "Israeli Village" where interested campers learned (Continued on Page 7)

Post - Vacation Reverie

One of the comments this column was forced to omit because of space limitations before going on vacation has to do with all those rumors involving a Musial-for-Berra swap next winter. The brief story, out of St. Louis, was not picked up locally, as far as I can remember; but it came from an inside source.

The gist of the matter is that as soon as Commissioner Ford Frick announced inter-league trading would be permitted in December, Gussie Busch, owner of the Cardinals, called in the higher-ups in his organization.

"Get Berra," he told them, "at all costs!"

The decision to obtain the fading Yogi, no matter how high the cost, was certain not to be lost on the Yankees when the word leaked to them. The price automatically then had to go up—which is where Musial came into the picture.

While Stan has been told that he will finish out his career with St. Louis, his current unfriendliness with the Cardinals' manager, and the prospect of riding the bench all next summer, will probably make him amenable to a change when Busch calls him in at season's end to discuss the situation. On the agenda of this conference very likely will be a promise of the managership of the team for Musial when the great man retires from active duty. And a sizeable cash bonus will be included to soothe Stan's wounded pride.

The chances are good that he'll go, willingly, especially when the Yankees promise he will share the first base job with Moose Skowron, and be the team's premier pinch-hitter when not in the lineup.

On the other side of the fence, the trading of Berra would create a sentimental problem, but would ease greater difficulties that have arisen on the field. Berra, a 13-year veteran, is, by his continued presence as number one catcher, holding up the progress of both Elston Howard and Johnny Blanchard. Neither will get enough work as long as Yogi stays around; and it is around men such as these that the bedraggled world champs must build for the future.

And in case you think that the Cards never will trade Musial, and the Yanks never would permit Berra to go, just remember a guy like Schoendienst, also a St. Louis immortal, who was shuffled off to the Braves and who benefitted immensely thereby, since he is given credit for both of Milwaukee's pennants.

Not to be forgotten also are those salaries—about $100,000 for Musial, about $55,000 for Berra. Neither player is apt to overlook this factor when his pride is hurting.

They'll go!

That inter-league trading affair also has the Red Sox scurrying to make a deal—for the retiring Jackie Jensen—but this one cannot be counted on to succeed, coming as it does under the heading of locking the barn door after the horse has been stolen.

It is difficult, and unworthy, to criticize the Red Sox this year, in view of their diligent efforts and overhauled policy. So let's just say it's a pity that General Manager Bucky Harris didn't take Jensen at his word last spring when Jackie wrote that magazine article foretelling the imminence of his retirement.

That was the ideal time to trade Jensen, and strengthen the team at a couple of spots in return. On the eve of the trading deadline there was an even greater opportunity. The White Sox desperately sought a slugger to provide the power they needed. They offered Washington half a club, including Al Smith. At the last minute, the Senators vetoed the deal. Boston, having had advance notice Jensen intended to quit could have made that deal. Even on a short term basis, Jackie would have been welcomed with open arms in Chicago, where this year's pennant, not future possibilities, has been the prime concern.

Now, Boston is trying to work up a trade for Jensen with San Francisco, on the basis that Jackie would play if he could be nearer home. I don't think it will work; for Jensen fears flying as much as he dislikes being away from home—and with San Francisco, there would be far more flying than with the Red Sox.

Camp Centerland

Israeli songs, dances, stories and many Hebrew words and phrases under the direction of Mordechai Shapiro, assistant principal of the Cranston Center's Hebrew School. This program, completely voluntary on the part of the campers, drew hundreds of enthusiastic and interested campers who will return to their homes with a new and personal picture of the State of Israel, its culture and its customs. Feeling for Israel was heightened by the presence at camp of several campers who recently arrived in America from the State of Israel. Center campers thoroughly enjoyed the exchange of language and it is difficult to say who learned more from the exchange — Israelis or Americans.

At the ever popular camp waterfront, director Susan Hirsch, assisted by her sister, Helen, enjoyed the distinction of teaching more campers to swim and advancing more swimmers through their Red Cross requirements than in any camp year.

One of the major camp accomplishments was a development performed by the campers themselves. In every woodland clearing or shaded area, camper "hideaways" were constructed by each camper group. Paths were cleared, brush removed and, using nearby natural material, campers constructed benches, tables, fireplaces and, of course, signposts proudly displaying the name of their "Hideaway". These were natural retreats from the summer sun, places to plan special events, spots for cookouts and many other activities. Best of all, they were private and a source of great pride to their builders.

