Lawyer Criticizes Move To Suburbs

MIAMI BEACH — A Jewish leader has sharply criticized his coreligionists who move to the suburbs to avoid the problems created by the influx of Negroes and Puerto Ricans.

Marvin Braiterman, a Baltimore lawyer, spoke at the 45th biennial General Assembly of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations at the Fontainebleau Hotel.

He criticized those "Jews running from the cities to the suburbs and carrying their temples with them because of a purported invasion of white neighborhoods by non-whites."

'A Moral Disaster'

This, he said, "complicates a social defeat into a moral disaster."

Braiterman, a member of the union's National Commission on Social Action for Reform Judaism, continued:

"The city needs the active participation of a purposeful and conscientious dedication to the social creed of Judaism among more of its residents."

Instead, he said, some Jews are evading "problems of juvenile delinquency, urban and human maladjustments arising out of fiscal and communal instability of American cities."

Television Rapped

Rabbi Edgar E. Siskin, spiritual leader of the North Shore Congregation of Israel, Glen Cove, Ill., told the meeting that television, "a medium which might promote the enlightenment and increase the edification of our people, is becoming a thoroughly degrading and corrupting influence."

TV programs "of violence, murder and sex brutalize our children and de-humanize our youth," Rabbi Siskin said, and have contributed to "the moral decline in vast social and political issues."

Organization Shelves Proposed Affiliation With World Zionists

KIAMESHA LAKE, N. Y. — Efforts to bring the United Synagogue of America into the World Zionist Organization appeared to have failed.

At its meeting here last week the organization of Conservative Canadian and American congregations shelved the proposed affiliation with the WZO.

The organization referred the issue back to its executive body with the advisory that it cannot join any group "which relegates the synagogue to a secondary role, or even a role among equals."

Dr. Nahum Goldman of the WZO declared that his organization was a political movement when it fought for the establishment of Israel but that it had other tasks then. They are the same ones it has now—education and youth programs—he said.

Dr. Simon Greenberg, vice chancellor of the Jewish Theological Seminary and a leading figure in the Conservative movement, took issue with him.

He said that Israel was "indispensable for the flourishing of Jewish life everywhere" but added, "the United Synagogue cannot join any other organization which relegates the synagogue to a secondary role."

Expresses Deep Concern For Survival Of Soviet Jewish Life

NEW YORK—Deep concern for the survival of Jewish life in the Soviet Union was expressed here by Label A. Katz, national president of B'nai B'rith, addressing the opening session of the four-day annual meeting of the organization at the Waldorf Astoria hotel. He urged a policy of "pressing vigorously" for action by Soviet authorities to remove the existing restrictions against Jewish religious and cultural activities.

Matter of Urgency

"It is a matter of urgency and responsibility for American Jews to exert positive efforts in behalf of the Soviet Jewish community," Katz said. In doing so, he added, "we make no plea to Mr. Khrushchev and the Soviet Union's ruling authorities for any special privileges for Russian Jews. What is claimed, is that Jews be granted equality in enjoying those rights and that status accorded to other nationality and religious groups within the established system of the Soviet Union."

Katz praised President Eisenhower's intervention in the matter in his Camp David discussion with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev in late September. He said there are "no immediate means" for evaluating the effect of the President's action. "But if the Soviet Premier's pronouncements for a peaceful co-existence were genuine — and some competent observers have cautiously accepted this premise — the possibility exists that the President's words left an impact on Mr. Khrushchev that can reflect favorably on the cultural survival of the Soviet Jewish community," Katz declared.

Denies Different Treatment

The White House several weeks ago advised B'nai B'rith that the President had questioned Mr. Khrushchev on the status of Russian Jews and that the Soviet Premier had denied they were treated differently from other nationality groups in the Soviet Union.

Katz told the delegates that "the cultural crippling of Jewish life in the Soviet Union cannot be disposed of by merely saying it does not exist." He said there is "adequate objective evidence" that Russian Jews are denied the rights of other nationality groups and "as long as that situation endures, it demands our active concern." Asserting that the policy of discrimination is "government imposed," the B'nai B'rith president said its effect "is to asphyxiate every possibility for Jewish cultural and religious life in the USSR."

Unshakable Fact

Israel Ambassador Avraham Harman told the delegates that Israel's national elections of last week reflected the "complete self-confidence of Israelis that their capacity to exist is an unshakable fact, militarily and economically." This confidence, he said, was evident in the fact that foreign policy issues played "practically no part" in the campaign or election results. Israel voters made their choice on domestic issues, including that of electoral reform, Harman said.

Another 'Positive Aspect'

Another "positive aspect" of the elections, the Ambassador said, was that none of the lists which made their political appeals directly to the ethnic backgrounds of Israel's immigrants got into the Parliament. This, he declared, was demonstrable proof that Israel's "mixed multitudes are successfully undergoing a tremendous transformation from rootless people to rooted citizens."

Relations Still Negative

While he characterized Israel's relations with the Arab states as still "negative on their (Arab) part," he predicted that "the day of positive relations is just a question of time—if we use time advantageously to strengthen the roots of Israel." This was being accomplished through increased economic development and foreign exports, Mr. Harman said, pointing out that in the first nine months of this year Israel's exports have increased 17 percent accompanied by a decrease in imports.

Raise $3,860,000 For Development Of Reform Judaism

MIAMI BEACH—Contributions totaling $3,860,000 were announced last week as a start toward a three-year campaign to raise $15,000,000 for the development of Reform Judaism in the Americas.

The funds will be used to develop Reform Judaism's two main institutions — the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, representing 585 congregations with 1,000,000 adherents, and the Hebrew Union College, which trains students for the Reform rabbinate.

Announcement of the contributions was made at the close of the 45th General Assembly of the Union of Hebrew Congregations here at the Fontainebleau Hotel. Some 3,000 delegates from many countries of the free world attended.

A Brooklyn man, former Supreme Court Justice Emil N. Baar, was elected chairman of the union's board of trustees. Another New Yorker, Jack A. Goldfarb was named a new vice chairman of the board.

Resolutions were adopted recommending the cooperation of religious groups in "rallying the massive spiritual resources of mankind in pursuit of enduring peace based upon justice for all."

French Ambassador Ends Seven Year Tenure In Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel—The Israelis took leave last week of a Frenchman who made them regard his country as their best friend in the world.

Ambassador Pierre Gilbert ended an extraordinary seven-year tenure and flew to Paris amid manifestations of affection and gratitude that diplomats said they had not seen equaled anywhere.

During the last few weeks newspaper editorials and farewell speeches lauded the diplomat, who is called "Mystere" Gilbert after the jet fighters he was instrumental in getting for the Israeli Air Force. A forest and streets have been named for him.

Today the Israeli Army is equipped mainly with French weapons, the status of French in the Israeli education system has been raised toward that of English, many Israeli officials have learned French, a Parisian company has built a subway in Haifa and trade between the two countries has expanded.

TAKES OFFICE

PHILADELPHIA — Edwin Wolf, 2nd, librarian of the Library Company of Philadelphia, historian and author, took office last week as president of the Philadelphia Federation of Jewish Agencies at the federation's diamond jubilee annual meeting and dinner.

Rumanian Government Imprisons Zionist Leaders

LONDON — The Rumanian government startled by the number of Jews who registered for emigration last year, has launched a campaign to terrorize all Rumanian Jews who have shown a desire to go to Israel, the Times of London reported last week.

Noting that 10,000 Jews left Rumania in 1950 and 1951, the Times said at the same time, Rumanian authorities were arresting and sentencing Zionist leaders to varying terms in prison, with some 200 persons involved. The Times reported that "some of these people are now being re-arrested and tried for the offenses for which they have already served sentences."

Partly because of the unexpectedly large number of Jews registered when "the Rumanian government suddenly and without explanation reopened its doors to allow the departure of Jews to Israel," and partly because of the strength of Arab opposition, the government stopped the emigration "but the Jews have remained restless." In response, the government opened its campaign of arrests and trials on charges of espionage and treason, the Times reported, in a bid "to frighten the Jews into breaking their emotional ties with Israel."

The Times listed a number of individuals who have been victims of the new campaign:

1. Israel Haft, who was employed by the Israel legation as janitor and whose father and sister went to Israel ten years ago, was arrested on charges of espionage.

2. Kalman Bernstein, 60, and his two sons, both engineers, were charged with espionage. The evidence was the contents of letters sent to the Bernsteins by members of their families in Israel. The letters contained descriptions of religious ceremonies with pictures.

3. Efraim Zinger, who had previously been tried and sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment, was charged with betraying Rumania and the newspaper for which he worked in Kluj when he sent copies of songs he had written to a brother in Israel. Zinger had an extra day added to his sentence because he was seen signaling to his wife to remove her wedding ring, apparently so that she could disassociate herself from him.

4. A large group of Zionist leaders in Transylvania were arrested and were believed still waiting trial. They included Dr. Ernest Horvath, 70, who served one sentence after being arrested in 1950. Bad health kept him in the prison hospital for most of his term and the new arrest may threaten his life, the Times reported. Re-arrested also was Dr. Leo Fried, who had been general secretary of the Zionist Organization in Transylvania, who served one sentence and emerged from prison suffering from tuberculosis.

Among the Jews arrested in Bucharest, the Times listed Chaim Wurzel whose family was murdered by the Nazis, except for a sister who went to Israel 12 years ago; David Faibash, a Hebrew writer; Schmidt, Schitinovizer, Tobakaru, and Horowitz, all Zionist leaders; four employes of the legation, including Israel Hart, and three girls.

Israel To Admit Bedouins From Jordan

JERUSALEM — Israel last week notified the Israel-Jordan Mixed Armistice Commission that it is prepared to admit about 200 Bedouins from Jordan as "a gesture of good will," although it has not been proved that these Bedouin Arabs lived in Israel prior to the claim made by the Jordanian Government.

However, Israel made it clear that the Bedouins from Jordan will be admitted only if Jordan drops its charge that Israel had forced these people across the border. Israel rejects the Jordanian claim that these Bedouins had been either forced to evacuate Israel or had been "encouraged" to do so.

Arabs Threaten War In Response To Israel's Offer To Discuss Peace

UNITED NATIONS — The UN last week was again a forum for an offer by Israel to discuss peace terms with the Arab states without conditions, and another belligerent Arab response of threats of renewed warfare against Israel.

Shukaiky said economic sanctions should be invoked.

Then, he added, Article VI of the United Nations Charter calling for the expulsion of a member of the UN should be invoked against Israel as a "consistent violator of UN resolutions."

Comay declared, "We assume that the overwhelming majority of the governments represented at this table are sick and tired of the Israel-Arab conflict and would be only too happy if those directly concerned would settle it. We would repeat most solemnly that Israel seeks nothing from its neighbors but the chance to live in peace with them and, together with them, to strive for the common good of our troubled region."

The occasion was a debate on the Arab refugee problem before the United Nation's General Assembly Special Political Committee. The principal problem is the question of the mandate of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency, which is caring for the Arab refugees, and which is due to expire next June.

Comay replied the next day and Shukaiky took an hour to reply to the Israel response. Comay interrupted the Arab speaker to defend the memory of the late Dr. Chaim Weizmann, Israel's first President.

"To promote this not-unworthy end, we repeat that we would be willing to meet with Arab representatives at any time and place, publicly or privately, and without any prior conditions whatsoever."

Before the Special Committee is the report of Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold recommending integration of the refugees in the host countries with the assistance of a substantial development fund to be provided under UN auspices.