Shocked By East Side Murder, Jews To Move From Neighborhood

NEW YORK — The dwindling Jewish section of the Lower East Side was shocked by the murder of Philip Schickler, 65, Kosher luncheonette owner, by Puerto Rican hoodlums and a succession of acts of violence in an island of aging tenements, changing accents, store-front sweatshops, of basement rag bins and junk sales: "Ladies Suits 85c." "Men's Pants, 50c up."

"This is the kind of a neighborhood where you live here all your life," said an East Broadway tenement dweller. "Everybody knows everybody and everybody knew Mr. Schickler. It's like we're all one big congregation. You had no money he'd say, OK pay me next week."

Bagels and Beards

The New York Times observed that this is a noticeably Jewish community of bagel and whiskered men clinging to tradition — but the tradition is now being challenged.

Housing projects are replacing tenements, and Puerto Ricans are moving in. Such changes breed conflict, and the conflict reached a high point with the murder of Mr. Schickler.

The Times reported that Jewish residents stood on the sidewalk or sat on the stoops, complaining about the police protection, or saying things like:

"Who's going to be next, that's the question?"

"Such a nice man, Philip."

"This neighborhood—we have to move."

"I can remember when this was a fine neighborhood," Marilyn Rosenbloom told the Times. "I remember when it was impossible for a girl to smoke a cigarette in the streets. If you did, you were lowered in Jewish social standing."

"The Jewish women here walk five blocks to save a penny on a container of milk. They want their children to be big and strong — and if you look around you can see these tiny parents with children that are tall and healthy."

Stress Education

"The parents here stress education — and with education their children moved away from the lower East Side, and their parents lost them."

Those who remained on the lower East Side, she told the Times, were older people who did not want to move. They could be seen sitting on the steps — worn, wrinkled, some women carrying canes. Many synagogues have been torn down for modern buildings, such as the sixteen-story Seward Park Amalgamated Housing development that is going up across the street from Schickler's restaurant.

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

BROADWAY GAZETTE:

MOVIES: Kirk Douglas sat in the Little Club and spoke of "Spartacus," his newest film. "It cost about nine or ten million," he said airily. "In this business you must pretend it's make-believe money; otherwise you can't operate."

He never dreamed the day would come — when he jerked sodas at Schrafft's — that he'd be so casual about a million dollars. And now he's off to Europe again, to shoot the battle scene with 10,000 troops. "That's a general's job, taking care of 10,000 troops," he realized. "Feed 'em, house 'em, direct 'em — and I pay 'em myself." Douglas, however, will face quite a problem with the troops. Marshal Tito was willing to supply 10,000 of his Yugoslav troops for the scene, if Douglas would film it in Yugoslavia.

But 20th Century-Fox has first call on the Yugoslav troops. Then Warner Bros. contracted to

ONLY IN AMERICA

Sex In Our Literature

BY HARRY GOLDEN

Our literature is getting top-heavy. For many years it has been a rootless literature and this was always evident in the emphasis both writers and readers invested in sex. Heroes and heroines and sundry characters always entered into some sort of sexually promiscuous negotiation. Now there is nothing wrong with sex in a novel or a biography especially if it advances the story line and becomes integral. Rarely, however, is this the case. Dostoevsky created Sophie Roskolnikov, but no American writer was able to exploit such a relationship.

Authors did not incorporate these sexual gestures merely to make money. Indeed not. Pornography never made anyone a dime, unless it was a collector of rare books. What really happened was this sexual impulse took over the author and made him powerless against its compulsive inclusion. For sexual promiscuity is the great sign of rootlessness and authors are no less rootless than the people they write for. The exhibition of sexual dissatisfaction, the incompleteness of fidelity, the hunger for variety all come from a deep-seated sense of having no roots and knowing an unstable environment. Sexual promiscuity is the first sign of impermanence.

Where you found chastity revered as it was revered in the Middle Ages and in the ante bellum South, there you found a rooted and permanent culture, one that offers every man his place.

Authors, however, are trying to counteract this feeling of being lost, of intense mobility. And they do this by writing about Jews, suburbia, the Civil War and historical incidents of no real importance. Thus our literature becomes top-heavy with stories about weary ad men trekking back to Fairfield County on Friday night, their life empty but for the late evening martini and Saturday's infidelity; and we have novels about young Jewish girls who want to go on the stage; and still other stories about buxom wenches who sail with a pirate king off Cape Hatteras in 1610.