Comay pointed out that Shukaiky was "obsessed with the proposition that Israel should be destroyed." He stressed that when Shukaiky called for implementation of old resolutions dealing with repatriation of Arab refugees, the Arab spokesmen wanted those resolutions "implemented against Israel."

"We cannot but ask ourselves whether the present atmosphere in the world, the present restrained hopefulness which prevails at the United Nations, may not perhaps hold out the prospect of some thaw in Israel-Arab relations as well."

The Arab spokesman, Ahmad Shukaiky, the Saudi Arabian Minister of State for the UN, seized the occasion for another violent verbal attack on Israel. Michael Comay, deputy chairman of Israel's delegation, replied and then added that Israel would deal with the issue of the Arab refugees and what Israel could contribute to solution later in the debate.

He showed that Shukaiky had deliberately distorted old resolutions, quoted them out of context and cited only such parts of the resolutions as suited his purpose.

All organizational news MUST be in the Herald offices before noon of Monday each week. It will NOT appear in that week's paper if it is received later.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The friends and family of the late David I. Kaplan have made arrangements with Brown University for the establishment of a fitting memorial to him in the Brown Library. Anyone wishing to contribute funds for this purpose may do so by making a check payable to "Brown University — David I. Kaplan Memorial" and sending it to Brown University, Providence 12, Rhode Island. Arrangements have been made with the University for such funds to be kept in a separate account and used for the purpose stated above.

'Ready for War'

Shukaiky opened the Arab salvo by blaming Israel for the failure of the UN to solve the problem and warned that unless Israel is forced at the current UN session to accept complete repatriation of the refugees, 80,000,000 Arabs "from Casablanca to the Persian Gulf" were ready and eager to go to war against Israel.

He also categorically dismissed the Hammarskjold plan with the statement that the subject of the economic integration of the refugees was "irrelevant and inadmissible." He laid down a five-point plan which he said must be implemented this year. The points were:

1. Implementation of a 1950 resolution which, in Shukaiky's view, calls for the collection of the revenues allegedly derived by Israel for Arab-owned properties and the use of these revenues for the welfare of the refugees.

Would Breach Line

2. Allowing the inhabitants of the "front village" on the Israel-Jordanian border to cultivate lands on the Israel side of the Armistice demarcation line.

3. Allowing not only the refugees in the Gaza area, but also the local inhabitants of the Gaza Strip "to farm their lands on the other side of the Armistice line."

4. "Reinstating of the Bedouins in the Sinai area to Israel whence they had been allegedly "expelled by Israel."

5. Reactivating the Palestine Conciliation Commission and enlarging it "on a geographical basis." The PCC now has three members — the United States, France and Turkey. By calling for enlarging the PCC on a "geographical basis," Shukaiky was seen here as calling for the addition to the PCC of a representative of the Soviet Union or of another communist country.

'Only the Beginning'

These steps, he said, would constitute only the "beginning of a peaceful solution." Should Israel still refuse to accept these "solu-

New Disease Hits Israeli Livestock

TEL AVIV, Israel — A new type of foot-and-mouth disease has hit Israeli livestock.

An attempt to stamp out the infection by slaughtering 500 infected cattle has failed. The veterinary authorities ordered the quarantine of 10,000 head in twenty localities.

Dr. Shimo Freund, director of veterinary services and animal husbandry in the Ministry of Agriculture, identified the virus as the "Asia I" type that, he said, had been unknown until it appeared suddenly in the Far East and Central Asia two years ago. There is no effective vaccine.

The infection was carried into Israel by Lebanese cattle that strayed over the northern border, according to the official.

Before the infection was discovered Oct. 12, some calves had been sent to the slaughter house in Tel Aviv. A number of these were later moved to a near-by village so that the Sabbath rest of residents near the abattoir would not be disturbed.

To Speak At Institute — Dr. Morris N. Kertzner, national director of Inter-religious Affairs of the American Jewish Committee, will be the speaker at the Institute of Jewish Studies for Adults of Temple Emanuel on Wednesday at 9 P.M. His talk will be on "Lessons from Oriental Jewry — An Eye Witness Report of the Jews in Asia."

CONDEMNS BLOCKADE
WASHINGTON — A leading Protestant weekly, "The Christian Century," condemns in its current issue the United Arab Republic's anti-Israel blockade of the Suez Canal and calls on the United Nations to take "firm and immediate steps" to uphold Israel's right to free passage through the Canal.

PROCLAMATION

BY CHRISTOPHER DEL SESTO

GOVERNOR

While the golden glory of the fall still trails its lingering days before our hearts, let us give thought to thankfulness. Our fathers in their days enjoyed this same lush beauty of the earth and for their meager store, hard gathered, did set apart a day for general thanksgiving. We, more amply blessed than they, propose to follow this good and aged custom.

We, too, have gleaned a golden harvest from the fruitful earth, our flocks have multiplied upon a thousand hills, and from the wide and smiling furrows of the sea our nets have gathered in a silvery store. Now, when the frigid breath of winter suspends the pulse of life and living things endure a semblance of death, when fields seem iron to the probing plough, when cattle cower bleak upon the rock bound hills, and angry seas resist our seeking nets we shall not faint nor hunger. In granary and in storehouse there lies enough for all. We are so richly blessed that from our ample store we can supply the hungry even in the farthest corners of the earth.

The bounty of nature has been matched by the skill and wisdom of our people. Our cities, as well as our fields and forests and seas, have yielded their fruits no less important to the common good. In factory and mine, in shop and office, men have transformed the fruits of earth to meet the tastes of men. Out of our cities have come clothes to wear, jewels to adorn, food to eat, and machines to use. Even life itself is made strong and enduring by the patient research of men.

We have not been blessed in this land by bread alone, but by those priceless gifts through the soul of man aspires to God. Each man is free to find his own vocation; each free to speak the truth as best he sees it; each free to obey the noblest promptings of his soul. Our laws protect the poor man as impartially as it does the wealthy. These, too, are blessings rich beyond compare; AND NOW, THEREFORE, DO I, CHRISTOPHER DEL SESTO, GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF RHODE ISLAND AND PROVIDENCE PLANTATIONS, PROCLAIM

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1959, AS

THANKSGIVING DAY

And let each pause in his labours on this day and at his altar and his hearth give thanks to God for these our blessings. Let each recall how he has been enriched by the wisdom or labour of his fellow men. Let all of us prove worthy of continued blessing by gratitude for blessings now bestowed. Serene old age and vibrant youthfulness can join together in our Thanksgiving.

By the Governor

August P. LaFrance
Secretary of State

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the State to be affixed this 16th day of November, in the year of Our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and fifty-nine and of Independence, the one hundred and eighty-fourth.

CHARGES INTERFERENCE
DUSSELDORF — A recent study by the American Jewish Congress of anti-Semitism in West Germany uncovered no new facts and did not contain anything of significance it was charged last week by Dr. Henrik George Van Dam, secretary general of the Council of Jews in Germany, who simultaneously asserted that his organization rather than "publicity-minded individual Americans or American organizations" was "the spokesman and trustee of Jewish interests" in West Germany.

Dr. Van Dam said the American Jewish Congress was interfering in affairs outside of its domain and concern and that the effect of such interference was to render solution of problems affecting Jews in Germany more difficult.

FACILITIES OVERTAXED
 NEW YORK — Dr. Emanuel Neumann, head of the Theodor Herzl Institute, disclosed this week that "a great upsurge of interest in the Hebrew programs conducted at the institute is over taxing its facilities."

United States May Reiterate Stand

NEW YORK—The United States may reiterate its position that it "does not condone the involuntary identification of its citizens with a foreign state."

This assurance was given by the State Department in response to a protest by the American Council for Judaism about official American silence regarding certain Israeli statements in the United Nations.

According to the council, such statements have incorrectly implied that all Jews, including American Jews, are identified with Israel. The council takes the position that Judaism is a religion, not a nationality, and that Israel is not the "homeland" of all Jews.

Recent correspondence between the council and the State Department was made public last week by the council. Clarence L. Coleman

Jr., the council president, wrote to the department about the statements in the United Nations in debates between Israeli and Arab spokesmen.

He protested particularly the use of language that he said suggested that all Jews, regardless of citizenship, regarded Israel as their homeland.

Mr. Coleman urged the State Department to notify Israel that it could not recognize as applicable to American Jews any suggestion that they had any different relationship with Israel than other Americans.

He asked the department to make it clear any time such suggestions were made in the United Nations that this Government rejected any involuntary identification of its Jewish citizens with Israel.

According to Mr. Coleman many American Jews are "increasingly troubled and confused by their involvement and identification with Israel."

A reply from the State Department was signed by Parker T. Hart, Acting Assistant Secretary for Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs.

Israel Endorses Disarmament Plan

JERUSALEM — The Israeli Government last week made public a reply it had transmitted to Moscow endorsing the appeal of the Supreme Soviet to all parliaments to assist in general disarmament.

The Foreign Ministry announced that the Israel note had been delivered to the Soviet Foreign Ministry last week. It pointed out that disarmament "is very close to the heart of the people and Government of Israel" and confirmed that the Supreme Soviet's message would be presented to the newly-elected fourth Knesset.

The Israeli note drew attention to recent statements by Premier David Ben Gurion declaring that Israel desired Middle East disarmament, would be ready at any time for mutual inspection and would welcome Egyptians coming to Israel to see this disarmament carried out.

Charge Orthodoxy With Stranglehold On Israeli Religion

MIAMI BEACH—A charge that a "sterile Orthodoxy" has a "stranglehold" on religious life in Israel and has established a virtual ban on Liberal expressions of Judaism was issued last week by Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

Speaking at the biennial General Assembly of the UAHC, Rabbi Eisendrath advised Israeli Premier David Ben Gurion that without "the life-giving waters of our Reform faith," there was "more danger of Judaism perishing in his land than in ours."

Rabbi Eisendrath referred to the acceptance of American equipment and technicians and rejection of "rabbis made in Cincinnati and New York," as a "disdainful and false emphasis on the alleged exclusive materialism of America as well as a reflection of the equally mundane stress in Israel."

A call to his constituents to "state unequivocally" their "opposition to a resumption of nuclear testing" was also issued by Rabbi Eisendrath. "Surely our protest should split the sky against this ghastly business of the murder of innocents," Rabbi Eisendrath said.

UAHC leaders declared at the conference that the Reform movement in the Western Hemisphere will need $30,000,000 in the next 10 years because of a continued "marked accretion of worshippers" in synagogues. The session marked the opening of the 1959-60 Combined Campaign for American Reform Judaism.

A. B. Polinsky, general chairman of the campaign, predicted the Reform movement would double in the next 10 years and called for an intensified effort to attract "the unaffiliated 2,000,000 Jews into the synagogue."