Even in the occasional novel we get about the business world no one seems to notice that the protagonists are making a product no one needs.

It seems to me that excluding modern literary criticism and the essay, our literature drifts further and further away from reality in that it cannot concentrate upon what is important. It cannot concentrate upon the why priest said: "This is the wildest Mass I ever saw."

CONTEST NOTE: Barney Balaban ordered a prize contest in Tokyo for the best Japanese titles for four Paramount pictures soon to be released there: Danny Kaye's "Five Pennies," Clark Gable's "But Not For Me," Sophia Loren's "That Kind of Woman" and Marlon Brando's "One-Eyed Jacks" . . . Balaban insisted: "One rule of the contest is that the word 'Celestial' is out."

SOCIAL NOTE: Spyros Skouras gave a dinner party at the Colony Restaurant for the visiting group of Soviet theater people. He also invited two capitalists—Paul Mazur and Robert LeMan, the bankers — and three Hollywood actresses, Jennifer Jones, Marion Javits and Joan Crawford. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge addressed them, and spoke of his own trip to Russia.

When he returned he'd been asked whether Russians were starving. Not true, he said. And in Moscow he'd been asked whether Americans were starving. That was Lodge's cue to start serving the rare Colony food.

BOOK DEPT.: Dr. Bernard Blau, a Ph. D. in linguistics from NYU, spent five years in Puerto Rico. He owned a polo shirt factory employing 375 natives. At night he taught English at Catholic University in Ponce. From this experience, and to help solve the language barrier in N.Y., Dr. Blau wrote a textbook and the script for a set of records, "English For All," published by R. D. Cortina Co. He narrowed the vocabulary to 1,000 of the most frequently used words.

DRAMA NOTE: Anna Magnani visited The Living Room, where she was introduced to Kaye Ballard, who became ecstatic: "You're wonderful, Miss Magnani. You're superb. You're absolutely magnificent. You're . . ." "All-a right all-a right," Miss Magnani replied. "I like-and the how of our mobile culture but only upon a small emotional response. Nor would you, reading our books, ever think anyone in America was poor.

The one invigorating movement comes to us now in the works of many Southern writers whose imagination and moral sense has been stirred by the struggle integration has engendered in the South. We have Harry Ashmore and Hodding Carter and James McBride Dabbs and Robert Penn Warren and Brooks Hays and Martin Luther King, Jr. These men are not coevals but they are all Southerners and they all display a wide community of interest and concern in this struggle which, in truth, is the great moral crucible of our time.

I doubt that any of these writers, and the score or more who will pave the way for new literary techniques, will rarify the English language. But they will show how to deal with a moral and historical problem which has beset man in all civilizations: how to achieve justice? We will point to this growing body of literature, I hope, as we point now to the works of Hemingway, Faulkner, Wolfe, and Dos Passos, as a literary movement which helped advance the cause of American letters.

you too." . . . Vina Delmar's new play, "The Confederates," will be produced and directed at the off-Broadway Theater Marquee by her son, Gray Delmar, a TV director.

SPORTS DEPT.: Arnold Palmer, the golfer, dined at La Zambra where he talked of Art Wall Jr., the Masters champion. Wall doesn't drink liquor, coffee or tea, and Palmer said: "When you hear about Art being at the 19th hole, you can bet he's either playing off a tie or drilling for oil."

SCHOOL DEPT.: Theresa Helburn, the Theater Guild co-founder who died recently, always told drama schools that their most talented pupils would be among those who needed scholarships. When the Guild started its drama school, she said, Otto Kahn established a scholarship fund. The first beneficiaries were Linda Watkins and Sylvia Sidney, who soon became stars.

TV NOTE: Philco, as sponsors of the telecast of the Miss America pageant, received a letter from the director, emphasizing that these pageants always are conducted with taste and dignity—and that each contestant is accompanied by a chaperone. Philco delivered this letter to CBS-TV, which replied to the director that there was nothing to fear because the TV cameramen they'd chosen to work on the pageant were all married men.

TITLE NOTE: Joe Levine, producer of "Hercules," is the new movie Barnum. Recently he outbid the other studios for Julie Dassin's film, "The Law," starring Gina Lollobrigida. Although the film was made from a Book-of-the-Month-Club novel and won 12 awards, he changed the title to "Where the Hot Wind Blows." His Australian film, "Walk Into Paradise," died. He changed the title to "Walk Into Hell," and it's still thriving.