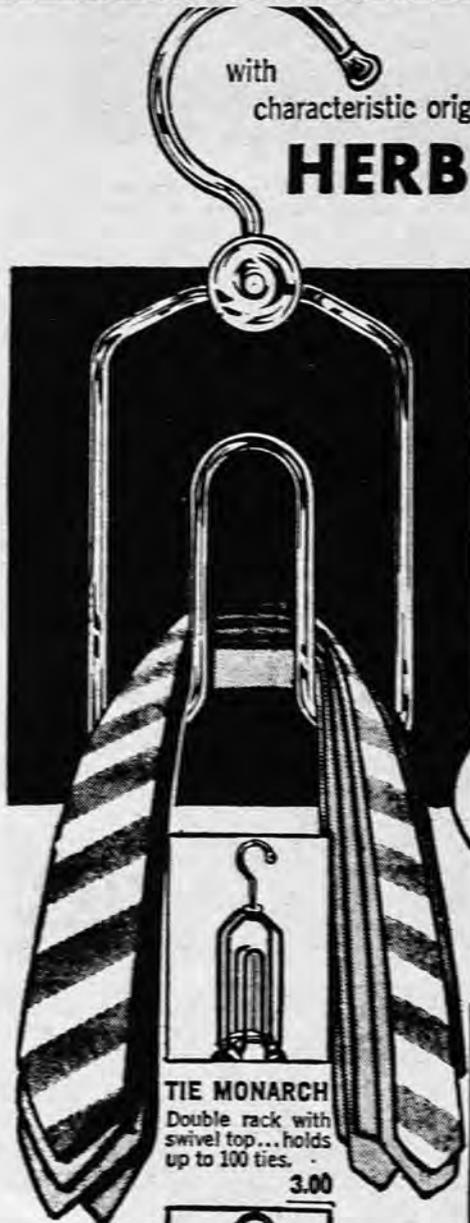

Premier Threatens To Use Iraqi Troops

LONDON — Premier Kassem of Iraq threatened to "liberate Palestine from the Jewish yoke" with Iraqi troops. He issued the threat in an interview with the Tunis daily, Al Thawra, warning that "our dear Palestine, beloved to all Arabs and Moslems, will be liberated only by the Iraqi Army and the Iraqi people."

He complained that Egypt and Jordan had taken no action against Israel "in spite of their 30,000,000 inhabitants." He said it would be the Iraqi people alone and unaided who would "chase out the criminal Jews now in power."

Simultaneously the Cairo radio announced the United Arab Republic plans a campaign to close the Gulf of Aqaba to Israeli commerce. The broadcast said the UAR delegate has been instructed to raise the issue in the United Nations legal committee.

TO ATTEND CONVENTION
NEW YORK CITY—Mrs. Morris Kay of 119 Elton Street will serve as delegate of the Providence Lodge, at the 109th Annual Convention of the United Order of True Sisters, scheduled to be held in the Statler-Hilton Hotel in New York City, beginning Sunday and continuing through Wednesday. "For 2c Plain"

By HARRY GOLDEN

The Superhighway

I know this is like throwing rocks at a church, but I do not share the wild, unrestrained, and ecstatic enthusiasm that people show for the construction of superhighways through the state. Nothing seems to bring such an outpouring of pride among people as road building.

The secondary road program which the late Kerr Scott inaugurated when he was governor of my state was a wonderful thing. It could have gone much further. I'd love to see a paved road leading from the highway right up to the kitchen door of every farmhouse in North Carolina. This is good for the state, for the people and for mankind.

But let us look at the superhighways a minute. The whole idea seems to be to by-pass the cities. During the last fifteen years, we have succeeded in by-passing most of the cities in the Piedmont, and the folks have a clear straightaway now, almost without a single obstacle.

So what? What conquest bring we home? What tributaries follow us to High Point, Greensboro, Salisbury and Charlotte? The answer is--none.

The state of North Carolina (and the rest of them, of course) keep adding new taxes to build these superhighways so that the guy from Brooklyn may get down to the dog races in Miami ten hours earlier.

Somewhere in Virginia, the guy turns to the blonds and says, "Honey, that Carolina (he doesn't even say "North") is sure a fine state. We can whiz right through--don't even have to stop once 'til we get to Georgia."

This is good? Why should we provide him with this service? Is it coming to him?

On the contrary, what I would do would be to make that racetrack fellow go through every city, village and hamlet of North Carolina. Let him get stuck in the traffic: "Honey, looks like we're stuck here for the night--let's find a place to eat." And the blonde says: "Don't forget, let's not have any more arguments; separate rooms," which makes it even better for our hotels and caravansaries.

We rush the guy through the state like he's going to a fire--and in exchange--he doesn't even buy a Coca-Cola in North Carolina.

• GETTING OLD

The teen-ager thinks her thirty-year-old sister is middle-aged. A young bride wonders if sex life continues at all after forty. The politician is stunned when the party leader tells him in caucus that he is too old to run again. Age is relative and imperceptible to the individual. And we want to believe we're only as old as we feel.

So women call themselves "girls" even though they are in their fifties and their husbands say they are going fishing with the "boys." But every once in a while, we are caught up and realize we aren't girls and boys. I know a lady who realized it one day when she walked past four boys in a snowball fight and heard one cry, "Watch out! Don't hit the old lady."

The imperceptible process of age has a point which, once passed, cannot be retraced. I knew I had passed that point and was getting old the day I noticed that all the cops looked so young.

• NO MORE FLIRTING

The flirt has disappeared from our culture. "Flirtation Walk" would be an anachronism today. The word "flirt" itself has become as obsolete as the word "woo." Who woos today? Today it is all a cut-and-dried proposition and significantly the famous hotels have cut down on their "promenades" and "alleys" and have now left only their registration desks. Good evening and--sign in.

The new generation does not know what it has lost--those days of the thrilling "preliminaries."

ONE MAN'S OPINION

The End of the General Jewish Committee 1923

BY BERYL SEGAL

Providence of 1923.

We have a population survey at about the same time in Providence, conducted by the Jewish Welfare Board. According to this survey, we had a population of 237,595, of which the Jewish section consisted of about 16,500.

There were only two temples in Providence. Beth El was the oldest. It had a membership of about 250. Beth Israel was the youngest with a membership of about 175.

All the other Synagogues were orthodox.

Just think of it. Four Synagogues in the North End. Four Synagogues on the South Side. One on the East Side. All Orthodox. years later. Nobody ever heard of Cranston Jewish Center, of Beth Am, and of Temple Sinai. Temple Beth Shalom was not even thought of.

But Providence had seventy-two organizations.

All these organizations formed a General Jewish Committee. All with the exception of the Reform. They were opposed to any separatism. You are an American in everything, except your religion. If you are sick you go to a General Hospital. If you are in trouble you go to a Social Service agency. If you are an outsider you go to such agencies as take care of newcomers. We pay taxes and we contribute to the upkeep of these agencies, just as do other Americans.

Such, in general, were the arguments of the Reform groups in many cities. Such were the reasons for the Reform in Providence to stay out of such an organization as the General Jewish Committee. The arguments may have been correct. No one is to judge them by the light of things as they are today.

Today we have in the General Jewish Committee at least a half of the Board of Directors who are also members of the Reform group. Are they right? Were their predecessors right?

The General Jewish Committee at that time had a problem on their hands. What to do with the out-of-town institutions soliciting funds here? There was the Jewish Association for the Blind in New York that was collecting money from the local merchants through the sale of pencils.

Their status was questioned.

There was the Yeshivan Rabbi Akibah Eiger from New York who solicited money locally. Something in their method of soliciting funds was in question. A letter was dispatched to the American Jewish Congress, and that organization told what it knew of the Yeshivah.

It was decided to form an Endorsements Committee of the General Jewish Committee. This committee was to scrutinize carefully the papers of the collectors, and pass on the merits of the agencies they represented. In the meantime letters were to be sent out to all local business men, and the more important ones were to be called on personally. All who wished to affiliate themselves with the committee were to pay a fee of $5.00. For this, they would receive an Endorsement Card, showing that they would not consider talking to anyone but an authorized solicitor. Thus was the work begun.

The aim was to issue three hundred cards to three hundred business places in the city.

"We hope that in the very near future the Jewish public of Providence will be saved the annoyance of unworthy solicitors and will have the absolute satisfaction of knowing that the contributions it has made are for worthy causes."

Thus the General Jewish Committee declared its aims in this matter.

In the meantime, authorized solicitors with proper credentials did not have trouble in receiving an endorsement card from the president. It was the one who did not have the proper credentials who was detained until he was able to furnish them or he was dismissed.

This was the last meeting recorded by Mr. John A. Solomon. What became of the General Jewish Committee is not known.

Mr. Alter Boyman who was an active member of the Board, hints at organizing a Federated Charities. They had one meeting, and were not able to get organized properly. Due to an important convention in Canada, they were unable to secure a capable speaker with the work of organizing associated charities. They laid over their plans until fall.

And so the work ended.

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

King George Rukidi, III, the Omukama of Toro, recently visited New York. He is the direct descendant of 30 generations of Kings of Uganda, the absolute ruler of 700,000 subjects. His grandfather was host to Dr. Livingstone, before Stanley found the explorer and invited the Christian missionaries to come to Toro. King George Rukidi is not here to seek any economic aid, he said, but just to see America, the UN, New York and the shows.

There are no theaters in Uganda, he sighed, except for amateur theatricals. The last play he saw was "Henry the VIII," at the school where one of his sons played a role. He has two sons, four daughters and one wife--and not, as the press had reported, 27 children. The 27, he laughed, included all his nephews and nieces. He would have been the first man from Uganda to visit America were it not for his cousin, who was exiled by the British for a while and came to America to study under Ralph Bunche.

Communists in Toro? "Oh, no," said King George. "Not that we would know, I suppose, openly. We are against Communism." He tours his kingdom regularly, listening to complaints from his subjects and then taking up these matters with the local mayors,

"We have no army," he said, "We don't fight." I showed him the newspaper I'd brought with the report of the rioting in Ruanda, in which the Bahutus attacked the aristocratic Watutis.

I left King George Rukidi, III in his suite, reading aloud the report of the clashes. "Oh, this is serious," he said, "Fighting is always serious."

The Mexico City neighbors of former Mayor and Ambassador William O'Dwyer believe that he will leave Mexico to settle in New York again within the next few weeks. Walter Slezak, who made his Met Opera debut Nov. 25, said: "Rudolph Bing signed me not only sight unseen, but also sound unheard"...Sam Levene, who must break down and cry at each performance in "Heartbreak House," revealed how he does it: "I'm a Yankee fan, and I just let myself think of what's happened to the team."

At the city's Waldorf luncheon in his honor, President Sekou Toure of Guinea said that he never had eaten an American hot dog. One of the guests, Nathan Handwerker, owner of Nathan's Famous in Coney Island, immediately had 30 lbs. of frankfurters delivered to the presidential suite. Toure took them back to Guinea with him--paying for 30 lbs, excess weight.

After Patty Duke's rave reviews as Helen Keller in "The Miracle Worker" she went, as usual, to her class at the Mace School--and found that her classmates had placed a big star on her desk...Tea at 4 p.m., now is served all matinee customers at "Drop of a Hat"...Jacques Tati is spending his time these days with soccer players in Paris, and sees so many comic possibilities there that his next film will show his Mr. Hulot as a soccer player.

The much-publicized "talk" between Rudolf Bing, general manager of the Met Opera, and Maria Callas, the singer he fired last year, came about through an accident. Bing's secretary was away from her desk when the call came. He noticed the light flashing and picked up the phone, rather than wait for his secretary to intercept the call. And he heard a lady's voice begin "Rudolf?"... "Who is this?" he asked... "Maria," she said, and was off on her spiel.

Yul Brynner's new movie, "Surprise Package," is being filmed in the isolated village of Lindos, on the Island of Rhodes. The producer-director, Stanley Donen, had been assured there'd be no interference from the villagers, who wouldn't know the film-folk. There are no papers, magazines or movie houses in Lindos. On the first day, the village turned out to watch the filming. When Brynner appeared, the populace chattered in Greek. Donen asked the interpreter what it meant, and he translated: "They're asking if Mr. Brynner would just take off his hat."