Spain Shows Interest In Israeli Affairs

MADRID — In spite of the absence of diplomatic relations, Spain shows a keen interest in everything connected with Israel. The large proportion of Sephardim in Israel, whom the Spaniards consider as partially their kin, and the Sinai campaign kept Israel in the fore of the Spanish public's attention.

In both countries, citrus is the main export product, and both are endangered by the Common Market. Both experiment with large-scale irrigation projects. Both have no energy resources—Spain hopes to find coal deposits as Israel hopes for oil—and both try to develop atomic energy furnished by the United States.

Spain would like to collaborate with Israel in certain economic ventures, but unofficially and strictly on the basis of limited programs.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

NEW CYCLE OF DOLLAR STABILITY

Our country now has the best chance in 20 years to kick inflation in its evil, fat face and give it a licking from which it won't revive for an indefinite period.

This is a prospect of profound bread-and-butter importance to every American family weary of the ever-climbing price level and praying for at least a leveling-off in the cost of living. This is news of basic significance to nations around the world which have been openly questioning our ability or willingness to get inflation under control and keep the dollar strong.

Gradually but clearly, the forces making it possible to submit this reassuring report have been building up. When they are pulled together and put into a single list, they create an impressive pattern for emerging price stability. Specifically . . .

The Federal budget is in balance.

The exact figures don't matter. What does matter is that in the next 12 months, the government's outgo will be approximating its income in contrast to the record peacetime deficit of $12.5 billion in the 12 months just ended. For what this means is that the government will not be pouring extra billions into the business stream, thereby adding to price pressures. The budget will be a "neutral" force in the inflation pattern.

Money is tight and expensive.

The Federal Reserve System has been deliberately clamping down on the availability of credit and helping to push up the cost of borrowing. It's still pursuing this policy. What this means is that not all who want to borrow to finance countless varieties of business and personal projects will be able to get the cash or be able to pay the asking price. This curb on credit will tend to restrain a bubble on the boom.

Competition among American businessmen for our dollar is intense.

When a manufacturer knows there are plenty of other manufacturers wooing his customers, he naturally thinks hard about price hikes which might send his customer to his competitors.

Competition from foreign producers of goods is soaring.

To many businessmen, the rising flood of quality imports of goods from Europe and Japan is a deeply disturbing threat, even a menace.

THE SEA CREST BRINGS OUT THE FRIENDLY NEIGHBOR IN YOU

People confuse us. A man will live three houses from his neighbor (or in an apartment on the same floor)... their total contribution to neighborliness will be a grunted greeting and an observation on the weather. Let these same two check into the Sea Crest... they'll Talk a storm. We Saw This Happen...

Two gentlemen were treading water a few yards from shore while their families relaxed in beach chairs. We overheard... "you know, I've been everywhere but never swam in water like this... it's tepid yet it tingles... it's warm yet it exhilarates... On coming out of the water one turned to us to say... "you know that fellow lives down the street from me... we said more to one another in the few minutes we were in the water than we've done in the ten years we've been neighbors"...

Come to the Cape • The Sea Crest will bring out "the friend of your neighbor" in you. You'll want to Stay and Stay-by-the-Sea on-the-Sand Under-the-Stars of Old Silver Beach on Captivating Cape Cod.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

To the American consumer, though, the flood of imports is a mighty force for stable prices, and a way to control the cost of living.

Demand for U. S. goods abroad is slackening.

In the years when U.S. makers of goods could sell all they could produce at home and abroad, they didn't hesitate to charge higher and higher prices. But as West Europe has built its modern postwar plants, it has become increasingly capable of supplying itself with the goods it needs and increasingly independent of us. The slackening demand for our goods in foreign lands is a sobering influence on prices.

Our country has a greater capacity to produce than ever before.

During the '40s and the first half of the '50s, we just didn't have enough capacity to turn out all the goods needed and prices rose steadily on what could be produced. But now our country is dotted with a record number of new plants and the factories are much more efficient too. This is a mighty force for stabilization in prices.

The whole world has become inflation-conscious and there is a rising determination to control it.

This was not the psychology or attitude in the first postwar years. But the world has become progressively disenchanted with waves of inflation. For some time now, the economic battle-cry in West Europe has been "Hold the line!" and resentment in our country also has been spreading. Against this background, another dangerously inflationary wage spiral doesn't appear at all likely.

The odds for victory over the price spiral are brighter than in a long time. The United States dollar well may be on the threshold of a new cycle of stability.