Answers, Please!

Even the staunchest supporters of the New York Giants were disturbed just about a year ago by the manner in which their favorites came from behind against the Detroit Lions and went on to win a game that they really had no business winning—yet a game that they absolutely needed to tie Cleveland's Browns for the Division title.

Talk of a fix rumbled through the world of professional football, and the game itself and the talk that it engendered created so much fuss that such a personality as Andy Robustelli, defensive captain of the Giants, felt constrained to bring up the matter in his talk before Words Unlimited last February.

That was the game, you remember, in which a Detroit back elected to run with the ball from punt formation rather deep in his own territory, on fourth down and 17 yards to go, and his team nursing a slim lead. This daring bit of idiocy, which backfired, just about handed the game to the Giants on a silver platter.

The game was not rigged, of course. No sports fan in his right mind ever believed that; but it did look suspicious. And when a seemingly certain and game-winning Detroit field goal attempt was blocked, the putrid odor seemed to come all the way from Denmark.

I keep thinking of that blocked field goal attempt whenever the Giants' Pat Summerall or an opposing kicker gets set to try a placement for three points. Why, oh why, do the kickers go through their act so close to the scrimmage line? Why do they so openly court the possibility of a blocked kick by booting from only six or seven yards behind the line of scrimmage?

In recent games, the Giants twice have blocked kicks of that sort, and why they are allowed to get away with it puzzles me. Known for their defensive might, and the red-dogging of their linebackers, you would think that the Giants would cause their rivals to exercise just a bit more caution in their procedure. Yet, every field goal attempt against this marvelous defensive unit is made from right behind the line.

Why? How come the coaches don't spot it? How come a placement kicker who can boot them for three points from a good 45 yards out, even against the wind, seems to feel the need to breathe down his center's neck on a short kick from the 10 or 15 yard line? Why doesn't he boot from 10 or 12 yards back, and allow himself time to get the ball up and away?

That's the theme of this column—questions that invite answers. There are fans who know more about pro football than I, who have close personal acquaintanceships with the players themselves, who may have asked such questions. If they can answer these queries logically and satisfactorily, let them come forth and get their names and views in this space. Frankly, I'm stumped.

Kicking also leads to my next question. Why is it that the Giants' rivals usually do so well on punt returns (two touchdown runbacks last Sunday, for instance), whereas the New Yorkers usually gain only a few yards, and sometimes even lose ground in the runback?

Part of the answer here may lie in the fact that Don Chandler kicks them deeper than anyone else in the league, and the opposing safety men have more time to make the catch and be off with it. But that's only part of the answer. It is often obvious that it is brilliant running and/or poor covering or just plain slowness of foot that springs those backs for such excellent yardage on the Giants' punts.

Johnny Lujack, behind the TV microphone, wonders out loud why Joe Morrison so often takes the ball deep in his end zone and tries to run it out, when he practically never gets anywhere near the 20-yard line, where the ball would be placed down automatically were he to take the touchback instead. Why do the coaches permit this practice to go on unchecked?

But I want to carry Lujack's question a step further. Why does the coaching staff permit its two safety men to run laterally and even backwards when they receive punts? Time after time we see them sacrifice the five yards, more or less, that they could gain in a forward plunge, in favor of sideways movement that invariably gets them thrown back of where they took the ball. Since it

INSTALL
OIL HEAT!
And Why YOU Should, Too!

The better builders, who represent the vast majority of Rhode Island contractors, put the best in homes they build to make the home sell faster, satisfy the buyer more. So it's natural that they'd install oil, the fuel that provides better, safer, more dependable heat for less money.

These are the same reasons why you should insist on oil heat. If the home you're building or buying has oil heat you know it's a quality built home.

If it doesn't have oil heat — change it — it's so easy and costs so little. Get a free estimate now.

Syd Cohen

It is obvious that these men are either not fast enough or clever enough to get away with this maneuver, it would seem the coaches would do something about it. Jim Lee Howell has openly said that his punt return men are not the best in the league, and that is an open-and-shut indication that he realizes what is going on. Yet he does nothing about it.

Here's another one. Why, oh why, do the Giants fail, year after year, to come up with a real good explosive runner—a fast, shifty and elusive ball carrier. Compared with most of the backfields with which they come in contact, the Giants seem to be dreadfully slow. Seldom do they break a man loose who can operate by himself in the open, with some fancy footwork here, a change of pace there, some broken field acrobatics everywhere.

And the famed defensive unit! In recent weeks they have allowed so many runners to break out of traps and slide away to long gains that they seem to be standing still. What is the answer?

Despite New York's impressive win last Sunday, this fan felt the same frustration with their operation that has been experienced week after week throughout this season and those of the recent past. The Giants always seem to be struggling with their offense. They seem almost always to rely on the same dreary routines. I couldn't help thinking Sunday that if Charley Conerly were operating in the same backfield with the speedy and shifty runners employed by the Cardinals, new scoring records might be established.

Next question: Why isn't Mel Triplett used more often by whichever quarterback is running the team? Mel is powerful, fast, and explosive. His slashes into the line usually result in substantial gains; yet he is used somewhat sparingly, and these lesser, and not meant-to-be line plungers, Gifford and Webster, are thrown more often into the hurly burly of unyielding mountains of flesh.

In the game that was lost to Pittsburgh a few weeks ago, Triplett repeatedly cracked the line for good gains on first down. It happened so often that Pittsburgh must have known what was coming; yet they could not contain the big fullback. And then rather inept Don Heinrich would dissipate his advantage by going to the outside where his runners failed to gain. The Giants' attack thus kept fizzling out after starting off with good promise. Not a touchdown was scored.

A good quarterback, as well as a sound military tactician, is supposed to probe for signs of weakness in his enemy, and to exploit those weaknesses when he finds them. If Triplett were so effective at plunges into the center of the line, why didn't Heinrich use the play more often? At the very least, he would have gained several more first downs—and only a few were needed to keep that fourth quarter lead.

More than likely, such strategy seemingly would have forced the Pitt defense to concentrate more on the middle, thus opening the way for an attack around the flanks and even in the air. The result might have been an easy New York triumph.

Such sound quarterbacking from the comfortable end of a TV set is easy and foolproof, I know. It seems incredible that if these ob-

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

When the torrential waves of selling that repeatedly rolled over the stock market in October of 1929 finally receded for a while and America's titans had a chance to survey the monstrous damage, Andrew W. Mellon, our world-famous Secretary of the Treasury throughout the decade of the '20s. came up with a "hope" for the nation.

"Liquidate labor," said he, "liquidate stocks, liquidate the farmers, liquidate real estate . . ."

From the vantage point of October of 1959, it's hard to imagine any Government official saying anything so withering, isn't it?

Yet, not only did Mellon suggest this as the "only" solution (and incidentally, he came pretty close to describing what actually happened in 1931-32). He also expressed what was the general viewpoint among all income classes in that era.

During those calamitous months of stock market collapse and ever-deepening depression, no one in authority rose to shout, "We can do something about this! We don't have to be 'liquidated' if, instead of acting as millions of frightened individuals, we act as a unit through our government to halt this creeping paralysis!"

But no one in power rose to shout this message because in 1929 we believed that the business of government was business, and the less government meddled with business, the less government would muddle business.

And so the adults of that era sat, numbly watched their jobs disappear, their homes being foreclosed, their savings become debts, their dreams turn into nightmares and mumbled, "We have to go through it . . ."

Can you see yourself accepting a similar calamity without protesting so vehemently that no one could dare ignore you?

Can you visualize organized labor in this country permitting joblessness to soar to tens of millions without demanding (and getting) actions to reverse the trend? Or America's vast numbers of homeowners allowing wholesale foreclosures without demanding (and getting) protection?

Of course, you can't--and herein, I submit, is the KEY DISTINCTION between 1929 and 1959 which transcends all others.

Foods To Remember

With apples plentiful at this time of the year, use them in every way possible, as for instance, in making muffins for luncheon, or to serve with fish or "milchig" meals. Here's our favorite recipe for

▲ APPLE MUFFINS

- 1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons vegetable shortening
- 1 cup uncooked rolled oats
- 1 cup grated raw apple (pared before grating on medium grater)
- 1 egg
- 1/4 cup milk
- 3 tablespoons dark brown sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon, optional

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and sugar into a mixing bowl. Cut in shortening with a wire blender or use two knives until mixture is reduced to coarse crumbs. Blend in the rolled oats and grated apple. Beat egg lightly and stir in milk, then combine with first mixture. Arrange fluted paper liners in muffin pans, small size preferred, then fill to 2/3 full with the above batter. Sprinkle with brown sugar, with or without cinnamon, and bake 15 minutes at 425 deg. F. or until browned on top.

Yields 18 small muffins.

With cold weather just around the corner, if not already arrived, it's a good idea to have plenty of soup on hand in the refrigerator.

The boiled poultry sections lifted from the soup can be converted into the following tasty and different main dish. Here's how:

▲ CHICKEN SECTIONS WITH OLIVES

Boiled chicken sections of 1 large fowl

- 1 cup tomato juice (canned)
- 1 large onion, diced fine

Rhode Island Leads In Oil Heated Homes

With 117,444 oil homes Rhode Island is among the leading oil-heat states, according to the National Fueloil Council. Rhode Island homes kept warm with 6,309,000 barrels of heating oil in 1958, or 41 per cent more than the total of 4,469,000 barrels consumed in 1957.

Rhode Island, together with the other five New England states, added 51,709 oil heated homes over the previous heating season for a regional total of 1,562,171. These states now consume about 77,000,000 barrels (42 gallons in each) of home heating oil annually.

Oil heating is moving ahead in virtually all its states right now. More oil burners are going into homes — at a rate that is 14 per cent above this period last year. Over 400,000 additional homes will be heated by oil by the end of this year, the Council estimates. On the other hand, oil-heated homes need less fuel to keep warm nowadays. Today's average consumption is 1458 gallons yearly, whereas ten years ago 26 per cent more, or 1832 gallons were burned. These savings for oil homes result chiefly from improvements in refining of oil and new development of highly efficient heating equipment.

with the olives. Serve piping hot from casserole, garnishing with parsley. Excellent with boiled rice, cooked thin spaghetti or mashed potatoes.

Serves 6 to 8.

The difference lies in "you" and in "me" and in our attitudes. The 1929 stock market collapse had its foundation in economic depression and it was fed by depression. As it was, so it would be again. But since the '20s, we have built into our economy great stabilizers—unemployment insurance, social security, minimum wage laws, bank deposit insurance, housing insurance, etc. These stabilizers have been cushioning us against downturns ever since.

And if need be, we can improve and expand these and we can create new stabilizers within the framework of a free economy. We would have done so by now had the recessions of post-World War II not been as mild and short-lived as they have.

Since the '20s, we have built up a huge national budget and a towering tax structure and both are now vital forces in our economy. Now we know that a national budget deficit can be a vital stimulant when business turns down because it pours billions into the spending stream. Now we know a tax cut can be an electric force because it places spending cash directly in the hands of spenders.

We have used budget deficits and tax cuts to halt past recessions. We can do so when and as they are needed again.

Perhaps I am naive to believe that our greatest safeguard against another 1929 is that we won't allow another 1929 to happen.

But I do believe this because I believe fundamentally in "us," in our dedication to our system and our determination to preserve it by molding it as necessary to conquer our enemies within as well as without.
